

Library of Congress—Central Charge File

Call No. PN 1993.M67

Date Dec. 8, 1971

Author

MOTION PICTURE REVIEW DIGEST, vols. 1-5 (1936-40)

Title

Prints and Photographs

Division

Motion Picture Section

Employee

LW 5/58 (SEE LCR 813 4/23/58)

GPO: 1968-321-686

Scanned from the collections of
The Library of Congress

Packard Campus
for Audio Visual Conservation
www.loc.gov/avconservation

Motion Picture and Television Reading Room
www.loc.gov/rr/mopic

Recorded Sound Reference Center
www.loc.gov/rr/record

This is a "cumulated" number. It includes all reviews published to date.
It supersedes all previous numbers. Discard Nos. 1-14.

MOTION PICTURE REVIEW DIGEST

Vol. 1

March 30, 1936

APR - 3 1936 No. 15
(Superseding Nos. 1-14)

Published by THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY, 950-972 University Avenue, New York City

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(arranged alphabetically)

	Page		Page		Page
Affair of Susan .....	1	Builders of Socialism .....	16	Crime of Dr. Crespi .....	34
Ah, Wilderness .....	1	Bulldog Courage .....	16	Crusades .....	35
Amateur Gentleman .....	3	Burning Gold .....	16	Dance Band .....	35
Anna Karenina .....	3	Call of the Prairie .....	17	Dancing Feet .....	36
Annapolis Farewell .....	4	Calling of Dan Matthews ..	17	Dangerous .....	36
Annie Oakley .....	4	Cappy Ricks Returns .....	18	Dangerous Intrigue .....	37
Another Face .....	5	Captain Blood .....	18	Dangerous Waters .....	38
Anything Goes .....	5	Captain January .....	20	Daredevils of the Earth .....	39
Audioscopiks .....	7	Case of the Lucky Legs .....	21	Dark Angel .....	39
Bad Boy .....	7	Case of the Missing Man ..	21	Dark Hour .....	39
Bar 20 Rides Again .....	8	Cattle Thief .....	21	Desert Gold .....	40
Barbary Coast .....	8	Ceiling Zero .....	21	Desert Guns .....	40
Between Men .....	9	Charlie Chan at the Circus ..	23	Desire .....	40
Big Broadcast of 1936 .....	9	Charlie Chan in Shanghai ..	24	Diamond Jim .....	41
Bishop Misbehaves .....	10	Charlie Chan's Secret .....	24	Divine Spark .....	42
Blazing Justice .....	10	Chatterbox .....	25	Dr. Socrates .....	42
Bohemian Girl .....	10	Cock o' the Walk .....	26	Don't Gamble With Love ..	42
Bon Bon Parade .....	11	Colleen .....	26	Don't Get Personal .....	43
Le Bonheur .....	11	Collegiate .....	27	Doughnuts and Society .....	43
Born for Glory .....	12	Come Out of the Pantry ..	28	Drift Fence .....	44
Boulder Dam .....	12	Condemned to Live .....	29	Eagle's Brood .....	44
Bride Comes Home .....	13	Confidential .....	29	East of Java .....	45
Brides Are Like That .....	14	Coronado .....	29	Escape From Devil's Island ..	46
Broadway Hostess .....	15	Country Doctor .....	30	Every Saturday Night .....	46
Broadway Melody of 1936 ..	15	Courageous Avenger .....	32	Everybody's Old Man .....	47
Broadway Playboy .....	16	Crime and Punishment .....	32	Exclusive Story .....	48
Broken Toys .....	16	Crime et Châtiment .....	34	F-Man .....	49

Continued on inside front cover

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(Continued from front cover)

PN1993
M67

Page		Page		Page
False Pretenses	49	Hi Gaucho	75	Lawless Nineties	101
Fang and Claw	50	His Family Tree	75	Lawless Range	101
Farmer in the Dell	51	His Fighting Blood	75	Lawless Riders	102
Fast Bullets	52	His Night Out	75	Leathernecks Have Landed	102
Feather in Her Hat	52	Hitch Hike Lady	76	Leavenworth Case	102
Fighting Coward	52	Hitch Hike to Heaven	76	Legong	102
Fighting Youth	53	Hong Kong Nights	77	Liebelei	103
Filming the Feminine Head- liners	53	Hot Paprika	77	Limelight	103
Fire Trap	53	House of a Thousand Candles	77	Little America	103
First a Girl	54	Hunters' Paradise	77	Little Lord Fauntleroy	104
Follow the Fleet	55	I Conquer the Sea	78	Littlest Rebel	105
For Love of You	56	I Dream Too Much	78	Lone Wolf Returns	106
Forbidden Heaven	57	I Found Stella Parish	80	Love Before Breakfast	107
Forced Landing	57	I Give My Heart	80	Love On a Bet	108
Four Masked Men	57	I Live For Love	81	Magnificent Obsession	109
Frasquita	58	I Live My Life	81	Making of a King	111
Freckles	58	If You Could Only Cook	81	Man Hunt	112
Freshman Love	58	I'll Name the Murderer	82	Man of Iron	113
Frisco Kid	59	In Old Kentucky	83	Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo	113
Frisco Waterfront	60	In Person	83	Maria Chapdelaine	114
Frontier	60	Invisible Ray	84	Mary Burns, Fugitive	115
Frontier Justice	61	Invitation to the Waltz	85	La Maternelle	115
Gallant Defender	61	It Had to Happen	85	Mayflower	116
Game of Jai-Alai	62	It's a Great Life	86	Melody Lingers On	116
Garden Murder Case	62	It's in the Air	87	Melody Trail	117
Gasoloons	63	Itto	87	Message to Garcia	117
Gay Deception	63	Ivory-Handled Gun	88	Metropolitan	117
Gentle Julia	63	Judgment Book	88	Midnight Phantom	118
Ghost Goes West	64	Just My Luck	88	Midsummer Night's Dream	118
Give Us This Night	66	Kannibal Kapors	88	Milky Way	119
Grain	67	Kind Lady	89	Millions in the Air	120
Grand Exit	67	King of Burlesque	89	Mimi	121
Grand Slam Opera	68	King of the Damned	90	Miss Pacific Fleet	122
Great Impersonation	68	King Solomon of Broadway	91	Mr. Cohen Takes a Walk	122
Great Ziegfeld	69	Kiss Me Goodbye	92	Mister Hobo	123
Guard That Girl	69	Klondike Annie	92	Modern Times	124
Gun Play	70	Knock-Out	94	Molly Moo Cow and the Indians	127
Hair Trigger Casey	70	Lac Aux Dames	94	Moonlight and Melody	127
Hands Across the Table	70	Ladies Love Hats	95	Moonlight on the Prairie	127
Happiness C.O.D.	71	Lady Consents	95	Morals of Marcus	127
Harmony Lane	71	Lady in Scarlet	96	Moscow Nights	128
Heir to Trouble	72	Lady of Secrets	97	Murder at Glen Athol	128
Hell Ship Morgan	72	Land of Promise	98	Murder of Dr. Harrigan	129
Her Master's Voice	72	Last Days of Pompeii	98	Music Goes 'Round	129
Here Comes Cookie	73	Last of the Clintons	99	Music Hath Charms	130
Here Comes the Band	73	Last of the Pagans	99	Music Is Magic	131
Here Comes Trouble	73	Last Outpost	100	Muss 'Em Up	131
Here's to Romance	74	Laughing Irish Eyes	100
		Lawless Border	101

(Continued on inside back cover)

March 30, 1936. Vol. 1, No. 15

Motion Picture Review Digest, published weekly by The H. W. Wilson Company, 950-972 University Ave., New York, N.Y. Application for entry as second-class matter is pending. Subscription price, one year, $4.00. Subscriptions are accepted only from those who have subscribed for the cooperative indexing service. Full information will be supplied on request.

Printed in U. S. A.

Motion Picture Review Digest

Vol. 1

MARCH 30, 1936

No. 15

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

950-972 University Avenue, New York City

Terms of Subscription and Advertising. Full information on request.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

Audience Evaluation Publications

Am Legion Auxiliary—American Legion Auxiliary. See Fox W Coast Bul
Bks & Films—Books and Films. $1. Mrs Ina Roberts, 11118 Clifton Blvd, Cleveland, Ohio
Calif Cong of Par & Teachers—California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Christian Century—Christian Century. $4. Christian Century Press, 440 S Dearborn St, Chicago

DAR—National Society Daughters of the American Revolution

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Endorsed Motion Pict—Endorsed Motion Pictures. Publication discontinued

Fox W Coast Bul—Fox West Coast Theatres Corporation Bulletin. 1837 S Vermont Av, Los Angeles

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Int Fed of Cath Alumnae; Nat Bd of R; Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)—General Federation of Women's Clubs (West Coast). Bulletin. Mrs Wm A. Burk, 359 N Bronson Av, Los Angeles

See also Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Int Fed of Cath Alumnae—International Federation of Catholic Alumnae

See Endorsed Motion Pict; Fox W Coast Bul, Nat Legion of Decency

Jt Estimates—Joint Estimates. Bulletin. General Federation of Women's Clubs (West Coast). Mrs Wm A. Burk, 359 N Bronson Av, Los Angeles

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Mo Film Bul—Monthly Film Bulletin. Issued to members only. British Film Inst, 4 Great Russell St, London WC 1

Motion Pict & Family—Motion Picture and the Family. Free. Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc, 28 W 44th St, New York

Motion Pict Guide—Motion Picture Guide. 50c. Mrs John Waldo, Am Assn of Univ Women Motion Pict Com, 330 E 47th St, Indianapolis, Ind.

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Film Estimate Service; Nat Soc of New England Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Motion Pict R—Motion Picture Reviews. $1. Motion Picture Reviews, Women's University Club, 943 S Hoover St, Los Angeles, Calif.

Nat Bd of R M—National Board of Review Magazine. $2. National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, 70 Fifth Av, New York

See also Fox W Coast Bul; Wkly Guide

Nat Council of Jewish Women—Los Angeles Section, National Council of Jewish Women. Bulletin. Mrs Florine Wolfstein, Chairman, 617 S Lucerne Blvd, Los Angeles

See also Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs—National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs (Los Angeles District)

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Sel Motion Pict

Nat Film Estimate Service—National Film Estimate Service

See Motion Pict Guide

Nat Legion of Decency—National Legion of Decency. $2. National Legion of Decency, 485 Madison Av, N.Y.

Nat Soc of New England Women—National Society of New England Women

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide—New York Archdiocese Motion Picture Guide

See Nat Legion of Decency

Par M—Parents' Magazine. $2. The Parents' Institute, Inc, 9 E 40th St, New York

Scholastic—Scholastic. $1.50. Scholastic, Chamber of Commerce Bldg, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sel Motion Pict—Selected Motion Pictures. West & East Coast Preview Committees.

Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc, Will H. Hays, Pres, 28 W 44th St, New York

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

S Calif Council of Fed Church Women—Southern California Council of Federated Church Women

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Sel Motion Pict

Wkly Guide—Weekly Guide to Selected Pictures. $2.50 yearly, with Magazine, $1. National Board of Reviews of Motion Pictures, 70 Fifth Av, New York

Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles—Women's University Club, Los Angeles

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Motion Pict R; Sel Motion Pict

Newspapers and Magazines

Boston Transcript—Boston Evening Transcript. $5.50. (Wednesday and Saturday). Boston Transcript Co, Inc, Pub, 324 Washington St, Boston

Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. $2. J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd, Aldine House, 224 Bloor St, W Toronto

Canadian M—Canadian Magazine. $1.50. Hugh C. MacLean Pub, Ltd, 347 Adelaide St, W Toronto

Christian Science Monitor—Christian Science Monitor. $9. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston
 Commonweal—Commonweal. $5. Calvert Publishing Corp, Grand Central Terminal, New York
 Hollywood Spec—Hollywood Spectator. $5. Hollywood Spectator, Inc, 6513 Hollywood Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Liberty—Liberty. $2. Liberty Publishing Corp, 1926 Broadway, Lincoln Sq, New York
 Life—Life. $1.50. Life Magazine, Inc, 60 E 42d St, New York
 Lit Digest—Literary Digest. $4. Funk and Wagnalls Co, 354-360 Fourth Av, New York
 Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. (Daily). Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester, 2. Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York
 Nation—Nation. $5. Nation Fund Inc, 20 Vesey St, New York
 New Repub—New Republic. $5. New Republic, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York
 New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 30s. New Statesman and Nation, 10 Great Turnstile, London, WC 1
 New Theatre—New Theatre. $1.50. New Theatre Magazine, 156 W 44th St, New York
 N Y Herald Tribune—New York Herald Tribune. $15. N Y Tribune, Inc, 230 W 41st St, New York
 N Y Sun—New York Sun. $10. Sun Printing and Publishing Assn, 280 Broadway, New York
 N Y Times—New York Times. $15. New York Times Co, 229 W 43d St, New York
 N Y World-Telegram—New York World-Telegram. $13. New York World-Telegram Pub, 125 Barclay St, New York
 New Yorker—New Yorker. $5. F-R Publishing Corp, 25 W 45th St, New York
 News-Wk—News-Week. $4. Rockefeller Center, 1270 6th Av, New York
 Sat R—Saturday Review. 30s. Chawton Pub Co, Ltd, 18-20 York Bldgs, Adelphi, London

Sight & Sound. Sight and Sound. (Quarterly). 2s 6d. British Film Inst, 4 Great Russell St, London, WC 1
 Spec—Spectator. 30s. The Spectator, Ltd, 99 Gower St, London, WC 1
 Stage—Stage. $3. Stage Publishing Co, Inc, 50 E 42d St, New York
 Theatre Arts Mo—Theatre Arts Monthly. $5. Theatre Arts, Inc, 119 W 57th St, New York
 Time—Time. $5. Time, Inc, 350 E 22d St, Chicago

Trade Papers

Box Office—Box Office (Eastern sectional ed) $3. Associated Publications, Inc, 4704 E 9th St, Kansas City, Mo.
 Canadian Moving Pict Digest—Canadian Moving Picture Digest. $5. Canadian Moving Picture Digest Co, Ltd, 259 Spadina Av, Toronto 2
 Film Curb—Film Curb. (Semimonthly). $4 Film Curb, Inc, 1270 6th Av, RKO Bldg, Radio City, Rockefeller Center, New York
 Film Daily—Film Daily. $10. The Film Daily, 1650 Broadway, New York
 Harrison's Reports—Harrison's Reports. $15. Harrison's Reports, Inc, 1440 Broadway, New York
 Hollywood Reporter—Hollywood Reporter. $10. Wilkerson Daily Corp, Ltd, 6717 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Motion Pict Daily—Motion Picture Daily. $6. Motion Picture Daily Inc, 1790 Broadway, New York
 Motion Pict Herald—Motion Picture Herald. $3. Quigley Publishing Co, Inc, 1790 Broadway, New York
 N Y Exhibitor—New York State Exhibitor. $2. Jay Emanuel Publications Inc, 219 N Broad St, Philadelphia
 Variety—Variety. $6. Variety, Inc, 154 W 46th St, New York
 Variety (Hollywood)—Variety. $10. (Daily). Daily Variety, Ltd, 1708-10 N Vine St, Hollywood, Calif.

Explanations

After the title of the film, the date of release is given, next the running time in minutes and then the producer.

Under Players, only leading members of the cast are listed.

For system of evaluating favor or disfavor of the film, see note on bottom of pages.

In the reference to the magazine, the number of the page is first given, followed by the month, day and year.

An index will be found at the end of cumulated numbers which includes actors, actresses and directors for the productions indexed; also books, plays and short stories from which movies have been adapted.

No films released prior to September, 1935 are included. Only those foreign films which are likely to be generally shown are listed.

In evaluating films, the women's organizations use "mature" or "adult" when films are unsuited for children; "family" when suitable for all the members of a family; "young people" when suitable for adolescents from 15 to 20 years of age; "children" for those under 15.

Abbreviations of producers' names and their addresses will be found in the Directory of Producers at the end of the Index.

The title of the publication of the Fox West Coast Theatres Corporation will now be known as Fox W Coast Bul and the organizations of which it is composed have been listed alphabetically on page i.

(s) This symbol denotes a short feature.

Key to Abbreviations

a	adults	ed	edition	O	October
Ag	August	fed	federal	p	page
Am	American	gen	general	par	parent -s
Ap	April	inc	incorporated	pict	picture
assn	association	inst	institute -ion	pub	publisher -ication
av	avenue	int	international	r	review -s
bd	board	Ja	January	S	September, south
bks	books	Jl	July		-ern
blvd	boulevard	jt	joint	Sat	Saturday
bul	bulletin	Lit	Literary	sel	selected
c	children (under 15 years)	ltd	limited	soc	society
Calif	California	m	magazine	Spec	Spectator
Cath	Catholic	min	minutes	sq	square
co	company	mo	monthly	st	street
com	committee	Mr	March	univ	university
Cong	Congress	N	November	vol	volume
D	December	nat	national	w	west
e	east	no	number	wkly	weekly
		NY	New York	y	young people (15-20 years)

Motion Picture Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Motion Pictures

March 30, 1936

AFFAIR OF SUSAN. O 7 '35 63min Universal

Players: Zasu Pitts. Hugh O'Connell. Walter Catlett

Director: Kurt Neumann

"Two people, a hero who works in an automobile factory, a heroine who works in a candy factory, meet, go to a park, have a good time, think they won't see each other again, [and] eventually find they live in the same boarding house." N Y Exhibitor

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Light, amusing comedy with a touch of pathos. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 23 '35

Mo Film Bul p167 N '35

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A, Y and C: Entertaining."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"Excellent direction, fine photography and an interesting story add much to the entertainment value. Family and junior matinee."

+ Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

"The old film 'Lonesome' is . . . simply and tenderly told with many amusing incidents. Family."

+ Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

"Only a mildly entertaining comedy."

— + Film Curb p19 O 1 '35

"Inconsequential, having little except the comedy leads. Family comedy."

— + N Y Exhibitor p37 O 10 '35

AH, WILDERNESS. N 22 '35 100min MGM

Players: Wallace Beery. Lionel Barrymore. Aline MacMahon. Eric Linden. Cecilia Parker

Director: Clarence Brown

From the play of same title by Eugene O'Neill. A rural melodrama in which a naive, idealistic New England boy of the 1900's, one of the new generation who hopes to lead the world to a new order, learns the difference between sacred and profane love.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Excellent. Suitable for mature audience." + + Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"The picture is redolent with chuckles. Adults: excellent; 14-18: mature; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Expert direction by C. Brown. Some vulgar dialogue. Adults." DAR

"The acting of the principals and outstanding photography are the highlights of this motion picture. . . . Written in a decidedly reminiscent mood, this play will appeal, for the most part, to the older members of the audience, who can re-live those precious early days before the world began moving at such a fast tempo. Good. Adults." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"The characters and settings were so very well chosen as to seem like a page torn from a family history of an old New England family. The atmosphere of the sleepy little town, the pathetic High School graduation exercises of the 1900's, the first automobile, and the reckless fourth of July celebrations after the close of the Spanish-American War are so faithfully portrayed as to have real historical value. The cast is excellent and the direction perfect—the scenes between the father and son and between the girl and the boy so realistic and directed with such understanding and good taste as to bring a lump to one's throat. Wallace Beery fails to suggest the New England type—even when in their 'cups', long generations of repression would preclude his giving way so completely. The picture is so fine that one character's part overaccented should not lessen one's appreciation or enjoyment of the whole. Outstanding. Family—mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Perfect in detail and delectable in humor, the film holds the interest throughout and provides superlative entertainment. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The clever handling of Eugene O'Neill's stage success through an excellent cast combine to make the picture an outstanding one for the family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"In certain respects the stage version of this comedy has an advantage over the screen production. O'Neill's lines are so good that one is sorry to miss any of them and naturally much of the dialogue had to be cut. The characters are essentially O'Neill's. Family picture. Mature for children." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 30 '35

"Good direction transfers the mood of a bygone day to the screen with consummate skill. Outstanding. Family. Mature."

+ + Jt Estimates N 15 '35

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Excellent comedy of youth; C: Mature."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"While the humor of the picture will be enjoyed by the whole family, the underlying psychology will have more appeal to adults. The Daughters of the American Revolution regard this as adult entertainment. Family. Mature."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

AH, WILDERNESS—Continued

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"[This is] an unusually sympathetic screening of O'Neill's play, done with humor and tenderness. Family."

+ Wkly Guide N 30 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It does not have quite the fineness of feeling that it possessed in the form that Mr. O'Neill originally gave it. There has been something of the process that is best described as popularization. . . . It does have an atmosphere and characterizations that lift it well above the average of the screen." E. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p10 D 26 '35

"Lionel Barrymore plays Nat Gould . . . a small town newspaper editor, and gives one of the finest performances of his career, as the shy and kindly parent. . . . Wallace Beery is a delightful old inebriate. . . . Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p38 F '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 13 '35

"Perhaps the quibblers will miss many of the original O'Neill lines pertaining to adolescent youth, which, naturally, had to be eliminated; they may even resent the few liberties taken in extending the original comedy and in building the part of the son; or, they may refuse to accept Wallace Beery as suggestive of the New England type in their 'cups.' Except for these reservations, all unimportant to the net result, the screen copy of Mr. O'Neill's Americana, convincingly mirrors the spirit, the touching humanness that was so delicately reflected by the original. . . . [All the scenes] are so faithfully, so skillfully portrayed that they have real historical value." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p301 Ja 10 '36

"We have no means of comparing the lines of this script with that of the stage," writes George Foxhall in the Worcester Evening Gazette, 'but we are prepared to admit that probably much of Mr. O'Neill's matchless genius for dialog has been lost. But Mr. O'Neill's beautiful play is here, his insight into the adolescent sweetness of clean, young hearts and into the sweetness of clean, old hearts, for that matter; his message, and the fragrant vision of his memories. This wilderness is paradise enow.'"

+ Lit Digest p22 D 28 '35

"The delicacy of Eugene O'Neill's play . . . is wholly absent from Wallace Beery's Sid." Mark Van Doren

Nation p84 Ja 15 '36

"What the screen really makes out of 'Ah, Wilderness' is a first-class atmosphere piece. It calls up more matters than it knows of by its sure reconstruction of the day-to-day life of the New England country in a time (1906) that is as dead but as vivid in the general memory, as the smell of leaves burning in piles along the gravel walks, this fall or when you were a kid. . . . Much of the film is silly, but 'Ah, Wilderness' remains a job of picture making, in craftsmanship and feeling, that is wonderful to see." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub p198 D 25 '35

"'Ah, Wilderness' [is] as thoroughly delightful a picture as has come along during the last year. Using intelligence and taste as well as its customary showmanship, Metro has done more, a great deal more, than photograph Eugene O'Neill's wistfully humorous play. Developing the spirit and theme of the original, script-writers and director have shown much more of the life in a New England town than any stage production could possibly manage. . . . As for Mr. Beery, as the likable drunken uncle, he is slightly out of key with the rest of the period picture. He is, in his own way, still rather funny, and even the overemphasis on his part is not seriously harmful." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p25 D 26 '35

"In its warm, sprawling and achingly reminiscent mood of story-telling, it brings Mr. O'Neill's 'large small-town' in the New England of 1906 into a new richness of life on the screen. As an American comedy of manners and as a portrait of an American family, 'Ah, Wilderness!' explores a vein of bitter-sweet nostalgia without losing its sense of humor." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p30 D 25 '35

"Not only the decoration, though, gives the film its particular quality, for the story has an honesty you are bound to like. . . . 'Ah, Wilderness!' reminds us again, in case we have forgotten the truism, that ordinary people and their lives are much more exciting than the extraordinary and their performances." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p53 Ja 4 '36

Springf'd Republican p6c Ja 12 '36

"In this instance the movies have used their own genius to make quite a lot out of very little. . . . Mr. Eugene O'Neill, has become so overweening on the strength of good work well done in the early years that he can speak with the postures of a major dramatist and in the actual words of Gene Stratton Porter, and get completely away with it. . . . Where Hollywood really goes to work here is in the background O'Neill suggested—small-town New England in the year 1906. . . . In the end, the production goes beyond the meaning of the play, immersing all the business good or bad in a mood that it is difficult to quarrel with. It is blurred with illusion yet inexorable in its details, tugging at silly heartstrings yet common enough; it seems projected on a screen purely in order that these dead times shall be remembered again, with amusement, exasperation and fondness." Otis Ferguson

Theatre Arts Mo p142 F '36

Time p44 D 9 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Superb picturization of Eugene O'Neill's most human and natural stage play is entertainment of the highest order and a triumph for all concerned. . . . A classic of American small-town life that deserves to live forever."

+ Box Office p17 D 14 '35

"All concerned in the making of this fine picturization of the stage hit can take a bow, several in fact. Here is a photoplay that IS a photoplay. Wonderfully played by an outstanding cast and directed with rare skill this is entertainment plus. Audiences of all classes are bound to appreciate it. It will be surprising if it doesn't break a great number of records. You can't get them much better than this one."

+ Film Curb p8 D 1 '35

"Wallace Beery's portrayal of the easy-going, lovable drunk is outstanding, and Lionel Barrymore, as the understanding father, makes the role live."

+ Film Daily p4 N 15 '35

"This picture mirrors life. . . . It does so with the simplicity that makes for power, giving audiences and the showmen the most to be desired in screen merchandise, a good story that was intelligently acted on the stage. It is hardly to be doubted that the picture will make a popular impression. It is of a character that is apt to arouse controversy but is certain to win approval. Its locale is a small town of three decades ago. The comedy drama glows with homey humor. The drama is natural."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 N 12 '35

"In the power of its simplicity, natural humanness and reflection of problems confronting every family, it is one of the most impressive features brought to the screen in recent years."

+ Motion Pict Herald p70 N 23 '35

"Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

"A splendid example of picture making. . . It is distinctly an outstanding film. . . The climax is reached when father and son have their heart to heart talk about life in general and women in particular. A more human passage has not appeared in the theatre for many years."

+ + Variety p14 Ja 1 '36

DER ALTE UND DER JUNGE KOENIG. See Making of a king

AMATEUR GENTLEMAN. Mr 20 '36 100min
Criterion-United artists

Players: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Elissa Landi. Gordon Harker. Frank Pettingell

Director: Thornton Freeland

Based on the novel of the same title by Jeffery Farnol. "The story deals with an inn-keeper wrongfully condemned to death for theft from guests. His son, posing as a rich young 'buck' with the aid of money borrowed from the inn hostler, breaks into society in London, discovers the real thief in a fortune-hunting nobleman, falls in love with a girl, who has agreed to a marriage of convenience with the adventurer, schemes his father's escape and neatly exposes the criminal after a helter-skelter coach chase back to the inn." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The story is constructed on traditional lines, with a swiftly-manoeuvred happy ending, and its relation to real affairs is not great; there are one or two jumps in the plot which might have been more smoothly managed. . . The acting is competent, though Douglas Fairbanks seems a trifle mannered. Elissa Landi is altogether too whimsical and coy. Adults; adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul Ja '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] an admirable but overlengthy film. . . The photography is very fine. The prison scenes and the prize-ring pictures are composed in the temper of Hogarth, and their smoky, crowded, squalid atmosphere is successfully transplanted from the 'Rake's Progress.' Moreover, they are happily contrasted with some exquisite scenes of English roads and lanes in the mists of early morning, when a cold, gray light breaks slowly over a coach and horses." Harold Hobson

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 F 18 '36

"Personnel that was hand-picked for the special occasion reflects itself in the production, a costume drama of the Regency period in England, having good story values and fine dramatic action that are both intelligently treated." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p580 Mr 20 '36

"There is nothing positively amiss with this first production by Criterion Films: it is a passable effort, but quite undistinguished. If one wished to be captious, one might point out that the sound and the supers should have been better, and that the direction, which was otherwise quite sensible, was obviously handicapped by an uninspired adaptation of Jeffery Farnol's novel; it stuck to the scenario with a slavish fidelity which was not really justified by the acting of Mr. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Miss Elissa Landi."

— + New Statesman & Nation p151 F 1 '36

"There is a superbly unconvincing boxing match with bare fists before the Regent, and the film is very prettily dressed. Miss Clemence Dane has done a very workmanlike job with the dialogue, which is never disagreeably mannered, but nobody can do much with Mr. Farnol's romantic vision." Graham Greene

Spec p170 Ja 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A costume drama, of the Regency period in England, it has good story values and plenty of dramatic action. . . Trimmed from its present 9,000 feet, this will offer definite entertainment values for American audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 F 4 '36

"There is a rich air of romance in this production which should appeal to a very wide range of patrons. . . It is one of those British pictures which American showmen should consider very seriously."

+ Motion Pict Herald p64 F 22 '36

"Estimate: good program melodrama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p55 Mr 10 '36

"This Jeffery Farnol story, while a bit dated, is so well done, especially the dialog by Clemence Dane, and has such a splendid production, that it ought to go over successfully. . . It has the strength and forcefulness of the old school, coupled with modern acting, and the whole makes for a satisfying adaptation. Director has done a neat job in keeping the old-fashioned story from creaking."

+ Variety p12 F 5 '36

ANNA KARENINA. S 6 '35 95min MGM

Players: Greta Garbo. Frederic March. Freddie Bartholomew. Basil Rathbone

Director: Clarence Brown

Based on the novel by Tolstoi. An emotionally unstable woman deserts her husband and son for a lover. The lover grows tired of her, her husband refuses her permission to see her son and she finally commits suicide. The background is the colorful life of the upper class in Czarist Russia.

A Photoplay Study Guide to Tolstoy's Anna Karenina, with suggestions for reading and discussion in college and university classes, women's clubs and community forums, prepared by William Lewin, may be obtained from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey. A single copy is fifteen cents. The guide covers the literary source, adaptation to the screen, production and direction problems, performances of the actors, musical and sound effects and includes a list of references and readings.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment."

N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Motion Pict & Family O 15 '35

"There is nothing exceptional in Garbo's showing once more that she is a great actress. But it is more than ever true that any film in which she appears is something out of the ordinary. 'Anna Karenina', moreover, quite apart from having Garbo in the title role, has captured rather more of Tolstoy's great novel than might have been expected." J. S. H.

+ Nat Bd of R M S '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Not a great movie. The Tolstoy story is out of date, stiff, and creaky. But with Garbo as its motivating force, the old war-horse moves with something akin to life and certainly the maximum of grace."

Lit Digest p21 S 21 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ANNA KARENINA—Continued

"The new version includes the social implications of the novel, but the issues are now meaningless, dramatically at least, and the film is justified only as a museum piece." Robert Giroux

— Nation p391 O 2 '35

"A trite scenario, enfeebled and mismanaged in direction. . . Yet here is the best vehicle for Miss Garbo's talents that we have seen for many a long evening." John Marks

New Statesman & Nation p551 O 19 '35

"The stage technique forced on the other players in Anna Karenina by the personality of Greta Garbo, the slowing of the film to allow time for the incredibly lovely voice, the harsh suffering face, to make their points, calls for a standard of acting they cannot meet, with the exception of Mr. Basil Rathbone, who as Anna's husband draws an intense bitter portrait of a man living for appearances alone. . . It is Greta Garbo's personality which makes this film, which fills the mould of the neat respectful adaptation with some sense of the greatness in the novel." Graham Greene

Spec p547 O 11 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p56 N 16 '35

ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL. S 6 '35 85min Paramount

Players: Sir Guy Standing, Tom Brown, Richard Cromwell, Rosalind Keith

Director: Alexander Hall

A retired naval officer goes down with his old ship rather than see it demolished for target practice.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This superbly directed production taken at Annapolis is truly a great picture. It is convincing, interesting, stimulating and highly entertaining. Family."

+ Jt Estimates S 1 '35

"With its authentic background of our Naval Academy, its outstandingly fine cast and superb direction, lovely photography and interesting story, we have entertainment most suitable for the Family and Junior Matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A: Good drama; Y: Stirring; C: Interesting."

Par M p38 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The color, spirit, courage, patriotism and traditional ideals for which the United States Naval academy stands are reproduced in 'Annapolis Farewell.'"

+ Springfd Republican p6c O 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p57 N 16 '35

ANNIE OAKLEY. N 15 '35 88min RKO

Players: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster, Chief Thunder Cloud

Director: George Stevens

From a story by Joseph A. Fields and Stewart Adamson, based on the life of Annie Oakley, famous western markswoman. It describes the career and love story of the woman who rose from crack shot of Buffalo Bill's Show to appearances before the crowned heads of Europe.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Good of kind. Y: Good. C: Good." Christian Century p1638 D 18 '35

"Very good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Thrilling scenes of bye-gone days, which include skillful riding, expert shooting, and roping, cavalry, Indians, and the rough, exciting life of the period are combined in this most entertaining picture in which a well chosen cast, understandingly directed, give realistic portrayals. Family and Junior Matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 14 '35

"A, Y and C: Splendid comedy with Buffalo Bill background."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"Grand entertainment for all. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family. Junior."

+ + Wkly Guide N 9 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 16 '35

Lit Digest p33 Ja 4, '36

"'Annie Oakley' makes agreeable capital out of a recent American figure who has already become something of a legend. . . Here she is with a rural origin and a romance to keep her interesting and very interesting she is as Barbara Stanwyck plays her." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p84 Ja 15 '36

"On the surface, this highly sentimentalized report . . . is little more than a conventionalized if pleasantly narrated, romance of Colonel Cody's Wild West Show. . . Fortunately, however, Joel Sayre, author of the still joyfully remembered 'Rackety Rax' has had a most important hand in the proceedings and his gift for racy, hearty Americana results in a series of appended details that make 'Annie Oakley' a vastly engaging screen play, particularly when it is not bothering too much about its plot. For one thing the photoplay offers the most thoroughly delightful epic and indigenously American comedy character of the season. . . It is good old Chief Sitting Bull (magnificently impersonated by Chief Thunder Cloud), who in his earlier days had vanquished the dashing Custer at the Little Big Horn and in his later days had been persuaded to join the circus. . . It is Sitting Bull who walks off with the honors of the photoplay." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p9 D 24 '35

"Although the talented and attractive Barbara Stanwyck gives by far the best screen performance of her career in [this] superlatively entertaining film . . . it is an Indian named Chief Thunder Bird in the role of Chief Sitting Bull who is actually the real star of the occasion. In a relatively minor part . . . Chief Thunder Bird walks right off with all the honors in the film—and this in face of some pretty superior competition. . . Told simply, engagingly and entertainingly, directed with meticulous care and with fine feeling for the period and the humor in the story and capitally well-played by the entire cast, this 'Annie Oakley' is really a delightful picture that merits your attention and support." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p1 D 23 '35

"The problems of true love in a Wild West show are rather overwhelming, and the director has indulged an urge to give us too many circus scenes. The whole matter gets oppressive as time goes on." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p53 Ja 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

"A lovely part for Barbara—and a whole-some entertaining story, well cast and well played."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 D 21 '35

Film Curb p16 N 1 '35

"It has action and comedy a-plenty."

+ Film Daily p6 O 29 '35

"The life of the famous markswoman is herewith turned into lively entertainment, although the story probably contains more fiction than fact."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 O 28 '35

Motion Pict Herald p60 N 9 '35

"Barbara Stanwyck in 'Annie Oakley' should carry box office appeal and if the picture misses as outstanding it's because the script and direction are not up to the star and title combination. It sums up as a swell idea that doesn't quite come through. . . . After the early scenes, where she plays a backwoods girl effectively, Miss Stanwyck does little for the picture, probably because the material gives her few opportunities. Picture is likely to appeal to elderly patrons who remember the period when William Jennings Bryan campaigned for free silver and when Colonel Cody was a national institution off and on."

+ — Variety p15 D 25 '35

ANOTHER FACE. D 13 '35 70min RKO

Players: Wallace Ford. Brian Donlevy. Phyllis Brooks

Director: Christy Cabanne

A gangster, having had his face changed by a plastic surgeon, kills the doctor and then becomes a movie idol. His downfall results from an identification by the nurse who helped the doctor.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"A somewhat involved but novel and exciting picture with numerous funny and thrilling episodes. The cast is capable and the director takes full advantage of the dramatic opportunity offered. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"The direction is excellent, the suspense well maintained, smooth fast-moving tempo, innumerable thrills, and many a laugh. Hilarious entertainment for the family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"To those who like a dash of the 'gangster' in their pictures this one may prove satisfying. Scenes of movies in the 'making' and a bit of romance lend interest to the picture. Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"This [is an] extravagant and lively farce which is adroitly handled and offers a glimpse of movie studio routine and a breezy satire on film publicity methods. Diverting for audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The background of movie studios is interesting and effective. On the whole, the picture is rather depressing though well cast and directed. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Amusing, fast moving and full of surprises, this picture is entertaining without calling for any intellectual concentration. Added interest is derived from an intimate view of backstage procedure in the studio. Adolescents: probably entertaining; children: no." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"Unobjectional for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Comedy crime drama; Y: Entertaining; C: Doubtful."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"Comedy-drama with a lot of amusing inside movie atmosphere. Family."

+ Wkly Guide D 14 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Trick melodrama with film studio setting."
Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Packed solid with refreshing entertainment, this is a bang-up comedy offering that should send the patrons homeward with smiles of satisfaction. Fashioned out of the intimate life of Hollywood studios, it combines satire, farce and winds up with a dramatic thrill."

+ Box Office p25 N 30 '35

"It is fast-moving with the melodramatic stuff and laughs most plentiful and is bound to register with any audience."

+ Film Curb p13 D 1 '35

"This picture of a new-faced gangster is a hilarious and dramatic piece of entertainment, which should please as good program material. The original story and screenplay is clever, has twists that one does not suspect, and it holds interest all the way."

+ Film Daily p6 N 18 '35

Motion Pict Daily p11 N 13 '35

"Farce comedy, sandwiched in between sinister drama, this picture, in burlesquing the business of picture making and of star making, provides much audience entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Herald p72 N 23 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

"[The] picture has a bright and novel comedy-gangster theme which, while not of dynamite rating and a difficult one to sustain for full footage, is amusing enough."

+ — Variety p58 Ja 1 '36

ANYTHING GOES. Ja 24 '36 98min Paramount

Players: Bing Crosby. Ethel Merman. Charlie Ruggles. Ida Lupino

Director: Lewis Milestone

Music and Lyrics: Cole Porter

Based on the musical comedy of the same title by Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse. This slight story, interspersed with hit vocal numbers and comedy sequences, tells the tale of a young broker who lacking ticket or passport follows a girl aboard a European-bound steamer. He falls in with a meek gangster posing as a pious clergyman who is in reality Public Enemy No. 13.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A and Y: Very good of kind; C: Probably good."

Christian Century p310 F 19 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ANYTHING GOES—Continued

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"This Bing Crosby musical is diverting and tuneful. Good. Mature." DAR

"The direction is far superior to the subject matter, which has only occasional comedy moments and some decidedly objectionable features. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family and junior matinee." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"There may be a question of good taste in the use of clergymen for satire and comedy, but the idea of the film is so farcical that it is apparent nothing offensive was intended. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Off color jokes mar the film. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women
Fox W Coast Bul F 1 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Ja 15 '36

"Good. Family."

+ Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Much of the amusing satire of the stage version of 'Anything Goes' has been left out, its fast tempo slowed down and some of the best original sayings omitted. The result is a series of episodes loosely strung together giving the effect of a rather mediocre vaudeville performance. Adolescents, 12-16: harmless; children, 8-12: harmless."

+ Motion Pict R F '36

"Risqué wisecracks and improbable situations provide fair entertainment in this sophisticated musical comedy. Fast moving direction, rather dubious lines in which Charles Ruggles outshines his fellow actors. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 22 '36

"Objectable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"The story is hardly of consequence, loosely knit, and frothy. The direction is superior to the story, although several objectionable features have been included. . . Charles Ruggles, the pseudo-gangster, masquerading as a minister is not up to standard and his rôle is in questionable taste." S. M. Mullen

+ Scholastic p30 Mr 7 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ja 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Something is missing in the translation of 'Anything Goes' to the screen and it's not just the title song, though that is gone, except for a line or two sung by Ethel Merman as the credits are flashed on. The musical comedy seems less spontaneous than when its first stage performance was given. There is a choppy quality now, perhaps because of the interpolation of so many new songs—and only one of them by Cole Porter!—and the essential sprightliness of the story is inclined to be buried by overwhelming settings." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 25 '36

"It will get by, but just."

— Canadian M p43 Mr '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 25 '36

"Because he gives us considerable story, not too much music and only one absurd dance spectacle, we are indebted to Barney Glazer for one of the most entertaining pictures of the season. . . Paramount was wise in not sacrificing the farcical values of the story to the mass effects which clutter up the majority of such pictures. However, it could not resist the temptation to end up with a spectacle, staged, of all places, on an English dock, and serving only to delay the closing of the story. The audience witnessing it stands in a downpour of rain but no rain falls on the spectacle, although one can see no roof covering it. But, even so, 'Anything Goes' is well worth seeing."

+ Hollywood Spec p12 F 1 '36

"'Anything Goes' is the best sort of musical farce. . . Handsomely mounted and smartly directed by Lewis Milestone, 'Anything Goes' will not have you worrying about the outcome of the plot. In fact, audiences will find nothing to brood over. For the picture goes about its silly business with a sure and nimble grace that sweeps away all serious thought."

+ Liberty p31 F 22 '36

"Brisk entertainment in a rather imbecilic style. . . Surprisingly, the two song hits, 'You're the Tops' and 'I Get a Kick Out of You,' don't come off."

+ New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"'Anything Goes' is, despite its attractive pictorial background, a dull and commonplace musical comedy, with several good songs and a great mass of ineffective comedy and romance. Since on the stage it was one of the outstanding musical shows of recent seasons, I think that I may not be altogether wrong in blaming its decline on the failure of the picture to follow the original edition more carefully. . . Miss Merman, who must sing 'I Get a Kick Out of You' while riding through the night club air on a hoop, does as well as possible, but it cannot be said that she registers on the screen as magnificently as she does on the stage. I think it is the screen's fault. Bing Crosby is not altogether happy as the hero, and Charlie Ruggles, ordinarily a fine comic, is neither a satisfactory substitute for Victor Moore nor a good imitation of him as Public Enemy No. 13." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 F 6 '36

"Charlie Ruggles, who might have been downhearted over the prospect of playing a role Victor Moore had made so much his own, need not have worried. He is at his funniest in this part. . . They have even some new lyrics for 'You're the Top' just to make it all shiny new, a first-rate musical comedy."

+ N Y Sun p27 F 6 '36

"Paramount uncorked its pent-up version of 'Anything Goes' and instead of an exuberant pop and a merry fizz, there was merely a gentle sigh whose burden was: 'Where, O where is Victor Moore?' The answer is that Mr. Moore was not 'available' when the picture-makers were ready to turn their cameras upon the musical comedy hit of 1934-35. . . 'Anything Goes' without Mr. Moore is comparable to 'You're the Top' without Cole Porter's lyrics. It gets by, but without distinction. . . Otherwise (but what a huge deficit to overcome!) Paramount has done rather well by 'Anything Goes.'" F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p23 F 6 '36

"Little of the gayety, fun and cheer that made 'Anything Goes' grade A musical comedy when it was presented on the stage several seasons ago, materializes in the highly elaborate and somewhat forced screen version. . . Miss Merman and Mr. Ruggles do the best they can, but even their performances lack the snap and dash they should have. Mr. Crosby and Ida Lupino, who impersonates the dream girl, are singularly humorless in their parts." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p27 F 6 '36

"Some of the Cole Porter music (including the more sedate rhymes from 'You're the Top') survive, fortunately, in 'Anything Goes.'" John Mosher

New Yorker p65 F 15 '36

"'Anything Goes' was very nearly [a disappointment], for I had enjoyed the London stage version and Mr. Cole Porter's music. . . There are several new and undistinguished songs, the lovely lush sentimentality of 'All Through the Night' is missing, and a really dreadful woman singer murders the Audenesque charm of 'You're the Top.'" Graham Greene

— Spec p300 F 21 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"You won't recognize your favorite of the Broadway stage. . . But maybe if you didn't see the stage production, you will have a few moments of fun."

+ Stage p8 Mr '36

"Critics looking for significance in 'Anything Goes' might write it off as part of the cinema's campaign to cosmopolitanize its audiences. From an entertainment point of view it is rapid, hilarious, and competently directed by Lewis Milestone, whose penchant for playing with trick camera angles probably produces more results with less cost in a musical than in any other form of cinematography."

+ Time p57 F 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 Ja 4 '36

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p5 F 15 '36

"As a matter of fact all the cast do commendable work. Wherever musicals are liked this one will be well received."

+ Film Curb p11 Ja 11 '36

"Bing Crosby is at his best yet, Ethel Merman puts over her songs and serves otherwise with highly pleasing results, Charlie Ruggles bats out the comedy for a home run, and additional enjoyment is provided by several other good troupers, to say nothing of the show's original hit songs amplified by a number of new selections."

+ Film Daily p9 F 6 '36

"Fair. It has been given a lavish production, with a few good musical numbers. But the action lags considerably, some of the situations being dragged out to a point where they become tiresome. . . Because of the risqué dialogue exhibitors will have to use their judgment about showing it to adolescents; children will not understand it. Adult entertainment."

+ Harrison's Reports F 15 '36

"It is good musical comedy with a transatlantic shipboard background. The film affords Crosby his best role to date. However, judicious cutting would speed up the action in spots. . . Lewis Milestone directed skillfully with tongue-in-cheek humor balanced by expert timing. The direction is the picture's high spot. Miss Merman's personality is infectious. The photography of Karl Struss is top-notch. This one should please all customers."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ja 6 '36

"Showmen might do well to see the picture first, so as to take full advantage of production values, names and timeliness of the stage musical from which the picture was taken."

Motion Pict Herald p62 F 22 '36

"Estimate: money show all the way down." N Y Exhibitor p13 Ja 25 '36

"Cole Porter's lyrics, which were the essence and chief asset of the original stage 'Anything Goes,' have been sacrificed for and replaced by plot motion in this Paramount film adaptation. . . Generally good box office potentialities. The cast, headed by Bing Crosby, is alone a guarantee of attention. . . But Charlie Ruggles as the gag gangster is miscast. . . Where it muffs in a comedy way, it does so because Ruggles is not always suited to the situations he's called upon to carry. His delivery is too vigorous for the sap character, and the role calls for low [comedy acting], which is out of Ruggles' line."

+ Variety p16 F 12 '36

"In transferring 'Anything Goes' to the screen little was changed with the exception of a short opening sequence and a chase combined with a musical production number for the finish. Overlength and lacking in comedy tempo, picture was draggy as previewed. However this can easily be remedied. When clipped a bit, it should make top-notch entertainment, is easily the best effort of Bing Crosby during the past year."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 4 '36

(*) AUDIOSCOPIKS. (Special. Available for release) 8min MGM

Players: Pete Smith

"It is an exposition of the third dimension idea and calls for the patrons using toy colored spectacles which are handed to them by ushers or by attendants at the door. . . By holding these glasses to the eyes during the showing of the film, there is created the illusion of objects jumping out of the screen and at the audience. The stunt starts in a mild way and builds up to howling proportions when the projected items include a sliding trombone, a squirting water hose and even a rifle shot." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Amusing and somewhat instructive as well. Family-junior."

+ Wkly Guide Ja 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Louise Mace

Spring'd Republican p2 Ja 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a novel subject that will stir up gaiety and merriment in any theater. . . The device was used many years ago in a 'Ziegfeld Follies' and it is even funnier here. . . Running comment by Pete Smith adds to the amusement."

+ Film Daily p10 Ja 13 '36

"In this third dimensional short, seen through the red and green glasses, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has introduced a real novelty to the screen. . . Audience reaction was decidedly favorable when the short was screened before a capacity house. Pete Smith had described the use of the glasses and the showing began. The audience laughed, howled, ducked and thoroughly enjoyed it."

+ Motion Pict Herald p46 Ja 18 '36

B

BAD BOY. O 25 '35 56min 20th century-Fox

Players: James Dunn. Dorothy Wilson. Louise Fazenda

Director: John Blystone

Based on a story by Vina Delmar. Torn between her love for a man of whom her parents disapprove and a strong affection for her family, the heroine secretly marries her lazy, pool-playing young man. He is instrumental in detecting a robbery, gets a job and claims his bride.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Fair. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

BAD BOY—Continued

"A: Light entertainment; Y and C: Yes."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"Human and unpretentious. . . Nicely done. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

"Occasionally effective, with Mr. Dunn in excellent form, 'Bad Boy' is still no match for 'Bad Girl.' . . Miss Delmar has a distinct sense of characterization, but this time she did not do so well by the plot. . . Louise Fazenda as the wisecracking, kindly boarding house keeper, gives her best performance in years." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p15 O 29 '35

"Story dwells at length on the shopworn mother-knows-best theme. . . A victim of the cutting room and other departments, 'Bad Boy' seems to have been manufactured in a hurry. The veteran Louise Fazenda has the choicest rôle and contributes a genuinely amusing performance as the wisecracking mistress of a boarding house." Andre Sennwald

— + N Y Times p16 O 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p54 N 16 '35

Film Curb p17 N 1 '35

"Although this yarn presents rather familiar stuff without any special new coloring or freshness, it has a certain amount of human interest appeal that makes it a suitable and moderately satisfying attraction for the family houses."

— + Film Daily p6 O 29 '35

BAR 20 RIDES AGAIN. D 6 '35 64min Paramount

Players: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison, Jean Rouverol

Director: Howard Bretherton

Based on the famous Hop-a-long Cassidy character created by Clarence Mulford in novel of the same title, "Hop-a-long Cassidy and his buddies wipe out Nevada's gang of cattle rustlers, restoring peace to the territory once more." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"The usual Western theme of cattle rustling, with beautiful scenery, hard riding and better-than-average treatment. Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Fast movement, a nice romance, good character relief, satisfactory photography and story provide wholesome entertainment for the family. Adults: enjoyable; 14-18: good; 8-14: good. Family & junior matinee." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Beautiful scenery, fine riding in a tale of cattle rustling and bad men." E Coast Pre-view Committee

"Suitable for church halls, Catholic schools and family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Family and junior matinees." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Developed with considerable humor and some real acting, the film will please family and junior matinee audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Exciting. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family and junior matinee." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 18 '36

"A picture for the family to enjoy together."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ja 6 '36

"Excellent. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A: Good melodrama; Y and C: Thrilling."

Par M p38 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Junior matinee."

Wkly Guide D 14 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Time p41 D 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p31 N 30 '35

"Picture has been given splendid scenic background and some excellent camera angles have caught some thrilling moments. The old folks will go for this one and enjoy it as much as the youngsters."

+ Box Office p17 D 14 '35

"Another very satisfactory and exceedingly well done 'Hop Along Cassidy' story. It can hold its own anywhere. A high class drama of the outdoors that most any audience will enjoy. Just proves how fine a Western really can be."

+ Film Curb p18 D 15 '35

Film Daily p4 N 30 '35

"An outdoor action Western, this one retains all the values that are appreciated by audiences and showmen in the familiar pattern and adds much that is unique."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 N 29 '35

"This picture provides a soundly contrived story in which the elements of drama, romance, comedy, adventure, action and thrill are completely balanced."

+ Motion Pict Herald p66 D 7 '35

"Backed by a good script, better than average photography, nice backgrounds, this should please in all western houses. Family Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

BARBARY COAST. S 27 '35 97min Goldwyn—United artists

Players: Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson, Joel McCrea

Director: Howard Hawks

Based on the book of same title by Herbert Asbury, "In the days of '49, San Francisco's waterfront was known as Barbary Coast and is the setting for this dramatic story of Mary Rutledge, an eastern girl who comes to the coast to marry, only to learn that her sweetheart has lost his fortune and his life over a gaming table. Her subsequent life as a hardened roulette wheel operator in the establishment of Chamalis, boss of San Francisco, her romantic love affair with a tenderfoot, and the work of the vigilantes is portrayed in this tale of the old west." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Good of kind; Y: Unwholesome; C: By no means."

Christian Century p1438 N 6 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Dealing with the robust life of the period, as it does, the picture is well handled and presented, exceptionally well directed, and acted with sincerity."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 18 '35

"Fine characterizations by an unusually well chosen and capable cast, outstanding photography, artistic direction and a tense and absorbing story add greatly to the entertainment value. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates S 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p143 D '35

"Good. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Not once has Howard Hawks missed a chance to catch the spirit of the fog, the dim lights, the mud, and the life of the frontier that was San Francisco in her early days. Adult."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A: Robust entertainment; Y: Doubtful; C: No."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"An expert melodrama of San Francisco in the gold rush days, centering around a gambler, a girl and a young poet. . . Excellent photography. . . Mature."

+ Wkly Guide O 12 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"No great thought or work expended by anybody except the photographers. Just a picture to sell." Don Herold

— + Life p36 D '35

"Presented with considerable vigor and with something of that imagination which is never wholly lacking from the Hecht-MacArthur product." Mark Van Doren

Nation p548 N 6 '35

"Though it is hardly an impressive panorama of San Francisco, it is engaging enough as a conventional melodrama with a superior background." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p11 O 14 '35

"Excellently written and staged. . . It has academic value as an example of the orthodox approach to romance on the screen." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times px5 O 20 '35

"The conventionality of the plot has provided a challenge to the director and the authors to make something real out of the hocus-pocus. They have succeeded triumphantly. There are moments as dramatically exciting as anything I have seen on the fictional screen." Graham Greene

+ Spec p718 N 1 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c O 27 '35

"Staunch, colorful, thoroughly American entertainment. 'Barbary Coast' will probably please you very much."

+ Stage p10 N '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

Film Curb p19 O 1 '35

"Adult melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p36 O 10 '35

BEAUTY'S DAUGHTER. See Navy wife

BETWEEN MEN. Ja 25 '36 60min Supreme

Players: Johnny Mack Brown. Beth Marion. William Farnum

Director: Robert N. Bradbury

"The story centers on Brown's search for his guardian's granddaughter, who has disappeared with her parents in the western badlands following a family estrangement. The search not only leads him to the girl but to his own father, who had disappeared as a fugitive from justice years before, after murdering a man whom he believed had killed the son." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Good."

Par M p38 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Rough doings of the early 1900s down New Mexico way provide the occasion for 'Between Men,' the extravagantly idiotic melodrama replete with bad hombres, fair maidens, stalwart heroes, fast riding and quick shooting. Done with a straight face, most of the film's melodramatic incidents, which are intended to be serious, become so supremely silly that at times the offering is really unintentionally the best comedy that has come this way in weeks." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p13 Ja 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Plenty of thrills, a real story and beautiful scenery, are all features of this well made picture."

+ Film Curb p18 N 1 '35

"A well developed, interesting story somewhat different from the usual thing, a lot of fast action, fist fights, beautiful outdoor photography and locations all combine to make this picture one which should [please] with the outdoor action fans."

+ Film Daily p6 O 29 '35

"This is cut pretty much to the standard Western story patter and without any distinguishing virtues of its own. . . [It] requires a second feature for support."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 28 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p38 N 25 '35

"Inexpensively made Western which crams a lot of action into its comparatively short running time. . . For the dual billers strictly."

+ — Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

BIG BROADCAST OF 1936. S 20 '35 97min
Paramount

Players: Jack Oakie. George Burns. Gracie Allen

Director: Norman Taurog

Music: Ralph Rainger. Richard Whiting.

Lyrics: Leo Robin. Dorothy Parker

When a radio station finds itself in financial difficulties, its two owners enter a contest involving a television device.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"It is farcical in treatment, stimulating in appeal and affords every variety of entertainment. Family and Junior Matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 5 '35

Mo Film Bul p143 D '35

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

BIG BROADCAST OF 1936—Continued

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M S '35

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Entertaining."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"Complete nonsense, dispensed by artists of screen and radio, provides hilarious entertainment for audiences who wish to be amused rather than improved. The note of utter farce is well maintained, while the picture's tempo never slackens. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p57 N 6 '35

Film Curb p16 O 1 '35

"Family musical."

N Y Exhibitor p35 O 10 '35

BISHOP MISBEHAVES. S 13 '35 80min MGM

Players: Edmund Gwenn, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lucille Watson, Norman Foster

Director: E. A. Dupont

Adapted from the play of same title by Frederick Jackson. The Bishop, who doted on detective stories, decided to play detective himself when he became accidentally involved in a robbery. This led to trouble for the "criminals," young lovers who were actually trying to get back from a crook what he had stolen from the girl's father.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A refreshing farcical comedy replete with suspense and delightful humor. It is expertly cast and directed and will provide excellent entertainment for the family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 25 '35

"Scenario, direction, acting, all make the whole thing excellent entertainment. Family."

+ Nat Bd of R M S '35

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A and Y: Amusing detective film; C: Thrilling."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"It is a wholesome, jolly story with lively dialogue, interesting shots of an old English inn, the Bishop's study and scenes in Limehouse. It is expertly cast and directed and will provide excellent entertainment for the family. Outstanding."

++ Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

"Flavored with young love and London fog, furnished with an assortment of sweated rogues talking Cockney out of the sides of their mouths, the plot capers at the Bishop's gaitered heels."

+ Time p26 S 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p56 N 16 '35

Film Curb p16 O 1 '35

"The picture is replete with comedy situations, capably handled. . . All the ingredients for a successful farce are there, combining appealing, sympathetic and romantic comedy into a fast moving story."

+ Motion Pict Herald p64 N 9 '35

"Because it is stronger on dialogue, the show may do better in the higher sphere of houses, but in all departments it is a well produced job."

+ N Y Exhibitor p35 O 10 '35

BLAZING JUSTICE. (Release date not determined) 57min Spectrum

Players: Bill Cody, Gertrude Messinger, Gordon Griffith

Director: Al Herman

A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Some of the hardest hitting and fastest riding seen on the Western plains of late will be found in this new Bill Cody outdoor drama—giving it average entertainment value for pictures of this type. Family."

+ — Box Office p49 F 8 '36

"Just a regulation Western, perhaps just a bit below average but Bill Cody tries like a Trojan to make it seem real."

— + Film Curb p15 F 1 '36

"Satisfactory Western, settling conventional complications with abundance of fist fights."

+ Film Daily p8 Ja 29 '36

"'Blazing Justice' again presents Bill Cody and his Arabian Horse in his usual whopping hard riding, two-fisted fun blazing exhibition of outdoor action that will satisfactorily fill the needs of the neighborhood double bills and win favor with the kiddies and lovers of horse operas."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 F 1 '36

"As usual with Westerns there is the required quota of fights, shootings and hard riding that make for good juvenile fare. Adults will be entertained too. . . A good Western for Saturday morning juvenile trade."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ja 29 '36

"Estimate: standard Western."

N Y Exhibitor p31 F 10 '36

BOHEMIAN GIRL. F 14 '36 80min MGM

Players: Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Thelma Todd, Antonio Moreno, Jacqueline Wells, Mae Busch, Darla Hood

Directors: James Horne, Charles Rogers

Based on the light opera by Michael William Balfe. "Gypsies Laurel and Hardy find the long-lost kidnapped count's daughter, care for her, bring her back to her home." (N Y Exhibitor)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Good of kind; Y and C: Very amusing." Christian Century p382 Mr 4 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"The careful direction goes far to make the production a completely enjoyable one. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Canadian M p41 Mr '36

"Here, with the aid of his talented script writers [Hal Roach] has patterned a story that, once it gets under way, is a constant explosion of ludicrous antics. . . As for the two principals, Laurel and Hardy, to this way of thinking, they are superb comedians, especially Laurel, who can steal any scene with a manipulation of that uncanny countenance of his. The production is careful, and the music, some of it from the score of the operetta, very nice. The picture is in costume, and its natural settings have the impudence faintly to suggest certain ludicrous opera house backdrops." Marguerite Tazelaar

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 F 17 '36

"Against the antic lunacies of the screen's popular dimwits, Mr. Balfe's score hasn't much chance. Most of it has been preserved, in one state or another, including the familiar 'I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls,' 'Then You'll Remember Me,' and 'The Heart Bow'd Down,' but, except in the choral singing, the voices are not particularly impressive. This is one filmed opera that should not be seen if your interests are purely musical. . . Mr. Balfe probably wouldn't approve what Laurel and Hardy have done to his 'Bohemian Girl.' Then again, being Irish, perhaps he would." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p21 F 17 '36

"Just why Laurel and Hardy have chosen to display their knockabout antics in operetta when they make full length features this department knoweth not, unless it is to prove how really ludicrous this particular form of musical entertainment can be when presented seriously. By burlesquing their roles while the other actors play theirs straight, the Messrs. Laurel and Hardy obtain some good fun at the expense of an entertainment form that used to delight millions but which now certainly belongs on the musical library shelves. . . Chiefly, though, the film relies for its entertainment value on the highjinks of Laurel and Hardy, who manage to keep it passably amusing." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p13 F 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Comedy version of the Balfe opera tailored to fit the antics of Laurel and Hardy, but falling short of their standard measurements. . . Gags are overworked; scenic background and pleasing melodies are highlights. Family."

+ Box Office p17 F 22 '36

"What story there is has nothing to do with the well known opera and it must be stated right off the bat that this is far below M-G-M and Laurel and Hardy standard. . . Unless your patrons go for ANY Laurel and Hardy comedy this is going to be a tough one to put over. . . It is our opinion that such pictures as this team make are not suitable for feature length stuff but as two reelers were a joy on any program."

— Film Curb p8 Ja 4 '36

Film Daily p9 F 6 '36

"This is a botched-up, burlesqued version of the Balfe operetta, which would be bore-some without the Laurel and Hardy gags. They save the picture from complete mediocrity. . . The stealing by Laurel and Hardy is treated in a comedy vein. Exhibitors may, therefore, find it suitable for children and Sundays. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports F 22 '36

"The familiar operetta provides no more than average appeal as a background for Laurel and Hardy antics. . . Songs include 'I Dreamt I Dwelt,' 'When Other Lips,' 'The Heart Bowed Down,' and the new 'Heart of a Gypsy' by Nathaniel Shilkret and Robert Shayon. Staff writers changed the original libretto considerably."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 D 13 '35

"Showmen are given ample exploitable material, and it might be well for them to emphasize the fact that this is another Laurel and Hardy comedy and not an opera on the screen. The comedians are the strongest selling point, even though their work here falls below the average set in their recent feature length efforts."

+ Motion Pict Herald p51 Mr 7 '36

"Estimate: enjoyable entertainment."

+ N Y Exhibitor p32 Ja 10 '36

"A comedy with little or no comedy, this one will have tough sledding. Laurel and Hardy are not going to be able to gain forgiveness save among the most indiscriminating for the sheer silliness of the comedy sequences while the more serious implications of the plot, dealing in a heavy-handed way with kidnapping, infidelity, torture and thievery, are downright unwholesome. . . Thelma Todd who goes through the motions of singing (a mere bit) with the voice track poorly synchronized to her lips, seems strangely unlike herself. A good deal of her footage, fortunately for her reputation was cut out just prior to release. There is not a good performance in the production."

— Variety p12 F 19 '36

"Balfe's light opera makes poor film fare for Laurel and Hardy. [An] attempt has been made to tie up the opera's music with a series of gags, all of which fall short of the team's best efforts. . . [A] slight thread of a story, in no way connected with the opera's libretto, is woven throughout the picture. However, story is so implausible it gets snickers from the audience. . . Musical direction by Nathaniel Shilkret is acceptable but lacks the snap to which motion picture audiences have become accustomed."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 12 '35

BON BON PARADE. D 5 '36 8min Columbia

Director: Charles Mintz

"It is the story of a little boy who makes a wish that he could always live in Candy Town. His wish is granted, and he finds himself seated beside the king of Candyland as the parade of candies goes by." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Junior matinee."

Wkly Guide D '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Color treatment, novel and amusing situations and a lively pace contrive to make this a corking cartoon subject."

+ Box Office p22 D 21 '35

"A gorgeous cartoon in Technicolor as good as anything in its field, and better than most. . . The ingenuity employed in the candy characterizations is unusual, even for the cartoon technique where this ingenuity finds so much expression."

+ Film Daily p13 D 10 '35

LE BONHEUR. F 27 '36 105min Pathe-Natan

Players: Charles Boyer. Gaby Morlay. Michel Simon

Director: Marcel L'Herbier

Based on the play of the same title by Henri Bernstein. This is a dialogue film made in France with English sub-titles. "Philippe is an artist anarchist of the type at one time rather common in Paris. He feels he must do something to dramatize the glaring contrast between wealth and poverty. So he selects the popular movie actress, Clara Stuart, as his victim and shoots her as she is leaving a theatre after a triumphal personal appearance. She is only slightly wounded, because his hand trembled, as the result of his having fallen in love with her as she was singing 'Le Bonheur' during the performance. When Philippe is released there is a joyous, but brief, interlude, followed by a series of complications that spoil the 'happy end.'" (N Y Times)

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

LE BONHEUR—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for adults."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Le Bonheur' . . . seemed to me false and trivial in spite of certain fine moments." Mark Van Doren

— + Nation p360 Mr 18 '36

"'Le Bonheur' is a travesty on the ballyhoo and publicity built around screen stars and is presented by M. L'Herbier with neatness and humor, although his direction has serious flaws in its extensive use of dialogue at the cost of action. . . [The] story includes stretches of boredom. . . [It] is not very convincing, even though Mr. Bernstein's text is so adroit that it gives the impression of being witty and satirical." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 F 27 '36

"This entertaining picture moves rapidly and has plenty of humorous incidents, especially those turning on high-powered movie publicity. The routine plot is likely to be overlooked in admiring the excellent acting and striking scenes." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p18 F 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Well-acted production."

+ Film Daily p7 F 29 '36

"Another bad picture from France, but one which is likely to get a few nickels in the French-speaking sectors because of its stellar cast. Boyer and Gaby Morlay, plus the Henri Bernstein tag are bound to mean something, though the average auditor is pretty sure to be disappointed. . . Maybe if the photography were good (which it isn't) and if the adaptation were good (which it isn't) and if the direction were good (which it isn't) the acting would carry it. As is, it's a case of several good performances in search of a film."

— Variety p31 Mr 4 '36

BORN FOR GLORY. S 15 '35 70min Gaumont-British

Players: Betty Balfour, John Mills, Barry MacKay, Jimmy Hanley

Director: Walter Forde

Based on the novel of same title by C. S. Forester. "It tells the story of a brave young sailor lad, brought up in the British naval tradition by his unwed mother, whose sweet-heart, the father of the boy, went away with his ship and forgot his promise of marriage. In a naval encounter around Malta between a British and a German ship, the boy proves himself an outstanding hero, fatally risking his life for his country, and it is then that the father, a British commander, learns from the lad's personal effects that the hero is his own son." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A and Y; Stirring tale of British navy; C: Exciting."

Par M p38 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"With the elimination of the lengthy and lugubrious preliminary narrative, this would make a rousing war melodrama." Andre Sennwald

+ — N Y Times p22 O 21 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

Film Curb p12 N 1 '35

"Good naval war story with sufficient action and human interest for general appeal."

+ Film Daily p8 O 21 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p34 O 25 '35

BOULDER DAM. Mr 14 '36 70min Warner bros

Players: Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis, Lyle Talbot, Eddie Acuff

Director: Frank McDonald

Based on the novel of the same title by Dan M. Templin. "Boulder Dam is the background for this story of the regeneration of an erratic, wisecracking, selfish young man to one who realizes the true values of life. . . The picture portrays the attitude of the men who daily risk their lives, not for bread alone, but pride in their contribution to the World's greatest engineering feat." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"It is decidedly a man's picture. . . Interesting and admirable is the loyalty of the workers on the Boulder Dam and their pride in this great construction project of their country. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Highly recommended for the family and especially interesting to men and boys. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"Though the story is not particularly logical the background of the dam, with its intricate workings, is most thrilling and interesting."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) F 10 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates F 15 '36

"The background becomes an integral part of the plot in this lively melodrama. The tremendous engineering undertaking . . . gives us a picture of almost limitless power. . . It is not a great picture, but vividly realistic."

+ Motion Pict & Family p15 Mr 15 '36

"The plot taxes one's credulity at times but is refreshing in its simplicity. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: good."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Beautiful photography of interesting scenes in the building of Boulder Dam somewhat redeem this trite story."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women F 15 '36

"Good. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Brisk in action, racy in dialogue, and a sympathetic picture of certain types of laborers. Family."

+ Wkly Guide F 29 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Unqualifiedly do I recommend this to every adult seeking an intensely diverting hour at the cinema. . . I have seen no finer example of how talk and action must be combined to make a splendid motion picture. For that alone, it is a notable production." Allan Hersholt
+ Hollywood Spec p13 F 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Gripping, vital drama of a man's regeneration under the influence of a woman's love, laid against the biggest construction project in the United States. Family."
+ Box Office p13 Mr 14 '36

"If you can get 'em in they'll enjoy this thrilling melodrama. Practically all of the action takes place about the dam location and there are any number of decidedly exciting sequences. It is not only exciting, [but also] interesting. There is a bit of comedy relief here and there that registers."
+ Film Curb p19 F 29 '36

"'Boulder Dam' may only be a program picture, but it has the stuff that should put it across nicely with the average audiences. Dealing with a subject concerning industrial working people, it should have wide appeal. . . The Boulder Dam structure is used for all that it is worth and should serve as a good selling point."
+ Film Daily p9 F 25 '36

"It has many worthwhile elements of appeal to mass patronage; will be on the 'recommended' list of the uplift organizations, and will have a vigorous box-office pull in the neighborhood houses, especially where the population is industrial and names are not everything. Its chief exploitation point is that it gives a vivid picture of one of the great construction projects of history, vigorously dramatizing the hazards of that enterprise."
+ Hollywood Reporter p4 F 19 '36

"With the spectacular Boulder Dam project serving as a picturesque background, this picture is far from what may at first seem propaganda. Warners have taken occasion to build a thrilling story around the dam in addition to making the big hole in the Nevada mountains play an important part in the romantic leanings of Ross Alexander and Patricia Ellis."
+ Motion Pict Daily p8 F 19 '36

"Loaded with spectacular thrills, but minus box-office names this one will have to fight for money at the wicket. However, if sold properly through the title it should garner good money on dual bills."
Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 10 '36

BRIDE COMES HOME. Ja 3 '36 85min Paramount

Players: Claudette Colbert. Fred MacMurray. Robert Young

Director: Wesley Ruggles

Based on a short story of the same title by Elizabeth Sanxay Holding. "It deals with a spirited girl and a boy with a temper. Madly in love, they fight with each other, but both combine to fight against any and all comers who menace their romantic happiness. Battling all the way, in action and dialogue, they stake their biggest and most sensational brawl just prior to their wedding, when the girl threatens to wed another man and the boy has to battle harder than ever before to win his fighting sweetheart back." (Motion Pict Herald)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Cheap; Y: Undesirable; C: No."
Christian Century p158 Ja 22 '36

"Good."
+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"A trite plot, with a cheap ending. Mature-family." DAR

"Excellent technique and expert acting overbalance a light weight story and produce a good comedy filled with little suspense but many amusing situations. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Adults and young people." Mrs T. G. Winter
Fox W Coast Bul Ja 4 '36

"Though the story is weak the picture will prove entertaining due to the excellent acting and charm of Claudette Colbert and the fine work of her team-mate, Fred MacMurray. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ja 11 '36

"Good. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Family."
Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 15 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Good entertainment; C: No interest."
Par M p38 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide D 14 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'The Bride Comes Home' is a light tale that does not quite live up to its comedy possibilities." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p38 F '36

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 4 '36

"Deft comedy and light romance flow merrily at a dark tempo, directing attention (together with the expertness of the performances) away from the slowness of plot. . . A jolly piece of Colbert entertainment, but there's nary a single illuminating characteristic that shines above all of the horseplay."
+ Commonweal p244 D 27 '35

"Sheer charm may not be quite enough to carry a picture, but with Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray as chief charmers, 'The Bride Comes Home' manages to supply a merry hour. The story is thin, paper thin. There really isn't any story, just a couple of attractive young people who love and squabble and fall in love again. To supply enough atmosphere and dialogue to make that seem like a picture and an amusing picture too Director Wesley Ruggles and the scenarist, Claude Binyon, must have worked overtime." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p30 D 27 '35

"It is unlikely that [this] lightweight romantic comedy will cause a rush of blood to the head and interfere with the holiday digestive problems. Stemming from those earlier Paramount comedies, 'The Gilded Lily' and 'Hands Across the Table,' it works hard at being gay and effortless, and enjoys a moderate if less than devastating success at it. 'A Bride Comes Home' is pleasurably performed and shrewdly directed and gives every appearance of being an excellent motion picture in search of a plot. Its story is so thin as to be very nearly non-existent. After a while you can almost hear the production staff grunting as it strives to keep the narrative from going off into a corner and perishing gently of sheer inanition. As a matter of fact, the boys deserve a bonus for getting the idea on paper at all. [The film] is not much more than a situation, merrily tugged and pulled at by Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray and Robert Young." A. S.

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

BRIDE COMES HOME—Continued

+ — N Y Times p30 D 25 '35

"After a languid beginning [the film] acquires a spry momentum on which it moves briskly and with humor to the end. Unfortunately, however, the spurt it makes, after teetering for more than half its unreeling on the edge of inertia, comes too late to save it. If, then, 'The Bride Comes Home' lacks the snap and dash of 'It Happened One Night' or even 'Hands Across the Table' on which it obviously was patterned, the blame must be placed, possibly, on the authors, whose lack of invention in the film's early chapters is so glaring that this department at least is unable to greet it with complete enthusiasm. . . The final scene, with its last moment switching of bridegrooms and the bickering that goes on, is as uproariously funny as any comedy scene of the year. Unfortunately, it is not enough to balance the rest of the story, and so the film must be put down as one of those fair-to-middling entertainments." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p19 D 26 '35

"[This] must be classed as one of Miss Colbert's minor efforts, and I doubt that its whimsicalities of the Chicago heiress who has gone broke and entered an editorial office will startle even the most devout Colbert addicts." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p53 Ja 4 '36

Reviewed by Graham Greene
Spec p50 Ja 10 '36

Time p28 Ja 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p33 D 28 '35

"The laughs predominate but there is romance and drama as well."

+ — Film Curb p8 D 1 '35

"Though it is a fluffy yarn with little body to it, generally satisfactory entertainment is provided by the good work of the cast and snappy direction of the script, which has a certain amount of brightness that makes up for much of the story's thinness. . . There are plenty of laughs along the route."

+ — Film Daily p3 D 27 '35

"The story is not particularly exciting, but it is breezy, and moves along at a fast pace. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]

+ — Harrison's Reports D 28 '35

"The slight plot is directed and played so expertly that the film rates as a good, light laugh-provoker. . . Emphasis on the light-hearted human comedy and the charming cast are the best angles."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p10 N 12 '35

"Nicely staged, modern in atmosphere, moving with a zip and speed that occasionally becomes a bit intimate in action and dialogue, but never going overboard as far as moral qualities are concerned, it deals in colorful and alluring situations."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p74 N 23 '35

"Once again, Paramount writers have aimed for that certain style which made 'It Happened One Night' a hit picture; once again, Paramount writers have scored. Family comedy."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

"Claude Binyon has written an adroit scenario; Wesley Ruggles has given it life and pace; Colbert, MacMurray and Young supply the personalities. Together the three elements whip up a meringue in the modern taste that should do okay at the pay window. . . [An] assortment of laughs scattered through the production come fast enough and often enough to carry the picture over any unimportant criticisms of its essential artificiality."

+ — Variety p44 Ja 1 '36

BRIDES ARE LIKE THAT. (Release date not determined) 67min Warner bros

Players: Ross Alexander. Anita Louise. Joseph Cawthorn. Kathleen Lockhart. Gene Lockhart

Director: William McGann

Based on the play, Applesauce, by Barry Conners. "[It portrays] the amusing tribulations of a young bridal pair beset by the harsh practicalities of a world represented by their elders and guardians." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Mature. Family." DAR

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"There is a delightful romance, sparkling humor, and convincing acting in this family picture." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A gay little comedy. Amusing for any audience." Nat Soc of New England Women
Fox W Coast Bul F 1 '36

"The cast is so amusing and the situations so full of human interest that one gladly swallows any slight improbability as to story. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: yes." Motion Pict R F '36

"Good. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"When we tell you that 'Brides Are Like That' is just about as good as it can be, it doesn't mean that you should drop whatever you are doing and rush right out to see it. It's a little piece that moves easily as it peeks into the lives of a group of average citizens. . . For if 'Brides Are Like That' has any claim to distinction at all, it is that the picture assiduously dodges all novel and surprising twists. It could tell this story in its sleep. . . Moviegoers who don't expect too much should find this an amusing portrait of what the studios like to think is typical American home life." Beverly Hills

+ — Liberty p50 F 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Hilarious comedy. Family."

+ — Box Office p23 F 1 '36

"Unfortunately once again we find a picture with no big 'names' but the exhibitor that sells this film to his patrons will find that they like it. The players all turn in first class performances and the direction is most workman-like."

+ — Film Curb p14 Ja 25 '36

"The ingredients utilized have often proved their entertainment and commercial value. . . Just plain amusement, the show moves to a lively pace in action, dialogue and situations. It's the kind of show that can be offered to family audiences with confidence."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p38 Ja 25 '36

"Estimate: best for small towns, neighborhoods."

N Y Exhibitor p26 F 10 '36

"It comes as near perfection in sprightly, heart-warming comedy as the average diversion seeker will find."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 16 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

BROADWAY HOSTESS. D 7 '35 65min First national

Players: Winifred Shaw. Genevieve Tobin. Lyle Talbot. Phil Regan

Director: Frank McDonald

In this musical drama of night clubs, gambling, Broadway and Park Avenue characters, a young singer is given a trial in a night club and makes good.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"A tawdry drama. . . A capable cast is wasted on a tiresome story. Adults: fair; 8-18: doubtful." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Forced comedy. Adults." DAR

"Lavish production, a good cast and direction cannot make this tawdry, hackneyed story other than mediocre entertainment. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"A bright, amusing little comedy with a misleading title. . . The ethics are a trifle mixed—none of the hero's motives is particularly noble. Good. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"There is some good acting and attractive photography. Fair for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The general atmosphere is wholesome. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The story is insincere, and it has questionable moral values. 12-16: no; 8-12: impossible." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
Fox W Coast Bul D 7 '35

"Though not distinguished, the picture is not destructive in its ethical values. Family, mature."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 25 '35

"Unobjectionable for adults." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Diverting; Y: Mature; C: No." Par M p38 Mr '36

"Adults and young people" Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A 20-minute show stretched to 60." — Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 4 '36

"We doubt if there exists any movie goer incapable of anticipating every turn of characterization and plot once the film begins. If we had only been able to anticipate the beginning without entering the theatre!" Robert Stebbins

— — New Theatre p41 Ja '36

"The sultry Miss Wini Shaw, cinema singer of torch songs, strives earnestly to be a star in the new film, but I fear that the odds are too great for her. . . Two unfortunate factors stand in the way of Miss Shaw's somewhat premature debut as a member of the Hollywood hierarchy. In the first place, at this particular time in her career it is doubtful if she possesses the equipment to enable an actress to carry a vehicle. As I understand it, vehicles really should carry actresses, but, unfortunately, in addition to Miss Shaw's incomplete equipment, 'Broadway Hostess' is a film that Greta Garbo, Jean Harlow and Charles Laughton working valiantly together would have difficulty in supporting. . . If the producers of 'Broadway Hostess' were thinking of their hapless audiences, this is the picture that should have been called 'Show Them No Mercy.'" Richard Watts, Jr.

— — N Y Herald Tribune p12 D 16 '35

"In an excess of pre-Christmas tolerance the Strand has permitted to slip on to its screen a dreary little something called 'Broadway Hostess.' This has all the faults, type casting, confusion, monotony and lack of imagination from which Warner pictures at their worst sometimes suffer. It has none of those Warner virtues, daring, originality, pace and virility. It is, in fact, quite a bore. . . The story never begins. The picture, however, finally does end." Eileen Creelman

— — N Y Sun p30 D 16 '35

"With a thoroughness that is nothing short of sinister, the manufacturers of 'Broadway Hostess' have succeeded in rounding up all the cliches of Broadway comedy-with-music cycle and herding them into one photoplay." Andre Sennwald

— — N Y Times p23 D 19 '35

"There have been worse films shown on Broadway this season than 'Broadway Hostess' (Cries of 'No!! No!'), yet the memory of this department cannot recall at the moment an offering so nicely compounded of tedium and embarrassment in equal parts." William Boehnel

— — N Y World-Telegram p35 D 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one is below average. Story is threadbare."

— Box Office p23 D 21 '35

"Practically the only really entertaining features of this one are a couple of good songs and one good dance number. Other than that it is not such-a-much. Trite story. Below average dialogue. No marquee names. Looks like a tough one to put over."

— Film Curb p17 D 15 '35

Motion Pict Daily p6 N 14 '35

"While this picture makes no pretensions at being elaborate, in either story or production, it has much audience appeal, most of which lies in Winifred Shaw's singing. She has five or six specialties, and Phil Regan has one."

+ Motion Pict Herald p72 N 23 '35

"Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p53 D 10 '35

"Musical of program caliber which will prove adequate for family audience consumption, but will have to pull hard to get average grosses. Direction of Frank McDonald is routine. Not much comedy, but what there is, is handled by Allen Jenkins."

— + Variety p12 D 18 '35

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936. S 20 '35 110min MGM

Players: Eleanor Powell. Jack Benny. Robert Taylor. Una Merkel

Director: Roy Del Ruth

Set backstage, the picture shows a young producer whose musical production is financed by a stage-struck heiress. When an ambitious dancer from the producer's home town asks for a tryout, he sends her home although he loves her. She, with the assistance of his secretary, dons a blond wig and poses as a Parisian celebrity. She is made leading lady and after a series of comedy complications marries the producer.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: Fine of kind; C: Probably good."

+ Christian Century p1358 O 23 '35

Mo Film Bul p143 D '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1936—Continued

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M S '35

"A and Y: Hilarious; C: Entertaining."

Par M p38 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A rousing good musical, quite as worthy of attention as the original 'Broadway Melody.' . . The picture is not up to the gay spontaneity of the early Astaire-Rogers musicals; but it's tuneful, lively, funny enough. The songs are hummable, and the humor pleasant if not brilliant." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p22 S 19 '35

"A superior song and dance show in the lavish Metro style, although it is scarcely novel in form."

+ N Y Times px5 N 3 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p56 N 16 '35

BROADWAY PLAYBOY. (Release date not determined) 61min Warner bros

Players: Warren William. June Travis. Barton MacLane. Gene Lockhart. Kathleen Lockhart

Director: William McGann

Based on the play, Home Towners, by George M. Cohan. The film was previously known as The Man from Big Bend. "Warren William, now a wealthy New York stock market man, is to marry June Travis. He calls his old smalltown pal, Gene Lockhart, to act as his best man. When Lockhart meets the girl's family, he believes that his friend is being taken for his money. He disrupts all plans and the engagement is broken and then Lockhart learns he is all wrong. He tries to straighten everything out and at last he is successful in bringing Warren and the girl together again." (Film Daily)

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] makes pleasing program entertainment [and] should do nicely with the family trade."

+ Film Daily p7 Mr 14 '36

"[It is a] mild but quite human comedy of Main Street and Wall Street that will serve pleasantly enough in the run of double bill [houses]."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 11 '36

"This . . . is light, humorous film fare which should fulfill the producer's aim as average program entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Mr 12 '36

"[It] will take care of itself neatly for program returns and is a natural for the family trade."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 11 '36

(*)BROKEN TOYS. D 19 '35 8min United artists

Director: Walt Disney

"It shows how a group of discarded toys which, after having been relegated to the junk heap, are summoned to new life by the magical administrations of a sailor boy. He [rebuilds the toys to make] some of the screen's best-known personalities amidst a variety of music, singing and gagging and then marches the gang off to spread good cheer in an orphan asylum." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As each of these new Disney subjects pops up, it gets tougher to find new superlatives to properly do them justice. Suffice [it] to say that this latest sample of 'Mitey' entertainment is well nigh the perfect color cartoon. The creative artistry of the Disney staff has never been seen to better advantage. . . Young and old, poor and rich, will be delighted."

+ Box Office p32 D 28 '35

"Grand entertainment for children and just as certain to please the grown-ups. The color effects are gorgeous."

+ Film Daily p12 D 18 '35

BUILDERS OF SOCIALISM. Ja 28 '36 88min Amkino

Players: International Workers' Delegation

"Beginning with the arrival of the delegates to the 1935 Moscow May Day celebration, it shows the various army, navy and workers' units passing in review before Stalin. Then it takes you on a photographic tour through the new Moscow subway and to various factories where the workers are building socialism." N Y World-Telegram

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is nothing much in it to recommend." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p13 Ja 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It has] historical and sociological interest rather than entertainment."

Film Daily p8 Ja 28 '36

"This may please members of the International, followers of Stalin's ideas and so-called Communists. But nobody else. Reason is self-evident—it's an attempt to make a glorified newsreel or travelog. No story. No plot."

+ Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

BULLDOG COURAGE. D 30 '35 60min Puritan

Players: Tim McCoy. John Elliott. Joan Woodbury

Director: Sam Newfield

A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"There are a number of thrilling sequences, notably the dynamiting of a mine. It's all good stuff that certainly will please the outdoor melodrama fans."

+ Film Curb p12 F 22 '36

"Tim McCoy, starring in this Western, plays a dual role and in both provides plenty of action to come up to outdoor action standards."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 F 17 '36

"Estimate: good Western anywhere."

N Y Exhibitor p31 F 10 '36

BURNING GOLD. D 1 '35 59min Republic

Players: William Boyd. Judith Allen. Lloyd Ingraham. Frank Mayo

"An oil driller sinks a wildcat well, strikes a gusher, becomes a millionaire overnight." Endorsed Motion Pict

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Fair."

+ — Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Suitable for church halls, Catholic Schools, or family night programs." Int Fed of Cath Alumnae

+ — Fox W Coast Bul Ja 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Fair."
Par M p38 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Material is familiar. Fair for neighborhoods. Family melodrama."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p33 Ja 10 '36

C

CALL OF THE PRAIRIE. Mr 6 '36 65min Paramount

Players: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison, Muriel Evans, George Hayes, Chester Conklin

Director: Howard Bretherton

Based on the novel, Hop-a-long Cassidy's Protege, by Clarence E. Mulford. This is the fourth of the Hop-a-long series. A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Good Western."
Par M p38 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It should more than please in any situation. Family."

+ — Box Office p2 F 15 '36

"To date this has been a series of topnotch outdoor features and they certainly must have proved well worth while to many an exhibitor."

+ — Film Curb p11 F 1 '36

"Topnotch Western well handled all around with good story and pleasing musical bits."

+ — Film Daily p7 Ja 24 '36

"It is pretty exciting Western fare that builds well and is full of explosive action with comedy well sprinkled throughout. . . Howard Bretherton has directed with speed and polish, keeping his action and gun play well paced, building his climactic suspenses to the thrill point with firm hand. The Lone Pine exteriors and the ranch scenes have been grandly photographed by Archie Stout."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 21 '36

"Although it is weaker in story material than its predecessors, still it offers enough action to give general satisfaction. . . Audiences who have followed the series should be pleased with this film."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p7 Ja 22 '36

"As it appears on the screen, there is ample evidence indicating that the producer has made strong efforts to make this a worthy entertainment and showmanship successor to the previous pictures in the series."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p48 F 1 '36

"Estimate: good Western anywhere."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p27 F 10 '36

"'Call of the Prairie' . . . is topnotch entertainment. Paramount will have little trouble in selling it. Paced slowly at few intervals, piece could be speeded to make it corking entertainment for any spot with the exception of the ace houses. Then, too, judicious cutting to eradicate some of the levity expressed while dead men are lying around promiscuously would lend more authenticity to the otherwise capable yarn."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 21 '36

CALLING OF DAN MATTHEWS. D 10 '35 76min Columbia

Players: Charlotte Wynters, Mary Kornman, Richard Arlen, Frederick Burton

Director: Phil Rosen

Based on novel of the same title by Harold Bell Wright. "Arlen is the crusading minister who cleans up a town later aided by the heroine whose father owns a property on which, unknown to him, is the vice center. Right, of course, wins, with the minister getting the daughter as well." (N Y Exhibitor)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Harold Bell Wright's story comes to the screen adequately adapted, but with a lack of conviction due in some measure to unfortunate casting. Richard Arlen, in the title role, lacks force and sincerity, while attractive Charlotte Wynters is artificial as Hope Strong." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Adults & young people. Harold Bell Wright's well-known story has lost much of its appeal through its transition to the screen. . . Though ethically constructive, satisfactorily cast and photographed, the picture lacks dramatic force." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"A slow-moving melodrama. . . Somewhat hackneyed in theme, the story unfolds to a satisfactory end because of the efforts of a good cast and adequate direction. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"A little originality in treatment would have made a more interesting picture. Family-mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"While the film is not altogether convincing, it offers food for thought and presents an accurate view of some phases of the fast stepping youth of today. Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Possibly Harold Bell Wright did not intend to use the motive of an inspired crusade against vice to cloak sensationalism, but such is the effect of the screen version of his novel. . . Some of the dialogue is off-key, but even in modern settings, the feeling of the production belongs to a time that is past. Adolescents: poor; children: no." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Unconvincing; Y: Poor; C: No."
Par M p38 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Machine-made melodrama."

— Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

"'The Calling of Dan Matthews' emerges as a boring account of night club racketeers. . . The picture lacks smooth continuity, suspense

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CALLING OF DAN MATTHEWS—Continued and entertainment, to this way of thinking."
Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ja 25 '36

"The Calling of Dan Matthews' is as old-fashioned as Harold Bell Wright. . . Its characters are very black or very white, good or bad, wicked or noble, stamped out in a rigid dye. There is no flexibility in this tale, and not a ray of humor." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p8 Ja 25 '36

N Y Times p18 Ja 25 '36

"After watching the Rev. Dan Matthews save the younger generation of a fair unnamed American city from the evils of drinking, gambling and necking, one is left with the suspicion that the crusading Dr. Matthews goes too far in his ambitions to correct evil, for not only does he put sinful and wicked night club and gaming owners to flight but also some innocent film goers since the photoplay is too weary and listless and juvenile to be effective either as a sermon or an entertainment." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p12 Ja 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Curb p4 D 1 '35

"A fair program melodrama. Though the plot is based on the Harold Bell Wright novel, the story is practically new. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ — Harrison's Reports D 21 '35

"In transforming the Harold Bell Wright novel, Dan Jarrett and Don Swift have modernized it at the cost of sacrificing some of the punch the story had when written nearly 30 years ago."

— + Motion Pict Daily p4 N 23 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p53 D 10 '35

"[It is] a slow article and creaky film material."

— Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

CAPPY RICKS RETURNS. S 23 '35 66min Republic

Players: Florine McKinney. Robert McWade. Ray Walker

Director: Mack Wright

Based on novel of the same title by Peter B. Kyne. "Retired from active business, Ricks returns to the shipping trade to outwit his former rivals." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Feeble; Y: Fairly good; C: Little interest."

Christian Century p1471 N 13 '35

Mo Film Bul p167 N '35

"A, Y and C: Good comedy."

Par M p38 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p35 N 23 '35

"Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p36 O 10 '35

"Cappy Ricks, famous Peter B. Kyne character, is back in harness but he won't pull a load of business in his latest exploits on film."

— + Variety p15 D 4 '35

CAPTAIN BLOOD. D 28 '35 119min First national

Players: Errol Flynn. Olivia de Havilland. Basil Rathbone. Lionel Atwill. Guy Kibbee. Ross Alexander. David Torrence

Director: Michael Curtiz

Based on the novel of the same title by Rafael Sabatini. This was originally produced as a silent picture in 1924. "The story begins in the reign of James II, one of England's best-hated kings. When a young doctor named Peter Blood is found treating a wounded rebel, he is summarily convicted of treason, sent to Jamaica to be sold into slavery with a group of other James-haters. . . When Spanish pirates cannonade and capture the town, Blood and his friends escape to the pirate craft, turn pirates themselves. With Britain at war with France and James II ousted at home by William of Orange, Blood gets a navy commission, captures a French man-of-war in a tremendous battle." (Time)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Excellent; Y: Fine thriller; C: Too strong."

Christian Century p158 Ja 22 '36

"Very good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"The dash, the color and the adventure characteristic of the pen of Rafael Sabatini are brought to the screen in a production breath-taking in its historic and dramatic scope. . . Errol Flynn, a newcomer to the screen plays the leading role with spirit and ease. Family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Errol Flynn, as dauntless Peter Blood, heads a fine cast. Mature-family." DAR

"A fine story with a beautifully romantic and exciting plot and a cast that furnishes all the glamor and beauty expected of romantic acting. This, combined with superb direction, should give unique pleasure to all lovers of historic romance. The battle scenes are especially well done and the dramatic tension of the trial of the conspirators has seldom been equalled. One of the exceptional productions of the year. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Errol Flynn magnetically portrays Peter Blood and heads a particularly notable cast in this stirring Sabatini melodrama in which sound effects and photography deserve recognition. Michael Curtiz as director has given us a truly great picture. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Vigorous and likeable, with a remarkably effective musical score. Suggested for schools and libraries. Family." Nat Bd of R

"The story itself is a fine tale of adventure and romance, the sets and trappings are technically excellent, the direction effective, the photography outstanding, and interesting sidelights of the seventeenth century England with her elegant court life and cruel injustices give color and authenticity to the background. Family and junior matinees." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"It is an amazing production from every point of view and audiences a-plenty will be carried away by its exciting action, its extraordinary realism, and its photographic beauty. A wealth of detail indicates painstaking research to reproduce a period that to modern eyes seems incredibly brutal and unjust, yet so colorful and thrilling. The roster of players is too long for individual comment, but the acting is uniformly excellent and the casting inspired. . . With all its mass action and its baffling sea fights, this picture has the individual touches that give reality to every

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

genuinely great picture, no matter how vast its scope. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Superbly cast, intensely dramatic, and magnificently photographed, this stirring tale of the sea is notable for its crisp dialogue and perfection of detail. Exceptionally entertaining for audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The story, in spite of improbabilities, is excellent. . . Highly dramatic and entertaining, perhaps too harrowing for young children. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Excellent family entertainment but not for excitable children." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Ja 4 '36

"The photoplay sweeps forward with dash and power, mingling thrills with realistic picturization of conditions in England and along the Caribbean Sea in the early colonial period. . . The replacement of screams and yells in the mob scenes by orchestral music is most effective and pleasing. Excellent photography and characterization alone should make this film worthy of study."

+ Motion Pict & Family p2 Ja 15 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Colorful melodrama with music and humor; Y and C: Thrilling." Par M p38 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Vigorous and likeable, with a remarkably effective musical score. Suggested for schools and libraries."

+ Wkly Guide D 21 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The film slumps off a bit when it gets into sentimental passages. That almost always happens with pirates who become romantic. They seem ill-at-ease. Probably they have too little of polite society. But when the story is concerned with deeds of daring and swashbuckling battles it has a heartiness and gusto that more than makes amends for its softer moments." E. F. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p10 D 26 '35

"It is a lusty, blustery, bloodthirsty tale, admirably done, largely because Errol Flynn, who plays Captain Blood, manages to bring to life a difficult, swashbuckling rôle, without swashbuckling. . . Our guess would be that this picture will have a wide acceptance." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p36 F '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

"'Captain Blood' has been lavishly staged with thorough knowledge and superior skill—from the broad-bladed cutlasses and seventeenth-century corsetry to the great ships of the day and its cities, fortresses and fights. It is real pirate cloth. . . Thrillingly realistic is the bow-to-bow sea battle between Captain Blood's ship and two French seventeenth-century wardogs." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p272 Ja 3 '36

"Another addition to the group of great pictures which the film industry is presenting to the world to demonstrate the limitless sweep of the screen as an art, one that is entitled to a place beside the other two splendid Warner productions which it resembles not at all, 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' and 'The Story of Louis Pasteur'. . . For all its gory implications, there is nothing in it to offend the most sensitive person. It has great esthetic appeal. Hal Mohr brings to the screen some exquisite examples of the photographic art, scenes of breath-taking beauty in which shadows are used with striking effect. Some of the portraiture is graphic to the point of being startling."

+ + Hollywood Spec p11 Ja 18 '36

"Errol Flynn makes his first important screen appearance in 'Captain Blood,' a picture which might have been written especially for this gay, reckless Irish personality. . . This is straight romantic melodrama, told with all the excitement and action that cameras can crowd into two hours' entertainment. The dialogue is sometimes awkwardly high-flown, but a cast as competent as it is handsome gets around even that difficulty." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p25 D 26 '35

"With a spirited and criminally good-looking Australian named Errol Flynn playing the genteel buccaneer to the hilt, the photoplay recaptures the air of high romantic adventure which is so essential to the tale. Providing a properly picturesque background for Dr. Blood's piratical career, the Warner Brothers skillfully reconstruct the England of the sanguinary Monmouth uprising, the West Indies of tortured slaves and savage masters, and the ships that sailed the Spanish Main flying the jolly roger. . . Mr. Flynn has an effective cast at his back. Olivia de Havilland is a lady of rapturous loveliness and well worth fighting for. Lionel Atwill, as the cruel governor of Port Royal, is as thorough a knave as Peter Blood is a gentleman." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p14 D 27 '35

"Recapturing the turbulent, intriguing England of King James and the colorful West Indies, where men were sold into slavery, in an enormously effective manner, 'Captain Blood' is rousing and thrilling swashbuckling entertainment. . . Filled with stirring adventures in love, war and politics, [it] is . . . always interesting and sometimes [an] outstanding film." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 D 26 '35

"Another big, showy, costumed thing is 'Captain Blood,' which, however, is not going to take the honors from 'Mutiny on the Bounty.' . . The thing is quite talky all through, and rather overdressed. A certain young Errol Flynn, as Captain Blood, seems to be rather too gentle a Flynn for Caribbean brutalities. Certainly the most real human being in the entire affair turns out to be Guy Kibbee, and of course good, honest Mr. Kibbee can't swing a whole buccaneer picture." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p57 D 28 '35

"Rafael Sabatini's lusty tale of piracy and romance on the high seas during the eventful 17th century, has been lavishly and thrillingly filmed for the sound screen. . . For those who enjoy stories of adventures and brave deeds, it offers splendid entertainment. . . Olivia De Havilland as Arabella, Lionel Atwill as her uncle, Basil Rathbone as the French pirate, Ross Alexander, David Torrence, Guy Kibbee and many others in Captain Blood's band all give excellent accounts of themselves." Louise Mace

+ Springfield Republican p2 D 26 '35

"Captain Blood seems to be Warner's answer to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's 'Mutiny on the Bounty.' Whatever the literary merits of Rafael Sabatini's florid novels, they make excellent cinema fare when served with the crispness and gusto of Captain Blood."

+ Time p16 D 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"A lively and powerful adventure tale, with romance as well as thrills. It [is] ideal entertainment for all types of audiences."

+ Box Office p59 Ja 11 '36

"Just about the perfect picture. It should make history at the box offices of the country for it has universal appeal and certainly will give entire satisfaction wherever presented. Warners have turned out a wonderfully thrilling screen version of the famous Sabatini novel, colorful, romantic, entertaining and indeed a great picture."

+ + Film Curb p14 Ja 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CAPTAIN BLOOD—Continued

"Worthy of particular commendation is the fidelity to detail in recreating the period of King James. They have caught the feel and spirit of those hectic and troublous times, and the observer is transported into a world of romance, high adventure and reckless swash-buckling bravado long since gone. The battle scenes between the two French frigates and Captain Blood's buccaneer ship are splendid. . . The picture moves with surging suspense and realism from one stirring episode to another, mounting to an altogether satisfactory climax."

+ Film Daily p4 D 19 '35

"Excellent entertainment for all types of audiences. It has thrills, adventures, pathos, and romance. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 4 '36

"The swagger, the glamour, the road to high adventure and romance penned in the Rafael Sabatini original have been caught effectively and thoroughly by Michael Curtiz. The producer, apparently recognizing the breadth and sweep inherent in the material, has gone the limit in transferring it from the pages of the novel to the screen in terms of images that arrest. In point of production investiture, 'Captain Blood' ranks in the front rank of Hollywood's recent efforts. . . There is action, plenty of it, and adventure and gore; a salty tang that sets the blood atingle and enormously effective battle scenes."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 D 19 '35

Motion Pict Herald p53 Ja 11 '36

"Estimate: another big money show; exploit accordingly. Family melodrama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p32 Ja 10 '36

"'Captain Blood,' is a big picture. . . It will do very well and establish both Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland. . . Miss de Havilland, who came to attention in Warner's 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' is romantically beautiful as the unsympathetic plantation owner's (later governor's) niece. This supplies a modicum of romantic interest, although all too paltry. It's really one of the prime shortcomings of the production. . . Camera work is excellent and the special E. W. Korngold score (he also did the 'Midsummer Night's Dream' musicalization) further enhances the technic, in which the Forststein baton is prominent."

+ Variety p44 Ja 1 '36

"[It] should grow steadily by word of mouth, coming close to being all things to all men—and most women—an entertainment. . . Michael Curtiz' exceptionally fine direction is responsible for much of the picture's strength and magnificence. He never loses the melodramatic color and vigor, nor does he slip in keeping his parade of characters engrossing and consistent, his romance high and suspense sharp. Smallest detail and the plunging masses of battling pirates alike have been handled with highest skill."

+ + Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 31 '35

CAPTAIN JANUARY. (Release date not determined 75min 20th century-Fox)

Players: Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee, George (Slim) Summerville, Buddy Ebsen
Director: David Butler

Based on the novel of the same title by Laura E. Richards. An old crusty lighthouse-keeper on the New England coast rescues a little girl and adopts her. When she is six, a woman truant officer threatens to have her placed in an institution because she is not being brought up properly. Just in the nick of time a wealthy aunt and uncle of the child are discovered and in true fairy-tale style prevent separation of the child and her foster-parent by hiring him as skipper on their yacht.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The scarcity of good juvenile pictures should secure a special welcome for 'Captain January.'"

Bks & Films F '36

"Family and junior matinee. . . The picture is well mounted, fittingly cast, sympathetically directed and will prove most entertaining."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Mr 1 '36

"The story though unlike the original is well adapted to Shirley's versatile talents. Family. Junior."

Wkly Guide F 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Shirley Temple again, and lots of her, with some first rate entertainment promised in the way of song and dance, and plenty of comedy supplied by Guy Kibbee."

+ Canadian M p13 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It's just grand, folks." L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 F 29 '36

"It is quite likely this will do big business in most theatres where it is shown."

Film Curb p13 F 8 '36

"Again Shirley Temple comes through with a box office winner. She sings, dances and carries her acting role in such a grand style that no Temple fan should miss this show. . . Although the piece tends more to comedy, the well developed screenplay contains a number of suspenseful moments. It is the type of story which should interest most everyone since it concerns regular every-day people."

+ Film Daily p9 Mr 17 '36

"This new Shirley Temple vehicle is a sheer delight from every standpoint, not overlooking the box office, where it is quite reasonable to expect that it will out-gross any of her previous pictures. The extraordinary sprite was never more winsome nor carried a whole picture on her shoulders with more aplomb and natural elfin charm. She is given plenty to do, including three songs, two of them new, and a lively step dance with Buddy Ebsen, and is encased in a comedy that is all the heartier for its warm and believable human affection and its share of tears."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 30 '36

"Miss Temple's acting, talented as it is, is exceeded by the artistry of her singing and dancing performances. Her rendering of 'Early Bird' and 'At the Codfish Ball,' among other musical numbers, and her spiral staircase dance with Buddy Ebsen, as well as her solo multiplication table tap dance, are features which place the picture among the few best she has done."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ja 31 '36

"Once again heroine Shirley Temple continues to excite the trade by making each picture better than the one before. 'Captain January' will be in the top rank when the grosses are tabulated, thanks to Miss Temple, a good cast, a swell script. Estimate: money show all the way."

+ N Y Exhibitor p35 F 25 '36

"'Captain January' is an ideal vehicle for the Temple youngster, as it has here been adapted to the little star's talents, and will stand amongst the top on her list of successive hits for heavy cleanup. . . Shirley Temple carries her every scene with that combined childish naivete and keen perception of what is involved which distinguishes her as an entertainment genius as well as a lovely child."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 30 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

CASE OF THE LUCKY LEGS. O 5 '35 77min
Warner bros

Players: Warren William. Genevieve Tobin.
Patricia Ellis. Allen Jenkins

Director: Archie L. Mayo

Based on a novel of the same title by Erle Stanley Gardner. This is the third of the Perry Mason series by Gardner. Perry Mason, attorney, in his usual nonchalant manner unravels a murder mystery involving winners in a contest.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Hardly; Y: Perhaps; C: No."
Christian Century p1664 D 25 '35

"The action is confused and at times very informal. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 23 '35

"A: Entertaining; Y: Unelevating; C: No."
Par M p38 Mr '36

"A fair mystery play in which the murderer has no real motive for the crime and the general tone of the picture is sordid. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This one has been jazzed up to resemble in many of its strained moments 'The Thin Man,' so revered at present by Hollywood producers who have eyes upon its box-office record."

Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p15 N 1 '35

"A routine murder melodrama tries to vary its expected course by adopting a nonchalant attitude." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p33 N 1 '35

"A gay, swift and impertinent excursion into the sombre matter of murder, [it] is at once the best of the Erle Stanley Gardner collection and deserves being rated close to the top of this season's list of mystery films." F. S. N.

+ N Y Times p25 N 1 '35

N Y World-Telegram p14 N 2 '35

"Perry Mason is my favourite film detective; he is curiously little known, perhaps because his films, as 'second features,' are usually not shown to the Press. 'The Case of the Lucky Legs' is an admirable film. . . . Perry Mason is a hard-drinking and not very scrupulous lawyer. He owes something to the character established by Mr. William Powell: there is the same rather facetious badinage with a woman assistant, but he is, I think, a more genuine creation. . . . To those who do not yet know Perry Mason I recommend 'The Case of the Lucky Legs' as good Mason if not good detection, better, I think, than 'The Case of the Curious Bride.'" Graham Greene

+ Spec p170 Ja 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p54 N 16 '35

Film Curb p10 O 1 '35

"A generally enjoyable affair packed with good laughs provoked by the combination of amusing situations, fast action, funny lines and effective work by the capable cast."

+ Film Daily p7 N 1 '35

"Apparently convinced that strict mystery murder drama is nothing new to moviegoers, Warner scenarists turned [this] into a comedy-mystery-murder drama that has benefited because laughs have been [inserted]. Family drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 O 10 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

CASE OF THE MISSING MAN. O 15 '35 58min
Columbia

Players: Roger Pryor. Joan Perry. Thurston Hall

Director: D. Ross Lederman

A newspaper reporter quits his job to become a street photographer who sells pictures to people he snaps. By accident he photographs a hold-up and becomes involved with a crook who wants the picture.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A mildly entertaining comedy marred by a strain of vulgarity which does nothing to bolster its obvious weaknesses. The suspense element is well handled, but the entertainment value, as a whole, is just average. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Bd of R

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 7 '35

"Novel idea. Family."

+ Nat Bd of R M N '35

"A and Y: Trifling; C: No interest."

Par M p38 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 13 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c D 15 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"An exciting and original mystery yarn has been turned into a good piece of program fare. Although highly dramatic and pausing but slightly for romance, the tale moves so swiftly that the spectator forgets to look for implausibilities."

+ Box Office p23 D 21 '35

Film Curb p12 D 15 '35

Film Daily p8 N 22 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p29 N 10 '35

"Acceptable diversion."

+ Variety p14 N 27 '35

CATTLE THIEF. F 28 '36 58min Columbia

Players: Ken Maynard. Geneva Mitchell. Ward Bond. Roger Williams

Director: Spencer Gordon Bennett

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"An average Western story. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: [good] Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p54 Mr 10 '36

CEILING ZERO. Ja 25 '36 95min Warner bros.
First national

Players: James Cagney. Pat O'Brien. June Travis. Stuart Erwin. Isabel Jewell

Director: Howard Hawks

Based on a play of the same title by Frank Wead. "Cagney, [a dare-devil pilot] feigns

CEILING ZERO—Continued

illness to keep a date with a student flyer, June Travis, sending Erwin in his place. Bad weather closes down, and Erwin, attempting to land with his radio out of commission and the ceiling zero, with a fog hanging on the ground, crashes to a spectacular death. The film ends with Cagney grounded, taking a mail plane against orders, testing new ice breaking equipment and crashing after radioing important information." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are judged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Extensive research, expert photography, direction by Air-man Hawks, and excellent characterizations by the principal players result in a cinema Epic of the Air. Adults; worthwhile; 14-18: good; 8-14: too exciting." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Graphically realistic, this play keeps one keyed at high tension. Adults." DAR

"Authentic routine of a large airport is fascinating and interesting. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"The entire cast is excellent. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Interesting details of the mechanics and daily routine of flying not generally known add greatly to a gripping and dramatic story. Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A highly entertaining and instructive picture, depicting the courage, loyalty and friendship necessary for the success and safety of aviation. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"An unusually well constructed play, intensely dramatic, skillfully directed and acted. Adults & young people." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 12 '36

"Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ja 8 '36

"The picture is exceptionally well done, the whole being so well coordinated that each fraction concerned with its making deserves credit. . . While grimness is inevitable, the script is nicely balanced with humor—humor that is not always in the best of taste, but is in keeping with the character. The problem and the appeal is adult, no compromise having been made to make it acceptable for any other group. Adolescents, 12-16: too sophisticated; children, 8-12: unsuited."

+ Motion Pict R Ja '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Gripping aviation melodrama; Y: Sophisticated; C: No."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family."

+ + Wkly Guide Ja 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 18 '36

"This is one of the best of the modern melodramas about aviation. . . Romance, some clever comedy and a hint of tragedy are blended skillfully until this movie is far more interesting than the popular stage play by Frank Wead." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"'Ceiling Zero' is more than screen entertainment. It is a documentary film, an informative presentation of the present status of aerial transportation, as up to date as this morning's newspaper. For gripping drama it has had few equals on the screen during the last twelve months, and no picture has been cast more intelligently, acted more capably or directed more effectively. . . Put 'Ceiling Zero' on your list of things to see. It is another of the season's impressive offerings."

+ + Hollywood Spec p12 Ja 4 '36

"Unless the movie industry surprises everybody, including itself, 'Ceiling Zero' will be one of the best pictures of 1936. . . Outside of a few vivid seconds of fire, speed and explosion, a few conventional shots of planes in the fog, flyers at the stick, people at the phone, the film is still a stage play with one main and two subsidiary sets. The flyers, the chief, the big shot, the salesman, the mechanics, together with their wives, girls and other troubles, have to bring their lines and their crises into the control room, either personally, by radio or by phone. It speaks very highly for the original stage play that the lack of diversity is not felt, that the whole thing was built right, constructed and tested under pressure at the start, so that it makes one of the very rare pieces to be transferred bodily to the screen as a good movie." Otis Ferguson

+ + New Repub p369 F 5 '36

"All things considered the best Cagney film since 'Public Enemy.' . . The humor of the film, coming after the insipid innuendoes of the average Hollywood discursion into sex, is at times refreshingly bawdy." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p22 F '36

"The new picture is, unless my memory is going back on me, the best and most moving of the aviation dramas. . . Splendidly played by James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Stuart Erwin, 'Ceiling Zero' belongs among the cinema triumphs of the new year." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ja 20 '36

"'Ceiling Zero' has turned out quite as grand a picture as it promised to be. Out of smashing good material the Warners have again made a smashing good melodrama. To the swift action and brisk dialogue of the play it adds a few cinematic excellences of its own, brief glimpses of the fog-laden sky and the planes flown blind by lonely, frightened pilots. . . 'Ceiling Zero' is as heart-stirring a melodrama as you're apt to see this season."

+ + N Y Sun p17 Ja 20 '36

"Tersely written, handsomely produced and played to perfection. . . the film is one of the best to come from the Warner studios. The screen has presented no more effective episode of stark drama than that in which Clarke's plane, lost in the fog and with its radio apparatus out of commission, fights its way to the field, tears into high-tension wires and sears an agonizing path along the ground, leaving a flaming trail behind it. This once, give Hollywood its due: it has given wings to a play about aviation." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p22 Ja 20 '36

"If the story of 'Ceiling Zero' is somewhat hollow and formalized by now the briskness and nervous pace with which it is staged and the superior manner in which it is acted more than compensate for these defects and leave you with the feeling that the film is one of the most exciting of all the cinema aviation sagas. . . Swiftly paced, robust and full of suspense and horror, 'Ceiling Zero' easily goes on your 'must' list of films." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p13 Ja 20 '36

"We who are about to fly perhaps shouldn't be the ones to drop in on 'Ceiling Zero' . . . If you are not going to fly, however, but just walk, 'Ceiling Zero' will only amuse you. . . [It] gives us Cagney [in] one of the most satisfactory rôles he has presented—not one of his stunt tough parts, but a sensible sketch of the kind of man who makes trouble

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

wherever he goes and for everyone he meets. It's Cagney's picture, I should say, but Pat O'Brien, Stuart Erwin, and others add ably to the general disturbance." John Mosher
+ New Yorker p46 F 1 '36

Springf'd Republican p4c Ja 26 '36

"An even more exciting, if possible, screen play than the stage production."

+ Stage p8 F '36

Time p46 Ja 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p25 Ja 4 '36

"It has just about everything that goes into the making of a high grade picture. There is plenty of action, a nice romance, thrills and suspense. The cast do a fine job with Cagney and O'Brien standing out in roles particularly suited to them. Direction is away above par and the production is high grade."

+ Film Curb p14 Ja 4 '36

"Every once in a while a picture comes along that just grips and holds you; 'Ceiling Zero' does that. It is one of those big pictures that lingers with you, one that you make it a point to see. When good pictures are considered, this one deserves plenty of consideration. . . 'Ceiling Zero' reminds one of some of the big war pictures except that the foe is weather obstacles."

+ Film Daily p7 D 24 '35

"A thrilling air melodrama, but somewhat depressing because of the death of two of the leading characters. . . Because of the wisecracks it is unsuitable for children or adolescents. Adult entertainment."

+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 25 '36

"Here is a film to delight the hearts of show-men. It is swift, telling drama every inch of the way and is given compelling human qualities by a splendid cast. Strong appeal both for men and women is woven into a tale of love at an airport. . . Howard Hawks' direction deserves high praise for its tension, speed and dramatic emphasis. Commander Frank Wead made a brilliant screen play from his play of the same name."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 D 21 '35

"Marked by splendid individual performances, which several times caused the preview audience to interrupt with applause, and spectacular production effects, the story has a tense sympathy stimulating human interest quality. It is soundly produced, there being ample evidence of careful preparation with a view to establishing quality screen merchandise. . . There is also hilarious comedy, just enough but not too much love interest and a definite trend of understandable human interest."

+ Motion Pict Herald p64 D 28 '35

"An excellently produced picture. . . Ably directed by Howard Hawks, the show is well made in the Warner melodrama manner, should have a pleasing result at any box office."

+ N Y Exhibitor p32 Ja 10 '36

"All the punch of the original stage play, plus the extra advantages the screen can contribute to this type of material, is intact in 'Ceiling Zero.' It has a fine cast that's double-barrelled in performance and on the draw, and an entertainment wallop of extraordinary power. . . Cagney reverts to the 'Public Enemy' days in that he meets violent death at the finish. . . From all angles it's not only a natural role for Cagney, but a break for him also. He has been softened up too much lately as an actor and a character in routine scenarios but this one makes up for a lot. . . The Clarke crash in 'Zero' is about the most exciting piece of stage or screen business that has come along in seasons. It will keep the auditors on edge for a solid fifteen minutes."

+ Variety p14 Ja 22 '36

"Excellent cast, produced, written and directed, 'Ceiling Zero' is perfect entertainment. To be sure, it's the Cagney-O'Brien formula, and this time the capable team is backed with a story so crammed with human interest and drama that it can't miss. . . Photography is excellent. Crash stuff is thrilling, particularly the plane hitting the high tension wires, smashing into the hangar and setting the whole thing ablaze. All connected with this picture can take bows."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 20 '35

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE CIRCUS. Mr 27 '36 70min 20th century-Fox

Players: Warner Oland, Keye Luke, Francis Ford

Director: Harry Lachman

Based on the Earl Derr Biggers character. This is the eleventh in the series of Charlie Chan films. "Against the colorful and thrilling background of a large circus Charlie Chan unravels the conspiracy of an embittered man who commits murder and establishes what he believes to be the perfect alibi." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 1 '36

"An escaped gorilla and a nocturnal visit by a snake make the picture exciting for nervous children. Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"While the picture has its defects—the cast is not uniformly good, much 'mugging' is indulged in by what appear to be amateurs, and Mr. Lachman's direction is not as fluid as one might wish—Warner Oland's Charlie Chan dominates the scene, as he should, smoothing over rough passages, and making credulous the ostensibly incredulous. Keye Luke, as young Lee Chan, offers, as usual, a good filial characterization." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p16 Mr 19 '36

"The plot, in spite of the trimmings, is as mechanical as most mystery thrillers. So is the acting. Charlie Chan's humorous suavity and his son's contrasting impetuosity continue to keep this series the most engaging, if not the most exciting, of the murder melodrama school." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p30 Mr 19 '36

"There are degrees even in the quality of a product as standardized as a Charlie Chan picture, and the latest, 'Charlie Chan at the Circus' is good Chan. Unlike its run-of-the-mill predecessor, 'Charlie Chan's Secret,' which depended mostly on trick camera work . . . it pays some attention to the elements of plot structure, and relatively little to pseudo-Confucian maxims, though not little enough, perhaps. . . In the final analysis, of course, any Chan picture is bound to be an essentially hack job at this late date, regardless of highlights." B. R. C.

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 19 '36

"Although I am among Charlie's fondest admirers, I must admit to bitter disappointment over his latest exploit in crime detection. . . As usual, the bulk of the acting falls upon Warner Oland's shoulders as Charlie, and, as usual, Mr. Oland responds with a fine, sure

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE CIRCUS—Continued
performance. . . But 'Charlie Chan at the Circus' is far from topnotch." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p23 Mr 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It keeps] the audience in a state of suspense from the very beginning to the closing shot. This is one of the best of the Charlie Chans and it should clean up with the fans who try to guess the solutions."

+ Film Daily p9 Mr 17 '36

"A steadily growing audience awaits these sure-fire offerings. They never fail of satisfying returns and this one will do as well, if not better, than its forerunners."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 12 '36

"There is considerable opportunity for lively exploitation in this latest of the Chan mystery pictures, as is obvious from the title. . . The exhibitor has the circus atmosphere as well as the Chan mystery to sell."

Motion Pict Daily p10 Mr 6 '36

"Oland gives his standard Chan interpretation which is tops. Second in acting honors is Keye Luke, who, as the detective's son, handles most of the comedy in the picture and handles it ably. . . Writers go a little haywire in circus stuff but only circus fans will notice it. Photography and art work are both very good."

Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 12 '36

CHARLIE CHAN IN SHANGHAI. O 11 '35
68min 20th century-Fox

Players: Warner Oland. Irene Hervey.
Charles Locher. Keye Luke

Director: James Tinling

Based on the story by Edward T. Lowe and Gerald Fairlie and the character Charlie Chan, created by Earl Derr Biggers. "In this murder mystery story we go with Charlie Chan to Shanghai where the Chinese philosopher, ably aided by his eager young son, uncovers the identity of a gang of opium smugglers and solves a murder." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Good of kind; Y: Absorbing; C: Good of kind."

Christian Century p1471 N 13 '35

"The acting is of the best. The direction leaves nothing to be desired with delectable bits of irony and comedy adding much to one's enjoyment. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 18 '35

"The oft-quoted Chinese proverbs casually spoken by the master detective are always interesting; while his personality lends sanity and calmness to all situations. Well directed and acted. Possible for family."

+ Jt Estimates S 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p168 N '35

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Good melodrama."

Par M p38 Mr '36

Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Commands attention for the suavity and suspense which Mr. Oland gives to his character, and the speed and color of its direction." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p11 O 14 '35

"A cheery and properly baffling addition to the Chan series, introducing Keye Luke as the son of the amiable Chinese sleuth."

+ N Y Times p25 O 20 '35

"[It] is a well-made, if conventional, piece of genuine Chan." Graham Greene

+ — Spec p170 Ja 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p54 N 16 '35

CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET. O 23 '35 72min
20th century-Fox

Players: Warner Oland. Rosina Lawrence.
Charles Quigley. Henrietta Crosman

Director: Gordon Wiles

Based on the character Charlie Chan, created by Earl Derr Biggers. "Through a maze of suspicious evidence Charlie Chan, in his own clever way, discovers the murderer of the heir to the Lowell fortune." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 12 '35

"The atmosphere is eerie, the sound and photography excellent, while Warner Oland portrays the perfect, inscrutable detective who solves a murder mystery in his reliable and pleasant manner. . . Capable direction achieves the proper suspense. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Good mystery; C: Frightening for nervous."

Par M p38 Mr '36

"A well sustained murder mystery with tricks of fake spiritualism adding a weird and creepy note. The plot is a good one and the cast capable, while the direction achieves suspense and a sinister atmosphere. Family. Too frightening for small children."

+ Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

"Fairly interesting. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide D 14 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript D 13 '35

"I admit shamelessly that I think it is good sport. I believe I like this series partly because Mr. Warner Oland makes Mr. Chan such a gentle, endearing soul—far from the conventional movie flatfoot or from oily Philo Vances. (Not for children.)" Don Herold

+ Life p30 Mr '36

"The picture is not as interesting as some of the Chan films have been, due possibly to the more hackneyed story and the banal treatment. It employs the old formula of presenting its murder early in the picture, using the remainder of the footage to follow first one bypath and then another toward a solution." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p8 Ja 18 '36

"With the passing of the years the Charlie Chan mystery film has grown to be as much standardized and about as uniform in quality as any other consistently selling product of the industrial age. . . There is nothing in [this new one] (including Warner Oland) to surprise or disappoint the Chan addict, whose name, apparently, is still legion." B. R. C.

N Y Times p19 Ja 18 '36

Springf'd Republican p2 Ja 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Curb p13 Ja 25 '36

"Intriguing murder mystery up to usual standard of 'Chan' series and sure to please these fans."

+ Film Daily p7 Ja 18 '36

"A good murder mystery melodrama. It holds one in tense suspense throughout; and the fact that the spectator suspects several persons of having committed the crime intensifies one's interest in the outcome. . . . Because of the murder it is unsuitable for children or adolescents. Good for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 4 '36

"Family mystery drama."

N Y Exhibitor p3 N 10 '35

"Warner Oland's new Charlie Chan story is easily the best of his recent screen efforts. It should more than please the Chan clientele and get satisfactory box office returns."

+ Variety p15 Ja 22 '36

CHATTERBOX. Ja 17 '36 68min RKO

Players: Anne Shirley. Phillips Holmes. Edward Ellis. George Offerman, Jr.

Director: George Nicholls

Based on the play of the same title by David Carb. A stage-struck country girl who is eager to follow in her mother's footsteps and go on the stage runs off with a theatre group to New York and manages to get the heroine's part in a version of a play in which her mother starred years before. Disillusioned when she finds that the play is a burlesque of her mother's play and that the audience laughed at her histrionic talents, she returns to the country. To her amazement she finds that the boy in the theatrical group whom she loved has followed her back home.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A program picture which will please younger audiences. Family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Paths and comedy well blended. Mature-family." DAR

"A gay little picture with a nice blending of humor and pathos. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"A humorous sequence between the father and grandfather, back-stage scenes and performances of the Village Players are well done, and add much to a picture that just stops short of being dull. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The story has elements of human appeal and is quite innocuous. Fair entertainment, family and junior matinees." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Good cast and photography does not make up for the lack of suspense and dramatic development. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"There are bits of delicious comedy and an engaging sincerity about the players which give a pleasant flare to the whole. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"Misplaced over confidence and final disillusionment are pathetic, but a happy ending and the rather clever handling of the theme keep it from being really painful. Good family picture." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ — Fox W Coast Bul Ja 4 '36

"This is a pleasant, obvious little picture suitable for children and young people. . . . Satisfactory direction and casting. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 1 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"An unpretentious picture that is unexpectedly good. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ja 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This [is a] somewhat saccharine melange."
Laura Elston

+ — Canadian M p42 Mr '36

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 4 '36

"Anne Shirley gives us in this picture a tender and appealing interpretation of the same sort of role Katharine Hepburn played so vigorously in 'Morning Glory'—a stage-struck girl who talks incessantly; and as the more experienced actress succeeded in doing in 'Morning Glory,' Anne succeeds in doing in 'Chatterbox,' she makes her eloquence entertaining. . . . 'Chatterbox' will go forth to meet the unanimous condemnation of the big city critics who judge the values of film entertainment with their heads and not with their emotions; who pride themselves on being hard-boiled and who scoff at sentiment. But the vast majority of film patrons who like decency and cleanliness on the screen, will like it for its possession of such virtues. It is a delightful little picture, a simple story of a simple country girl and a rich city boy—just an old story told many times on the screen, but never with finer flavor or more appealingly."

+ Hollywood Spec p15 Ja 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Delicate, whimsical material, woven into a delightful, entertaining pattern that is a credit to producer Robert Sisk."

+ Box Office p25 Ja 4 '36

"A delightful, homey play that will please the large majority of film fans, especially the folks in the smaller [towns.] As played by Anne Shirley it makes for superior entertainment. A fine, clean yarn of the down-to-earth variety. . . . It has been given an adequate production and directed with skill. Supporting cast all do their full share to make this an unusually pleasing picture, especially Phillips Holmes and Edward Ellis."

+ Film Curb p12 Ja 4 '36

"This one outpollyannas 'Pollyanna.' It is just too sweet and innocent for critical words. We can safely say that it is filled with the naive charm of unworldly childhood. It won't panic the sophisticates and may even make them sneer. But for the family trade in the hinterlands it should be a riot."

Film Daily p8 Ja 23 '36

"Very pleasant program family fare. Although the plot is not particularly novel, it takes on a certain freshness owing to the delightful performance given by Anne Shirley. Good for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports p7 Ja 11 '36

"Concentrating practically all the interest on Anne Shirley, this is a pleasing comedy-drama. The locale is rural New England and New York. . . . It is a suitable all-family attraction."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 D 19 '35

"Keyed to a pitch of warm human interest, this nicely developed comedy romance drama has much to make many hearts glad. High in sympathy stimulating quality, it's that kind of show which, in blending its various elements, aims to provoke smiles and light laughter. Built on a semi-hokum formula, it's of the character that usually gets under the skins of the masses. As it treats of ordinary human beings involved in situations that might happen to anyone, all traces of forced or artificial theatricalism are intelligently eschewed. Of particular potential appeal to family type audiences, it also affords much to engage the attention of the sophisticates. . . . While not a pretentious attraction, the show is one in which audiences are quite apt to find more entertainment worth than they sometimes do in more elaborately staged features boasting a host of [stars.]"

CHATTERBOX—Continued

+ Motion Pict Herald p65 D 28 '35

"Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p33 Ja 10 '36

"Here is a picture of charm and compelling heart interest which is so well played, written, directed and produced that it offers the most delicate whimsy without losing the common appeal necessary for satisfactory box office. . . . 'Chatterbox' gives Anne Shirley ample opportunity to exercise her spell as the screen's most effective ingenue."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 18 '35

CHILDREN OF MONTMARTRE. See La Maternelle

(*)COCK O' THE WALK. (Release date not determined) 8min United artists

Director: Walt Disney

"Disney has created a prizefighting rooster riding down Main Street on a truck in a boxing ring. A hen deserts her admiring rooster friend to blink coyly up at the fighter. They go into a dance with tango music sounding a lot like La Cucuracha, and the fun begins. There are big chorus numbers. Eggs [dance] in the nests and hatch out dancing chicks. Ducks join [the dance] in formations." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Amusing. Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) D 2 '35

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Splendid animation and brilliant Technicolor tints make this Walt Disney Silly Symphony a feast for the eye. Class A product."

+ Film Daily p4 D 19 '35

COLLEEN. Mr 7 '36 105min Warner

Players: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Jack Oakie, Hugh Herbert, Louise Fazenda, Paul Draper

Director: Alfred E. Green

The slight musical comedy plot concerns a millionaire's effort to help a gold-digging young woman who works in a candy factory.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults and young people." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"[It] will prove entertaining to the entire family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Good divertissement. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Light and amusing musical comedy for family audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 7 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) F 24 '36

"It is lengthy, of necessity, for it accommodates an elaborate fashion show, many dance numbers, several songs by Dick Powell as well as a preposterous plot which does its best to hold all these together in one cohesive unit. If it fails, it is because the picture is primarily a vehicle for the diversified talents of the cast. Adolescents, 12-16: fair; children, 8-12: bore-some."

Motion Pict R F '36

"Elaborate production and pretty girls materially aid this rather tiresome musical drama. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women F 25 '36

"The dialogue is entertaining; the sets and costumes are pleasingly artistic, but the music is disappointingly slim. The chorus routines, though of unquestioned entertainment value, are too elaborate to suit the plot."

+ Scholastic p30 Mr 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Warner Brothers may justifiably claim a front-rank position in motion-picture selection and creation, but in this instance they make it difficult to conciliate the thought that a 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' a 'Petrified Forest' and a 'Louis Pasteur,' in a row, had the same sponsorship as 'Colleen,' poor Colleen. . . . This latest interpretation of an all musical romantic comedy is hardly worth the celluloid on which its images and melodies are printed." J. F. Cunningham

— Commonweal p580 Mr 20 '36

"The weakness of the picture as it was previewed is its lack of regard for the interdependence of its elements. Hugh Herbert's performance is broad farce, while Ruby, Dick and some of the others play straight. . . . Warner Brothers have been giving us a succession of notable pictures. Doctoring will bring 'Colleen' more nearly to their standard. Even as I saw it there is much in it to be commended, much to please both the eye and the ear."

+ Hollywood Spec p13 F 1 '36

"'Colleen' is obviously a million-dollar picture, a fact which may scare a certain number of people into liking it. And, as with most Warner musicals it has its eye-filling moments. For the most part, though it's a heavy-going affair in which the stars—Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell—are over-shadowed by their helpmates." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p29 Mr 7 '36

"It is greatly to be feared that the reliable formula is beginning to creak at the joints just a trifle. . . . Whatever freshness there was to the antics of the familiar story has long since disappeared. Even the music seems a bit weary and Miss Keeler and Dick Powell carry on their somewhat insipid romance to the accompaniment of tunes that, to put it very mildly, lack excitement." Richard Watts, Jr.

— + N Y Herald Tribune p8 Mr 9 '36

"It is all a little hectic, more than a little funny, resulting in a fast-moving, entertaining comedy with a few routine musical turns. Mr. Powell, rather less fortunate than usual in the songs assigned him, croons occasionally; so does Miss Keeler, who really shouldn't. . . . Hugh Herbert, goofy and affable as usual, is the real star of 'Colleen.' Jack Oakie adds a few merry moments. It is, on the whole, a really amusing routine comedy." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p14 Mr 9 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"There isn't much point in composing a critical analysis of these Warner musical films: you just accept or reject them for what they are. Out of long experience the [Warner] Brothers have become proficient mixers and, by and large, their formula has been successful. . . If you are curious enough to require a more definite answer, we might offer a few comparisons. 'Colleen' is not as fresh as it might have been three years ago before '42nd Street' and its descendants accustomed us to this sort of thing. . . We prefer one ball-room dance by Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire to a whole program by Miss Keeler and Mr. Powell. It is purely a personal reaction and, if you happen to like the Keeler-Powell musicals, you probably will find this one entirely satisfying. Its resemblance to last year's and the year's before that is unquestionable. . . Our final word, and it pains us to say it, is that we are giving up Dick Powell for Lent." F. S. Nugent

— + N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '36

"Competent performances by Hugh Herbert and Jack Oakie are the chief blessings of 'Colleen,' the ambling, frequently amusing but, on the whole, rather uninteresting new musical film. . . If it were not for Mr. Herbert and Mr. Oakie, 'Colleen' would have very little in it to recommend." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p15 Mr 9 '36

"I'd gladly sit up through Jack Oakie's rendering of 'A Boulevardier from the Bronx,' some of Hugh Herbert's nonsense as a cuckoo millionaire, some of Paul Draper's steppings, some of Joan Blondell's insidious little tricks, but I think I could miss easily most of the big dance numbers, and I fear I am calm about all the Dick Powell carollings." John Mosher

New Yorker p75 Mr 14 '36

"'Colleen' may turn out to have a more limited appeal than earlier Warner Brothers musical shows in which much the same cast have performed in more spontaneous fashion. . . Hugh Herbert's demented chuckle is as funny as usual."

+ — Time p58 Mr 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Best part of this one is a topnotch cast. Family."

Box Office p49 F 8 '36

"While this is an entertaining musical it is not the knockout that many of Warners films of this sort have been. . . Very likely when some footage has been eliminated this will prove much more entertaining."

+ — Film Curb p14 F 1 '36

"The story is one of those inconsequential trifles that is merely intended to carry the spectacle numbers and the specialties, as well as the warbling of Dick Powell. . . What the production lacks is any real suspense or building to surprises or real climax. It seems repetitious in spots. It's a highly polished and brilliantly presented affair lacking in the genuine human qualities or emotions that even this type of light entertainment needs. The cast is exceptionally competent throughout. There is plenty to talk about, in spectacle, fashions, dance, song and fine musical score—and Herbert for some really refreshing comedy."

+ — Film Daily p9 Mr 6 '36

"This musical is a weak sister according to any standards and will have to depend upon the drawing power of its top names alone. . . Legitimate laughs are few and far between in the dialogue, although many talented comics were cast."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 21 '36

"Three tuneful songs and some sumptuous settings in which novel dance numbers are staged, help make this a pleasant hour and one-half of entertainment. . . It's not one of the best musicals in which Powell and Miss Keeler have been teamed, but it has its moments, and some good laughs furnished by Hugh Herbert and Louise Fazenda as his wife."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p3 Mr 3 '36

"Where names alone are the primary consideration to patrons and exhibitors this picture is not lacking. Where entertainment worthy of the producing company's reputation as makers of colorful romantic musicals and the prestige of the players is a consideration, it's a horse of another color. . . On several occasions to succeed in getting over its comic contrasts it descends to the level of low theatre comedy. In this angle there is definite possibility that in certain quarters questions may arise as to its moral value."

— + Motion Pict Herald p46 F 1 '36

"On cast, 'Colleen' should have no trouble getting good returns in all spots. . . The picture overcomes disadvantages that a light yarn gives it, emerges as a saleable entry from the Warners studios. Estimate: names will draw anywhere."

N Y Exhibitor p29 F 10 '36

"While the picture is far from tops for the Powell-Keeler combination, it has enough comedy, music, dancing and performance reliability to insure satisfaction. In terms of ticket sales, it should be well over on the profit side, though unable to match the showings of several prior Powell-Keeler musicals."

+ — Variety p15 Mr 11 '36

"The picture falls short on the entertainment end. . . Fans who have heretofore enthused over Ruby Keeler's dancing will be disappointed in her efforts here. First, Miss Keeler is a solo dancer, should work alone. Second, Paul Draper, one of the stage's outstanding tap dancers, has applied ballet technique to his work. When the pair dance, only Draper is noticeable, although the camera has done its best to favor Miss Keeler."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 21 '36

COLLEGIATE. D 27 '35 75min Paramount

Players: Joe Penner. Jack Oakie. Ned Sparks. Frances Langford. Betty Grable. Lynne Overman

Director: Ralph Murphy

Based on the play, Charm School, by Alice Duer Miller and Robert Milton. Jerry Craig, a happy-go-lucky play boy inherits a girls' seminary from his aunt. Not knowing what to do with it, but anxious for a new adventure he decides to take over its management aided by his valet, a newspaper pal and a wealthy but witless young man. When they find that the school is old-fashioned, threadbare and losing money, they change it into a "charm academy" with courses in the arts of makeup, personal charm and dancing. The seminary becomes a sensational success and Craig marries the demure, mouselike secretary.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Another youthfully diverting musical picture. Family and junior matinee." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Adults." DAR

"A stupid and in spots vulgar comedy is not aided either by Joe Penner's inanities or Jack Oakie's singing. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"A few catchy songs, frivolous, sophisticated comedy, in which the director makes the most of every absurd situation. Adults and young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Ned Sparks and Joe Penner are both excellent. Family." Nat Bd of R

"[This is] a rather dubious musical farce. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

COLLEGIATE—Continued

"Most of the entertainment values of pictures of this type depend on individual taste. Family mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"With a plethora of comedians, this extravagant farce is unamusing for any except possibly Joe Penner fans. A few well sung musical numbers fail to lift it above a commonplace, wearisome attempt at humor which fails. Overmuch drinking." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A mediocre farce with only fair entertainment. Some drinking. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

— + Fox W Coast Bul Ja 12 '36

"Fair. Young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Little interest; Y and C: Doubtless amusing."
Par M p38 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"A light and amusing story, done in musical comedy style. . . Ned Sparks and Joe Penner are both excellent."

+ Wkly Guide D 21 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p4 D 28 '35

Reviewed by Richard Watts, Jr.
N Y Herald Tribune p15 Ja 23 '36

"'Collegiate' is one of those typical Paramount musicals, characteristic in casting, pace and atmosphere of that particular studio. This new one is less routine than most of them. . . The only gauge of entertainment for such a film depends almost entirely upon personal taste and appreciation of the personalities involved." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p25 Ja 23 '36

"Perhaps we are wrong about Mr. Penner's cosmic appeal, but, to our mind, the simplest way of summing up his new picture would be to echo the remark made by Ned Sparks fairly early in the film. Mr. Sparks, more mournful than ever, says, 'I've seen enough. Let's forget the whole thing—and go on relief.'" F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p25 Ja 23 '36

"With the aid of several really good performances, among them those offered by the incomparable Jack Oakie, lovely Francis Langford, Lynne Overman and Ned Sparks—and, if you are one of his admirers, Joe Penner—along with a couple of good tunes, 'Collegiate' turns out to be, in a spasmodic way, a fairly amusing picture." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p13 Ja 23 '36

"The whole affair is inconsequential, except to the Penner public." John Mosher
New Yorker p47 F 1 '36

Springf'd Republican p4c Ja 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Daily p8 Ja 23 '36

"Just a moderately entertaining program comedy with music. It should appeal mainly to young people because the music and dancing are of the popular jazz variety. Suitable for all."

+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 4 '36

"With girls and [jokes], music and dancing, lots of farce and plenty of novelty, this freshly treated collegiate yarn is catchy entertainment."

It is well mounted, colorfully modern in atmosphere, with specialty features carefully woven into the story motivation. The show concentrates on lightness and gaiety."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 D 17 '35

"Always light and gay, breaking up its straight story continuity with cleverly interpolated [joke sequences], it bubbles and froths merrily. Built to catch the fancy of the masses, with a particular intent to stimulate the curiosity of the younger folks, it provides quite a bit of entertainment and plenty in the way of novel story idea and established cast names."

+ Motion Pict Herald p64 D 28 '35

"Estimate: satisfactory."
N Y Exhibitor p32 Ja 10 '36

"'Collegiate' is fair entertainment. Light, diverting, no sock, but no bore."
+ — Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

"It's a hodge podge of [jokes], dancing and singing which should afford pleasant entertainment anywhere. . . Interspersed are a number of [amusing sequences] tailored to fit Joe Penner, whose contribution to this picture is negligible. . . Frances Langford lacks experience to carry the [feminine] lead though when singing her amateurishness is forgotten. . . Lynne Overman is wasted in an ineffectual assignment which gives him little opportunity."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 16 '35

COME OUT OF THE PANTRY, N 25 '35 73min
British & Dominions-United artists

Players: Jack Buchanan. Fay Wray. James Carew. Olive Blakeney. Ronald Squire

Director: Jack Raymond

Based on the novel of same title by Alice Duer Miller, and the play known both under same title and as Lord Richard in the Pantry, by Albert Ellsworth Thomas. The film was made in England. "The story is that a young British nobleman who, having lost the family money entrusted to him in a bank smash in New York, meets an old servant who is butler to a rich American and gets a footman's job from him. His employer's pretty niece sees through the imposture and falls in love with the imposter, although there is a plan to marry her to his bumptious elder brother. At a dinner party in honor of the latter's arrival the footman proposes in the interval of serving the courses and finally takes his brother's place as guest and as husband-designate." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p192 D '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Good amusing fare, if a bit dated." Laura Elston

+ — Canadian M p38 F '36

"'Come Out Of The Pantry' has, I'm afraid, no charm, very little humour, and the situation has been done to death. . . For the rest, there is our finest actor of comedy, Ronald Squire, playing a butler's part yet again. This actor is blessed with one of the most expressive faces that can be seen upon the stage to-day, and it is the curse of the modern theatres that the audience is apt to be deprived of so intimate an art as his, by reason of the vast open spaces. The advantage which the cinema has over this state of affairs is obvious, but Mr. Raymond has not used it with anything like the effect that he should and, as the lines give this actor no chance to be more than mildly amusing, his value is wasted." Mark Forrest

— Sat R p544 N 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Farce comedy. The star values are Jack Buchanan, who sings a bit, dances a bit and otherwise gives a rather stiff impersonation of Jack Buchanan, and Fay Wray, who acts very nicely the part of a girl with a sense of humor and looks charming. . . There is some fair comedy, the best of it in the dinner episode."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 D 9 '35

"Essentially a stage farce both in story values and treatment, this will still provide good if mild entertainment in stations where Jack Buchanan is liked. With him is Fay Wray. Very little is asked of her but she shows an attractive sense of humor in the doing of it and she looks very charming indeed."

+ Motion Pict Herald p62 D 14 '35

"Sentiment is moving, but never mawkish, and the comedy evokes considerable laughter. This is due to the excellent screen play which has been made of the story, the straightway direction, first-rate photography, and the richness, without ostentation, of the scenic investiture. [The] whole thing could have been a nightmare without the competent cast, superb production and smooth direction, augmented by first-rate camera work. But it got them."

+ Variety p34 D 11 '35

CONDEMNED TO LIVE. S 15 '35 60min
Chesterfield

Players: Ralph Morgan. Maxine Doyle.
Russell Gleason. Pedro de Cordoba

Director: Frank Strayer

In this melodramatic horror tale, a young man, supposedly marked at birth when his mother was killed by a large bat, develops a dual personality and commits several murders.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a most worthy independent production that has been well handled by all concerned. Morgan is fine in the lead role, [the] balance of the cast do nicely and [the] direction is above average. It should have no difficulty in pleasing most any audience."

+ Film Curb p6 N 15 '35

"Not particularly made for children, it can be [shown] in spots where this type theme is liked. Adult melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p34 O 10 '35

CONFIDENTIAL. O 16 '35 66min Mascot

Players: Donald Cook. Evalyn Knapp.
Warren Hymer

Director: Edward L. Cahn

"The adventures of a Department of Justice agent in finding the man higher up in a big gambling racket." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Mo Film Bul p168 N '35

"A: G-men melodrama; Y: Doubtful; C: No." Par M p38 Mr '36

"Good melodrama. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Cheap gangster film."

— Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p56 N 16 '35

Film Curb p6 O 15 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

"'G' man picture and pretty well made."

+ — Variety p39 N 20 '35

CORONADO. N 29 '35 70min Paramount

Players: Betty Burgess. Johnny Downs.
Eddie Duchin. Leon Errol. Jack Haley.
Andy Devine

Director: Norman McLeod

When a musically inclined son of wealthy parents spends the summer at a California resort, he promptly falls in love with the resort entertainer who thinks he is a penniless song writer. After she learns the truth, he loses her but in the end with the help of comedy situations, and song and dance routines, he wins her again.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good"

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Light, amusing musical entertainment. . . A talented cast, led by versatile young Johnny Downs, provides good fun with small plot. Pleasing to eye and ear. Adults: entertaining; 8-18: fair." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"A light, frothy bit of entertainment held together with a thread of a story about a sailor and a girl is enlivened by good dancing, comedy that is a bit risqué in spots, and some cleverly managed scenes on board ship. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"A light, frivolous musical comedy with refreshing music, some clever dancing and well-staged ship-board settings but somewhat marred by unnecessary vulgarities. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Eddy Duchin and his orchestra, and Leon Errol, Andy Devine, and Jack Haley in their usual brand of comedy, will be enjoyed by many. Light musical entertainment." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"An entertaining musical farce with good sets, good photography and clever dancing and singing. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An unconvincing and stagey picture, with a hackneyed theme. Questionable situations are introduced having no bearing on the plot. The whole is punctuated with very poor comedy. Waste of time. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"This is feather light comedy fluttering about the Hotel Coronado. Eddy Duchin's Orchestra is pleasing, combined with some good scenes and tap dancing, but Leon Errol's slipshod nonsense fails to be as funny as it is on the stage. The plot is tenuous and life in the wellknown resort scarcely seems gay enough to attract many guests. Adolescents: fair; children: little interest." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ — Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"Johnny Downs in some clever dances and catchy songs, ably assisted by a group of well-known comedians, tie together the thin threads of this light, frothy musical farce which at times borders on the risqué. Family."

Jt Estimates D 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p193 D '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CORONADO—Continued

"Fair. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Light entertainment; C: Perhaps."

Par M p38 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Jack Haley and Leon Errol give 'Coronado' the daft, inconsequential touch needed to differentiate it from the rest of the slick screen musicals it so resembles. Haley rambles amiably about as a moonstruck gob parted from his bride at the altar and none too sure of her identity when next they meet. Errol is the girl's waspish father, determined to keep the pair separated. . . What Ruth Suckow wrote of the children of Hollywood is applicable to Haley and Errol in this film. They are 'colossal, in a small way.'" M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript D 13 '35

"The plot is the old-fashioned musical-comedy pot-pourri describing frustrated romance, between gags that creak slightly, and musical interludes with Mr. Duchin and his very efficient orchestra. . . While so able a director as Norman Taurog is responsible for the piece, it lags in story interest, but this, obviously, is due more to the dated material and production point of view than to its treatment." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p18 D 19 '35

"Paramount has slapped some more vaudeville on its screen, written in some vaguely dramatic lines, and called it 'Coronado.' This is another of those films shown by theaters to while away the pre-Christmas week. . . The songs are commonplace and sung with energy but no distinction. The dances are routine vaudeville; the funny sayings seldom are." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p33 D 19 '35

"Fished out of the entertainment pond with a minnow net, 'Coronado,' the new song, dance and slapstick interlude is several inches short of the minimum requirements for Broadway and should have been tossed back to grow." F. S. N.

— N Y Times p33 D 19 '35

"The news from Paramount today is extremely comfortless, the reason for it being a woefully inefficient little paroxysm called 'Coronado' in which some of Paramount's freshmen and senior players indulge in some antics about on a par with a college musical. At that I am probably being unfair to the Triangle Club and other undergraduate organizations, because if the truth must be told 'Coronado' is considerably less entertaining than some of the college shows I have seen. A slight impediment to cheerfulness in the cinema, 'Coronado' is much too weak to be spanked soundly. . . The title, it seems comes from the fact that the action takes place at the Hotel Coronado, at Coronado Beach, Cal.—a setting, incidentally, that enables the script writers to drag in a couple of gobs from the navy who provide some painful comedy relief." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p35 D 19 '35

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p37 D 28 '35

Springf'd Republican p6 D 22 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"As musicals with an amateur contest background go, this one sputters badly, missing in the entertainment division and in the story department. . . Barely satisfactory, at best."

+ Box Office p59 Ja 11 '36

"Some good gags, of which part are old and part are new, catchy music and several experienced funsters all combine to make this amusing entertainment. While it may not be anything to write home about it will please the majority who see it."

+ — Film Curb p8 D 1 '35

"With tuneful music, a story that is light and gay, and humor that is not too subtle this story of life at the Hotel Coronado will find a ready response from audiences that seek light entertainment."

+ Film Daily p4 D 19 '35

"It should appeal more to young people than to adults because the story is light, the music of the popular jazz variety, and the romance revolves around the hero and heroine, both of whom are young; their affair cannot be taken too seriously. . . Suitable for all. Family."

+ Harrison's Reports D 21 '35

"Tuneful melodies, clever dancing and comedy place this one in the top notch entertainment [rank.] The picture shines in all its departments. The story is the usual hokum garnished with unique and very funny comedy situations and sparkling dialogue, refreshingly different dance routines backgrounded with Eddie Duchin's music. . . Norman McLeod has endowed the picture with his usual keen humor, showing his aptitude for comedy timing."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 N 11 '35

"Family comedy."

N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

"'Coronado' just misses. But it makes a fairly diverting if light-weight musical. . . It also discloses Johnny Downs as a potent screen find; an engaging, fresh, and young juvenile personality who can tap and sing with great effectiveness. Another junior entrant who suggests future film heights is Betty Burgess."

+ Variety p15 D 25 '35

COUNTRY DOCTOR. Mr 6 '36 110min 20th century-Fox

Players: Jean Hersholt, June Lang, George J. (Slim) Summerville, Michael Whalen, Dorothy Peterson

Director: Henry King

This film features the Dionne quintuplets and was partly made in Callander, Ontario. "[The story is] based on the element of sacrifice in the life of a country doctor, with little material reward in prospect, who ushers babies into the world under the most trying conditions; fights to preserve their lives with contagion spreading under the overwhelming menace of a northern winter with communication blocked and medicine running low; fights again for proper hospitalization when he visits Toronto, and finally in a supreme achievement brings the quintuplets into the world." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"While the story is left rather hanging in mid-air, it is scarcely noticeable. Excellent characterizations by Jean Hersholt and Dorothy Peterson. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par &amp; Teachers

"Excellent. Mature." DAR

"The direction is splendid, the photography excellent and the recording maintains the high standard set by the entire production. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A most enjoyable film for mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Mr 7 '36

"Delightful. The beguiling charm of the five adorable little girls, who prove themselves regular troupers, will bring sheer delight to all. Family. Mature."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) F 24 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"While the quintuplets are the headliners of this picture, the character of the country doctor steals the show. His love for the people of his community, his sacrificial service for their health and welfare, his planning for their protection are both challenging and inspiring."

+ Motion Pict & Family p6 Mr 13 '36

"The humor of the birth sequence is uproarious, and the scenes of the adorable little girls playing in their nursery with the doctor on their second birthday is perfectly delightful. It is a uniquely entertaining film. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: very emotional in scenes of illness, not advised."

+ + Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Destined to become not only a box-office success but real entertainment as well. This saga of the Canadian lumbering village with its simple, trusting people is exceptionally well told. . . [A] wholesome and amusing drama for the family."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women F 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Curiosity may get people into the theatre, but once there they will find a fine human story to stir them, in which the babies are only a climax. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family."

+ + Wkly Guide F 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Yvonne, Cecile, Marie, Annette and Emilie Dionne are so improbably lovely, with their enormous eyes and cloudy hair, that any movie plot tends to become an anticlimax in their presence, and in comparison to their own experiences. Fortunately 'The Country Doctor' is of a disarming simplicity, never losing touch with reality; poignant and packed with good fun. . . Once the quintuplets appear, all sensible conversation on the screen is lost in a mounting wave of ecstatic gurgles from the infatuated audience. The interjected remarks of the babies are received, however, with awed delight." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 7 '36

"Every Canadian should see it and every normal person in the world will want to." Laura Elston

+ + Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"'The Country Doctor' does not yield to the usual rules governing the writing of a screen criticism. You are going to see it, anyway, so why take up your time and mine telling you it is worth your while or is not? It is a warmly human picture, one which will keep the lump never far from your throat, but that is something you will discover for yourself. . . The most extraordinary feature of the production is the handling of the birth sequence. . . It is hilarious comedy, yet never for a moment does it depart from good taste nor does it minimize the seriousness of it, the human side of it. . . Not quite so intelligent is the injection of irrelevant comedy in two or three places, apparently on the principle that dramatic scenes should be relieved by laughs. . . If the producers had contented themselves with the human side of the story and bunched all the laughs in the naturally developed comedy of the birth sequence, the picture would have been a cinematic masterpiece."

+ Hollywood Spec p7 Mr 14 '36

"The picture story, incidentally, had the approval of Doctor Dafoe. It is likely to be matched from Coast-to-Coast by audience approval. It will be virtually impossible for any one, whatever his or her temperament, to resist the power in this story of the quintuplet sisters of Ontario."

+ Lit Digest p22 Mr 14 '36

"It proved, somewhat to the surprise of a few cynics here and there, a delightful heart-warming sentimental drama, touching, humorous and completely likable. As for the celebrated babies, it can be safely said that even those who have felt that they could get along for a few weeks without seeing another photograph of them should find them irresistible. . . Although the appearance of the Five Tumbling Dionnes towards the end of the picture obviously supplies the high point of the work, 'The Country Doctor' has innumerable other virtues as entertainment." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p16 Mr 13 '36

"Although 'The Country Doctor' was written to show off the Dionne Quintuplets, although their presence will certainly make it a box office hit, these five highly publicized little girls are not the real stars. . . The picture could get along nicely without them. In fact, the reel devoted to their undoubted charms is the least interesting of the whole film. The picture, a wholesome, unexciting drama, with some grand comedy, falls to pieces as soon as [they] start prancing about their nursery. . . They are not, in themselves, much more dramatic than a basketful of puppies." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p30 Mr 13 '36

"An irresistibly appealing blend of sentiment and comedy, the Twentieth Century-Fox picture justifies even that anonymous advertising genius who described the advent of the Dionne babies as the greatest event since 'The Birth of a Nation.' There may have been funnier moments in screen history than those in which John Qualen becomes the astonished father of five, but somehow we cannot recall them. . . This scene must go down in cinema history as one of its most priceless contributions to the gayety of nations. . . And finally, in expressing gratitude, we cannot overlook Sonya Levien, who wrote the screen play, and Henry King, who directed, for their refusal to turn the Dionnes' debut into merely a babies-jumble babies story." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 13 '36

"No matter how completely the famous 'quins' have won your heart in the past with their irresistible charm, you'll fall in love with them all over again when you see them in 'The Country Doctor.' . . But even without the quintuplets 'The Country Doctor' would still be an extraordinarily fine picture—a picture full of deep, tender charm and the warming spirit of humanity. . . Here, certainly, is a film for your 'must' list." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p31 Mr 13 '36

"I am not one of the great lovers of children, either. I often go years without ever being aware that there is a child anywhere. And on the screen they drive me crazy. The nursery scenes, though, in 'The Country Doctor' are just what nursery scenes ought to be, and the babies are delightful. There is no doubt about it. . . Seldom have I seen such poise, sangfroid, and ebullience before the camera. . . The narrative plows along, you know, rather sedately for almost an hour. You can afford to be late for this film, but you mustn't miss the ending." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p75 Mr 21 '36

"It is a warm-hearted, amusing and astonishingly skillful cinema which should reward its manufacturers as handsomely as it will entertain its audiences. . . Most of 'The Country Doctor' was made in Hollywood, but, for the final shots, Director Henry King and Jean Hersholt, who almost steals the show from its stars, went to Callander, Ontario."

+ + Time p57 Mr 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'The Country Doctor' will positively cure ailing box offices. Even without the five beautiful Dionnes, this intensely human and appealing story would win the audiences of the world. Certainly it should quintuple grosses for all exhibitors."

+ + Box Office p37 Mr 7 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

COUNTRY DOCTOR—Continued

"If anyone cannot get a thrill out of this—[he] needs a trip to Canada and a 'Country Doctor.'"

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p8 Mr 14 '36

Film Curb p17 Mr 7 '36

"Here is a 'five-star' picture that should do a land-office business. The Dionne quintuplets are the 'five stars' that will bring the fans—parents, brothers and sisters. Each baby is attractive and each brought 'ahs' and 'ohs' of delight from the preview audience."

+ + Film Daily p6 Mr 2 '36

"Great entertainment; it has deep human appeal, comedy, and pathos. . . Even without the Dionne quintuplets it would be good entertainment, but with them it is a 'knockout.' . . Suitable for all. Family."

+ + Harrison's Reports Mr 7 '36

"The 'Country Doctor' is the greatest showmanship picture of the year, probably of many years. It has a ready-made audience of millions who have followed with unabated interest the astounding news story of the Dionne quintuplets. . . Acting credits must be liberal, for every performance from Jean Hersholt down to the bit players stands out like a perfect gem. Hersholt is really superb. His performance is the highest highlight of a long, distinguished career. It is a rarely beautiful portrait."

+ + Hollywood Reporter p3 F 27 '36

"Even without the quintuplets this would be an exceptional picture—a fine, human story, balanced to a nicety between tears and laughter. With the five babies it is a screen masterpiece. The word is used advisedly. It is a picture that will linger long in the memory—meaning the memories of exhibitors as well as audiences. For theatre men everywhere, it will be one of those monumental money-makers they like to look back upon year after year with fond hopes of playing another like it. . . Henry King's direction is superb. The world has been told of the problems he encountered. . . The quintuplets appear only in the closing sequence. They are remarkable. They have personality, beauty, childish abandon in the presence of strangers."

+ + Motion Pict Daily p2 F 27 '36

"A cinch to cop world-wide coin, and probably just as big in the British Empire as in the United States. 'The Country Doctor' represents an intelligent production investiture of what was on paper, and is in celluloid form, a showmanship natural. . . The accumulated impetus of two years of intensive headline exploitation is behind the picture. How can it miss? . . For the family centres, particularly for church and racial elements which advocate large families, and for the whole vast army of sentimental souls and baby-lovers the world over, 'The Country Doctor' has voltage. It will have the parent-teacher vote 100%, and the number of exploitation tie-ups possible through a variety of channels is an invitation to alert house managers and press agents. . . 'Country Doctor' is not without angles that might be considered weaknesses. First of all, there is not very much footage, comparatively, of the Dionnes, and their late appearance, a necessity for production purposes, may not be a word-of-mouth recommendation. Again the wide distribution of the news-reel stuff devoted to the quintuplets has possibly taken off some of the brightness of the picture's novelty. Even so, it's impossible to imagine 'The Country Doctor' as anything but a box-office bull's-eye."

+ + Variety p17 Mr 13 '36

"Consummate stroke of showmanship which Darryl Zanuck cinched in getting the Dionne quintuplets to cavort in 'The Country Doctor' has been combined with fine craftsmanship and wholesome drama and robust comedy for perfect popular entertainment. Picture will do smash business everywhere and will long be talked about with delightful recollection by masses which will see it, from key [cities] to country cross roads. The quintuplets, world's most celebrated babies, alone would insure it extraordinary success, but picture doesn't rely on them alone to score a hit."

+ + Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 27 '36

COURAGEOUS AVENGER. D 12 '35 58min Supreme

Players: Johnny Mack Brown, Helen Erickson, Warner Richmond, Ed Cassidy

Director: Robert N. Bradbury

A law officer in a western mining town avenges the death of his sweetheart's brother and single-handed, traps a gang of vicious thieves who have been holding up wagons carrying silver from the mine to the town.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Weak plot, poor scenic effects, impossible situations. Poor."

— Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"A, Y and C: Poor."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[A] good Western with plenty of diversified action and fine scenic photography. Johnny Mack Brown is presented in an interesting picture which should please the Western action fans. Brown does some spectacular riding, the fights are hard and clean cut, the cast is a competent one, there is a thrill now and then, scenery is beautiful, photography is clear, and it all adds up to a good outdoor action number."

+ Film Daily p4 N 30 '35

"Up to the high standard of previous Brown Westerns, this should please wherever the open air type is desired. Family Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 Ja 10 '36

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT. N 20 '35 80min Columbia

Players: Edward Arnold, Peter Lorre, Marian Marsh, Tala Birell

Director: Josef von Sternberg

Based on the novel of the same title by Dostoevskii, "Raskolnikov murders to save his sister from marrying a pompous government official. Suffering from a Napoleonic complex, he feels that he, and he alone in all the world, can kill ruthlessly and get away with it. At first terrified of contacts with the police, his ego soon gets the better of him, and before long he is strutting before Inspector Porfiry and engaging in mental rapier thrusts with this seasoned old veteran of crime. In the end, just as Porfiry knew it must happen, because of the ideas he was suggesting to Raskolnikov, the criminal breaks under the strain and gives himself up." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fine of kind. Y: Doubtful. C: By no means."

Christian Century p1664 D 25 '35

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Rather melodramatic treatment, but outstanding for the fine acting of P. Lorre and E. Arnold. Adults." DAR

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Those acquainted with the novel will doubtless feel that the director had laid more stress upon the melodramatic than upon the psychological. There are moments, however, of great poignancy and deep spiritual significance. These moments are greatly aided by the superb acting of Peter Lorre and Edward Arnold. The photography is excellent and heightens the effect of tragedy with its play upon light and dark. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

+ — Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"Mature." Internat Council of Cath Alumnae

"Dostoevsky's great novel . . . is powerfully brought to the screen. . . The photography, with its significant lights and shades, forms a suitable, symbolic background for this awesome social drama. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The film involves a series of portraits which are vividly drawn universal types. The story which could be of any date or locale fulfills the basic requirements of tragedy. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

Fox W Coast Bul D 28 '35

"Effectively photographed, expertly directed, notable characterisations by Peter Lorre, as the young student and Edward Arnold, as the officer of the law. A deeply moving study in the psychology of human reactions. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) D 16 '35

Mo Film Bul p193 D '35

"Very good. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Grim crime drama; Y: Doubtful; C: No."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It never quite captures the atmosphere of Dostoevsky. It turns out more a superior detective story than the account of a tortured soul who found that he could not escape the memories of his crime. Perhaps the fault is in the fact that the story has been done in modern costume rather than, as the period piece that it really should be." E. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '35

"Peter Lorre's performance as the student is something to be remembered. He has a good foil in the genial, dogged police inspector of Edward Arnold."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

Reviewed by Don Herold

Life p35 Ja '36

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren

Nation p658 Ja 1 '36

"Mr. Sternberg has tried so earnestly and with such evident sincerity that it becomes a painful duty to point out his failure. . . Yet 'Crime and Punishment' won't do simply because Sternberg's conception is entirely askew. His treatment, for instance, of the relationship between Porphyry and Rodion (here named Roderick) is dangerously akin to the sort of rivalry exemplified by Victor McLagen and Edmund Lowe." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p41 Ja '36

"Mr. Lorre, who is certainly one of the finest actors in motion pictures, is not as brilliant in the leading role as all of us had been sure that he would be. . . His mistake lies in making Raskolnikov too obviously a case for the psychiatrist at the start. As Mr. Lorre plays him, the hapless student has the air of a neurotic handdog that would have caused the inspector to arrest him the first moment he saw him." Richard Watts, Jr.

— + N Y Herald Tribune p17 N 22 '35

"It is not always Dostoevsky, but it is always Russian, always grim, and, in intent at least, it is a psychological study. . . It becomes a detective thriller, the melodrama of a sly detective and a sensitive, fear-driven murderer." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p32 N 22 '35

"Although Peter Lorre is occasionally able to give the film a frightening pathological significance, this is scarcely Dostoevsky's drama of a tortured brain drifting into madness with a terrible secret. It is Dostoevsky eviscerated and converted into nickel-plate detective melodrama. The production is handsome and, as we might expect from a cameraman of Mr. von Sternberg's skill, visually striking. But the major virtues of the film end there." Andre Sennwald

— N Y Times p18 N 22 '35

"From out of the numerous achingly dramatic, almost intolerably dramatic, incidents in this brilliant novel [the directors] have fashioned a pale and sluggish film. Neither the adapters nor the director has managed to bring an extraordinarily dramatic novel to a vivid, glowing life upon the screen. They have ignored almost entirely the central idea and motivation of the theme; their thinking is commonplace and their writing meager. Instead of being Dostoevsky the film turns out to be a labored and loquacious detective story with none of the merits of this form of fiction." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p23 N 22 '35

"Peter Lorre, who can't be understood out there on the Coast, is simply a stodgy Raskolnikov, and Edward Arnold is a hilarious Inspector but not a really sinister one. I felt the whole thing just glued together and not for one moment even as real as the nightmare that the French concocted from the same material. And never as exciting." John Mosher

— New Yorker p90 N 30 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c D 1 '35

"I can remember very little about Hollywood's 'Crime and Punishment' except that it has Peter Lorre, another actor who lasts after the show is over. His Raskolnikov was much more interesting to me than that of the French film, more complex, more suggestive of inner turmoil. Lorre is above all the actors I can think of in using the best resources of the screen." Otis Ferguson

Theatre Arts Mo p141 F '36

Time p39 D 2 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p10 D 28 '35

"There is no denying that this is a splendid screen version of the well known story. . . It's heavy dramatic stuff, the story of a murderer's innermost soul."

+ Film Curb p12 D 15 '35

"Handed with effective directness, with a good cast and judicious direction by Josef von Sternberg, this is one of the best made pictures of the year, with outstanding performances by Lorre and Arnold."

+ + Film Daily p8 N 22 '35

"This is a powerfully different version of criminal-police conflict. . . Slow tempo, accenting its somewhat morbid plot, irrelevant comedy and bizarre, symbolic photography are contrasted."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 N 13 '35

Motion Pict Herald p64 N 30 '35

"Von Sternberg has turned out a directorial masterpiece, well acted, but a probable problem at the box office. That all concerned did their work well no one can deny, but the story's nature, failure of Edward Arnold or

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT—Continued

Peter Lorre to be drawing stars will find the picture doing its best in the higher class spots. Adult melodrama."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p53 D 10 '35

"It may be that the motivation is obvious. It may be that the audience, being too much privy to the pitting of wits between the two, knows the answer; but it is here that his-trionic suasion more than offsets the giving away of the denouement. The auditor is captivated by the theatricalism of the antagonistic forces—the cultured, but poverty-stricken Lorre, and the good-humored but relentless Arnold."

Variety p14 N 27 '35

CRIME ET CHÂTIMENT. N 12 '35 100min
Lenauer

Players: Pierre Blanchar. Harry Baur.
Madeleine Ozeray

Director: Pierre Chenal

Based on the novel, Crime and Punishment, by Dostoevskii. Filmed in France but has English subtitles.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Very good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

Mo Film Bul p193 D '35

Nat Bd of R M D '35

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is successful because its director's respect for his subject goes further than a mere ring-a-ring-o'-reverence round a bronze bust in the box-office. Unity of purpose in this film is so complete that Chenal's direction, the acting of Pierre Blanchar as Raskolnikov and Harry Baur as the Magistrate, the penetrating simplicity of Marcel Aymé's dialogue, the intelligence of the 'adaptation,' and Honegger's music, are all equally admirable: elements combined and concentrated on scansion. Chenal has made a fine 'literary' film! . . . The underlying beat is slow; with all the more effect he can hurry when he needs to. His roving camera masses, deploys, emphasises the literary argument, so that movements imply emotions, silence harbours thought, and great rushes of words actually convey meanings. . . . The result is not the usual jerky working-model, nor yet an advance which other film-makers might safely follow—but a difficult and drastic achievement of television."

+ + New Statesman & Nation p812 N 30 '35

"It is presented with shadowy, sinister settings which heighten the impending gloom and ominous spirit of the great writer. A screen translation of Dostoevski could doubtless have more clarity and comprehension, yet this one for the emotional values of its acting and its capture of the psychological intentions of the Russian genius is noteworthy." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p15 N 13 '35

"'Crime et Chatiment' is powerful, relentless, and sordid as its name. Far superior in acting as well as photography and musical accompaniment to most Continental films, this is an unexpectedly fine version of the tragic novel." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p29 N 13 '35

"'Crime et Châtiment' confirms the opinion created by 'A Nous la Liberté' and 'La Maternelle' that when the French film-makers do a good job they set a standard difficult to be attained by their confrères in Hollywood or any place else. In the space of an hour and three-quarters the director has managed to present the very heart of Dostoyevsky's monumental criminal romance, built upon the theory that 'thus conscience doth make cowards of us all.'" H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p25 N 13 '35

"In every way the French screen version of [the film] lives up to the greatness of the novel from which it stems. . . . Told with great simplicity and powerfully acted, this French film is one more addition to the year's rapidly increasing list of triumphant offerings."

William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p27 N 13 '35

"Certainly I am inclined to limit the public of such a picture to serious students of something or other, if not of Dostoevski. Indeed, it's possible that the most avid readers of the Russian novelist may feel that his works are not exactly suited to the screen anyhow, and that what is a great novel of a murderer and his conscience, documented and analyzed for hundreds of pages, may seem too much a sensational sketch, flimsy and unreal, in the movies. . . . The settings throughout accentuate [the] whole effect; the people in the street seem grotesque figures in a dream; the shadowed staircases, the great, bare rooms and lofts in which the murder occurs, or wherein the murderer lies shuddering lest the knock on the door mean the police, aren't Petrograd's rooms and buildings but those of a nightmare city. A lot of people like nightmares more than I do, and they will love this one. . . . This film is no story or history of a murderer, but it is a simple, pure little diagram of frenzy, and as such you may relish it." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p95 N 23 '35

"The story still seems too vast and subtle to be anything but confused on the screen. Outside the occasional heaviness of Pierre Blanchar, the milk-and-wateriness of Madeleine Ozeray as Sonia, its principal flaw lies in an indecisiveness that is only underlined more strongly by some very dim camera work. What with poor focus, jerky trucking shots and several bad lighting effects, there is frequently the impression that some of the sequences were taken with a pocket kodak, and on a rainy day at that." Otis Ferguson

Theatre Arts Mo p139 F '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The picture belongs to the group of outstanding films from France."

+ Film Daily p12 N 14 '35

"Performed in excellent fashion, the picture is well-photographed and strong in atmosphere. It is an adult attraction exclusively."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 N 14 '35

"Adult melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p55 D 10 '35

"Production meets the background and mood of the narrative perfectly, the direction leaves little wanting, even though there are a few draggy moments, and the scoring intensifies the dramatic import of many a scene. [The] film also includes English titles."

+ — Variety p16 N 20 '35

CRIME OF DR. CRESPI. O 21 '35 63min Re-public

Players: Eric von Stroheim. Harriet Russell

Director: John H. Auer

Suggested by Edgar Allan Poe's The Premature Burial. "Dr. Crespi [who] loses the girl he loves to another doctor, is called upon to operate on the same physician. Instead of killing him, Doctor Crespi places him under the effect of a drug which takes away his power to move. Then he aims to bury him alive but before this can happen the victim is saved and the murderous doctor commits suicide." (N Y Exhibitor)

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Horror melodrama; Y and C: No."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Gripping horror, providing good entertainment for those who like the type. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide O 26 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The play is said to be suggested by Edgar Allan Poe, and it certainly possesses the horror the gifted author was so capable of inventing. But even more valuable, in its accomplishment of the grisly and blood-curdling, are the services of Eric von Stroheim to its gory plot. Mr. von Stroheim, with his shaved head and sardonic mask of a face, lends conviction to the sadistic fiend, Dr. Crespi, quite apart from his sinister, malignant performance. Here is a villain of the first water; Simon Legree was benevolent in comparison. . . . As a horror story, 'The Crime of Dr. Crespi' is a good show." Marguerite Tazelaar
+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Ja 13 '36

"This latest example of the horror drama takes its time in getting under way. The producers have chosen to treat it more or less seriously, dressing up the nonsense with plenty of pseudoscientific explanations. They are, of course, no more convincing than they are scientific. . . . In spite of the earnest exposition, the whole business about Radium X is still a little vague to this nonscientific mind. It would probably be a good deal vaguer to a scientist. . . . It crams in thrills for those who are eager to be thrilled; it is, if you insist upon taking it seriously, quite as silly as it sounds; and, taken in the spirit in which it is offered, it is not a bad specimen of its horror-drama type. . . . And, in the tiny role of the madman's mother, is Violet Kemble Cooper, keeping her face straight through it all." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p16 Ja 13 '36

"Even as 'horror pictures' go, which is pretty far South as a rule, 'The Crime of Dr. Crespi' is an almost humorously overstrained attempt at grimness. There are spots where the audience was unable to restrain a kind of uncalled-for mirth, which may or may not be the 'acid test.'" B. R. C.
— N Y Times p14 Ja 13 '36

"It has the stuff of a real horror tale in it, but it is told in such a careless and wooden manner that some of those who listen to it let it go in one ear and out the other. . . . As the nefarious Crespi, Eric von Stroheim performs in a manner reminiscent of the old twenty-three melodrama days." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p13 Ja 13 '36

"The piece has its graveyard moments and a nice morgue scene, and Herr von Stroheim is a sly, slightly stout, assassin, but as a whole the thing is a trifling toy." John Mosher
— + New Yorker p64 Ja 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

"A gruesome story, depressing and not at all likely to set well. . . . Von Stroheim puts over a grand performance."

— + Film Curb p17 O 1 '35

"Adult."

N Y Exhibitor p36 O 10 '35

"[Eric von Stroheim's] entrance into the field of horror pictures does not get him very far. Overaction and overstress in a creaky adaptation brings laughs where none are sought. Even with better acting and direction it still would fail to be convincing. . . . Eric von Stroheim never for even an instant conveys the remotest suggestion of a professional man; particularly a noted surgeon. It is cheap melodrama crudely played and while it occasionally shocks, it is a feeling of disgust rather than of horror."

— Variety p18 Ja 15 '36

CRUSADES. O 18 '35 134min Paramount

Players: Loretta Young. Henry Wilcoxon. Ian Keith

Director: Cecil De Mille

From book of same title by Harold Lamb. Semi-religious pageant of the twelfth century when all Christendom made war against all Islam in a gigantic mass movement. The specific Crusade selected is the third in which Richard, the Lion-Hearted, king of England, fought against Saladin, sultan of Islam. Woven into the picture is the love story of Richard and Berengaria, princess of Navarre.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Fine of kind; Y: Thrillingly interesting; C: No."

Christian Century p1471 N 13 '35

"Adults: very good."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A fairly unimportant queen . . . is made more important in the struggle between Christian and Saracen than less glamorous historians appear to have been aware of." J. S. H.

Nat Bd of R M N '35

"A and Y: Splendid; C: If interested."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

"Why it was necessary to drag Christianity into the picture is not clear from anything on the screen. The one character with charity and greatness of spirit is the Sultan of Islam, Saladin, played by Ian Keith." Robert Giroux
Nation p391 O 2 '35

"A story of men and women. Of course there are the monstrous war machines of the Crusaders for pictorial effect, there are their war galleys, their regiments of knights in armor and men-at-arms; and there are the dark, fierce Saracens with their razor-like scimitars and indomitable courage. But there would have been no Crusaders if there hadn't been Richard the Lion-Hearted, king of England. And there would have been no Saracens without Saladin, sultan of Islam, a noble enemy."

Springf'd Republican p6 N 17 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p57 N 16 '35

D

DANCE BAND. N 15 '35 65min British international

Players: Buddy Rogers. June Clyde. Steve Geray. Madga Kun

Director: Marcel Varnel

This film was made in England. "The story concerns two rival band leaders, Mr. Rogers and June Clyde, who meet under amusing if rather shopworn circumstances and proceed to

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

DANCE BAND—Continued

mix love and business. They experience the usual misunderstandings and temperamental squalls." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Thin; Y: Harmless; C: If it interests."
Christian Century p62 Ja 8 '36

"Pleasant musical entertainment. Family."
Nat Bd of R

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"A, Y and C: Diverting."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

N Y Times p19 Ja 4 '36.

Trade Paper Reviews

"A light and amusing musical from England's shores in which Buddy Rogers neatly displays his ability to play various instruments in a band. Family."

+ Box Office p33 Ja 18 '36

"'Dance Band' is one of those light, harmless little musicals occasionally transported from the British Isles for American consumption. . . Film appears to be best suited for the double-bill corral. Too lightweight all around."

— + Variety p12 Ja 8 '36

DANCING FEET. F 5 '36 69min Republic

Players: Ben Lyon, Joan Marsh, Eddie Nugent, Funnell Pratt, Vince Barnett

Director: Joseph Santley

Based on the novel of the same title by Robert Eden. When her stern grandfather forbids her to marry a play boy, a wilful girl goes to a dance hall where she meets a young dancing instructor. Together they work out a plan for teaching dancing by mail order. When it becomes successful they overcome the grandfather's objections and marry.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for adults."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"This lively little screen play has some very good situations and clever dialogue."

+ Scholastic p30 Mr 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A good cast has been well handled by Director Santley and the result is a very entertaining picture. . . 'Dancing Feet' should prove a satisfactory film of its kind and undoubtedly will please the majority who see it."

+ Film Curb p12 Ja 25 '36

"The screenplay writers have incorporated some good situations and dialogue which in spots is very clever. Along with a number of specialty dances for high spots, plus catchy tunes, it all adds up to good program entertainment."

+ Film Daily p9 Ja 20 '36

"This music and dance-tinged romantic comedy stacks up as average entertainment. . . It is played in a spirit of lightness and gaiety. There is sufficient dramatic contrast to maintain interest."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 16 '36

"Adequate independent production which owes its entertainment to Joseph Santley's direction, in that he has injected sufficient novelty to submerge a poor story. . . Staleness of the yarn is overlooked at times through some excellent dialog."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 15 '36

DANGEROUS. Ja 4 '36 80min Warner

Players: Bette Davis, Franchot Tone, Margaret Lindsay, Alison Skipworth

Director: Alfred E. Green

"A rising young architect attempts the rehabilitation of a young girl he finds in a sordid 'night spot', whom he recognizes as the former leading emotional actress of the theatre. He strives in vain against her strange fascination and finally, ridiculing her superstitious belief in the 'jinx' that pursues her, he stakes his money and future happiness on a play to star her. The varying moods of this unusual young woman, her influence on the idealistic young architect, her power to wreck the happiness of others, her insolent disregard for the effects of her impulsive decisions, and her final awakening—all make up the fabric of the play." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Bette Davis gives an excellent emotional interpretation of the erratic actress. Intelligent dialogue and direction, plus attractive sets and good photography, redeem a sordid story. Adults: good; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Well produced, drab melodrama. Adults." DAR

"Very good for type. Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Noteworthy for Miss Davis' extraordinarily fine acting, pithy dialogue and expert direction. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"It would have been better if Joyce (Bette Davis) had been discovered in an intoxicated condition rather than the continuous drinking scenes. However, the picture is interesting and very well cast. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ — Fox W Coast Bul N 30 '35

"Reminiscent of 'Human Bondage,' though weaker in story material, this picture is beautifully photographed, realistically acted and ably directed. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 25 '35

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Well-done drama; Y: Sophisticated; C: Mature."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Reminiscent of 'Of Human Bondage,' though weaker in story material, this picture is beautifully photographed, realistically acted and ably directed. Adults."

+ — Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Wkly Guide D 28 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A deplorable film with Bette Davis as an actress rescued from degradation."

— Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"There is an excitement in 'Dangerous' so typical of the 'movies' it might be interesting for the cinemagoer to study it as research. Hundreds of other pictures have had the same harrowing situations, the same plot patterns, and the same climaxes, yet, this picture holds attention continuously, and is, if not altogether entertaining, emotionally absorbing. It should be a box-office success in spite of its triteness, its artificiality and the 'hammy' aura that surrounds it. . . Like all good pictures, it has a moral, which is that you must pay in life for your weaknesses—that, in short, you reap as you sow. . . Like any of the routine films of this sort, you forget it as soon as you leave the theater. But even so, Miss Davis gives a characterization here strikingly good. She is developing, this young actress, and while a little less obviousness in her dramatic equipment would do no harm, her climactic scenes are stirring and she seems to have emotional imagination." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p9 D 26 '35

"'Dangerous,' [was] very evidently written to show off the histrionic ability of its star. There it succeeds. Bette Davis has a part that calls for good old-fashioned play-acting, taking in everything from drunken hysterics to the reliable renunciation scene; and she's pretty swell in it. That is more than can be said of the entire production. . . Whether it all makes sense or not, however, Miss Davis has a lot of fun raising Cain all over the screen. It's rather fun to watch her too, no matter how much of it you care to believe. . . 'Dangerous' is not an important picture nor, by itself, a very good picture. It does, however, give Bette Davis a chance to let loose. She does it with all the vigor and ability she possesses in such quantity." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p25 D 26 '35

"That Bette Davis has been unable to match the grim standard she set as Mildred in 'Of Human Bondage' is not to her discredit. In 'Dangerous,' she tries again. Except for a few sequences where the tension is convincing as well as deadly she fails. . . Toward the middle, the dialogue is stripped and biting; and several fine closeups—the photography is by Ernie Haller—help immensely. The climax immediately suggest 'Ethan Frome,' and is screened breathlessly; the denouement, on the other hand, is too long and although unexpected, is illogical rather than dramatic, moral rather than realistic." M. B.

— + N Y Times p14 D 27 '35

"Since Bette Davis has a flair for portraying sullen, neurotic, shameless, scheming women, as she demonstrated so convincingly in 'Fog Over Frisco,' 'Of Human Bondage,' 'Border-town' and other films, Warner Brothers have cast her in the title role of a malevolent but uneven modern screen melodrama, 'Dangerous.' . . Since, then, 'Dangerous' has the surface gloss of profundity, it is easy to be fooled into believing that it is an absorbing and adult drama. Actually, it is pretty stereotyped in its essentials, which are only moderately well worked out. And this chiefly because Miss Davis and the supporting players contribute some good performances." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram D 27 '35

Reviewed by John Mosher
New Yorker p53 Ja 4 '36

"As a story, 'Dangerous' is interesting, although it is set along more or less conventional lines and drags a bit toward the end. . . Miss Davis is magnificent in the early scenes as the drunken, hopeless creature."

+ — Springf'd Republican p2 Ja 10 '36

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson
Theatre Arts Mo p142 F '36

"A second-rate picture with first-rate trimmings, the fundamental absurdity of 'Dangerous' is partially disguised in the suave dialog written for it by Laird Doyle and by the presence of Bette Davis."

— + Time p28 Ja 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fairly diverting picture. Bette Davis tries hard to put over a characterization somewhat similar to the one in 'Of Human Bondage.' . . Supporting cast is good and the offering has been given excellent production background."

+ — Box Office p29 D 7 '35

"[Bette] Davis offers one of her best performances in this story of a selfish courtesan. . . It's considerably above average entertainment."

+ Film Curb p14 D 1 '35

Film Daily p4 D 6 '35

"This is unpleasant entertainment because of the actions of Bette Davis, the heroine, a self-willed, neurotic actress. Although she acts her part with force and conviction, the character she portrays is extremely unsympathetic. . . Unsuitable for children, adolescents, or for Sunday showing. Adult entertainment."

— + Harrison's Reports Ja 4 '36

"This is a dramatic romance. Convincingly portrayed in an atmosphere of directness, the intelligent handling of its sometimes intimate dramatic situations should preclude the possibility of moral objection from all but the most prudish. Pointed dialogue serves as the principal interpretative medium and action is at a minimum."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 N 19 '35

Motion Pict Herald p68 N 30 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p55 D 10 '35

"It has been sensitively directed and competently acted. . . Miss Davis' performance is fine on the whole, despite a few imperfect moments. When called upon to reach an intense dramatic pitch without hysterics, Miss Davis is capable of turning the trick. Yet there are moments in 'Dangerous' when a lighter acting mood would be opportune, and when a negative piece of business might have been turned into a welcome comedy situation through less pressure."

+ — Variety p44 Ja 1 '36

DANGEROUS INTRIGUE. Ja 4 '36 57min Co-lumbia

Players: Ralph Bellamy. Fred Kohler. Gloria Shea

Director: David Selman

An accomplished surgeon is forced to resign his post in a hospital because he had treated a charity patient at a time when he was wanted for an operation on the daughter of an influential man. From then on a series of misfortunes befalls him. Jobless, his fiancée renounces him, and he suffers an attack of amnesia. He wanders to a small manufacturing town where he takes a laboring job. During an accident his memory returns and he furnishes medical aid to the men.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A and Y: Entertaining; C: If interested."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Springf'd Republican p4c Ja 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This melodrama of a doctor who is a victim of amnesia is pretty good program stuff and likely to get by fairly well in most situations. There is considerable exciting action and the story moves along at a good pace."

+ — Film Curb p9 Ja 13 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

DANGEROUS INTRIGUE—Continued

"Though not very strong on cast names, this is a sympathy-evoking drama, suitable for the popular stands or for bills aimed at family audiences."

+ — Film Daily p7 Ja 18 '36

"A fairly good program melodrama. The story is simple, but it appeals to the emotions of sympathy deeply, and the action is fast. The production and acting are good. Suitable for all."

+ — Harrison's Reports p7 Ja 11 '36

"Estimate: neighborhood, twin-bill material."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p42 Ja 25 '36

"Some capable direction and acting has made this inexpensive production a fair programmer that should get its share of dual-bill business. Rather creaky vehicle, that of the failure who wanders to new surroundings and makes good."

+ — Variety p15 Ja 22 '36

DANGEROUS WATERS. Ja 20 '36 64min Universal

Players: Jack Holt, Grace Bradley, Robert Armstrong, Diana Gibson, Charlie Murray
Director: Lambert Hillyer

Based on a novel, Glory Hole, by Theodore Reeves. "Jack Holt, as an ambitious ship officer, takes command of a vessel after the death of its captain during a fire aboard ship and brings it safely into port. Hoping for a ship's command as his reward, Holt is denied this on a technicality resulting from the causes of the fire. He accepts command of a vessel whose owners plot to destroy it at sea to collect the insurance. Overcoming the obstacles of a storm at sea, a mutinous crew and a crippled vessel, Holt, with the aid of his first mate again succeeds in bringing his ship into port and is rewarded with the command of a new passenger liner." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Loose drinking, plus flagrant disregard of the proprieties defeat the good performance of seasoned screen performers." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A good cast in a story which is none too convincing. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The picture is not consistent; farcical scenes are introduced by a drunken old Irishman; the triangle love story which runs through the picture adds very little to its value. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The picture is not convincing and a discordant note is struck by introducing a minor plot concerning the hero's marital difficulties. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
— Fox W Coast Bul Ja 25 '36

"Though not an outstanding production, the scenic effects are very good; it is well cast and satisfactorily directed with excitement, adventure and romance adding to its entertainment value."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ja 11 '36

"Some thrilling scenes and good comedy, with an ending not very convincing. Fair. Adults and young adults."

+ — Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"This is a mediocre film in which a good cast is helpless when confronted with a sketchy story and uneven direction. Adults."
— Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 15 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Fair sea drama; Y and C: Not recommended."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"A well photographed melodrama of the sea, with some good acting in a rather mediocre story which involves a good deal of drinking. Audiences over fourteen."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Entertaining story of the sea, although the episodes on the boat are not realistic."

+ — Wkly Guide Ja 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Despite strenuous efforts by Mr. Holt, Mr. Armstrong and the good ship Astoria, 'Dangerous Waters,' measured by a critical yardstick, fails as a seaworthy or any other kind of entertainment." Marguerite Tazelaar
— N Y Herald Tribune p11 Ja 24 '36

"Universal, with less modesty than we might expect, describes 'Dangerous Waters' as a 'roaring drama of the open seas.' Like Universal's seas, that is open to debate. Staunchly upholding the negative, we must—howbeit regretfully—characterize the new photoplay as a purring melodrama which is at its best when it should be at its least." F. S. Nugent
— + N Y Times p15 Ja 22 '36

"[It] must be set down as another of the cinema's frequent weaklings. 'Dangerous Waters' runs a considerable gamut for an adventure film, pausing in its course to include five or ten minutes of just plain musical comedy. For the rest it is filled with most of the nickel weekly clichés about romance and adventure." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p13 Ja 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p34 Ja 4 '36

"This yarn of the sea is not quite up to standard, probably due to a poor story. It's a tale of none-too-sweet a bunch of sailors and their girls that quite likely will have hard sledding. Considerably below program grade and perhaps cannot hope for better than a break on the double bills or in the situations where audiences are not too particular."

— Film Curb p14 F 1 '36

"Jack Holt and some other good troupers are pretty much wasted in this hodge-podge of tribulations aboard ship in the Pacific Ocean."

+ — Film Daily p8 Ja 23 '36

"Poor! . . . Unsuitable for children, adolescents, or Sundays. For adults only."

— Harrison's Reports F 1 '36

"Here is a neat little picture that will thoroughly fulfill all requirements in the market for which it is intended. 'Dangerous Waters' is pleasing program fare."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 22 '36

"Fashioned after a melodramatic pattern but with its full share of comic relief and heart interest, 'Dangerous Waters' manages to be good entertainment in an unpretentious way. The result is achieved through plenty of action in a wide variety of situations plus some successful comedy work by Charlie Murray."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 Ja 22 '36

"A melodrama of the sea with Jack Holt supplying most of the action, this picture moves at a swift pace throughout."

Motion Pict Herald p58 F 8 '36

"Estimate: best for [neighborhood houses] and twin bills."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p27 F 10 '36

"'Dangerous Waters' tries hard to work up some excitement but the triteness of the story and the dullness of the dialog prove too much of a deadweight. . . . The most that this sputtering firecracker can figure on is a dual setup."

— + Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

"Despite good production values by Fred S. Meyer, 'Dangerous Waters' is only fair entertainment due to an obviously written, poorly dialoged story. Picture will have its best chances on double bills."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 22 '36

DAREDEVILS OF THE EARTH. Ja 1 '36
55min Hallmark

Players: Ida Lupino, Cyril McLaglen, John Loder

Director: Bernard Vorhaus

This film was made in England. A melodrama with a motorcycle racing background.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: for lesser runs, twin bills."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p46 Ja 25 '36

"Piffing stuff. . . The story is sluggish, sometimes silly and often incoherent."

— Variety p15 Ja 22 '36

DARK ANGEL. S 6 '35 110min United artists

Players: Fredric March, Merle Oberon, Herbert Marshall

Director: Sidney Franklin

From play of same title by Guy Bolton. "Romance of the Great War. Two brothers are called to the British colors. In the line of attack one is missing. He has been blinded, captured and interned in a German camp. The girl he loves believes him killed. He is unwilling to return to her because of his affliction. The story of what he makes of his life, of her own adjustment and their final happiness make a moving study of human relationships." (Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."

N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Direction, acting, photography, sets, and musical score are superlative. Adults." DAR

"An unusually good cast and production, with the three principal parts beautifully acted. Mature." Nat Bd of R

"A production which should hold general interest. Adolescents, 12 to 16; children, 8 to 12; emotional and mature—little interest." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 13 '35

"The fine photography and excellent music further the dramatic qualities of this production which is one of unusual merit. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 3 '35

"The scenery of rural England is beautiful. The fox hunt with its hounds and horsemen is thrilling. The delicate and restrained handling of the love scenes is highly commendable. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates S 15 '35

"Excellent. Adults and young adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"This is a gemlike production in which a poignant story, superb cast, understanding, delicate yet forceful direction, careful timing and exquisite photography are combined in so masterly a fashion as to make a gripping, inspiring and powerful social drama. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A and Y: Excellent; C: Mature."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Altho the film is furnished with many dangerous pitfalls where it might break down into sheer sentimentality, the performance of the three leading players makes it touching without being mawkish, a sincerely moving screenplay."

+ Lit Digest p33 S 14 '35

"Real emotion and rank sentimentality are oddly and thoroughly mixed in this film, which hops backwards and forwards from falsehood to tragedy until only the inveterate filmgoer with cinematographic second sight will know what to make of it."

— New Statesman & Nation p447 O 5 '35

"It will be remembered chiefly for the excellent dramatic scene in which the blind recluse carefully memorizes the details of his room and then tries to conceal his affliction from his two friends when they come to visit him."

+ N Y Times px6 N 3 '35

Reviewed by Mark Forrest

Sat R p288 O 5 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c O 20 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

DARK HOUR. Ja 15 '36 64min Chesterfield

Players: Ray Walker, Irene Ware, Berton Churchill, William V. Mong, Hobart Bosworth

Director: Charles Lamont

"A complicated double mystery in which the murder of one of two brothers who are involved in questionable insurance transactions is solved by a young detective, who pits his wits against those of an older and more experienced man." Sel Motion Pict

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Although the plot is jerky and disconnected at times and the acting only average, interest is sustained throughout and the characterizations of Berton Churchill and Hobart Bosworth are especially good. Adults and young people."

+ — Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A murder mystery that has been well handled by all concerned. This one will do very nicely in the smaller spots and especially where murder mysteries are liked."

+ Film Curb p6 F 1 '36

"A well produced, intelligently directed, murder mystery melodrama. . . Because of the murders it is hardly suitable for children or adolescents, but it is very good for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 25 '36

"A lively, satisfying and spirited mystery thriller that steps out of its class in all departments. Only due to lack of names is its box-office value problematical, but exhibitors can place this on any double bills and rest assured of at least 60 minutes of intelligently produced and acted mystery."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 17 '36

"Production suffers from too much talk, too much opening-closing of doors, but for neighborhood audiences it might prove interesting. More action would be an advantage."

— + N Y Exhibitor p26 F 10 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

DESERT GOLD. Mr 27 '36 55min Paramount
 Players: Larry (Buster) Crabbe, Robert Cummings, Marsha Hunt, Tom Keene
 Director: James Hogan
 Based on novel of same title by Zane Grey.
 A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary
 "Family and junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers
 "Good. High ideals are expressed in the character of the hero. Family." DAR
 "Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
 "Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs
 "Good shots of the desert and good riding in a film suitable for family and junior matinee." Nat Soc of New England Women
 "It demonstrates the result of the treatment of the Indians by the white man, first from the angle of greed and cunning, and secondly, by honest kindness and understanding." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
 + Fox W Coast Bul Mr 7 '36
 "A thriller for the family and junior matinees."
 + Nat Council of Jewish Women F 25 '36
 "Family."
 Wkly Guide F 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Desert Gold' was made for the sort of audience I saw it with—a weekend-night gathering of youngsters and grown-ups in a neighborhood house. It was apparent that the entire film delighted them greatly. Knowing the outcome of its story before the second reel had passed did not in the least lessen my interest, which had been gained almost with the opening scene. . . 'Desert Gold' is a picture you should see." Allan Hersholt
 + Hollywood Spec p13 F 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"If these Paramount Westerns go on getting better they are likely to become fashionable and find their way into the class houses. If that happens folks are going to make a lot of unexpected money. As it is, this one will go out of its dual duty for a neat clean-up and plenty of praise. . . It's rattling good stuff, presented with verve by a gallant company and directed with deftness and gusto by Hogan."
 + Hollywood Reporter p3 F 17 '36
 "This handsome Western, placing heavy emphasis on humor and fast riding, should appeal in a big way to boots-and-saddle fans."
 + Motion Pict Daily p5 F 18 '36
 "Estimate: ace Western."
 + N Y Exhibitor p55 Mr 10 '36
 "Fast moving Western that will keep boots and saddle fans on the edge of their seats. . . For his first directorial effort in some time, James Hogan deserves praise. He has given the picture speed and suspense, has made acceptable a none-too-plausible story."
 + Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 17 '36

DESERT GUNS. Ja 2 '36 70min Beaumont
 Players. Conway Tearle, Margaret Morris, William Gould
 Director: Charles Hutchison
 A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a better than average Western. More story than is usually the case and a good performance by Tearle. It will be well liked in all situations where outdoor dramas are in favor."
 + Film Curb p17 Ja 18 '36
 "This Western should do well in the houses which play outdoor action pictures. It is well handled, with an interesting story that holds one from beginning to end. There is more drama in this one than in most Westerns."
 + Film Daily p10 Ja 13 '36

DESIRE. F 21 '36 89min Paramount
 Players: Marlene Dietrich, Gary Cooper, John Halliday, William Frawley
 Director: Frank Borzage

Based on the play, The Pearl Necklace, by Hans Szekeley and R. A. Stemmle. It was formerly made into a foreign picture called Die Schönen Tage in Aranjuez. An American automotive engineer on a long desired vacation in Spain falls in love with a notorious jewel thief. To evade the customs men, she conceals a string of valuable stolen pearls in his baggage and then in order to recover the treasure she invites him to the home of a confederate who obligingly goes away. Left alone together, the girl falls in love with the young man and they return the jewels thus opening the way for a marriage and a life of comparative quiet in Detroit.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The picture is thoroughly entertaining due to the fine work of an able cast, lovely settings, and a clever plot of continental flavor. Adults and young people."
 + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Mr 1 '36

"Why this film should be called 'Desire' is more than we can fathom unless the producers thought such a title would please the followers of Marlene Dietrich's former roles. . . We could not forgive the scenarist if he had written this in a serious vein. However, it is subtly comic and ultra sophisticated, not so torrid and not so dull as one might expect from the title. The cast is excellent, and the settings are lovely. Adolescents, 12-16: too sophisticated; children, 8-12: no."
 Motion Pict R Mr '36

"The old story of regeneration through love is done in a sophisticated, original manner. There is an unmistakable, insidious undercurrent of sex which will be objectionable to many. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 4 '36

"Good. Adults."
 Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"Old world backgrounds and exceptionally beautiful photography of Spanish scenes add to the high artistry of the entire production. Adults and young people."
 + Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"A well directed and beautifully acted production. Mature."
 + Wkly Guide F 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"After her long series of consciously studied pictures under the guidance of Von Sternberg, Marlene Dietrich becomes surprisingly and pleasantly alive in 'Desire.' . . For such a part Miss Dietrich fills all of the requirements. . . It is first-rate." E. F. M.
 + Boston Transcript p4 Mr 14 '36
 "Competent acting and superlative directing makes rather commonplace material assume the appearance of something of more moment."

Laura Elston

— + Canadian M p42 Mr '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 21 '35

"The combination of Frank Borzage, Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper is a happy one. . . I presume 'Desire' will be recut before its final release. As I saw it, it sags in the middle, several scenes, all right in themselves, adding nothing to the story and serving only to retard its progress. . . [It] is a triumph for Gary Cooper. . . From the comedy standpoint it is the finest thing he has done on the screen."

+ Hollywood Spec p3 F 15 '36

"Though [the] romantic sequences contain many moments of the torrid sort, and though the whole business is coated with a pseudo-sophisticated glamour, 'Desire' is a curiously old-fashioned film. The decorative Fräulein Dietrich, smartly costumed by Travis Banton, unbends in this picture more than in her wont and occasionally she is actually gay. Her acting ability, however, remains limited to expressing varying degrees of seductiveness. . . The picture is at least always pleasant to watch." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p35 Mr 14 '36

"'Desire' proves two things. It demonstrates that what Miss Dietrich needed desperately, she has: a new director. It also establishes that Mr. Cooper is a better actor than almost any one was willing to believe. . . The result is a gay, mocking film, troubling with nothing more important than giving the stars something to do."

Lit Digest p21 Mr 7 '36

"Miss Dietrich does fine work in her new picture. Still something this side of a Bernhard, she has melted her frozen pose and acted her way through her part in grand style. . . 'Desire' brings [Miss Dietrich] two distinctions: it establishes her as an actress and as the first person ever to receive $500,000 for one picture."

+ News-Wk p32 Mr 7 '36

"'Desire' is a romantic comedy of grace, dexterity and charm in which Marlene Dietrich's performance is the best she has given since she became too dignified to exhibit the legs which brought her her first United States fame in the 'Blue Angel' in 1930. . . The flirtation between [Marlene] and [Gary] suddenly ripens into something else, something which Director Frank Borzage contrives to convey in scenes which are at once gay, delicate and, in view of the cinema's attitude toward such matters since the Legion of Decency started to operate in 1934, sensationally explicit."

+ Time p47 Mr 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is the last word in glamorous and romantic screen fare set in a continental background of picturesque beauty."

+ Box Office p17 F 22 '36

"Leaves one rather cold—just as cold as the thief Marlene is through all but the last sequences. The Dietrich fans will like it."

L. S. Niemeyer

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 F 29 '36

"It will please them in the top spots but it may be just a little too much on the sex [side] for the small town and neighborhood houses."

Film Curb p11 F 8 '36

"The situations and plot are well worked out and, with some clever dialogue effectively handled by Cooper and Dietrich, it is grand entertainment. Except for the climax, which goes somewhat heavy, the piece has that care-free tone that is very enjoyable. . . It is so well played and handled that it should please in a big way."

+ Film Daily p10 F 4 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"A portion of the first half, which is devoted to Miss Dietrich's activities as a jewel thief, is clever and exciting, although demoralizing; and up until the time that she becomes acquainted with Gary Cooper the action continues at a pretty fast pace, combining thrills with laughs. But the second half, which is devoted to the sex angle, is tiresome and slow-moving. . . Unsuitable for children, adolescents, or Sundays. Adult entertainment."

+ — Harrison's Reports Mr 7 '36

"Paramount's handsome new piece for Marlene Dietrich is not very exciting fare. . . It takes about an hour and a half to develop [the] story and the telling is exceedingly deliberate and seldom inspired, either as to writing or directing. It is all very handsome and polished and there are engaging incidents, but laughs come in the wrong places and the picture is going to have tough going at the box office, except where there is a strong Dietrich following."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 31 '36

Motion Pict Daily p4 F 1 '36

"There is much for comedy fans in this production. Those who think that torrid sex as a part of screen entertainment mechanics is a forgotten thing are in for a surprise. Those who like sentimental romance drama will find plenty of it. 'Desire' is an amalgamation of all three. . . All right for the sophisticated, probably, but a feature that official and unofficial guardians of public morals are quite likely to leap on, requiring the application of much pretty astute showmanship and no little diplomacy. . . Previewed in the Los Angeles Paramount Theatre. The audience roared at its comedy and did quite a bit of ooh-ing and ah-ing at its sex."

Motion Pict Herald p55 F 8 '36

"Fortified by two names and an Ernest Lubitsch production, 'Desire' should turn in a nice gross at anybody's box office. . . Though the trend in the picture is adult, there is nothing that families can't see. Estimate: good anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 F 25 '36

"The Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper combination, under production guidance of Ernst Lubitsch, clicks impressively. . . For the ace houses it's a natural, and it will fare well on down the line as far as sophisticated comedy and sex drama spell entertainment. . . Lines are graced with sparkle throughout, but aim the picture primarily at the sophisticate rather than the hoi-polloi. . . Tale is adult, smoothly progressive and gamey up to the edge of the cultivated taste."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 31 '36

LE DEUXIÈME BUREAU. See Second bureau

DIAMOND JIM. S 2 '35 97min Universal

Players: Edward Arnold. Binnie Barnes. Jean Arthur. Eric Blore

Director: Edward Sutherland

Based on the biography of James Buchanan Brady by Parker Morell. "Symbol of that era when a young country's expansion by railroad was turning men into millionaires over night was 'Diamond Jim' Brady, gourmet, super-salesman, patron of the 'Great White Way' and the theater. This son of a Bowery saloon-keeper quit his job as a railway freight-agent to become a millionaire railroad-supply salesman and the greatest spender of his generation." (Lit Digest)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is to fine acting by Edward Arnold, who met the original Brady twice, ably supported by Eric Blore, that the picture owes its virtues. . . But with an opportunity to spread on a large canvas the background of a picturesque and now glamorous period, the film leaves this dramatic costume-epic to pick up odds and ends of romances which falter under the breadth of the man's character."

DIAMOND JIM—Continued

+ Lit Digest p30 S 7 '35

"Instead of giving us an incisive, persuasive re-capitulation of a sped era which bred a personage, it wasted precious footage on sentimentality, toyed unintelligently with facts and bowed opportunity out the door." Louise Mace

— Springf'd Republican p6c O 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

"Decidedly interesting story of the time of Diamond Jim Brady which has been done in first class style."

+ Film Curb p17 S 15 '35

DIVINE SPARK. N 14 '35 82min Gaumont British

Players: Phillips Holmes. Marta Eggerth

Director: Carmine Gallone

"From his youthful studies at the Royal College of Music in Naples and the inception of a love which motivated his whole life and inspired his best music, this story carries the Italian composer, Vincenzo Bellini, to the height of his operatic career." Selected Motion Pict

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good. Suitable for mature audiences, but inappropriate for church halls and school showings." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"Picturesque, with actual Neapolitan settings, and a lot of music. For schools and libraries. Family."

+ Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Good; C: No interest."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Although the story lacks the element of suspense to a great degree and has the tendency to be jerky, it has many praiseworthy phases. The life of all artists is interesting and Bellini was a particularly romantic figure; the settings are excellent and the interwoven music from the operas very pleasing. Music lovers will delight in the story and operatic selections but will probably wish that a more expert artist might have sung the arias. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 21 '35

DR. SOCRATES. S 28 '35 79min Warner

Players: Paul Muni. Ann Dvorak. Barton MacLane. Robert Barrat

Director: William Dieterle

From a novel of same title by W. R. Burnett. "A picture in which a young doctor inadvertently comes in contact with a band of criminals and becomes a hero by cleverly planning their capture." (Jt Estimates)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Good of kind; Y: Not the best; C: No." Christian Century p1390 O 30 '35

"The direction is forceful and effective with Paul Muni and his supporting cast doing most realistic and convincing work. Mature audience."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 9 '35

"A convincing story, with small town narrowness and its paradoxical whole heartedness cleverly portrayed. Paul Muni's work as Lee Cardwell is commendable. Too much exciting gun play for children. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates S 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p144 D '35

Motion Pict & Family O 15 '35

"Suitable for adults and young people."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A: Plausible melodrama; Y: Doubtful; C: No."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Excellent scenario and acting, and unusually good setting with lifelike minor characters. Exciting and clever plot. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 5 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Although this is an entertaining picture in its own right, it is perhaps of chief interest as the latest item in the regeneration of the Warner Brothers' gangster chieftains." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p19 O 3 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c D 15 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

Film Curb p10 O 15 '35

"Adult melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p35 O 25 '35

DON'T GAMBLE WITH LOVE. F 15 '36 65min Columbia

Players: Ann Sothern. Bruce Cabot. Irving Pichel. Ian Keith

Director: Dudley Murphy

"Cabot and his wife, Miss Sothern, are deeply in love with one another, and concerned about the future of their infant son. They operate a swank gambling hall, on the square, and are successful. Miss Sothern concludes that a baby and a gambling career do not mix and persuades Cabot to give up the racket. His fling in the 'legitimate' brokerage business ends when he is innocently involved in the firm's crooked dealings. Angry, he returns to gambling without his wife." Motion Pict Daily

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

" 'Don't Gamble With Love' is typical neighborhood-house fare, which means that it is cut from the usual pattern in plot and treatment, resulting in more or less mediocre entertainment." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p15 Mr 5 '36

"Nurseries and gambling dens, true love and crooked dice are all jumbled together in the [film], an unobjectionable and insignificant piece called, 'Don't Gamble With Love.' This all makes a story somehow, but never one to be believed." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p16 Mr 2 '36

"A mildly amusing little program number, ideally suited for the neighborhoods and not altogether alien to the pulsing heart of the Great White Way." B. R. C.

+ — N Y Times p13 Mr 2 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"There is nothing much to pant about one way or another in 'Don't Gamble With Love.' It twitters along aimlessly for about an hour, now entertaining, now dull, and when it has run its course about the only fatality is a trifling loss of time." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p17 Mr 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good performances by Ann Sothorn and Bruce Cabot, with an able supporting cast, plus a story that holds interest fairly well despite its routine classification, make this production a generally passable affair for the popular situations."
+ — Film Daily p7 F 29 '36

"The result is a well-enough handled picture that will please the non-discriminating audiences throughout the country. . . The picture will be quite satisfactory on dual bills."
+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 6 '36

"This should prove satisfactory entertainment."
+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 Mr 2 '36

"This is a simple little production that starts off slowly, fails to increase its pace and winds up practically in the same spot from which it started. However, it does have strength of cast names, the best line for showmanship. . . By keen showmanship, exhibitors should be able to prepare suitable exploitation campaigns to promote this picture, stressing those elements most obvious."
+ — Motion Pict Herald p58 Mr 14 '36

"The question this one tries to decide is whether it pays to be honest, even in operating a gambling house. It tackles the problem convincingly but not entertainingly enough to assure success at the box office. . . Title may attract the curious but everything points to less than average pull."
+ — Variety p27 Mr 4 '36

DON'T GET PERSONAL. F 17 '36 65min Universal

Players: Sally Eilers. James Dunn. Pinky Tomlin

Director: William Nigh

"College graduates, James Dunn and Pinky Tomlin, being broke, resort to [holding a] public auction [to sell] their talents. Miss Eilers, also flat, bids spiritedly in order to jack up the price for the boys' benefit. She is horrified when she gets them herself with her last five dollars and demands that they drive her home. The cross-country trek is enlivened by furious squabbling between Dunn and Miss Eilers, songs by Pinky, and a series of comic mischances culminating in Dunn's kidnapping of Sally at the very altar of her spite marriage."
— Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Fair. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"Adults and young people."
Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"In spite of the fact that it took seven writers to turn out 'Don't Get Personal,' the picture is a shaky little effort, doggedly determined to be light and amusing, with the result that it is often too cute and picturesque for comfort. Furthermore, Sally Eilers, James Dunn and Pinky Tomlin act to the hilt their carefree juvenile roles so that, as far as adult entertainment goes, the film fails to make its mark. . . The story has been directed affably by William Nigh and its outdoor settings are pleasant. Meant, no doubt, to be just a simple, homespun picture for the unsophisticated, it achieves its end." Marguerite Taze-laar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p7 F 22 '36

"'Don't Get Personal,' a slight and unpretentious comedy of two boys, a girl and an aged automobile, is surprisingly entertaining." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p16 F 24 '36

"If you can put up with a renewal of that stormy sort of sparkin' that Jimmy (Treat 'Em Rough) Dunn and Sally Eilers usually engage in before they fade out in one big cuddle, then 'Don't Get Personal' may prove engaging." J. T. M.

N Y Times p12 F 22 '36

"It may be said of [it] without much fear of contradiction, that [it is] ponderous in movement and pedestrian in speech, in fact, almost entirely lacking in all the elements that go to make up enjoyable screen entertainment."
— N Y World-Telegram p21 F 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one should have no trouble in pleasing most audiences. . . If your patrons like good clean fun they certainly will go for this one."
+ — Film Curb p19 F 29 '36

"Lively little comedy of hitch-hike love carries good quota of laughs."
+ — Film Daily p10 F 24 '36

"Just a moderately amusing program comedy. . . The bickering between Sally Eilers and James Dunn, who love each other, wears on one's nerves; and this keeps up until the very end. Suitable for all. Family."
+ — Harrison's Reports Mr 7 '36

"A bright resourceful little story filled with sparkling gags, this newest Sally Eilers-James Dunn comedy is a very good bet for any dual bill location. The story is slightly implausible but none the less funny."
+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 Ja 31 '36

"Promotion for the picture, with no suggestion of tremendous magnitude or power, can safely promise frothy, modern, amusing entertainment, an hour of light and generally pleasant pastime. Basic material is of familiar pattern but treatment is fresh. A bit of imbibing by all hands, purely for comedy purposes, may be an item for exhibitor consideration in some localities."
+ — Motion Pict Herald p40 F 25 '36

"James Dunn and Sally Eilers as a combination have made several attempts to duplicate 'Bad Girl,' without success. 'Don't Get Personal' is another miss. It won't get by in the big-time spots on its own. . . This one is strictly farce of mediocre quality."
— + Variety p37 F 26 '36

DOUGHNUTS AND SOCIETY. (Release date not determined) 63min Mascot

Players: Louise Fazenda. Maude Eburne. Eddie Nugent. Ann Rutherford. Hedda Hopper

Director: Lewis D. Collins

"Louise Fazenda and Maude Eburne, after numerous disasters with an Alaska gold mine, settle down amiably to the manufacture of doughnuts. The romance between their respective children, Edward Nugent and Ann Rutherford, has a temporary setback when Miss Eburne sells a piece of property and starts a vigorous climb on the social ladder." Motion Pict Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"Satisfying, carefully built film overcomes story weakness. Family trade comedy."
+ — Film Daily p9 Mr 17 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

DOUGHNUTS AND SOCIETY—Continued

"This is the last of the Mascot films and its release at this time serves as a gentle but very pointed reminder of the improvement in Republic product."

Motion Pict Daily p8 Mr 16 '36

"[The] picture is of hokum slapstick variety that brings back memories of old Keystone specials. Lewis D. Collins' smart direction and handling of situations keeps it from getting into the class of the ridiculous and lifts it to level where the small towners, family trade and unsophisticates will find it entertaining."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 12 '36

DRIFT FENCE. F 14 '36 63min Paramount

Players: Larry (Buster) Crabbe. Katherine De Mille. Tom Keene. Benny Baker. Glenn Erickson. Irving Bacon

Director: Otho Lovering

Based on a novel of the same title by Zane Grey. A young easterner is sent west by his uncle to take charge of a ranch. He dislikes the rough ranch life and asks an undercover ranger to substitute for him. The ranger is disinclined to do so until he learns that a gang of rustlers whom he is trailing are playing havoc with the herds on the easterner's ranch. By permitting the rustlers to believe him a tenderfoot, he learns their plans and after numerous battles he brings them to justice.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Family and junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family and junior matinee." Nat Ed of R

"A mediocre 'Western' with the redeeming feature of beautiful outdoor scenery and fine riding. Family and junior matinee." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"There is plenty of action, a bit of romance and expert horsemanship in this better-than-usual Western. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family, altho there is a good deal of drinking and the film is over-tense for small children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Exciting and thrilling rodeo scenes will appeal to boys. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Even though violent death is an indispensable adjunct of pictures dealing with the lawlessness of the frontier, this film makes murder seem too casual and too easily justified. Adolescents, 12-16: questionable; children, 8-12: no." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
Fox W Coast Bul F 8 '36

"Family and junior matinee."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 1 '36

"A, Y and C: Good action melodrama."
Par M p54 Mr '36

"A regulation Zane Grey story, of fair interest, with fine photography of the picturesque Arizona cow country and interesting scenes of the building of a range fence to keep cattle within bounds. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"A good lively Western."

+ Wkly Guide Ja 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Drift Fence' is a very mild horse opera which . . . gathers momentum in the last two minutes." T. M. P.

— + N Y Times p11 Mr 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[A] fast-action Western that will please both old and young. . . Good laughs are furnished by Benny Baker and Irving Bacon. . . Well-paced direction by Otho Lovering puts it in the better Western class."

+ Box Office p23 D 21 '35

"[It is] a better than average Western. [It] has its full share of action and thrills."

+ Film Curb p18 D 15 '35

"Better class Western with more than average strength in story, cast and general handling."

+ Film Daily p9 Mr 6 '36

"This stacks up as a better than average Western. A logical story carefully balances the drama, comedy and romance and embellishes them with a unique human interest twist. The required amount of thrill and action being visibly present, dialogue, action and situations combine to give the plot a bit of novelty and freshness, setting it apart from the formula of the outdoor adventure feature. . . The picture aims at pleasing the masses, with particular appeal to juvenile audiences. . . The beauty of the natural settings is enhanced by effective photography."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 D 7 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

"[The] result is a de luxe Western that will go big in family and [neighborhood] houses and will collect full share of double-harness [business]. It will be a tasty dish for outdoor fans because Tom Keene, who dominates much of it, acts and looks like a typical western cowpuncher. And the film's gait is sufficiently fast to satisfy."

+ Variety p27 Mr 11 '36

"[A] well produced Western with sufficient story and action to please both the [juvenile] and adult outdoor fans. . . Best performance in the picture is given by Tom Keene who is at all times convincing as the young ranger. . . Though the picture has a minimum of chase, Otho Lovering has given it good western tempo in his direction, has taken advantage of the natural surroundings afforded on the locations."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 6 '35

E*EAGLE'S BROOD. O 15 '35 58min Paramount

Players: Dorothy Revier. Bill Boyd. Jimmy Ellison

Director: Howard Bretherton

Based on novel of same title by Clarence Mulford. The second of the series of Hop-A-Long Cassidy stories. Two peace officers enforce law and order in the early days of the great Southwest.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: Hardly; C: No."

Christian Century p94 Ja 15 '36

"A: Good melodrama; Y: Thrilling; C: Too gory."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p57 N 16 '35

"Unusually satisfactory Western that will please followers of outdoor films."

+ Film Curb p7 O 15 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p35 O 25 '35

Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

EAST OF JAVA. D 2 '35 75min Universal

Players: Elizabeth Young, Charles Bickford, Frank Albertson, Siegfried Rumann

Director: George Melford

Based on novel, 'Tiger Island, by Gouverneur Morris. "[An] American fugitive fleeing police, ships on a tramp steamer which is wrecked on [a] small island, takes command but the men are killed off one by one, by wild animals, until he gives his life to save [a] young couple, the only other survivors." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Poor."

— Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Excellent direction, sound effects and photography. Adults: thrilling; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: too brutal." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"A gripping, interesting melodrama in which brawn pitted against brain wins in most instances. It is forcibly directed and realistically acted. . . Beautiful photography, effective music, especially Clarence Muse's tom-tom song, a realistic storm, strong suspense and tense drama make this picture based on a story by Gouverneur Morris most stimulating. Adults and young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"An excellent cast, fine, virile direction, unusual photography and a thrilling story. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Brutal details make this a film only for adults of steady nerves." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Direction seems to have made use of every cinema possibility. The cast is excellent and they appear [to be] real people. Scenes are carried through by use of silences and suspense to dramatic climaxes. Entertaining. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The part of Bowers played by Charles Bickford, dominates the film; direction is sure and moves towards an inevitable end. However, it is doubtful if the story in which many men are lost in a shipwreck and four survivors devoured by lions and tigers can be called diversion for any except the hardiest adults. Adults: too strong; children: terrifying." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ — Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"Fair. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Exciting melodrama; C: Harrowing for nervous."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"From a leisured and ponderous start, 'East of Java' works up to a climax packed with sinister underlying excitement. This inconsistency of pacing gives the film a contagiously feverish quality not inappropriate to its content. There was a good deal of time, trouble and actual danger involved in this screening of Gouverneur Morris's 'Tiger Island.' . . To assist its fearfully measured crescendo of atmosphere and action, 'East of Java' has an enormously effective cast of players."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '35

"Exciting melodrama."

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 21 '35

"As a cheerful prelude to Christmas, [Universal] brings in a new picture teeming with wild beasts which in the course of an hour devour five of the principals of the play in plain view while the three remaining wretches are reduced to such a state of the jitters that their ultimate rescue seems of little consequence. Melancholy and doom strike the keynote of the entertainment, billed as 'East of Java,' and, therefore, for those who desire a counter-irritant to Christmas shopping and holly wreaths it may prove comforting. All this is acted out in all seriousness by an excellent cast, whose sense of humor appears, appropriately, to have been placed in storage for the time being." Marguerite Tazelaar

— + N Y Herald Tribune p12 D 16 '35

"During its hour or so on the screen 'East of Java' crowds in more melodrama than half a dozen of the usual films. This is straight-action melodrama, good old blood and thunder stuff, with wild tigers and a gangster, a madman, a hero and a heroine all marooned on a desert island. Everything happens that possibly could happen, and undoubtedly quite a lot more. It is not to be taken literally, but somehow it manages to sustain the excitement until the end." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p30 D 16 '35

"Though it has a certain melodramatic vitality about it, 'East of Java,' doesn't quite jell. The ingredients for a successful thriller are all there, but it has been put together with paste instead of cement and as a result is a loose and leaky entertainment. . . The film is not lacking in thrills—make believe and real. . . Mr. Bickford gives his customary vigorous performance as the gangster, and there is a grand piece of acting by Siegfried Rumann as an animal trainer who loses his mind and courage as the survivors are besieged by the lions. The romantic interest is provided by Elizabeth Young and Frank Albertson." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p29 D 17 '35

Springf'd Republican p2 Ja 23 '36

Time p44 D 9 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p38 D 7 '35

"This wild tale of [a] party shipwrecked on an island packed with lions, tigers and other wild beasts will probably please and create excitement for a juvenile audience but that's about all. [It is] rather an improbable yarn."

— Film Curb p14 D 1 '35

Film Daily p10 D 17 '35

"Melodramatic thrill action, with a trend toward horror, this is red meat for those liking that type of entertainment. Full of vivid, menacing danger, yet artificial to the point of unreality, the picture is for thrill fans."

— + Motion Pict Daily p10 N 12 '35

"While it is apparent that much attention was paid to details, [the] story is handicapped by being too familiar. Family melodrama."

— + N Y Exhibitor p53 D 10 '35

Variety p12 D 18 '35

ECSTASY OF YOUNG LOVE. See Young love

EIN JUNGES MÄDCHEN—EIN JUNGER MANN (German title) See Knock-out

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ESCAPE FROM DEVIL'S ISLAND. N 10 '35
65min Columbia

Players: Victor Jory. Florence Rice

Director: Albert Rogell

Two convicts of the French penal colony escape, defying the dangerous jungles and the pursuing guards. Altho they both love the same woman, one sacrifices himself so that the other may know happiness.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Fair; C: Doubtful."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Class C melodrama."
— Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

"Why, one wonders, did Columbia waste the talents of so sophisticated an actress as Miss Florence Rice, who not long ago proved so engaging in 'She Loves Me Not,' in fact, why did Columbia make this obvious, tinsel, nonsensical picture at all." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p12 N 25 '35

"As a quickie thriller, the picture has a mild amount of excitement. The acting, however, is pretty poor, even that of Victor Jory who made such a magnificent Oberon in 'A Midsummer Night's Dream.' And the whole production looked as though it were made in a Hollywood studio, as indeed it was." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p26 N 25 '35

"Columbia's casting director deserves credit for peopling [the picture] with as motley a crew of cut-throats as we have seen in many a month. Though it probably wasn't intended, the film presents its cargo of derelicts in a sympathetic light and you cannot help pitying the poor wretches as they toil under the scorching tropical sun." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p22 N 25 '35

"Although melodramas about Devil's Island usually command attention because they are invariably vigorously presented and are based on elementary human themes, this latest one is pretty leaky and stereotyped." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p11 N 26 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Action fans will be certain to find this melodrama, depicting the horrors of the French penal colony, to their liking. Exciting moments are numerous, with the harrowing escape of three hunted men through the dangerous and snake-infested jungle holding the maximum of suspense."

+ Box Office p25 Ja 4 '36

"Rather a good melodrama based on France's famed penal institution. It moves along at a good pace and should be liked by those who cotton to this brand of entertainment."

+ — Film Curb p12 D 15 '35

"Handicapped from the start with a story that falls into a cut-and-dried pattern, neither the earnest efforts of the cast nor the direction by Al Rogell were able to make much of this production."

— Film Daily p7 N 26 '35

Motion Pict Daily p4 N 16 '35

"The character portrayals are in keeping with the production, which, in most scenes, is authentic and realistic. The direction, however, seems to allow the action to bog down in the middle and the suspense, which was building nicely, slips back considerably."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p59 D 14 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p53 D 10 '35

"'Escape From Devil's Island' deals with familiar material but deals with it moderately well."

— + Variety p30 N 27 '35

EVERY SATURDAY NIGHT. F 7 '36 70min
20th century-Fox

Players: June Lang, Thomas Beck, Jed Prouty, Spring Byington

Director: James Tinling

Based on the play of the same title by Katherine Kavanaugh. "[The story] deals with the parental problems of the Evers family. There is Bonnie who goes with the spoiled son of wealth; Jack, who finds it impossible to be a girl on his two-dollar weekly allowance, and the use of the family car one night in seven; Roger, too young for sweethearts, but a financial genius who lends his older brother money at exorbitant interest; Lucy, who thinks she is grown up; and little Bobby, too young to be other than a comfort to his parents." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"In short, a picture you'll enjoy because it is about yourselves! Family and junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Family." DAR

"The production has the charm of familiar, homely things, a capable cast and direction that moves along slowly but surely to a genuinely sincere and affecting climax. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Splendid mingling of humor, pathos and delicate human touches make the picture one of marked high ethical standard. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"A perfect family picture." Mrs T. G. Winter

Fox W Coast Bul F 15 '36

"The picture is, delightfully entertaining for the entire family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 8 '36

"This film offers something for any audience. Family."

+ Jt Estimates F 1 '36

Motion Pict & Family p6 F 15 '36

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"The characters are not particularly interesting in themselves, and the events are neither dramatic nor unusual, but the film is interesting because of its success in catching the exact reflection of human beings whose prototypes everyone knows in real life. Adolescents, 12-16: entertaining; children, 8-12: mature."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"We hope this will be a forerunner for more pictures which will prove such acceptable entertainment for the entire family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women F 5 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A refreshing story of an every day American family told in a delightfully humorous but sympathetic way. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"[This is] a pleasant, human comedy. Family."

+ Wkly Guide F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"You'll like the whole family. Though don't go to forget your own troubles. You'll see most of them in the picture." Beverly Hills

+ Liberty p29 Mr 7 '36

"This is the first of a series of homespun comedies which Twentieth Century-Fox is sponsoring. . . If its successors manage to be as completely disarming as 'Every Saturday Night,' then films of this genre need no longer be relegated to the neighborhood houses and the hinterland. That there is room for 'wholesome' photoplays on Broadway was attested yesterday afternoon by an audience which laughed loud and frequently and further demonstrated its approval by a final round of applause." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 14 '36

"In case you are in search of what is known as 'homespun' entertainment 'Every Saturday Night' is the place to find it. An ambling, unimportant, short-winded anecdote, it is somewhat enlightened by the expert playing of [the cast]." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p25 Mr 17 '36

"'Every Saturday Night' bathes its audience in an atmosphere of homey sweetness which should make the picture a success at any neighborhood playhouse. . . . When Producer Darryl Zanuck pre-viewed 'Every Saturday Night,' he was so delighted he decided to make three more pictures along the same line, using the same cast and same scene. Billed as 'Our American Family' series, the four pictures will be the first example in the talkies of an idea Mr. & Mrs. Sidney Drew used long and successfully in silent days."

+ Time p25 Mr 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Humorous, homespun story, typical of the average man's family, packed with entertainment value and definitely a smash grosser. Family."

+ Box Office p49 F 8 '36

"One of those down-to-earth, back-home-with-the-family pictures that likely will provide fairly satisfactory entertainment for the not-too-particular. It's a tear-jerker that depicts incidents in an American family and is evidently designed for the neighborhoods and small town theatres. . . . Cast do a rather commendable job and the direction and production are average."

+ Film Curb p13 F 1 '36

"Here is a picture that can readily fill the need for funny and sympathetic pictures which will not leave a bad taste in the mouth of audiences. . . . The simple story is splendidly kept together with every day incidents in family life which cannot fail in appeal."

+ Film Daily p7 Mr 14 '36

"Pleasant family entertainment of program grade; it has pathos and comedy. . . . The trouble with such a picture, however, is the fact that the theme is too close to one's everyday existence. . . . Suitable for all. [Family]."

+ Harrison's Reports F 15 '36

"The production has been aimed for the masses and hits the bull's eye squarely with keen and homely humor. The first of a planned series, 'Every Saturday Night' should prove a popular and profitable new trend at the box office."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 25 '36

"It should do well in the general field, particularly with the family patronage."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ja 27 '36

"Here's a picture that any exhibitor, certainly those playing to family trade audiences, can be glad to present to his audiences. The cast boasts no grand names; the title isn't so hot, but the entertainment it presents and the way it presents it is all wool and a couple of yards wide."

+ Motion Pict Herald p58 F 8 '36

"Before enthusing over the announcement that 'Every Saturday Night' is the first picture in an American family series, exhibitors will first have to satisfy themselves that a picture so devoid of names can attract patrons. No one can deny that on twin bills, in neighborhoods, this will please, but how a de luxe or key city first run can play this by itself is a question still to be answered."

N Y Exhibitor p35 F 25 '36

"Lacking name strength, this film can't be expected to draw on its own, but once they're inside it should prove pleasant entertainment. For one thing, it's okay for everybody in the family, pure but appealing in its small way. Being a B picture, it's destined almost strictly for the dualers, but there it will hold up its end nicely."

+ Variety p29 Mr 18 '36

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN. Mr 20 '36 84min
20th century-Fox

Players: Irvin S. Cobb, Rochelle Hudson, Johnny Downs, Norman Foster

Director: James Flood

"[The] story deals with a manufacturer who loses interest in business upon the death of his life-long competitor. He takes a vacation and returns to find that his nephew has set himself up as a little Napoleon who regards his uncle as a has-been. So the old man takes over the affairs of the heirs of the rival factory, forcing his nephew to say 'Uncle.'" Hollywood Reporter

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It gives audiences a laugh a minute." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"There is nothing new in the story from which 'Everybody's Old Man' was made, and Irvin Cobb comes a long way short of being a good actor, yet the picture is thoroughly enjoyable. From the first the story is obvious."

Pat McNutt and A. E. Thomas, writers of the screen play, are to be congratulated upon the shameless manner in which they refused to think up anything new and the expert manner in which they used everything old in fabricating an amusing little comedy as one could wish for. . . . Put this picture on your list of those to see. You will have a pleasant time."

+ Hollywood Spec p9 Mr 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Irvin Cobb's debut as a full-fledged actor is not altogether auspicious due to poor story material. The plot has been used many, many times and no new twists are apparent in this telling. . . . The star lacks a good deal when it comes to acting and if there was any idea of building him up to do the late Will Rogers stuff, it may be forgotten."

+ Film Curb p33 Mr 14 '36

"Not a Zanuck special, but a pleasant evening's entertainment, due for consistent grosses wherever it plays. It is extremely well written, nicely directed and played for all that is in it. . . . Cobb is a character rather than a character actor and his personality is delightful. He seems to be enjoying himself hugely and his enjoyment is infectious. Momentarily, you expect him to look directly into the camera and say, 'Unaccustomed as I am to public acting. . . . Nonetheless, Cobb is a name to be reckoned with on theater marquees.'" + Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 7 '36

"Irvin S. Cobb, in his first starring picture, comes through most commendably and his picture as enjoyable entertainment is geared nicely to a popular formula. . . Cobb reveals a definite screen personality and it may be that part of the mantle of the late Will Rogers which Darryl F. Zanuck here strives to throw around him may fit. There is no way of forecasting such an eventuality until the public casts votes in this and succeeding pictures."

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN—Continued

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Mr 9 '36

"This production is a readaptation of 'The Working Man,' made several years ago with George Arliss in the leading role. The basic plot has been unchanged; only the atmospheric backgrounds have been altered, but it is still engrossing, human interest entertainment. With Irvin S. Cobb, whom it is quite evident, 20th Century-Fox is grooming to take the place of the late Will Rogers, and the supporting cast completely new, there is every reason to anticipate that this picture will receive the same popular reception as the other. As he appears in the picture Cobb is more himself in character than he is an actor."

+ Motion Pict Herald p56 Mr 14 '36

"20th-Fox has done well by Irvin Cobb on his first feature in which he stands on his own. Picture undoubtedly will establish the erstwhile writer as a screen personality. His value, however, will depend on the story material given him by the studio. . . Cobb gives a natural performance as the trustee. He's no actor but in his naturalness lies his value. He handles dialog well, is at all times convincing."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 7 '36

EXCLUSIVE STORY. F 7 '36 70min MGM

Players: Stuart Erwin, Franchot Tone, Madge Evans, J. Farrell MacDonald, Joseph Calleia

Director: George B. Seitz

A crusading reporter is enraged when he is told by his city editor to retract an exclusive story about a paving contract let to a racketeer. He obtains the assistance of a play boy attorney and together they wipe out the racketeers after many thrilling encounters.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Generally unwholesome atmosphere and considerable casual drinking make this film dubious for family consumption. Adults: good; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Mature." Nat Bd of R

"Franchot Tone, a really competent actor, does the best he can in the role of a legal advisor who takes nothing seriously but his drinking. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"[It has] a definitely constructive theme. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Racketeering, murder, kidnapping and fire at sea are the high lights of this mediocre story, on which an excellent cast is wasted. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Ja 25 '36

"[It] will provide entertainment for those who enjoy this type. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ja 11 '36

"It is too loosely wrought, dramatically, to make the town prick up its ears. There is much violence, brutality and horror, but one assumes that no great disaster will befall the nice young man and the pretty girl, and none does. Adolescents, 12-16: unsuited; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R F '36

"A melodrama that, because of its theme, is suitable only for adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 15 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Suspenseful melodrama; Y: Possibly a bit strong; C: No."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Wkly Guide Ja 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"Confused melodrama about municipal graft, the policy racket and profiteering in island revolutions; three good stories rolled into one that isn't so good."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 25 '36

"It is one of those things rushed through on the lot and not taken as seriously by its makers as they intend the public to take it. . . We are not asked to center our attention on one crime. We are given so many we become muddled, and half way through the picture begin to yawn and think how nice it would be if we were home, sitting in front of the fire with a book containing only one corpse and one murderer. There is another element in this picture whose power to irritate me is increasing in ratio to the frequency of its inclusion in pictures. . . Drinking can have a legitimate place in drama, as can every other vagary of man's inclinations, but its wholly gratuitous inclusion in pictures whose stories do not demand it, makes it merely an element more disgusting than entertaining. As the studios apparently see some virtue in constant imbibing not apparent to the rest of us, it might be a good idea for Joe Breen to cast his eye on it and say something about it to somebody when he finds it unnecessary."

+ Hollywood Spec p14 Ja 18 '36

"I think that 'Exclusive Story' is one of the most fraudulent melodramas of the season, and I won't be able to take that back, even if Mr. Mooney, escaping from his customary reticence, gives me conclusive proof that every episode in his story was based on cold fact. . . While expressing little admiration for the film, I still can cheer with great heartiness for the brilliant work of Joseph Calleia as the dope-ridden, homicidal and demoralized agent of the racketeers. Last week Mr. Calleia even stole a picture from Miss Harlow, and now, giving a chillingly real performance in a photoplay in dire need of reality, he proves again that he is one of the really fine actors of the cinema." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Ja 18 '36

"[Not for the] mélange of fact and fancy will Metro's photoplay be approved, but for its generosity in providing another major rôle for Joseph Calleia, who is rapidly becoming this department's favorite villain. Last week Mr. Calleia stole 'Riffraff' from the great Jean Harlow; here, with less serious competition, it is not so much a matter of theft as of open expressage. . . Mr. Calleia contributes a performance that must be remembered when the time comes to take inventory of the year's best." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p19 Ja 18 '36

"[It] seems to be always stimulating. As a gangster of a mean species, Joseph Calleia presents a most forbidding and striking characterization." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p64 Ja 25 '36

Time p46 Ja 27 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

"Smart dialogue lifts this out of the ordinary gangster class and it stacks up as good fare for the crime-story fans."

+ Box Office p29 Ja 25 '36

"A better than usual racketeer melodrama that is well played by a competent cast. Mooney knows his underworld stuff and has supplied some good material."

+ Film Curb p10 Ja 18 '36

"Martin Mooney's inside story of the big New York City rackets has been built up into very exciting screen fare."

+ Film Daily p7 Ja 18 '36

"A good action melodrama, dealing with the lottery racket. Although the story is a little far-fetched, it holds one's attention throughout owing to the melodramatic action, the result of the activities of gangsters; the fast pace does not let up for one moment. . . It is a little too strong for children or adolescents; very good for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 25 '36

"There is plenty of excitement in this tale . . . enough good acting to satisfy all comers and lots of tense action. . . Joseph Calleia does brilliant work as a small time racketeer who is forced by the 'big boys' into murderous extremes and each of his scenes remain in the memory as the highlights of the film."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"Two bits of work by Calleia, coming off a 'dope bat' and cringing in terror before the time bomb, won applause from the audience. Stuart Erwin made the part of the reporter natural and human in relation to his character and family ties as it is not ordinarily seen on the screen. They are the standout performances in which, in relation to the story, patrons are apt to find interest and entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Herald p44 Ja 18 '36

"This feature is rich in publicity angles, but in spite of some distinguished performances and some thrilling bits, it's grade B. Story starts off in a large way, but quickly drops into the personal angle and becomes just another G-man story, without the G-man. And even this personal story lacks punch at times in spite of good situations. . . The direction is good and the production handsomely done, but the story is too disconnected to carry the interest along properly."

+ Variety p14 Ja 22 '36

"'Exclusive Story' starts off in fine stride as melodrama with stress on interesting character and delectable comedy, slows from too much story handicap and comes under the wire as average B class programmer. . . Except for too much plottage, with its scattering action, picture might have held to its initial quality and have come through as unqualified winner in its field."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 6 '36

F

F-MAN. Mr 13 '36 68min Paramount

Players: Jack Haley. Grace Bradley. William Frawley

Director: Edward F. Cline

"Jack Haley plays a bucolic soda jerker who longs to be a G-Man and after a correspondence course sets off for Los Angeles, never doubting that a letter from his local sheriff will open the door of Dickdom. Headquarters is surprisingly slow to regard him as anything but a headache from the backwoods, and his proud spirit is considerably bruised at having to scoop up ice cream, instead of criminals, in the big city, especially when his country sweetheart comes to witness his failure." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Light entertainment. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"[It is] an action-filled farce." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Family, but mature for children." DAR

"There is a good idea back of this picture, which satirizes our too numerous G-men pictures, but succeeds in being only mildly amusing; the trouble seems to be that the story lacks the necessary substance for a full-length picture." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women

"A good average 'filler' suitable for family audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Light and amusing. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Mr 7 '36

"Adults and young people. Unconvincing picture. Harmless and mildly amusing."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 24 '36

"Fair for the family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women F 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A moderately-entertaining film dealing with G-Men and their activities from a comedy angle. Family."

+ Box Office p18 Mr 14 '36

"It is a lightly amusing picture that will please in most situations."

+ Film Curb p12 F 22 '36

"Just a program comedy, with an appeal mostly to young people. It has a few good gags that provoke laughs, but for the most part it is silly and may prove tiresome to adults. Suitable for all. Family."

+ Harrison's Reports Mr 21 '36

"Here is a comedy . . . which will make patrons of double bills feel that they have full value for the money in spite of no draw names. . . Plenty of action and a generous measure of gag situations give the film its chief value though Haley's roundeyed comedy is good for the part."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 F 17 '36

"Obviously made for nothing more than passing program attention, this sets no new standards, but is generally entertaining. . . Once the folks are in, they will enjoy it, but getting them in will be another question."
N Y Exhibitor p55 Mr 10 '36

"Paramount's 'F-man' starts with promise of being topnotch comedy, but regardless of heroics of Jack Haley and William Frawley, it runs into too many kinks to keep it above excellent dualer in the lesser spots. Families in neighborhood houses will howl with glee at Haley's squirt-gun he-man antics. Yarn drags in sections and some of the dialog is stilted."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 15 '36

FALSE PRETENSES. O 22 '35 66min Chesterfield

Players: Irene Ware. Sidney Blackmer. Russell Hopton

Director: Charles Lamont

A waitress who yearns for luxury arranges to borrow money to finance a campaign whereby she hopes to find a wealthy husband, crash the gates of society and then repay the loan.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Dull; Y: No; C: No."

Christian Century p1390 O 30 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

FALSE PRETENSES—Continued

"A: Moderately amusing; Y and C: Unsuitable."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Moves along at a good pace and would be termed satisfactory entertainment in most situations."

+ — Film Curb p11 N 1 '35

"Fair production offering with good cast and moderately satisfying entertainment values."

+ — Film Daily p10 O 25 '35

"It has an illogical plot and, what's more, insincere acting."

— Motion Pict Daily p13 N 8 '35

"The picture leaves much to be desired in its story content and especially its dialogue."

— Motion Pict Herald p74 N 23 '35

"Comedy drama. Family."

N Y Exhibitor p29 N 10 '35

"'False Pretenses' is light, breezy comedy drama unusually lavish and well produced for independent product, comparing favorably with many a more pretentious offering of similar nature. It offers an hour's genuine amusement and will click as a leader in its class. Humor is genuine, dialogue is smart, sentiment is delightfully preserved."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 20 '35

FANG AND CLAW. D 20 '35 68min Van Beuren-RKO

Players: Frank Buck. Natives

Director: Frank Buck

Frank Buck in his third film based on wild animal expeditions into the jungles of Malay this time captures several fine specimens of pythons, a rare bird of paradise, a crocodile which he calls "Public Enemy No. 1 of the Jungle," an armour-covered rhino and countless monkeys of all species and qualities.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"It is thrilling to watch the endless battle of jungle beasts against man and against each other. Dramatic, tense and very worthwhile diversion. Very good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Lacks the novelty of his earlier films and gets repetitious, but this kind of thing always has interest if it is at all well done. Family. Junior." Nat Bd of R

+ — Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"Adults: interesting; 14-18: good; 8-14: good; family & junior matinee." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Good. Family." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Dramatic, tense and very worthwhile diversion. Suitable for church halls, Catholic schools, or family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Family. Junior." Nat Bd of R

"The musical accompaniment is most fitting and this travel picture should prove of great interest to children and the students of jungle lore. Family and junior matinee." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"The picture follows the usual formula with one exception—there are none of the usual bitter combats between wild animals. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Beautifully photographed, instructive and thrilling for any audience." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A real nature picture, true to life and superlative in value. Good for class rooms and church halls. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Frank Buck's narrative is instructive and well expressed. Adolescents: excellent; children: good." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 18 '36

"Exceptionally interesting for the family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ja 6 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Thrilling camera adventure with Frank Buck."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[This film] stirs up the jungle animals to give case-hardened thrill-seekers vicarious shocks and shivers."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

"We concluded some time back that from the viewpoint of similarity, a Frank Buck is a Frank Buck and that's that. To that observation Mr. Buck's 'Fang and Claw' at least partially gives the lie, deviating, as it does to some extent, from the standard Frank Buck wild animal motion picture technique. Gone are the revolting flesh-tearing, blood-spilling fights among beasts. Gone, too, are the all too theatrical jungle 'thrills' which predominated before. In the new form, Mr. Buck stresses the informative side rather than the thrill aspect of the gun-and-camera expedition, disclosing the ingenious tricks of the trade, the specific manner and method of capture." J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p301 Ja 10 '36

"The film suffers from a paucity of excitement and a quality of over-staging. Things happen too patly, the invisible cameraman grinding calmly away, Mr. Buck handsomely in command of the situation, and the animals in the main rather dull-witted. The monkeys, of course, are standard comedy relief in these jungle odysseys, and they give their customary able performance. Mr. Buck's native assistants are less effective. A few years ago, when motion-picture expeditions were comparative novelties in the jungle, the natives managed to seem shy and child-like in their jousts with the camera. But familiarity is breeding a conscious will to act and the ham in them is coming out. . . [Buck's] adventure with the python which has coiled itself about one of the native boys is less persuasive, however, and you find yourself wondering how many 'takes' he required to get the scene right. . . 'Fang and Claw' is ably photographed and Mr. Buck is reasonably modest in his off-screen commentary, but I am afraid the enterprise doesn't offer much constructive evidence to support the theory that nature in the raw is seldom mild." Andre Sennwald

+ — N Y Times p10 D 28 '35

"Although [it] is not an uninteresting promise-made, it is not an exceptional one, since most of the adventures we experience as we saunter along are old stuff. . . Even so, the film is not without interest, although Mr. Buck makes big game hunting seem as tame and simple as eating pumpkin pie." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram D 28 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The pythons and tigers, the 'camp pets,' as he calls them, of Frank Buck's 'Fang and Claw' [are not exciting.]" John Mosher
— New Yorker p53 Ja 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] will prove excellent entertainment for masculine audiences as well as being a 'natural' for the [children.]"

+ Box Office p59 Ja 11 '36

"This latest in the series of Frank Buck's jungle pictures is up to standard and contains the usual amount of thrill stuff. . . A scene that could be eliminated is that showing Buck amputating the ear of a rhino that has been injured by a tiger. It's just a bit too realistic for general run of theatre goers. Where Buck's other pictures have registered this one should get by nicely."

+ — Film Curb p12 Ja 4 '36

"Somehow when this one finishes you get the impression that it is a smoothly presented account of Frank Buck's expedition into the wilds of the jungle to replenish some of our American zoos with live specimens, and not the feeling that you have witnessed a real adventure in the jungle with unexpected and unplanned thrills. In a word, the expedition was too well organized commercially, and the basic appeal of thrills for the screen seems to have been made secondary. At that, it is very interesting as an inside story of how wild animals are captured."

+ — Film Daily p7 D 21 '35

"Although it is interesting it is not so entertaining as his other two pictures. For one thing, the novelty of watching him trap the animals has worn off considerably. Then, some of the situations may sicken those who have weak stomachs."

— + Harrison's Reports D 28 '35

"The third Frank Buck production differs from its predecessors in the absence of so-called brutal scenes. In 'Bring 'Em Back Alive' and 'Wild Cargo' sequences of animal fights highlighted the picture. In the present version of Mr. Buck's expedition in the Malayan jungle such scenes are eliminated. . . The photography is excellent and on a par with that in the other two pictures."

Motion Pict Herald p49 Ja 4 '36

"Photographed on Frank Buck's expeditions in Malaysia, this is enormously interesting, but too long. Estimate: excellent animal stuff."

+ N Y Exhibitor p33 Ja 10 '36

"It is far less exciting than the two which preceded it, 'Bring 'Em Back Alive' and 'Wild Cargo.' It also is more or less routine and includes too much that is similar to material in the two previous Buck expedition features. . . There is no real excitement or drama in 'Fang and Claw,' although efforts are rather obviously made to try to inject both into the footage that was exposed. . . Mostly tiresome about 'Fang and Claw' is the routine of building camps, preparing traps and tying up animals that have been captured. Buck's narrative is satisfactory and well delivered, while in the recording a good job has been done."

— + Variety p58 Ja 1 '36

FARMER IN THE DELL. Mr 27 '36 68min
RKO

Players: Fred Stone, Jean Parker, Esther Dale, Moroni Olsen

Director: Ben Holmes

Based on the novel of the same title by Phil Stong. "Pa Boyer, a middle-aged Iowa farmer, is persuaded by his wife to sell his farm and move to Hollywood, on the pretense that he has worked hard all his life and needs a rest. Actually what Ma wants to do is to get daughter Adie into the movies." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Although not notable for any particular dramatic value, the picture will please those who enjoy a simple, wholesome story. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide F 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The film version has a nodding acquaintance with Mr. Stong's novel, but hurries on from there to embrace such old friends as 'Merton of the Movies,' 'The Nut Farm' and 'Once in a Lifetime.' Like most reunions, it is quite a bore to the innocent bystander. . . Granting that it has a few amusing scenes, our thumb still points down." F. S. Nugent

— + N Y Times p11 Mr 7 '36

"For about one-half of its unreeling, 'The Farmer in the Dell' is an animated satire cruelly razzing the insanities of Hollywood as well as some of those who want to crash its loony portals. . . Unfortunately, the other sections of 'The Farmer in the Dell' are not as brisk or as satirical as those reported in the foregoing. After a grand beginning the film dwindles into a conventional, ambling, uninteresting story." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p9 Mr 7 '36

"The film seemed so little comic and bright that, frankly, I got up in the middle of it and climbed out. I am pretty well persuaded that I didn't miss any brilliant moments. Somehow I saw enough to know that Fred Stone never should have played an Iowa farmer, and that no big scenes would bring out the hayseed in him." John Mosher

— — New Yorker p76 Mr 14 '36

"This not too entertaining film [goes completely Hollywood.]"

— + News-Wk p40 Mr 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is a homespun yarn just made to order for the family trade and seems certain to please. It is much the type of film that the late Will Rogers made famous and producers will make a big mistake if they don't build up Stone with stories such as this."

+ Film Curb p8 Mr 14 '36

"Fred Stone is perfectly adapted to the role of the Iowa farmer transplanted to Hollywood. In fact it is safe to say that most of the appeal of this production centers around Stone, and he makes the most of a part that is very reminiscent of the roles that the late Will Rogers played in pictures. Stone has much of the rough-diamond qualities and naturalness of Rogers, and properly equipped with other such vehicles he could easily be built up to a formidable box-office name. . . [It is] a very pleasing and refreshing story that will hold the entire family."

+ Film Daily p4 Mr 7 '36

"Pleasant program family fare. It is not particularly exciting entertainment, for it moves at a somewhat slow pace, and the story centers mainly around one character. But it will please those who enjoy homespun comedies. Suitable for all. Family."

+ — Harrison's Reports Mr 21 '36

"Fred [Stone] has most of the qualities fans loved so well in Will [Rogers], and all he needs is a bit more careful handling by script writers. We want him a little less benign and downtrodden and a mite more shrewd in his observations and witticisms. . . Stong's novel has been turned into a mildly amusing satire of Hollywood life which begins to peter out lackadaisically after the first half."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 Mr 12 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

FARMER IN THE DELL—Continued

"A wholly human, and often highly amusing story. . . This picture should be found engaging entertainment almost wherever played."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 F 26 '36

"This is an all-audience picture, alive with appeal to general patronage, with Fred Stone, Jean Parker and the fact that the story from which the picture was adapted ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post as its chief selling angles. Showmen have ample material with which to work, for the material presented is of the homespun, down to earth type that has been proved of entertainment value. . . Showmen might do well to see this before playing it and thus pick out those points best suited for their situations."

+ Motion Pict Herald p60 Mr 14 '36

"Originally intended for the late Will Rogers, according to report, the mistake has been made of trying to shape Fred Stone's personality to the Rogers manner. The result is neither a good performance by Stone nor a good impersonation of Rogers. It might have been better to have let Stone play himself. . . [It] probably will be better suited to the smaller spots, where they react more decisively to homespun sentiment."

— + Variety p15 Mr 11 '36

FAST BULLETS. (Release date not determined) 57min Reliable

Players: Rex Lease, Margaret Nearing, Al Bridge, Tom Tyler

Director: H. Samuels

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"While this is familiar stuff it has been so produced as to make an exciting Western. Undoubtedly will satisfy those who like this sort of film."

Film Curb p8 F 29 '36

"This one is pretty much along the beaten path of Western entertainment, rehashed and revised so that it should prove generally satisfying to the action picture clientele."

+ — Film Daily p10 F 24 '36

"The usual excitement prevails and it should be a good adjunct to a Saturday children's program."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 F 24 '36

"Estimate: standard Tyler."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p59 Mr 10 '36

"These two western lads, Tyler and Lease, put plenty of realism into their work whether doing a rescue, a slam-bang saloon fight or a wild canter over the plains. Climax fistie battle is a teeth-rattling affair. . . Should be okay for Western houses and as secondary dueler."

+ Variety p31 Mr 4 '36

FEATHER IN HER HAT. O 17 '35 70min Columbia

Players: Pauline Lord, Louis Hayward, Basil Rathbone, Billie Burke

Director: Alfred Santell

From the novel of same title by I. A. R. Wylie. An English shopkeeper brings into her home a gentlemanly drunkard whom she commissions to impart to her growing son the secrets of gentlemanly conduct. When her son is of age, she gives him her life's savings, tells him that she is not his mother and sends him away to join "quality folk." The son becomes a successful playwright; the mother dies on the opening night of her son's play.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Excellent; Y: Mature but good; C: Little interest."

Christian Century p1606 D 11 '35

"Good. Adults and young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Interesting; C: Mature."
Par M p54 Mr '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

"The most interesting performance is offered by Basil Rathbone. His portrait of the juvenile's brandy-wrecked tutor is splendidly managed."

N Y Herald Tribune p15 O 25 '35

"More of a book than a play. Its quaintness is that of the printed page; its situations are unreal but not fantastic. The characters have all a faintly literary quality. The tear-jerking motif is still effective. . . It is a highly emotional story. Alfred Santell, in the directing of it, never quite manages to wring the hearts of his audience. His actors hurry through their lines and business. They seem all obviously rehearsed, especially in the lighter moments. Nor does Mr. Hazard's bookish dialogue, with an occasional long and elaborate speech, add to the naturalness. . . It is undoubtedly a technically excellent performance, but one that quite fails to stir."

— + N Y Sun p34 O 25 '35

"Too plotty to be properly effective."
N Y Times px5 O 27 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p53 N 16 '35

Film Curb p11 N 1 '35

"Good human interest drama in mother-son story with nice accompanying romance."

+ Film Daily p10 O 25 '35

Motion Pict Daily p7 O 25 '35

"Teary, generally moving at a slow pace, the picture has been sympathetically handled throughout. Family drama."

— + N Y Exhibitor p29 N 10 '35

FIGHTING COWARD. D 15 '35 55min Victory

Players: Ray Walker, Joan Woodbury, William Farnum

Director: Dan Milner

Based on a short story, The Last Assignment, by Peter B. Kyne. A promising young detective is sent to capture a killer and discovers that the man is his father. Family love proving stronger than his sense of duty, he allows his father to escape and finds himself branded a coward. After a battle with a criminal gang in which his father helps him, the young detective is restored to the good graces of the police department.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

"A good way to describe this musical comedy with a Venetian background, temperamental squabbles, weary comedy, static direction and poor recording is to say it sums up as frail entertainment."

— Box Office p59 Ja 11 '36

"Foreign made musical will have a hard row to hoe in this country. About its only appeal will be to lovers of fine singing as Foresta puts over his numbers in grand style. However, it is difficult to see where American fans will find much entertainment in this one. It will be hard to get them in with no names and we doubt if they'll be very well pleased if they do go in."

— Film Curb p15 Ja 4 '36

"Franco Foresta, tenor, is outstanding in this importation, using his voice to good advantage in introducing arias from various operas. The theme song, 'For Love of You', by Franz Vienna, is a pleasing tune and well delivered by Foresta."

+ Film Daily p4 D 19 '35

"The film . . . is occasionally amusing. . . . Selections are heard from 'Othello,' by Verdi; 'The Pearl Fishers,' by Bizet; Leoncavallo's 'Pagliacci' and Offenbach's 'Barcarolle.'"

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 D 18 '35

"Foreign made musical that should appeal best to music lovers, this is short on name appeal. Picture, itself, has been well made from production standards, is a natural for houses which cater to audiences which like good music, regardless of the picture's origin."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 Ja 10 '36

FORBIDDEN HEAVEN. S 26 '35 76min Republic

Players: Charles Farrell. Charlotte Henry

Director: Reginald Bond

From novel of same title by Christina Jope-Slade. "The adventures of four homeless people who find temporary shelter in Hyde Park, and for a short time live in a fairy world of their own making." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p169 N '35

"A, Y and C: Interesting."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

"Fair entertainment."

+ — Film Curb p17 O 1 '35

FORCED LANDING. N 25 '35 63min Republic

Players: Esther Ralston. Onslow Stevens.

Sidney Blackmer. Toby Wing

Director: Melville Brown

"[A] transcontinental aeroplane carrying 13 passengers is forced to land on an isolated emergency field, which provides the setting for a different kind of murder mystery." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[This] is not exceptional in any way. Fair."

+ — Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Well managed for interest, excitement and keeping the identity of the murderer hidden. Family." Nat Bd of R

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Murder mystery; C: Doubtful."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Onslow Stevens and Esther Ralston help the trite story to get by."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 D 21 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"The authors have put a good deal of what it takes to keep audiences in a suspenseful frame of mind into this ultra-modern variation of a typically over-imaginative drama."

+ — Box Office p17 D 14 '35

"Plenty of action. Mystery is logically worked out and suspense well maintained. It's exciting, has been well directed and is played by a swell cast."

+ Film Curb p12 D 1 '35

"This long arm of coincidence in having them all on the same plane is stretched to the breaking point, but outside of that the narrative has many original twists and surprises."

+ — Film Daily p7 N 26 '35

"This is a continually interesting mystery drama, having its moments of suspense, original though somewhat improbable major situations and rapid-fire developments. With a transcontinental air trip and a forced landing en route for its novel background, the picture makes good use of its ingredients for heightening interest."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p10 N 26 '35

"Family mystery drama."

N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

"Mystery thriller using be-whiskered formula of taking all principals in the crime and putting them in one room but given a new setting—aboard a transatlantic transport plane. . . . However [it] still remains quite familiar material, not heightened much here by any originality or logic. Aside from familiar territory covered, chief weakness of this [mystery] is the lines and the way some are handled. Onslow Stevens, as the Justice Dept. operative, neither looks like one nor acts like one. Sidney Blackmer more resembles a G-man but here he is the tough gangster."

— Variety p58 Ja 1 '36

FOUR MASKED MEN. N 9 '35 62min Olympic

Players: John Stuart. Judy Kelly. Miles Mander

Director: George Pearson

Made in England. "Story deals with a criminal quartette, disguised by masks, who pop up at various international affairs and pull off some heavy robberies. Due to the killing of his brother in one of the holdups, John Stuart goes on the trail of the gang, identifies a member and forces him to swap places, then attends a meeting of the quartette and uncovers the ringleader, who chooses suicide when his game is up." (Film Daily)

Trade Paper Reviews

"Produced in England in the 1934 season but just shown in New York, this is a moderately satisfying mystery melodrama with good handling of roles from an acting standpoint, generally effective direction and enough clear-cut action and suspense."

+ — Film Daily p7 N 9 '35

"With a title that might intrigue, not too much English accent, it might go in some neighborhoods or slip by on double bills."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p55 D 10 '35

FRASQUITA. Ja 17 '36 80min DuWorld

Players: Jarmila Novotna. Hans Heinz Bollman. Heinz Ruehmann

Director: Carl Lamac

Based on the operetta of the same title by Franz Lehar. The film is in German with English sub-titles. "Two friends are en route to the home of Harold's prospective bride. They encounter a band of gypsies and Harold falls in love with Frasquita. His friend falls in love with Harold's fiancée. From that point on amusing complications develop as the friend attempts, with the fiancée's help to further the romance of Frasquita and Harold, leaving the way clear for his own courtship. Eventually, of course, after a quarrel or two with Frasquita, Harold succeeds in winning her, and his friend's romance is also completed." (Motion Pict Daily)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The piece has been strung together logically, and while it offers the lightest kind of entertainment, is diverting, particularly for Herr Lehar's music." Marguerite Tazelaar
+ — N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ja 20 '36

"In spite of a Franz Lehar score, and in spite of two excellent voices to sing it, 'Frasquita' is rather a forlorn little film. Its technic and photography are markedly old-fashioned; its acting is vehement rather than subtle. . . Jarmila Novotna, whose dark beauty deserved better photography than it got, plays the gypsy of the title role. Her voice is fresh and pleasing. She does not nor does any one in the cast, seem much concerned with acting. 'Frasquita,' in spite of Miss Novotna and the lilting Lehar songs, does not rate highly as entertainment. It must have been made several years ago." Eileen Creelman
— + N Y Sun p17 Ja 20 '36

"Franz Lehar's operetta, 'Frasquita,' is . . . for the entertainment of patrons appreciative of some attractive music, lovely views apparently taken along the shores of the upper Adriatic and lots of funny situations." H. T. S.
+ N Y Times p19 Ja 18 '36

"'Frasquita,' the Viennese operetta should satisfy all those who are in search of lilting music, pleasingly sung by a creditable cast of principals. Like all operettas, this one by Franz Lehar has a book that is pretty standardized and feeble, but it is as good as the average operatic plot, and, after all, who cares much if the music is light and gay and tuneful?" William Boehnel
+ N Y World-Telegram p19 Ja 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good music, comedy and some attractive Adriatic views combine to make a pleasing musical romance based on the popular Franz Lehar operetta. In adaptation, the story has been brought somewhat up to date."
+ Film Daily p9 Ja 20 '36

"Superimposed dialogue translations, which might have been more plentiful, assist in an understanding of the story by those unfamiliar with the language. . . Throughout the film the music is highly attractive."
+ Motion Pict Daily p9 Ja 21 '36

"The Viennese producers who made this film went about it properly. Misfortune is that, after they figured out how to make it they cast it almost uniformly with actors who either don't know how to act or don't fit their roles. No pace and many script deficiencies. . . What makes it charming and entertaining is the deft touch with which it is handled, the clever comedy which is injected and the really excellent music. Not that those things are evident in the film. The music is there; the comedy and deft touch are hinted at and sketched for Hollywood (when it gets around to it) to work out and make really delectable. . . The photography is only fair and the sound a bit under that."

+ — Variety p15 Ja 22 '36

FRAUEN UM DEN SONNENKOENIG. See Private life of Louis XIVFRECKLES. O 4 '35 69min RKO

Players: Tom Brown. Virginia Weidler. Carol Stone

Directors: Edward Killy. William Hamilton

"This is a modernized version of Gene Stratton Porter's famous story of 'Freckles,' the orphan boy who aided by his little friend, Laurie-Lou, child of the forest, captures a gang of bank robbers who are hiding in the solitude of the giant redwoods." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Elementary; Y: Fairly good; C: No." Christian Century p1438 N 6 '35

"The direction is very fine, the cast able, with highest honors going to quaint Virginia Weidler. The picture is enhanced by a charming romance, beautiful forest scenes and interesting shots of small animal life."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 9 '35

Mo Film Bul p169 N '35

"Family. Junior matinee."
Nat Bd of R M S '35

"This oft-read tale of childhood makes a very successful and entertaining picture. Family and Junior matinee."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A: Fair; Y and C: Wholesome."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 21 '35

N Y Times p12 O 26 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

"Considerably above the average in entertainment values."
+ Film Curb p18 O 1 '35

"Family melodrama."
N Y Exhibitor p37 O 10 '35

FRESHMAN LOVE. Ja 18 '36 67min Warner

Players: Patricia Ellis. Frank McHugh. Warren Hall. Joseph Cawthorn

Director: William McGann

Based on a play, College Widow, by George Ade. "Story is of the recruiting of a crack boat racing crew by a college suffering from athletic anemia." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Ridiculous; Y: Useless; C: No." Christian Century p446 Mr 18 '36

"Good fun for the family. Adults: entertaining; 14-18: good; 8-14: amusing. Family and Junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature. Mediocre." DAR

"Although the ethics of this musical comedy are somewhat doubtful, nevertheless it will serve as light entertainment. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"A good cast; weak story. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A light comedy filler with no especial merit and no objectionable features. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"It is a satire on the college spirit of 'anything to win' and the inconstancy of freshman love. Family, if parents will explain it is a farce." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Musical films with campus settings seem to be all alike and seldom better than mediocre. Though this one had an idea back of it that might have made excellent satire it is no better than the average. Adolescents, 12-16; passable; children, 8-12; passable." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

— + Fox W Coast Bul Ja 18 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Light comedy; Y and C: Probably entertaining."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Freshman Love' may be recommended, with some reservations, as a minor but mirthful excursion. . . Though there are moments when the action drags, they are more than offset by Frank McHugh's always amusing portrayal of Coach Hammond." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p18 Ja 25 '36

"Although no more serious harm than the trifling loss of some sixty-odd minutes has been done by the production of 'Freshman Love' it does seem that something constructive should be done about college films. . . 'Freshman Love' is dull and awkward. There seems to be nothing else to say about the film except that because of the nursery antics in which they are asked to participate, Frank McHugh, Patricia Ellis, Warren Hull and the others in the cast should not be judged too harshly." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p12 Ja 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 Ja 11 '36

"College atmosphere excellent and entire production first class. This should go along and do nicely for the exhibitors in practically any locality."

+ Film Curb p14 Ja 4 '36

Film Daily p7 Ja 24 '36

"Moderately entertaining program fare. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ — Harrison's Reports F 1 '36

"Played against what is virtually a musical background, this mild little comedy of college rowing and romance is apt to prove fair, light entertainment for the younger generation, with a number of laughs, and the comedy of Frank McHugh for its drawing value."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 25 '36

"The title providing the descriptive key, this production is a unique comedy of college life and love, yet all that will be included in the picture is not included in title significance. Substantiating production values are novel. The theme idea, supporting straight comedy and romantic story content, has a timely but different topical appeal. It deals with the matter of collegiate athletic proselytizing. Rather than concentrating on the now current subject of football, the subject treats of crew commercialism. In doing so it does not approach the matter from a satirical or condemning viewpoint, but makes this feature a part of its romantic comedy. . . The topical, familiar nature of the story, which is of unusual interest to adolescent and younger contingents of prospective audiences, is substantiated by cast selections."

+ Motion Pict Herald p50 N 16 '35

"Packed with Warner comedy names, not laying too much stress on the intelligence, 'Freshman Love' will cause no great sensation, will prove pleasing entertainment for family type audiences."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 Ja 10 '36

"'Freshman Love' does a weak song and dance around the campus nonsense, with the interest of the lagging sort, the story too easy to anticipate, the laugh moments thin and the casting just good enough to pass muster. It's filler-inner fair."

+ — Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

"George Ade supplied the original impetus for this snappy collation of campus nonsense with his 'College Widow.' The widow wouldn't be recognized in Warners agreeable face-lifting operation, a pleasant, entertaining refreshment of the older pattern, but it has the same sure-fire elements for popular amusement."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 21 '35

FRISCO KID. N 30 '35 77min Warner

Players: James Cagney, Margaret Lindsay, Ricardo Cortez, Lili Damita

Director: Lloyd Bacon

"Story of lawless Barbary Coast, San Francisco's water front, in the gold rush days, and of its complete destruction by the Vigilantes. Among the many seeking gold, came a sailor youth of unusual courage, who tried for success, by lawlessness, the only code he knew, but underneath this veneer lay a spark of fineness that eventually saved him." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Good of kind; Y: Unwholesome; C: By no means."

Christian Century p1638 D 18 '35

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"A grippingly interesting picture, ably cast and convincingly directed, with wise use made of settings, staging and lighting. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 12 '35

"Adults."

+ Jt Estimates O 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p194 D '35

"Good. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"The story is well told, the cast well-chosen and the direction excellent, while the stage settings are lavish and the suspense is maintained throughout. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A: Good melodrama; Y: Debatable; C: No." Par M p54 Mr '36

"This is an absorbing story excellently directed and cast with many thrilling episodes and sequences of human interest. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

Wkly Guide N 9 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The general pictorial atmosphere in the film is good, with its roistering denizens of the dives, its roaring mobs bent on vengeance when the vigilantes start cleaning up and the trial and execution of the two leaders of the underworld." E. F. M.

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

FRISCO KID—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 30 '35

"A roaring, brutal melodrama for thrill seekers."

— + Christian Science Monitor p13 N 13 '35

"It goes along with fair suspense, though it is a close carbon of Barbary Coast, with its swinging doors and swinging fists. Margaret Lindsay is just too, too Junior League, and I'm getting tired of the line 'Someday San Francisco is going to be a great city.'" Don Herold

— + Life p35 Ja '36

"The lack of fine-spun humor is no real bludgeon to the film's pretensions. . . It has a quality for excitement, for high-stepping action geared to a swiftly-paced story."

+ — Lit Digest p24 D 7 '35

"The principal merit of 'Frisco Kid' has to do with its success as a costume or period piece. Like 'Barbary Coast' it sets out to reconstruct a moment of the American past, and though it is less brilliant than the other film, at several points in its direction it can be said to achieve its end. The pictures cry to be compared because they furnish so many examples of what the New Yorker calls a 'funny coincidence.' . . So it is possible for once to determine which of two directors has done the better job. In this case, I think, the happier artist is Howard Hawks, who accomplishes his results with an economy and a coherence nowhere conspicuous in the work of Lloyd Bacon, whose 'Frisco Kid' is by so much inferior to its rival." Mark Van Doren

+ — Nation p724 D 18 '35

Reviewed by Robert Stebbins
New Theatre p22 Ja '36

Reviewed by Richard Watts, Jr.
N Y Herald Tribune p12 N 25 '35

"Most of 'Frisco Kid' is grim, tough, funny and exciting." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p26 N 25 '35

"The film is excellently acted all along the way. After the spiritless temper of the recent photoplays, it is good to have Mr. Cagney back with us again." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p22 N 25 '35

"A lively and entertaining tale. . . It never loses its fascination, thanks to its rapid-fire action, its picturesque backgrounds and the expert playing of a really capable cast." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p17 N 25 '35

"Usual Barbary Coast caperings." John Mosher

— New Yorker p90 N 30 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c Ja 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[The] story moves at [an] exciting and thrilling pace with mob scenes expertly handled to retain dramatic tempo."

+ Box Office p51 N 16 '35

"A rattling good, fast-moving tale of Frisco's old Barbary Coast. . . It abounds with action and is set amid picturesque old California background."

+ Film Curb p18 N 1 '35

"A very colorful recital of the hectic and turbulent days of the Barbary Coast, produced with fidelity to the traditions of the times. . . The plot is too disjointed to register a strong emotional punch, and must travel on its appeal as a colorful spectacle with good mob scenes and plenty of realism in its fight scenes."

+ — Film Daily p10 O 30 '35

N Y Exhibitor p31 N 10 '35

"Good entertainment. . . Sets are excellent, and production as a whole of high grade. Fire scenes are particularly good. In all technical departments 'Frisco Kid' is good picture making, but comparison is unavoidable and that's the only thing that keeps it from rating as a standout."

+ Variety p14 N 27 '35

FRISCO WATERFRONT. D 9 '35 60min Republic

Players: Ben Lyon. Helen Twelvetrees. Rod La Rocque

Director: Arthur Lubin

While lying on an operating table after an automobile accident, a candidate for governor re-lives his life. He sees himself as a young man demoralized by his war experiences, floundering from job to job as a dock worker. Then comes the blow of his wife's desertion and marriage to a hated rival. The story of how he fights his way to the top is shown against the authentic background of the San Francisco waterfront and how he re-wins his wife concludes the film.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Unusual drama; Y: Interesting; C: No appeal."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Forceful direction by Arthur Lubin and capable performances by Ben Lyon, Helen Twelvetrees and Rod LaRocque make this film good average entertainment for general audiences."

+ — Box Office p23 D 21 '35

"[The] story has been well worked out, is exceedingly well played by [the] cast and has been most capably directed. [It] is good entertainment all the way."

+ Film Curb p21 D 15 '35

"This rates as a nice fairy tale for the patronage that is satisfied with the entertainment values regardless of the probabilities."

+ — Film Daily p8 D 3 '35

"A fair program triangle drama. It should appeal mainly to women. . . Although there is nothing immoral in the story it is hardly entertainment for children. Adult fare."

+ — Harrison's Reports D 21 '35

Motion Pict Daily p8 N 29 '35

Motion Pict Herald p66 D 7 '35

"Generally incredible, but providing entertainment, holding interest, this is fairly well done. Family drama."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p40 D 25 '35

Variety p25 D 25 '35

FRONTIER. D 28 '35 83min Amkino

Players: S. Shagaida. S. Stoliarov. S. Shkurat

Director: Alexander Dovjenko

This film was made in Russia and has English subtitles. "The tale of Red Army frontier guards who suppress a counter-revolutionary movement of White guardists led by a Japanese. The film draws a sharp contrast between the conflicting forces, demonstrating on the one hand the virility and boisterous assurance of the loyal Bolsheviks and on the other the decadent, religion-worshiping fanaticism of their enemies. It abandons all semblance of formal dramatic structure in the climax, when it becomes a glorified newsreel account of the Red Army's ability to concentrate military units on the Eastern frontier on short notice." (N Y Times)

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Frontier' is not only powerful and beautiful in itself but an indication that propaganda in the Russian studios moves through its phases. The film, released at Moscow in celebration of the eighteenth anniversary of the October Revolution, has an emphasis which I assume it would not have had ten years ago. . . [It] plainly takes its place among the great Russian films." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p84 Ja 15 '36

"'Frontier' is mature and firm and is a tribute to the director's increasingly creative powers. . . It is difficult to be coldly critical of a film that is unlike any other film and unlike any other form of art. . . Somehow the sustained photographic beauty of Dovjenco's earlier films is lacking. Except in one or two places Tisse's camera work is too realistic, too prosaic for the mood of the film. Camera work to the contrary, 'Frontier' emerges as something more than an unusual film; it is a profound intellectual document that demands your attention." Peter Ellis

+ New Theatre p24 Ja '36

"While 'Frontier' is as sweeping in its epic plan as was 'The Covered Wagon,' its execution somehow has gone wrong and cannot be compared with the simple majesty of James Cruze's pioneers in their valiant struggle to conquer the West. . . Yet in spots it shows as magnificent a canvas as this reviewer has ever seen—the opening scenes, for example, with the camera catching a lone plane flying endlessly through the clouds; glimpses of the infinite Pacific and the mountains with their deep forests seeming to possess the globe—so dense and vast and uninhabited are they. . . Had the story clarity, at least to one not understanding Russian, and a continuity which would have told the story in connected episodes, it would have held the interest more closely. At it is, it leaves one confused, bewildered and finally bored by its lack of an intelligent, running story." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p9 D 28 '35

"The U.S.S.R. issues a defiant warning to her enemies on the Far Eastern borders in 'Frontier.' . . Frequently able to merge didacticism and drama so expertly as to make for vigorous and powerful motion pictures, the State-controlled Soviet cinema fails rather badly this time. Although some of its individual episodes are fine, the work as a whole is confused in its story-telling and hysterical in its assault upon Japanese imperialism." Andre Senwald

— N Y Times p10 D 28 '35

"'Frontier' is a decidedly inferior entertainment when considered as a whole, although it contains some striking individual performances and scenes. . . [It is so] confused and jumbled that at times it makes little or no sense. . . There is one really powerful and dramatic scene when Stepan is forced to shoot Vasil, his friend from boyhood, for treason, and some of the acting especially by S. Shagaïda as Stepan, is extremely good. But for the most part, 'Frontier' has very little in it to recommend or to keep it out of the dullard class, either as entertainment or propaganda." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram D 28 '35

"I found the characters, I must say, without any exception quite unbalanced and unaccountable. I was not entertained by their antics, and only mildly by the big airplane display toward the finale." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p76 Ja 11 '36

"The primary virtues of the Russian films are by no means absent in 'Frontier.' Perhaps the chief of these is the richness and variety of human types and characters. Apparently Russians do not know what it means to be camera-shy; for they act before the camera with the greatest brio and zest, with a kind of abandon and joy which is like nothing in the cinema of Hollywood mart. . . The freshness and strength of [this film] points the way for the moving picture of the future." Elizabeth McCausland

+ Springfield Republican p5c Ja 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"By and large just another example of the Russian idea of an evening's entertainment. . . It is [a] somewhat crude drama but ending in ten or twelve minutes of the most remarkable series of airplane shots probably ever offered in a film. . . Hollywood in its most lunatic moments never dared dream of an air picture of this magnitude, and it has been photographed with rare effectiveness by Edouard Tisse. . . If the idea of the drama were less fantastic and about twenty minutes of repetitious action could be cut out, this might stand a chance in general release, but American audiences in general will not sit quietly for about an hour waiting for the show to start, and there is nothing to interest the outsider up to then. English sub-titles are no great help."

Variety p12 Ja 8 '36

FRONTIER JUSTICE O 1 '35 58min Futter

Players: Hoot Gibson. Jane Barnes. Franklyn Farnum

Director: Robert McGowan

Western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good. Family night programs or Catholic schools." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 30 '35

"A, Y and C: Satisfying Western."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 N 23 '35

"This one can hold its own with any of the recently produced outdoor dramas."

+ Film Curb p10 Ja 11 '36

"Satisfactory Western with Hoot Gibson turning in a good performance in his best style."

+ Film Daily p14 Ja 3 '36

"Hoot Gibson's return to the western scene in a new series finds him up to his high, usual standard. Family Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 O 25 '35

"The picture moves swiftly; has plenty of horse trotting and strong-man action, besides some snappy vistas. Meets the mark as a supporting program number."

+ Variety p13 Ja 8 '36

G

GALLANT DEFENDER. N 30 '35 57min
Columbia

Players: Charles Starrett. Joan Perry.
Harry Woods. Jack Clifford

Director: David Selman

The action is based on actual occurrences in the days when homesteaders were vying

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

GALLANT DEFENDER—Continued

with cattlemen for possession of the range country of the West. This film dramatically presents the struggles of the cattlemen who refused to allow their grazing lands to be divided into small farms.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Covered wagons and the staking of homestead claims form the colorful background of an otherwise mediocre picture. There are numerous inconsistencies and the dramatic effect is weakened by the obviousness of the story. The cast is capable and there are good bits of comedy and appropriate music. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"A new Western star and a pretty good story. Family, junior matinee." Nat Bd of R

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Good melodrama."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c D 22 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p32 Ja 10 '36

(*)GAME OF JAI-ALAI. D 27 '35 8min Educational

Players: Edward Thorgersen

"What is conceded to be about the fastest game in the world, Jai-Alai (pronounced 'Hi-Li') is built up interestingly from its earliest form generations ago as an old Mexican and Spanish game similar to the present-day American hand-ball. Then it is given in its modern form as demonstrated in Mexico City by a quartet of expert players." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"A sports novelty that will click. [It is given] a fine story narration by Edward Thorgersen."

+ Film Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"This is an interesting exhibition of something that is new to most audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p16 Ja 10 '36

"Enormously interesting with added benefit of humor. Very good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p31 Ja 10 '36

GARDEN MURDER CASE. F 28 '36 60min MGM

Players: Edmund Lowe, Virginia Bruce, Benita Hume, Douglas Walton, Nat Pendleton

Director: Edwin L. Marin

Based on the novel of the same title by S. S. Van Dine. Hypnosis is the theme of this murder mystery which is unraveled by that skillful sleuth, Philo Vance.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Excellent diction, direction, action, settings and scenario make this an outstanding mystery melodrama. Adults; interesting; 14-18: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Not so logical as the Van Dine book. Mature." DAR

"Fine performances by a well chosen cast and adroit direction make this a stimulating and highly entertaining picture. Adults and young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Very satisfactory for its type. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Entirely free from sex allure and excessive drinking. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"S. S. Van Dine's book has been rather garbled in its adaptation for the screen but for one who enjoys setting his mind to the task of unravelling mystery and does not demand literary or artistic values in pictures, this mystery tale may contain sufficient knotty problems to be considered entertaining. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 15 '36

"Adults and young people."
Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"[It is] more than satisfactory entertainment. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women F 5 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults and young people."
Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Mature."
Wkly Guide F 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Well done, handsomely mounted mystery."
+ Canadian M p43 Mr '36

"The Garden Murder Case' undoubtedly was more absorbing in the book than it is on the screen. The picture succeeds in being only mildly entertaining. It adheres to the routine formula, pointing the finger of suspicion first at this character, then at that one, until at the end it nails the culprit in a surprise move which did not seem to be the logical development of anything which went before it. It scorns the dramatic principle that it is all right to fool the characters but never permissible to fool the audience."

+ Hollywood Spec p13 F 15 '36

"Designed strictly for the double-feature trade, 'The Garden Murder Case' is mildly interesting, if never believable, and it should keep most of the audience seated until the main feature. . . For some reason that we don't pretend to know, the acting in mystery films is generally inferior. 'The Garden Murder Case' is no exception." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p36 Mr 14 '36

"The criticism of this jaded observer is that the piece lacks originality. It has no longer much suspense for those familiar with the Van Dine pattern; it is staged handsomely but with stereotype imagination; its direction is fast but rather pointless and its performance while competent, is uninspiring. In other words 'The Garden Murder Case' is what the critics call pedestrian." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 F 29 '36

"It is a stimulating and ingenious murder mystery (not too difficult of solution if you recognize certain portents early in the film) and an experienced cast does an excellent job with it. It goes on the must list for confirmed Van Dine addicts." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p13 Mr 2 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

"Even his most ardent and tolerant admirers will have to admit that on occasion the foppish Philo Vance can be an extremely exasperating person. . . . As impersonated by Edmund Lowe, he is about as annoying as he can be. Not that this is Mr. Lowe's fault, especially because he is, I imagine, only interpreting the character as a Hollywood author wrote it. But the fact remains that in the present instance Philo is pretty hard to take—a conceited, humorless, arrogant know-it-all. . . . Not only has Hollywood changed Philo's character in 'The Garden Murder Case,' but it has also changed what was a pretty good murder mystery into something just average in its production, slow in its movement and pedestrian in its dialogue." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p17 Mr 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Standard Philo Vance murder mystery that will please patrons of this particular type of offering. Family."

+ Box Office p27 F 15 '36

"There is no denying that as Philo Vance, Edmund Lowe is just about tops. . . . There is an excellent cast of seasoned players, the production is up to M-G-M standard and all in all this is a grade A piece of entertainment."

+ Film Curb p9 F 8 '36

"Better than usual mystery drama with exceptionally strong cast and ample production values."

+ Film Daily p7 F 29 '36

"This murder mystery melodrama, is good program entertainment. . . . Not suitable for children or Sundays. Good for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports Mr 7 '36

"MGM has here added to its B-string a piece of first-class entertainment. . . . This engaging find-the-murderer piece brings back the immortal Philo Vance in a new person—Edmund Lowe, who must be about fifth in the succession of interpreters, and who is better fitted in the role than he has been for some time. In fact, his easy and self-satisfied Vance is good—very good."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 29 '36

"The plot moves quickly and logically, effectively establishing, but, at the same time, concealing clues that might lead to a possible easy solution of a series of killings in which many are suspected. The story blends dialogue, action and situations to build strong suspense. The atmosphere created is one of sophistication."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Ja 30 '36

"When it's a S. S. Van Dine story and the resourceful Philo Vance is the hero, pretty nearly everybody knows just about what to expect. . . . Of course the story is geared to be fuddle and baffle. It does both in a logical and interesting way. It puts down the motives for the killings, deftly puts the finger on the real killer, establishes the full number of suspects, but does so in a manner that so cleverly hides its clues that solution should give the amateur sleuths as well as general patronage ample opportunity to exercise their detective talents."

+ Motion Pict Herald p58 F 8 '36

"Usual Van Dine mystery murder story, this will please where thrill seekers assemble. . . . What it does in the de luxers depends on the handling. Of a standard mystery type seen around many times, it has saleable angles, all of which should help the gross."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p34 F 25 '36

"[It] is a fair thriller that will do fair business. . . . Lowe makes an excellent detective of the sophisticated school, and Virginia Bruce is a charming suspect."

+ — Variety p27 Mr 4 '36

"Again Philo Vance parades his unfailing sleuthery in 'The Garden Murder Case' for good standard killer-mystery which will hold up its end on the program wherever this type of picture prospers."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 29 '36

(*)GASOLOONS. Ja 3 '36 16min RKO

Players: Edgar Kennedy. Florence Lake. Dot Farley. Jack Rice

"[Edgar Kennedy's family] wangle him into buying a gasoline station instead of going on a vacation, and then his troubles begin. He starts a small job on a car to adjust a windshield wiper, and winds up by tearing the car apart. But it seems he made the mistake of working on his own car." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"The rib-tickling and highly-humorous pantomimic quality that distinguishes the work of Edgar Kennedy was never in better evidence."

+ Box Office p48 Ja 18 '36

"Family comedy. . . . This one will give the laughs to all the Kennedy fans."

+ Film Daily p13 Ja 2 '36

"Effective comedy with standard laugh material."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 D 31 '35

"Kennedy carries this along, and whatever laughs result are from spectacle of him trying to hold temper. Good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p30 Ja 10 '36

GAY DECEPTION. S 13 '35 79min 20th century-Fox

Players: Francis Lederer. Frances Dee

Director: William Wyler

"A modern Cinderella, a sweepstakes winner, finds her Prince Charming disguised as a bellhop in a great hotel." Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

Christian Century p294 O 9 '35

"Excellent entertainment of the light, clever, whimsical type that leaves one in a happy frame of mind. . . . Enjoyable for all. Family."

+ Jt Estimates S 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p145 D '35

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M S '35

"This charming, cinderella-like tale is suitably and carefully cast, is spontaneously directed and moves to an illogical but delightful ending. Family and junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Amusing romance of prince and pauper."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

N Y Times px5 N 3 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

GENTLE JULIA. Ap 17 '36 20th century-Fox

Players: Jane Withers. Tom Brown. Marshall Hunt. Jackie Searl

Director: John Blystone

Based on the novel of the same title by Booth Tarkington. "The Tarkington atmosphere of a small middle-western town of several decades ago is caught in this story of

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

GENTLE JULIA—Continued

Julia, the delectable village belle whose affairs of the heart are settled by her irrepressible small cousin Florence." (Calif Cong of Par & Teachers)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family and junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good." DAR

"Family and junior matinee." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A diverting comedy which offers some finished characterizations despite its farcical style. Good for family audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Wholesome and suitable for family entertainment." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"Family and junior matinee." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 25 '36

"This [is a] charming, entertaining picture. Family and junior matinees."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 15 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It features Jane Withers, a child, has other children in its cast and a majority of its footage is devoted to childish pranks. But commendation of it as a picture that will please children does not imply condemnation of it as one which will bore adults. As a matter of fact, a picture boring to adults will not be pleasing to children. . . . It is good for us to live our youth again even for the brief period of a picture's unreeling, so 'Gentle Julia' is a production I can recommend to you for your own enjoyment, and I positively insist you take the children with you when you go to view it." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p9 F 29 '36

"Jane Withers, the screen's leading—and practically only—tomboy, has in 'Gentle Julia' a role that fits her bouncing talents perfectly. . . . An unpretentious little offering, 'Gentle Julia' has such winsome ways and [has] such a hilarious chase climax that it should please adults as well as children." (3 stars) Beverly-Hills

Liberty p53 Mr 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Sure-fire box-office and a natural for entire family patronage. Little Jane Withers tops all previous efforts. Family."

+ Box Office p35 Mr 7 '36

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p8 Mr 14 '36

"It could hardly expect to hold the screen of a big city theatre but it will very likely please the family trade for which it was evidently made."

+ Film Curb p14 F 22 '36

"This is a knockout of a show for the family trade. Any audience that likes a good wholesome comedy will enjoy it, and the Jane Withers fans especially will find it grand entertainment. Jane carries most of the picture and she does it in great style."

+ Film Daily p4 F 19 '36

"The Jane Withers pictures grow steadily better, thanks to good production judgment, and this one will overtop the others at the box office both on the momentum of the series and on its merits as a natural for laughs and wholesome entertainment."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 15 '36

"Presenting Jane Withers, whose legions of followers are rapidly growing, in one of Booth Tarkington's best known stories, this picture is a sound combination of amusing entertainment and easily adaptable exploitation. An all-family attraction, it is nevertheless unique and exciting comedy, stacking up not only as exceptional juvenile entertainment, but also holding considerable interest for adolescents and grownups."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 F 25 '36

"The child star's brilliant portrayal and the sympathetic guidance of the director, creates the perfect family picture, in theatrical high places or low. . . . Box offices will clink merrily to its laughter, sighs and hilarious antics wherever the Withers name has come to indicate a certain kind of entertainment, and in other spots where this gifted young player's qualities will be [made known throughout] the neighborhood. In craftsmanship and performance it is probably the best of the youngster's pictures."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 15 '36

GHOST GOES WEST. Ja 8 '36 78min London films-United artists

Players: Robert Donat. Eugene Pallette. Jean Parker

Director: René Clair

Based on the short story, Glourie Castle, by Eric Keown. "A penniless Scottish aristocrat sells his ancestral castle to an American millionaire who transports it piecemeal to New York. The family ghost accompanies the stones and haunts the liner. The news is flashed to New York. On arrival, there is a fine travesty of a civic reception, with an empty car reserved for the ghost and other farcical scenes due to the desire of two rival magnates to tie up the ghost for publicity purposes." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Excellent. Mature." DAR

"[It is] an outstanding production. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"[It is] a fresh and entertaining picture. Family." Nat Bd of R

"A happy blending of good comedy and clever satire. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"[It] holds one's interest to the final fadeout. Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The director is to be congratulated for this clever and outstanding production. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 8 '36

Mo Film Bul p194 D '35

"Rarely imaginative in direction, lavish in production and witty in line—a real treat. Very good. Family."

+ Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"It is immensely comic. . . . Do not overlook this amusing entertainment. Adolescents, 12-16: fine; children, 8-12: good fun."

+ Motion Pict R F '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

"A: Satirical fantasy; Y: Entertaining; C: No interest."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Some delightfully original touches and clever technical effects add to the merit of an outstanding production. Adults and young people."

++ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ja 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"René Clair has evidently not succeeded in impressing his own character at all consistently on his first English film, 'The Ghost Goes West' [says the reviewer for the London Times]. At times his vivid, freakish, and satirical imagination comes to the front; at others, love and the formalities of the commercial film—M. Clair can hardly have controlled the English dialogue—take charge of the situations and develop them according to the conventions. . . . The nonsense itself is much in the manner of Mark Twain. . . . The plot and its solution are both very neat and the appearances of the ghost are nicely calculated to keep it mysterious and alarming while all around are behaving with undignified absurdity, a difficult task which must have needed the greatest tact both in the director and in Mr. Robert Donat."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 3 '36

"'The Ghost Goes West' [has] started on a career that promises to make this delightful bit of foolery one of the stand-out pictures."

Laura Elston

++ Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"This, of course, furnishes the opportunity for trotting out some of the most venerable jokes in the Anglo-American repertory. The youth of America, said Oscar Wilde, is its oldest tradition, and it is a tradition that M. Clair sees no reason for discarding. He has many a sally at the expense of Americans' supposed fondness for transporting antiques from Britain, and employing them to advertise the most incongruous merchandise. Occasionally, his satire hereabouts is very funny, as in the ubiquitous nature of his radio installations, but at times it descends to the mechanical gesture of making his characters mispronounce words."

H. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 F 4 '36

"Staid Queen Mary's royal laughter was awakened the other evening at the Leicester Square première in London of Alexander Korda's intelligently imaginative British-made comedy romance. Others will be similarly amused. The importation is the Frenchman René Clair's first English-speaking directorial effort, and a witty piece of picture-making it is," J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p356 Ja 24 '36

"Gallic wit was a wise choice for the task of poking fun at Scottish traditions and American multi-millionaires. The result proves that 'The Ghost Goes West' does not sparkle as brightly as some of his other pictures, but the combination of Bob Sherwood's script and René Clair's sense of humor gives the picture perhaps the most solid foundation of legitimate comedy the French director ever has had to build on. . . . You cannot afford to miss it. Students of Motion Picture Appreciation will find this picture a valuable subject for study."

+ Hollywood Spec p10 F 1 '36

"I hate ghost stories [but] this one is a real lark. Robert Donat is starred, but I wish it had been Leslie Howard." Don Herold

+ Life p28 Mr '36

"Cosmo Hamilton, speaking recently in London, said: 'You sit through it all in a state of beaming content from beginning to end, and you leave the theater chuckling to yourself. The humor of the picture is completely infectious.'"

+ Lit Digest p20 Ja 18 '36

"M. Clair is not yet quite so much at home on neighbouring soil as on his own. But his first British film, 'The Ghost Goes West' is full enough of happy invention and quick, gay satire to be uncommonly good entertainment. . . . Many able actors besides Robert Donat contribute to its fun. In particular the mingling of apprehension and covetousness on the ample face of Eugene Pallette when, as the purchaser of Glourie, he discovers from personal experience that he has acquired a real ghost is more richly comical than anything in film since 'Le Million.' A. S. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p13 F 25 '36

"Here is Clair's latest picture; and it is a failure. It is only relatively a failure. 'The Ghost Goes West' is more amusing and more imaginative than the average film of whatever provenance, and indeed the audience of which I was a part laughed loud and long. But that is perhaps the point. It laughed too loud and long, and laughed in the wrong places—provided there is any meaning in the reference one naturally makes to Clair's earlier work, where the finest kind of balance was maintained between the ridiculous and the delicate, between the false and the true, between exaggeration and exquisiteness. . . . There is no lack of nice things here and there along the way, and there is always the reminder that this man once held a precious secret in his hands. But he has lost it, and I cannot believe that anything outside of himself is to blame." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p138 Ja 29 '36

"To be sure, Mr. Clair's touch in this film is not exactly what one would call incisive, but perhaps after he familiarizes himself with the subject he will polish off us Americans with all the brilliance he brought to bear on his own people in 'The Italian Straw Hat.'" Robert Stebbins

New Theatre p23 F '36

"[René Clair's] picture is so gay and charming and imaginatively amusing. Heaven knows, it has its faults. There is about it, for example, the unhappy defect of letting down to an anticlimax, rather than building up to a climax. It lacks something, too, of the distinctive style and urbane wit that has gone into the best of the distinguished Frenchman's works. Also, in the manner of photo-plays manufactured in England, it sometimes lacks the pace that films require, unless they are to drop off occasionally into the doldrums. All of this, however, does not keep it from being striking, delightful and original." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Ja 11 '36

"'The Ghost Goes West' is just what its title implies, a ghost story, and one of the season's funniest pictures. It is told with high good humor, almost with glee, and its cast has the air of enjoying it all as hugely as the audience. M. Clair's fantasy is neither earthy nor remote. It balances delicately, precisely; telling a grand ghost story at the same time it chuckles over a very human romance. . . . The picture is original not only in idea and viewpoint, but in directorial touches. Mr. Clair tells his story lightly, subtly, as a ghost story should be told, stressing none of his points and permitting no one to miss any of them either. 'The Ghost Goes West' is a rollicking tale of a most delightful phantom." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p8 Ja 11 '36

"Faced with an event of such imposing interest as René Clair's first English-speaking film, it is a grave temptation to go in for comparisons. . . . The film is not pure Clair, or even characteristic Clair, because for the first time he is working in a strange language and from a script that is not his own. . . . Although the film is not cast in the fluid, rapidly paced style of Clair's typical work, it has a sly wit and an adroitness of manner that make it delightful. . . . 'The Ghost Goes West' is the first important film of the new year, and a joyous one. It is the cream of an ebullient jest." Andrew Sennwald

++ N Y Times p9 Ja 11 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

GHOST GOES WEST—Continued

"Although 'The Ghost Goes West,' which Clair produced in London for Alexander Korda, is not the best of his films, it is in the tradition of 'Le Million,' and as such it has more than its share of charm, wit and humor. Scene after scene is pregnant with the sly, subtle satire that has made Clair the world's outstanding director. There are some who will insist that 'The Ghost Goes West' is lacking in the urbane wit and distinctive style that has characterized this brilliant Frenchman's most distinctive screen efforts, but none can deny that it is at once a striking, delightful and original film—one that is something to see and cheer about." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 Ja 15 '36

"I advise one and all to run around and see it at once. . . It's all absurd and really funny." John Mosher

+ + New Yorker p60 Ja 18 '36

"London Films has produced the best British film of [the year], 'The Ghost Goes West.'" Mark Forrest

+ + Sat R p672 D 28 '35

"I have never believed more firmly in Clair's genius than I did during this film. The silly story, the gross misuse of Clair's peculiar qualities, were forgotten in my admiration for his camera sense. In no other film this year has there been the same feeling of mobility, of visual freedom. And the actors responded with unforced lightheartedness. Mr. Eugene Pallette as the American millionaire gave the finest performance of his career, and Mr. Robert Donat as the ghost and his descendant acted with invincible naturalness. . . Curiously enough, the silly tale gave one a chance to see a more deeply imaginative Clair than had his own scenarios. The Scottish holiday may well prove valuable for his future." Graham Greene

+ Spec p1068 D 27 '35

"M. Clair satirizes Scots and Americans, and the film has much of the delicacy and high spirits of his early French pictures; but there is more humanity in it, and a charming love story." Joan Littlefield

+ Springfield Republican p7c Ja 12 '36

"The most virile satire of the year by that super-satirist, René Clair; and incidentally, his first English picture."

+ + Stage p8 F '36

"[It] is a satiric fantasy notable for the qualities of grace, charm and imaginative wit that have long distinguished its director's work in French. Produced by a Hungarian, written by an American, directed by a Frenchman, and acted by an English-speaking cast, it has the homogeneity of style, the smooth polish often conspicuously lacking in its Hollywood counterparts. Its most serious fault is an occasional lethargy of pace, which is the only thing it has in common with any other film comedy so far exported out of England."

+ Time p57 Ja 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"One of the most delightful bits of nonsense the screen has seen. Family."

+ Box Office p23 F 1 '36

Film Curb p16 Ja 18 '36

"Swell entertainment for all fans. Highly humorous story with fine work by Donat and others. . . René Clair's direction gets the full value out of the shrewdly written satirical screenplay."

+ Film Daily p3 Ja 11 '36

"This picture has some unusually good comedy situations, a novel plot, and fine performances. But on the whole it is entertainment suitable more for the classes than for the masses; its pace is somewhat slow and its humor subtle. Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 18 '36

"This film has effective satire, broadening frequently into the realm of farce. René Clair has handled the ingenious story with great humor and imagination. . . There are many original touches including conversations of the ghost with his disembodied father in limbo, Scottish clan warfare, the American love of antiques and the ballyhoo which is equally well satirized."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 D 18 '35

"The peculiar flavour of the film, directed by the French screen satirist René Clair, of 'Le Million' fame, is only faintly to be deduced from a recital of episodes, yet an account of the plot does indicate something of its imaginative freshness—it is remembered that Clair never loses grip of material which might easily have degenerated into near-slapstick. . . Where there are audiences receptive to the essentially satiric flavouring of the story, 'The Ghost Goes West' is a subject of excellent possibilities. The broad humour of the 'ballyhoo' for the ghost, and the caricature of American new-rich infatuations with Europe are material for all classes. Donat's personal charm has certainly never been better used than in this dual role, with a soft Scots burr to give it flavour."

+ Motion Pict Herald p48 Ja 4 '36

"A silly story intended to be a satire. . . of American habits. This may fall short of purpose, but provides plenty of laughs nevertheless."

N Y Exhibitor p27 F 10 '36

"It should get rave reviews from critics and it should do splendid business in key spots in the U.S. and almost generally abroad. But it will probably do not so well in the minor spots. It is probably unfair to tone down raves for the film, because as screen art it is undoubtedly a splendid piece of work. . . Trouble simply is that it's satire of a very high calibre and the great masses of American cinema patrons will find it miles over their heads. They'll laugh at some of the sequences—they can't help that—but it is not American type comedy; it isn't slapstick; it isn't hokum. And there lies the rub."

+ — Variety p18 Ja 15 '36

"[It] is smart, satirical high comedy of a kind seldom served to American audiences [and] will mightily regale the sophisticate, the comparatively limited clientele of cultivated humor. Should do fine business in the ace houses, but will be a gamble from there on down the line, with short life expectancy in general run of spots where more blatant comedy is the meat-and-spuds of entertainment."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 21 '36

GIVE US THIS NIGHT. Mr 6 '36 70min Paramount

Players: Jan Kiepura. Gladys Swarthout. Philip Merivale

Director: Alexander Hall

Music and Lyrics: Erich Wolfgang Korngold. Oscar Hammerstein, II

"The story is constructed on the backstage opera formula with Jan Kiepura cast as a singing fisherman who is released from jail through the efforts of Gladys Swarthout, a diva and Philip Merivale, a composer." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"It is a pleasant film in which neither the singing nor the music establish a high standard. Nevertheless, it is a step in the right direction towards a true musical film in which the music relates directly to the story."

+ — Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Both voices are great and though the story content is trite, the production on the whole is excellent. Family."

Wkly Guide F 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Its ballads are the most advanced light opera music yet composed for cinema, and it contains one scene of cinema's first original grand opera—a balcony scene from a work called 'Romeo and Juliet' of which only a few skeleton scenes were ever written. . . Strictly in the new technique for screen operettas, the plot is less a series of music cues than an ornamental bubble tossed on the flood of song issuing from Kiepara and Swarthout."

Time p46 Mr 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A weak one that will need strong support. Family."

— + Box Office p37 Mr 7 '36

"While this is a high class musical film of the light opera variety it is doubtful if it finds much favor. There is no denying that Kiepara has a fine voice but his acting leaves much to be desired and his dialect is also against him."

+ — Film Curb p15 Mr 7 '36

"This is high class entertainment, with good music, and an excellent production. But its appeal will be directed mainly to music lovers, since most of the story is told in operatic terms. It is not for mass consumption. Suitable for all. Family."

+ — Harrison's Reports Mr 21 '36

"Three-fourths of its length is song, and song of a high class, and it is for the most part gorgeously sung, with Jan Kiepara and Gladys Swarthout in the leading roles and doing most of the singing. . . It is weak as to comedy, but strong in romantic appeal, and will be popular in communities where good music, and especially operatic music, will attract; will do substantial business in the key cities, and should have a long life, for here is music that can be heard again and again. It will also gross large in foreign countries, but its reception in our own small towns and neighborhood houses is problematical."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 F 27 '36

"Topheavy with music, this picture is apt to have an appeal only to class audiences. . . The musical score by Erich Wolfgang Korn-gold with lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein is good but offers no tune to capture the popular fancy."

Motion Pict Daily p10 F 28 '36

"Done in a continental motif, the picture has elements for that contingent of fans which understands and appreciates classical music, not all of which is operatic. For the general rank and file the preponderance of music provides a problem which may possibly be eliminated if the romantic love interest content is stressed."

Motion Pict Herald p46 Mr 7 '36

"For American consumption, 'Give Us This Night' is questionable entertainment. Over-loaded with music plus a performance by Jan Kiepara that is far below Hollywood standards, picture will have a hard time making the grade. Lack of draw names will also prove a stumbling block in selling. . . Kiepara acts a great deal like a Sennett comedian. His dialect is more acceptable for comedy work rather than light opera. Vocally he has a remarkable voice, particularly in the higher registers but his singing is anything but effortless. Unfortunately Gladys Swarthout is sacrificed in order to build up the singing of the Polish star."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 27 '36

GRAIN. Ja 14 '36 85min Amkino

Players: Emma Tsessarskaya. Boris Tenin. N. Narokof. A. Abrikosof

Director: Olga Preobrazhenskaya

Based on the novel, Enemies' Paths, by Ivan Shuhov. The film was made in Russia and there are dialogue titles in English. "This latest importation from Russia . . . once again attempts to glorify the Russian worker of the new order. It tells of the victory of a group of peasants organizing their first collective farms, over the unscrupulous efforts of the kulaks, or land owners, to preserve their waning power over the peasantry." (Motion Pict Daily)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Either the humor and lightness the directors aspired to proved too much for their propaganda efforts or the picture was not planned out carefully to begin with. For, while it is not really a bad production, it is just a run-of-the-mill piece, long drawn out and not a little boring at times. The photography is excellent." Marguerite Tazelaar

— + N Y Herald Tribune p15 Ja 17 '36

"While hardly as interesting a picture as 'Peasants,' which treated the identical subject, the current Russian offering is good entertainment for persons anxious to get an idea of how the struggle for collectivism was won and to watch a mild romance at the same time. . . There are some remarkable 'shots' of the open country and of scenes in the fields and at the meetings in the village. The direction is sure and the action never lags, although there are few really exciting incidents." H. T. S.

+ — N Y Times p25 Ja 16 '36

"Not only does 'Grain' tell a pretty routine story in a routine manner, but it is full of the old regulation propaganda that the more outstanding Soviet films of recent vintage seem to have discarded once and for all." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p15 Ja 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Another propaganda offering on the now familiar subject of collective farming. . . Photography is good and a certain amount of drama has been built up for the story."

Film Daily p8 Ja 17 '36

"The film is plentifully sprinkled with English translations of the Russian dialogue, making for ready understanding of the story, but it is doubtful if the picture has any real entertainment value for the average American audience. It is one of those films which is apt to have an appreciative audience only among those who have a distinct sympathy for the Russia of today."

Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 17 '36

GRAND EXIT. O 25 '35 67min Columbia

Players: Edmund Lowe. Ann Sothern

Director: Earle Kenton

"Unable to determine the origin of a series of sensational fires, a large insurance company engages Fletcher as a private investigator. Although he manages to unravel the methods by which the fires have been started, he is unable to dig up any clues that might reveal the identity of the guilty madman. Eventually a girl who has been hanging around all the fires gives him the lead for which he is searching." N Y World-Telegram

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

GRAND EXIT—Continued

"A: Depends on taste; Y: Amusing; C: Doubtful."

Christian Century p1638 D 18 '35

Mo Film Bul p170 N '35

"Good. Adults and young adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Light mystery; C: Possible."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"A mystery story, well sprinkled with comedy. Family."

Wkly Guide O 22 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Plenty of action, a story which makes enough sense, and some amusing wise-cracks. . . Of its kind, 'Grand Exit' is fair entertainment." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p27 N 5 '35

"Entertaining if highly implausible melodrama." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p24 N 4 '35

N Y World-Telegram p43 N 4 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c N 24 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Plot development is brisk, covering much that is implausible. Amusing incidents are plentiful, giving Lowe wide range for a debonair and snappy performance. Director Eale Kenton does well. Mystery drama."

+ Box Office p29 D 7 '35

Film Curb p4 N 15 '35

"Fairly satisfying mystery drama that ought to go over all right in the neighborhood houses."

+ — Film Daily p7 N 5 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p29 N 10 '35

(*)GRAND SLAM OPERA. F 21 '36 20min Educational

Players: Buster Keaton

Director: Charles Lamont

"Keaton comes to New York from Gopher Prairie to go on an amateur radio program with his juggling act. He tells the amazed director of the program that he does it by explaining each stunt to the radio audience. He gets the gong at the first juggling stunt, but keeps going, not realizing that the orchestra is going ahead with the next number." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"Buster Keaton has the first leg on the year's funniest comedy with this offering. . . It's a natural laugh-provoker with a heap of originality to boot."

+ Box Office p48 Ja 18 '36

"Easily the best comedy Buster Keaton has ever delivered. Whoever supplied the original and side-splitting gags should be given a long-term contract. This unknown writer has the perfect material for this dead-pan comic, and the way Buster handles that material puts it over for a continuous salvo of laughs. It is fast. It has variety. It has, above all originality."

+ Film Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"A ribald and slapstick burlesque of amateur programs with Buster Keaton contributing some of his best comedy, this one has entertainment in every frame."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 8 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Buster Keaton is again his old, inarticulate, inadequate, uproariously awkward self. This brings out all the old laughs belonging to a character as unique as Chaplin. Very good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p30 Ja 10 '36

GREAT IMPERSONATION. D 9 '35 70min Universal

Players: Edmund Lowe. Valerie Hobson. Wera Engels

Director: Alan Crosland

Based on novel of the same title by E. Phillips Oppenheim. "The story deals with a renegade Englishman and a conniving Austrian in the employ of an international munitions trust. It tells how the Austrian presumably takes the place of the Englishman, found on the brink of death in the African jungle, and returns to London to advance the predatory aims of the arms makers by crippling British factories and thereby inducing orders for replenished supplies from the factories which make up the munition king's domain." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Oppenheim addicts will enjoy this mystery thriller, with its blood-curdling moments, its high intrigue, its fantastic plot and its surprise finish. Adequately directed and photographed, this picture will not prove conducive to pleasant dreams for the kiddies. Adults: fair; 14-18; fair; 8-14: no." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"One of the best known and most absorbing of the E. Phillips Oppenheim mystery stories, in which Edmund Lowe plays the double role of a German and an Englishman with great skill and with a clever appreciation and understanding of the contrasts in the Teutonic and the Anglo-Saxon minds. . . Excellently directed and acted. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"With an involved and confused story and vacillating direction this exposition of a sinister plot on the part of international munitions manufacturers to foment War becomes unconvincing. A timely and worthy theme is handled in a careless, uncertain manner although the suspense is maintained throughout and ends with a surprise dénouement. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"An exciting picture, but lacks clearness at times and has many inconsistencies. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Edmund Lowe gives an exceptional performance in the dual role. The direction is commendable, and good use is made of light and sound effects. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ — Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"Capably and effectively directed, with Edmund Lowe giving an exceptionally fine performance in a dual role, ably assisted by a well chosen cast. A thrilling mystery drama. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) D 4 '35

"Good. Adults and young adults." Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Clever spy drama; C: If interesting."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"An interesting though improbable story. Mature."

— + Wkly Guide N 30 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript D 13 '35

"I am usually sufficiently annoyed by even one Edmund Lowe in a picture, and in 'The Great Impersonation' I get two—with Mr. Lowe in a dual rôle. I wonder who thought that up? As usual, Mr. Lowe stands stiff, precedes every line with a pause, and then whips it out crisp and smart." Don Herold
Life p21 F '36

"I think that you will find [the film] a rather confusing bore, with Mr. Lowe being less than overwhelming in the leading role and with Miss Valerie Hobson and Miss Wera Engels being not exactly fascinating, as heroine and minor menace, respectively." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p10 D 14 '35

"[The film] seems pure, undiluted E. Phillips Oppenheim. It is, at all events, the kind of lush romanticism and wild-eyed melodrama usually associated with his name. . . [It] must be seen, if it must be seen at all, in the same spirit as a fairy tale is read. But, of course, it really doesn't need to be seen at all. . . The plot is pretty much nonsense from beginning to end, and the acting not much better." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p8 D 14 '35

"In the case of 'The Great Impersonation' it is a decided blessing rather than a limitation that reviewers are pledged not to divulge the secret of mystery films. Consequently I am spared the humiliation of confessing my vast ignorance about the finer nuances of one of the plottiest of all the Oppenheim stories. . . The only thing this column is positive about is Mr. Lowe and his quaint conception of an Englishman pretending to be a German." Andre Sennwald

— N Y Times p11 D 14 '35

"Improbable as the statement may seem, 'The Great Impersonation,' the screen version of one of E. Phillips Oppenheim's best known thrillers, is not very good. . . The film resembles an apple pie made by an inexperienced cook. . . Taken all in all, [it] is as bogus as its villain and hardly suitable for discriminating moviegoers." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p18 D 14 '35

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p90 D 21 '35

Time p42 D 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p38 D 7 '35

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 D 21 '35

"About everything ever heard of in the way of a spy yarn is in this one and then some. Written many years ago it certainly cannot be called up to date. It is our duty to report that this one from Universal is poor film fare."

— Film Curb p13 Ja 4 '36

Film Daily p4 D 14 '35

"Cast in the popular entertainment mold, 'The Great Impersonation' is an interesting and well-done adventure story, sometimes reminiscent of the horror sequences in the 'Frankenstein' cycle. . . It's good stuff keyed in a popular, adventure vein and should please the rank and file of the average picture house audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 N 27 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

"Universal's adaptation is none too slick and flounders notably on a variety of occasions in carrying out the British characterizations and atmosphere. [It is a] fairly good-looking production, but [the] action is ragged and basically incredible."

— Variety p12 D 18 '35

GREAT ZIEGFELD. (Release date not determined) 181min MGM

Players: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer, Fanny Brice, Virginia Bruce, Frank Morgan, Nat Pendleton

Directors: Robert Z. Leonard, Arthur Lang
Music: Walter Donaldson, Harold Adams

The life of the great entertainer is brought to the screen with many of the former stars from the Ziegfeld's Follies taking part.

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is a lavish, well produced, entertaining picture that cannot fail to please. With proper exploitation it can be sold to any class of patrons. . . They don't come much better than this one."

+ + Film Curb p6 Mr 14 '36

"In New York and environs it should pack them from the opening day, but in the hinterland it must be sold and exploited to the hilt and where this is done it will be okay. About an hour must be cut for regular theatre runs, making it the kind of fast-moving story audiences expect and managers can handle. Present roadshow length perhaps okay for around New York, but neither star draw nor story place it in roadshow class. It's just grand entertainment that will stand with the best the public has had on the regular Metro releasing program."

+ + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 9 '36

GUARD THAT GIRL. S 20 '35 67min Columbia

Players: Florence Rice, Robert Allen, Barbara Kent, Arthur Hohl

Director: Lambert Hillyer

"An exciting mystery story about a girl impersonating an heiress whose life is threatened and the two detectives who guard her and finally capture the guilty person." Nat Bd of R M

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fairly good; Y: Good; C: Hardly." Christian Century p94 Ja 15 '36

Mo Film Bul p170 N '35

"Fair. Adults and young adults." Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Family." Nat Bd of R M S '35

"A and Y: Thrilling; C: Very exciting." Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Passable entertainment of its sort."

— + Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p29 N 23 '35

"Satisfactory murder mystery. A not unfamiliar plot but it has been well handled. [The] suspense [is] well maintained. A bit of romance and comedy add to enjoyment of the picture."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

GUARD THAT GIRL—Continued

+ Film Curb p11 N 1 '35

Motion Pict Daily p4 N 2 '35

"A mystery film of more or less routine character, 'Guard That Girl' offers little in the way of unusual material. . . With suspicion falling almost equally upon a number of involved persons the mystery keeps the identity of the perpetrators of the crime sufficiently under cover until the detective by simple deductions makes known the criminal's true character."

— + Motion Pict Herald p74 N 23 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p34 O 25 '35

GUN PLAY. D 31 '35 60min Beacon

Players: Guinn Williams. Frank Yacanelli. Marion Shilling

Director: Albert Herman

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A, Y and C: Thrilling Western."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A Western with a new plot and that's a novelty. This snappy outdoor action drama should more than satisfy those who like such films. . . Williams does some fine work in this picture and he is ably supported by balance of the cast."

+ Film Curb p6 Ja 4 '36

"This Western carries more than the usual amount of plot, and the plot also departs from the usual Western thrillers with a rather novel theme."

+ Film Daily p3 D 27 '35

"Standard western action material. . . It has no lack of fast-moving action and should be found reasonably satisfactory."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 D 31 '35

"As per the title there's plenty of gun-play in this action picture. . . Perhaps not a brilliant plot, but good enough for this calibre picture. There is a sincere effort to project some humor, and although the romance is pretty light, it's pleasing. The backgrounds keep revolving before the camera and may look familiar to the very discerning kind of fans."

— + Variety p58 Ja 1 '36

GUV'NOR, THE. See Mister Hobo

H

HAIR TRIGGER CASEY. (Release date not determined) 60min Atlantic

Players: Jack Perrin. Betty Mack

Director: Harry Fraser

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

"A Western that is considerably above average, with a fresh slant that builds suspense and some good comedy, this one should click with ease. In addition to the typical shoot-'em-up pattern that it follows, there's an exciting flashback of action during the war and a smuggling angle that involves an army officer. Family."

+ Box Office p37 Mr 7 '36

"An entertaining Western."

+ Film Curb p8 F 22 '36

"While following the usual formula of smuggling on the border, this action Western in story treatment and especially in directorial touches achieves some new slants that lift it out of the run-of-the-ordinary Westerns."

+ Film Daily p4 F 19 '36

"As Westerns go, it is an ordinary production."

— + Motion Pict Daily p9 F 19 '36

HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE. O 18 '35 80min Paramount

Players: Carole Lombard. Fred MacMurray. Ralph Bellamy

Director: Mitchell Leisen

Adapted from Vina Delmar's novel Bracelets. A cynical manicurist anxious to find a wealthy husband meets an impoverished play-boy who plans to wed an heiress for exactly the same reason.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fairly amusing; Y: Unsuitable; C: No." Christian Century p1606 D 11 '35

"A light refreshing comedy, excellently cast, well staged, photographed and lighted, in which expert direction gives piquancy to situations that might otherwise be offensive. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 14 '35

"This bit of sophisticated fluff, with its neat title, becomes very diverting entertainment by reason of excellent direction, superior acting and clever and unusual comedy situations. Adults. Light comedy."

+ Jt Estimates N 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p170 N '35

"Good. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Carole Lombard, ably assisted by Fred MacMurray, makes this implausible, charming farce-comedy almost believable. Smooth, excellent direction, lavish stage settings, witty dialogue and a not new but good story add much to the entertainment value. Adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women N 1 '35

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Fairly amusing; Y: Mature; C: No." Par M p54 Mr '36

"Lightness in direction and acting make an entertaining comedy. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A comedy which radiates comic warmth from almost every foot of celluloid. Its unabashed make-believe is an appealing asset."

R. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 19 '35

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

"The story skips through its charming paces so blithely that this little comedy romance is quite likely the best thing of its fairy-tale sort to be seen this season." Beverly Hills

+ Liberty p29 N 23 '35

Lit Digest p24 D 7 '35

"The film is quite an entertaining bit of minor gayety as long as it keeps moving rapidly. . . . When it slows down for its romantic interludes, the pace becomes lethargic enough to give you a chance to think things over and remember that the hero and heroine really were speaking pretty soundly when they described themselves by that highly descriptive term, 'heels.' . . . The first half of the work is unassumingly diverting, and the film never fails to offer at least a suggestion of liveliness." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 N 2 '35

"Unpretentious and likable, it has an appealing freshness about it." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p10 N 2 '35

"An uproariously funny romantic comedy, with a brilliant screen play." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p13 N 2 '35

"A gay, rollicking bit of fluff. . . . Done with a light, frivolous touch, it moves briskly and uproariously along to its inevitable conclusion, but in a manner that anyone in search of delightful entertainment should find altogether satisfactory." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p31 D 5 '35

Reviewed by John Mosher
New Yorker p98 N 16 '35

Reviewed by Graham Greene
Spec p863 N 22 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c N 24 '35

"Some of the grandest comedy to come out of Hollywood this season."

+ Stage p10 N '35

"'Hands Across the Table,' [is] as pretty a mixture of wit, sentiment and right handling as we are likely to get for a while." Otis Ferguson

+ Theatre Arts Mo p141 F '36

Time p54 O 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Curb p7 O 15 '35

"Grand romantic-comedy entertainment with plenty box-office pull for all classes. . . . Delightful fare that will meet with a merry reception anywhere."

+ Film Daily p10 O 25 '35

"With sparkling acting, well directed, 'Hands Across the Table' is a good number in the current smart dialogue comedy school. Family comedy drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p35 O 25 '35

HAPPINESS C. O. D. O 15 '35 69min Chesterfield

Players: Irene Ware, Donald Meek, Edwin Maxwell, Maude Eburne

Director: Charles Lamont

When a father of extravagant children mortgages his home to pay their bills, the children reform and help their father out of his plight.

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p54 N 16 '35

"It is all worked out so nicely, played so earnestly and directed so well that it comes near being perfect screen entertainment of this type."

+ Film Curb p4 N 15 '35

"This little comedy has a certain amount of human interest appeal that ought to get over well enough with the not too discriminating family trade. . . . While there are no important names in the cast, the players fit their roles adequately."

+ Film Daily p7 D 21 '35

"By giving human touches to a story about the spendthrift children who reform and help their father lift the mortgage on the old homestead, Director Charles Lamont has fashioned a picture which should be acceptable average entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 N 2 '35

"Family drama."

N Y Exhibitor p34 O 10 '35

"Despite lack of strong name draw, 'Happiness C.O.D.' might have been a strong programmer until directors and cutters went awry. But despite this weakness, picture's length and a rather unpromising title, it should prove interesting because of Maude Eburne's grand performance."

+ Variety p15 D 25 '35

HARMONY LANE. Ag 25 '35 84min Mascot

Players: Douglas Montgomery, Evelyn Venable, Joseph Cawthorn, William Frawley

Director: Joseph Santley

"A musical drama based on the life and loves of Steven C. Foster, showing his despair and disappointments, and the tragedy of his drunken death." So Calif Council of Fed of Church Women

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Christian Century p1326 O 16 '35

"William Frawley gives a notable characterization of the minstrel, Christy. Family." Calif Congress of Far & Teachers

"The costumes and settings are unusually faithful to the times, the music is deftly blended in, and the romance will prove satisfactory for all but conscientious objectors to sentiment. Suggested for schools, libraries and church use. Excellent for music clubs. Family." Nat Bd of R

"Excellent acting and direction combined with its educational and dramatic values to make it an exceptional production. Adolescents 12-16: excellent; children: mature and sad." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Bul S 13 '35

"The charm of the life, customs and settings of the pre-Civil War days, the historical interest of the story, and the added pleasure of the old familiar music and songs make this a most enjoyable production. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 3 '35

"Family."

Jt Estimates S 1 '35

Motion Pict & Family O 15 '35

"The poignant story of Stephen Foster comes to the screen carefully cast, sympathetically directed and beautifully photographed. . . . The stage settings and mid-nineteenth century life add much to the interesting story. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Delightful."

Par M p54 Mr '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

HARMONY LANE—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Unpretentious melodrama, pleasing of its sort."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '35

"A routine little sentimental drama, given its occasional moments of interest by the Foster songs." Richard Watts, Jr.

— + N Y Herald Tribune p15 O 24 '35

"Lugubrious, despite the songs."

N Y Times p19 O 27 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c O 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p56 N 16 '35

HEIR TO TROUBLE. S 26 '35 60min Columbia

Players: Ken Maynard. Joan Perry. Harry Woods

Director: Spencer G. Bennett

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A, Y and C: Good Western."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p29 N 23 '35

Film Curb p5 Ja 4 '36

"Good outdoor action drama with more than usual amount of plot material. Fortified by ample story ingredients, albeit the basic plot is not radically new in any respect, this ought to prove satisfying fare for the outdoor action fans."

+ — Film Daily p10 D 17 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p34 O 25 '35

HELL SHIP MORGAN. F 8 '36 63min Columbia

Players: George Bancroft. Ann Sothorn. Victor Jory

Director: D. Ross Lederman

"A tuna fishing boat is the unusual setting for a triangle story involving a blustering captain, a girl whom he befriends and marries, and a young man whom he rescues from a waterfront saloon." Sel Motion Pict

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Fair. Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"The excitement of storm and rescues, the constant threat of tragedy and the fascinating scenes of tuna fishing provide thrilling and realistic drama. The story is a vigorous one, the acting is expert and some of the camera effects are remarkable. Adults and young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Take all the intrigues, stock figures and stereotyped phrases of penny-shocker romances and there you have 'Hell Ship Morgan,' the generally preposterous film with George Bancroft. . . During the telling of this breathless and fearless odyssey of the tuna fishers all the old-fashioned theatricalisms drench the situation, the dialogue and the characters. The three principal actors perform their unattractive jobs in a workmanlike manner, but the whole thing seems to me to have been shipwrecked on the shoals of sex." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p21 Mr 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The players and the director have done their best with the trite material, but it results in just fairly satisfying fare, with chief interest from a box-office standpoint being in the return of George Bancroft to the screen."

+ — Film Daily p8 Mr 10 '36

"A moderately entertaining program melodrama. There is not one new angle in the story; the plot is quite obvious and one loses interest in the outcome. Not for children or Sundays. Adult entertainment."

— + Harrison's Reports F 29 '36

"A better tale than this might have been contrived for George Bancroft's return to the screen after a long absence, for the good cast has little chance against the thin story of love in the tuna industry. . . The three principals struggle valiantly with the difficult dialogue."

— Motion Pict Daily p3 F 29 '36

"Weak for single featuring, other attributes [may] be sold to advantage to patrons liking action with an entertaining story."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p54 Mr 10 '36

"It is not a particularly inspiring vehicle. . . Cast is easily far above scripting and direction. Weakness in latter two departments will keep 'Hell Ship' to dualers and some [neighborhood houses.]"

— + Variety p29 Mr 11 '36

"Thrills of the tuna fishing industry off the coast of California, poignantly displayed through direction, story and photography, swing this Columbia film above the mediocre class for [neighborhood houses.] With more name pull it would have hit the class spots with ease."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 27 '36

HER MASTER'S VOICE. Ja 17 '36 68min Paramount

Players: Edward Everett Horton. Peggy Conklin

Director: Joseph Santley

Based on a play of the same title by Clare Kummer. In this farce comedy Horton's wife is spirited away by her aunt because of opposition to the marriage. He obtains a position as butler in the aunt's home and while attempting to enter his wife's room, he inadvertently lands in her aunt's room where he is discovered and accused by the aunt's middle aged suitor of philandering. But when the suitor, who is owner of a great radio chain discovers that he and Horton are old pals, the stage is set for Horton to become a radio star.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good for tired nerves. Family."

+ Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: very entertaining; children, 8-12: slight interest."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Fair farce; Y: Debatable; C: No."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Some very comical situations and an excellent cast."

+ Wkly Guide D 29 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Edward Everett Horton proved again that, given good lines, he's in the Charles Ruggles-Roland Young class of sly, observant, humorous acting. No, even without the good lines, he gets there just the same."

+ New Statesman & Nation p188 F 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 Ja 4 '36

"It's grand for a laugh."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 F 22 '36

"This one can be chalked up as just a bit better than average program fare. In most situations they should like it."

+ Film Curb p11 F 1 '36

"Fairly entertaining farce, with limited plot and action, best for the drawing room comedy fans."

+ Film Daily p13 F 21 '36

"Although it is a little silly at times, it will probably get by with non-discriminating people. . . Because of the one [risque] situation it is unsuitable for children or adolescents. Harmless for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 25 '36

"Maybe it doesn't make much sense, but it does make a lot of entertaining nonsense engagingly presented. The script is gayly and naturally dialogued and makes the fun grow out of the situations with easy nonchalance."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 12 '36

"This lighthearted comedy of mistaken identities is an excellent one to couple with a sombre drama. . . The film closes on a hilarious note when Horton is revealed as a success at last, as a radio crooner."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 F 13 '36

"As with the exception of Miss Conklin the cast is composed of older artists, it might appear that the appeal of the picture would be directed mainly at more mature audience contingents. Such is not the case, however, inasmuch as comedy is the principal motivation and Horton's popularity with all ages and classes should be enough to convince general audiences of the picture's entertainment worth to them."

+ Motion Pict Herald p52 N 16 '35

"For general mass entertainment, it must be considered lightweight, will be twin-billed or booked on premium-chance game days. Estimate: best for class sectors."

N Y Exhibitor p27 F 10 '36

"Paramount has turned out a fairly entertaining comedy in 'Her Master's Voice.' Probably won't startle with its grosses but should get its share of dual business."

+ Variety p37 F 26 '36

"With a stronger name cast, this top notch feature would attract important grosses. As is, it will serve best on double bills. Entertainment is there from start to finish with an expert cast, all from the stage, trouping the story in grand fashion."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 12 '36

HERE COMES COOKIE. Ag 30 '35 65min Paramount

Players: George Burns. Gracie Allen.
George Barbier. Betty Furness

Director: Norman McLeod

"The story deals with a rich man who has two daughters. One of them is being courted by a fortune hunter, much to the father's disgust. Therefore he signs over his millions to his other daughter for sixty days in order to prove how false are the motives of the pursuing Romeo." N Y Herald Tribune

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A fast moving hilarious farce. . . The picture is well presented, the director has made clever use of all material especially the many amusing vaudeville skits, providing light breezy entertainment with many chuckles for the audience."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 14 '35

"A jolly bit of nonsense filled with the usual Burns and Allen absurdities and some good vaudeville numbers. A matter of taste for family."

+ Jt Estimates S 15 '35

"Amusing incidents, a good supporting cast, some really worthwhile vaudeville numbers and a bit of a story produce acceptable entertainment for the entire family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

N Y Herald Tribune p9 O 12 '35

"Nothing in the picture makes sense and the result is lots of fun, if you are one of the thousands with a weakness for Miss Allen's special brand of foolishness."

+ N Y Sun p9 O 12 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

HERE COMES THE BAND. Ag 30 '35 77min MGM

Players: Ted Lewis. Virginia Bruce. Harry Stockwell. Nat Pendleton

Director: Paul Sloane

"The story of the composition of an American song based upon our country's folk music serves as a vehicle for Ted Lewis' vaudeville acts, and introduces Harry Stockwell to screen audiences who will remember best his fine voice in 'Headin' Home.'" Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

Christian Century p1294 O 9 '35

"Family."

Jt Estimates S 1 '35

"Well known stage and screen personalities fail to make of this musical comedy other than mediocre entertainment." Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A. Y and C: Entertaining."

Par M p54 Mr '36

HERE COMES TROUBLE. F 21 '36 65min 20th century-Fox

Players: Paul Kelly. Arline Judge. Mona Barrie. Gregory Ratoff

Director: Lewis Seiler

"[The] story is woven around two gangs of crooks trying to get a famous ruby supposed to be in the possession of the passenger of a ship who is really a detective out to get the crooks. Paul Kelly, member of the crew, gets involved when Mona Barrie, one of the crooks, presents him with a lighter in which the stolen gem is hidden." Variety (Hollywood)

HERE COMES TROUBLE—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A little too sophisticated for children. Entertaining for adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul F 15 '36

"The picture is but mildly entertaining. Adults and young people."

— + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) F 8 '36

"Wearisome to a degree, despite some good characterizations. Adults."

— + Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"The production is a striking example of wasted effort. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"This is a mediocre picture combining a hackneyed theme, an undistinguished cast, unsuccessful attempts at comedy and only now and then an effective bit of direction. Fair for the family."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women F 5 '36

"Fair. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide F 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Here Comes Trouble' shrieks movie. It never displays true cinema. The lighting is decidedly flat, the camera angles are commonplace and lacking are the moving shots that would have helped. It is a witless affair, clumsy and noisy. . . Gregory Rattoff, a fine actor, should not have been cast in the film. He has an explanatory speech, important to the picture, and his delivery of it, due to the broad accent he has, is very difficult to understand. I missed nearly half of it." Allan Hersholt

— — Hollywood Spec p14 F 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Picture puts Kelly on top of the heap as a clever comedian. Family."

+ Box Office p35 Mr 7 '36

"'Here Comes Trouble' probably will mean just that to most exhibitors who play it. A trite story of the attempt by crooks to get hold of a famous jewel, it is draggy and uninteresting. . . There have been much, much better 'quickies' made and it seems astonishing that a major company would make such a film, much less release it."

— — Film Curb p13 F 8 '36

"This one falls in the run-of-the-mill category, being undistinguished in any respect, although it has a fair amount of action and is sufficiently aided by comedy to get by in the lesser grinds."

— + Film Daily p4 Mr 7 '36

"Just program fare. But it should appeal to audiences who are not too discriminating about plot defects. . . Since the picture is treated more as a comedy than a crook melodrama, exhibitors may find it suitable for children and Sundays. [Family.]"

— + Harrison's Reports F 22 '36

"Completely misfiring as a comedy of jewel hijacking on the high seas, 'Here Comes Trouble' turns to familiar slapstick and knock-about routines. The result is confusing to say the least. . . Only a trifle of the story comes through and the laughs are not in the dialogue but in the routines. . . 'Here Comes Trouble' may just get by in smaller bookings. It is weak even as a class B release."

— Hollywood Reporter p4 F 1 '36

"With a capable cast and an interesting story of international jewel thieves, this production should please in the subsequent runs for which it is aimed."

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 F 3 '36

"Pretty much ado about nothing, although about half a dozen conflicting and counteracting sub-plots are hitched on to the basic motivations. . . Because it is just so much film footage, showmanship faces as many headaches as undoubtedly did those who made it. Previewed in the Uptown Theatre, first-run neighborhood house, to a confused audience."

— — Motion Pict Herald p49 F 15 '36

"Estimate: program; twin-bill; premium."

N Y Exhibitor p37 F 25 '36

"As full of holes as a golf course 'Here Comes Trouble' can hope for little more than double bills. Yarn is jumpy throughout, never more than passably interesting. Production is class B."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 1 '36

HERE'S TO ROMANCE. O 4 '35 85min 20th century-Fox

Players: Nino Martini. Genevieve Tobin. Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink. Maria Gambarelli

Director: Alfred E. Green

"The story is the familiar conflict of love and ambition, with the young aspirant of opera fame trying to keep peace between his fiancée, a ballet student, and his patroness, a rich young woman, inclined to be possessive. For balance, there is her husband, flirtatious, and also a patron of the arts as they concern talented young ladies. There are scenes in Paris garrets, behind the scenes and on the stage of the opera, and a denouement in a ten-cent store, where the hero is reduced to demonstrating songs—operatic as well as jazz." Boston Transcript

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Christian Century p1326 O 16 '35

"Excellent cast, fine orchestral score and rare direction make the picture delightful entertainment for all audiences. Family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Nino Martini's glorious voice adds brilliance to a skillfully directed story. . . Superb opera selections. Mature-family." DAR

"The cast is excellent, the scenery and lighting beautiful, and the music grand. The appearance of Mme. Schumann-Heink is a great treat and the singing of Martini glorious. Excellent entertainment for the family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"One of the pictures that must not be missed. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"The admirable cast, the settings in New York and Paris, and the almost continuous music, both light and classical, insure enjoyment of the highest type. Adolescents, 12 to 16: good; children, 8 to 12: good but mature." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 13 '35

"Delightful musical production. . . Martini sings superbly, selections from Manon, I Pagliacci, Cavalleria Rusticana and La Tosca. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 3 '35

Mo Film Bul p170 N '35

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M N '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The producers may well be proud of this lovely musical comedy in which a simple but logical story, fine direction, beautiful photography and an unusually well-chosen cast topped by Nino Martini and his exquisite voice are all combined to make outstanding entertainment. . . Mme. Schumann-Heink makes her film debut in a charming characterization. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Good."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide O 5 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Mr. Martini is attractive and an engaging actor. . . Madame Schumann-Heink has a little triumph in what might have been a slight enough part in less capable hands. Her singing of Brahms' lullaby is a delight. For dancing, there is the feather lightness of Maria Gambarelli and Escudero's nimble gypsy stepping." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 11 '35

N Y Herald Tribune p19 O 3 '35

"'Here's to Romance' is not meant to be funny, but it is very funny indeed." Graham Greene

Spec p984 D 13 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c D 1 '35

Stage p10 N '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

HI GAUCHO. O 11 '35 60min RKO

Players: John Carroll. Steffi Duna. Rod LaRocque

Director: Thomas Atkins

"The romantic meeting of a handsome young Gaucho and a beautiful young girl, son and daughter of rival feudal families, frustrates the pretentious betrothal plans of an ambitious mother. Excitement and complications are added in the character of Escuro, the bandit." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This colorful outdoor picture has fine photography, good comedy, delightful singing, and an interesting Argentine background. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

S 18 '35

"Fair entertainment. Family."

+ — Jt Estimates S 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p195 D '35

"Fair. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Charming Spanish atmosphere and beautiful photography somewhat redeem this otherwise mediocre production. . . Good music, fair direction, fine riding and beautiful horses. Family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Fair."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[The picture includes] bandits, horsemanship, picturesque costumes [and] handsome photography."

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

Springf'd Republican p7c O 20 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

HIS FAMILY TREE. S 20 '35 68min RKO

Players: James Barton. Margaret Callahan. William Harrigan

Director: Charles Vidor

"[An] old Irishman arrives in America to find his socially and politically inclined son and daughter-in-law are ashamed of him. The son finally wins a mayoralty with his aid." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

Christian Century p1294 O 9 '35

"Light comedy. Family."

Jt Estimates S 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p171 N '35

"A and Y: Fair; C: Doubtful."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"As a shabby old Irishman, James Barton may be credited with making a skilful and moving film out of [a] slight political drama." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript D 13 '35

Springf'd Republican p14 D 25 '35

Stage p10 N '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

HIS FIGHTING BLOOD. O 15 '35 60min Ambassador

Players: Kermit Maynard. Polly Ann Young

Director: John W. English

Melodrama of the Northwest Mounted.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Melodrama of the Northwest Mounted provides fast action entertainment that the followers of this kind of picture will delight in."

+ Film Curb p12 O 15 '35

"Nicely photographed, with some songs, the picture will satisfy any outdoor loving audience. Family drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p32 N 10 '35

HIS NIGHT OUT. O 2 '35 72min Universal

Players: Edward Everett Horton. Irene Hervey

Director: William Nigh

From short story, Skinner's Dress Suit, by Henry Irving Dodge. "Horton as the timid clerk, who finding he has only three months to live, takes the blame when he thinks the heroine is responsible for a theft, eventually proves a hero when the $100,000 bonds that were stolen are recovered through him." (N Y Exhibitor)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Good of kind. Y: Amusing. C: Fair." Christian Century p1606 D 11 '35

"Laugh follows laugh in a picture which will please family audiences. Adults and 8-14: good." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Innocuous comedy. . . Family, but mature for children." DAR

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

HIS NIGHT OUT—Continued

"This picture can safely be classified as a program filler. Good. Family—mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The film shows hasty construction. Nevertheless, it develops some excellent comedy which will appeal to adult audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Good, wholesome entertainment for family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Excellent vehicle for Horton's particular type of humor. A clean, wholesome comedy. Family." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
+ Fox W Coast Bul N 30 '35

"A hilariously amusing farcical comedy. . . An able well chosen cast, fast tempo and clever direction make this a highly entertaining picture. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 18 '35

"Family."
Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Good comedy."
Par M p54 Mr '36

"Laugh follows laugh in a picture which will please family audiences."
+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Very funny comedy. Family."
+ Wkly Guide O 12 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '35

"A decidedly minor comedy which fails to be amusing." T. M. P.
— N Y Times p19 N 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

Film Curb p17 N 1 '35

"Engaging and highly individual comedy."
+ Motion Pict Daily p11 O 17 '35

"Family drama."
N Y Exhibitor p31 N 10 '35
Variety p39 N 20 '35

HITCH HIKE LADY. D 18 '35 74min Republic

Players: Alison Skipworth, Mae Clarke, Arthur Treacher, Jimmy Ellison, Warren Hymer

Director: Aubrey Scotto

After receiving glowing letters about his ranch in California, an English woman decides to spend a small inheritance in visiting her son. He is in prison in San Quentin and has covered up his long absence by the story of a supposed fruit ranch. The mother, fleeced of her savings by a crook is left stranded on the road to California. She meets some men of dubious character, and through their help is reunited with her son on a real ranch provided by the men and never finds out about her son's prison record.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"This is an amusing story. Family."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 1 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Good comedy."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good entertainment spiked with smart dialogue and clever situations. . . Picture is full of twists and surprises and the clever unfolding of the plot lifts it above the average film fare."

+ Box Office p33 D 28 '35

Film Curb p11 Ja 4 '36

"This has plenty of laughs and will please all types of audiences. It has a human story and Director Aubrey Scotto handled the pathos and comedy well."

+ Film Daily p10 D 17 '35

"Very good! It is an entertaining comedy, with human interest, and a pleasant romance. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"
+ Harrison's Reports D 28 '35

"This picture has plenty of box-office lure. . . It has fast-moving comedy that starts with a rush and ends with a laugh. Alison Skipworth shows she is as good in emotional roles as she is with comedy."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 D 12 '35

"A family type attraction, this production has the elements that make for substantial comedy entertainment. . . While there is nothing new or novel to the hitch-hike premise, the manner in which it is presented here carries an atmosphere of refreshing difference, as the factors of comedy, romance, action and deception are capably merged in dialogue and action. Moving to a fairly fast tempo, interest is created quickly, and though many odd twists are interwoven, that quality is continually maintained."

+ Motion Pict Herald p52 D 21 '35

"Estimate: good."
+ N Y Exhibitor p33 Ja 10 '36

"Best effort from Republic in a long time. Good entertainment on any double lay-out and should gain fair grosses in some houses soloing. . . Story is an achievement as conceived by Wallace MacDonald, the former screen player. Add to this some polished performances."

+ Variety p15 Ja 22 '36

"Republic has taken the topical subject of hitch hiking and with the aid of clever treatment, expert direction and capable assistance from all departments has molded 'Hitch Hike Lady' into a highly polished comedy. . . Alison Skipworth delivers an outstanding performance as the mother, who provides an undercurrent of pathos by her sincerity and faith in mankind."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 13 '35

HITCH HIKE TO HEAVEN. D 1 '35 65min
Invincible

Players: Henrietta Crosman, Norman Houston, Anita Page, Herbert Rawlinson

Director: Charles Lamont

The domineering grandmother of a theatrical family has no patience with motion pictures in which her son is a shining star. An extra girl who plays in the grandmother's troupe is innocently cast as a correspondent in a divorce suit of the motion picture star. Because of the divorce suit's unsavory aspects, the star loses his popularity but learns to love the young girl.

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

"It's all good stuff, a story of stage folks that is new and interesting and dramatic. It is expertly played by the leading characters. The production is above average."

+ Film Curb p9 Ja 25 '36

"[It] should do all right in the family houses. Giving the fans a bit of insight into the backstage operations of Hollywood, and performed by a cast that contains plenty of good acting talent, this story of show life is generally entertaining despite the fact that it is nothing that is either radically new or particularly punchy."

Film Daily p6 Mr 13 '36

"With some capable character actors, an interesting story, this should please the family trade."

+ N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

"An independently-made picture of show folk, 'Hitch Hike to Heaven' is both mediocre and fanciful. It has the odds against it in holding to the water level at the box office."

+ Variety p29 Mr 18 '36

"Picture is held up for better than average merit in its program class by skillful playing of principals and several members of supporting cast. Performances rate all the higher because they overcome handicap of conventional and, in spots, stodgy direction and mediocre photography."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 15 '36

HONG KONG NIGHTS. S 15 '35 59min Fetter
Players: Tom Keene. Wera Engels. Warren Hymer

Director: E. Mason Hopper

"The story of the dangers faced by a young man appointed by the American Consulate in Hong Kong to capture an escaped American convict who is delivering guns and ammunition to the natives." Int Fed of Cath Alumnae

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good. Suitable for Catholic schools and family nights." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 30 '35

Mo Film Bul p171 N '35

"A and Y: Action melodrama; C: Exciting for nervous."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 N 23 '35

"Set in a Chinese locale, with the business of gun smuggling as its motivating force, this yarn has plenty of melodramatic action and suspense plus enough comedy to make it a generally satisfying program offering."

+ Film Daily p7 D 24 '35

"Mixed in with all this are Warren Hymer comedy, many fights, intrigue, authentic Chinese background, fast action. Family melodrama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 O 10 '35

(*)HOT PAPRIKA. D 12 '35 18min Columbia

Players: Andy Clyde

Director: Preston Black

"Andy Clyde goes on a trip for his health to the Latin American republic of Paprika, where he runs afoul of the revolution, and gets himself in dutch with the government troops. Andy is lined up against the wall before a firing squad, and escapes by a fluke and saves the day for the revolutionists. Thus he becomes a national hero." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p48 Ja 18 '36

"Good Andy Clyde technique in a yarn that has plenty of action and excitement and a peppy senorita."

+ Film Daily p14 Ja 3 '36

"The offering definitely follows a formula vein and will be hard put to provoke amusement."

— Motion Pict Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"This has few gags that aren't outrageously burlesqued. The result is silly, depending on Andy Clyde's ability to draw laughs by appearance and dumbness. Fair."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p30 Ja 10 '36

HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES. F 29 '36 70min Republic

Players: Irving Pichel. Phillips Holmes. Rosita Moreno. Mae Clarke

Director: Arthur Lubin

Based on the novel of the same title by Meredith Nicholson. "Story depicts vicious workings of an international espionage system, headquartered in an elaborate Parisian hotel affording lavish gambling halls and entertainment for nobility and tourists." (Variety [Hollywood])

Trade Paper Reviews

"A fast-action story of intrigue dealing with an European spy ring trying to outwit England. It is well-mounted, finely directed and [contains] standout performances by the entire cast."

+ Box Office p13 Mr 14 '36

"It is a pretty interesting espionage melodrama, which should entertain the average picture-goer fairly well. Suitable for all. Family."

+ — Harrison's Reports Mr 21 '36

"Drama of international espionage, this offers everything new but the title. Well produced, with romantic love interest and comedy balancing the suspense of the motivating plot, the film has that quality which should interest general audiences."

The character of the story plus the names gives the exhibitor a fair opportunity to develop an interest-creating campaign emphasizing the novelty of the adaptation. Based on the novel by Meredith Nicholson, the modern screen play is an intelligent departure from the original."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 F 28 '36

"The subject of spies usually being an engaging topic, it is presented here in a manner that is both entertaining and of much showmanship availability. Previewed in the Fox Wilshire Theatre, Los Angeles deluxe neighborhood house. The audience watched the picture attentively and appeared to be deeply absorbed in the manner in which it pictured the workings of a world spy ring."

+ Motion Pict Herald p50 Mr 7 '36

"Republic has given this trite story an excellent cast of box office names plus a lavish production, topping average run of lot's product. Had it not been interpreted by careless screen treatment, it would have a chance."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 27 '36

(*)HUNTERS' PARADISE. N 30 '35 10min Columbia

Players: Ford Bond

"Opens with a safari in India after tiger, then bird hunting with a cheetah as retriever, capturing alligators by hand, and rounding up

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

HUNTERS' PARADISE—Continued

fawns with dog and net. Best bits concern the corraling of kangaroos in Australia and the capture of a mountain lion in Western United States with the aid of a pack of highly-trained dogs." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good."
+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36
"For adults not too sensitive."
Jt Estimates D 15 '35
Sel Motion Pict Ja '36
"Family."
Wkly Guide D 14 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"A variety of fairly interesting shots, not all new, show how game hunting is carried on in different parts of the world."
+ — Box Office p32 D 28 '35
"Out-of-the-ordinary hunting scenes, covering the globe."
Film Daily p4 D 12 '35

I

I CONQUER THE SEA. D 28 '35 68min Acad-emy

Players: Steffi Duna, Stanley Morner, Douglas Walton
Director: Victor Halperin

"This tells a story of the whaling men of Newfoundland. Woven in is a romance, and the conflict which exists between the native whalers and the Portuguese cod fishermen of the village." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A too tragic story. . . Lacking in comedy relief this picture almost falls into the category of educational features." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs
Fox W Coast Bul Ja 25 '36

"A well chosen cast capably directed; magnificent shots of the whalers at sea and the return of the small craft with its prize, add much to the realism of this unusual and deeply moving picture."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ja 11 '36

"A deeply interesting story, beautifully produced and capably directed, 'I Conquer The Sea' merits high praise."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 15 '36

"Objectionable in part."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Thrilling sea film; C: Pretty strong."
Par M p54 Mr '36

"The plot is trite, that of two brothers in love with the same girl and the sacrifice one makes, but the scenes of harpooning and the simplicity of the fisherfolk make an interesting and at times a thrilling tale."
+ — Wkly Guide Ja 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"If 'I Conquer the Sea' were more skillfully cut and synchronized, if its interposed story were slightly less trite, it might be a really important film. The background of whale-hunting off the coast of Newfoundland is an excellent one, the picture is photographed with . . . breath-taking skill, and it is difficult to see how the acting could be improved. But somehow it just misses." B. L.
— + Boston Transcript p3 Mr 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good photography with some excellent whaling shots that provide thrills and suspense. Family."
+ Box Office p49 F 8 '36

"An interesting, exciting and romantic tale of the Newfoundland whaling men. . . It offers a novel and very entertaining feature for any class of theatre and is certain to be well liked."
+ Film Curb p17 Ja 18 '36

"[It] is a credit to the independent field, and tells a wholesome and simple story of the Nova Scotia whalers tied up with a love story that rings sincere. The production is marked by extreme naturalness and faithfully portrays the life of the folks in the little fishing village."
+ Film Daily p12 Ja 16 '36

"Pretty good entertainment. The interesting feature of this picture is the Newfoundland whaling country background, and the actual scenes of the fishermen harpooning a whale and bringing it in. These scenes are thrilling, for the task is not an easy one. . . Suitable for all. Very good for small towns. [Family.]"
+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 25 '36

"The film has been well produced, and presents an interesting and occasionally exciting picture of the battles which result between the fishermen and their anticipated prey."
+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 16 '36

"A drama of love, heroism and sacrifice told against the thrilling action background of whale hunting, 'I Conquer The Sea' offers much to engage the attention of showmen and audiences. . . Narrated in a simple, straightforward manner, with the quality of human interest always emphasizing dialogue and action, there is an atmosphere of realism and authenticity to the production that precludes anything savoring of theatrical artificiality."
+ Motion Pict Herald p38 Ja 25 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods; twin bills."
N Y Exhibitor p29 F 10 '36

"As a whaling story, with all the thrills attached to harpooning expeditions, this may attract, but as screen entertainment it has extremely limited appeal. . . The effort to combine some truly vivid shots of giant whales being speared and a sketchy story is not aided particularly here either by the writing, acting or direction. . . Lack of humor is another detriment."
— + Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

"Excitement and tragedies of the Newfoundland whaling folk are effectively used in this novel background drama as considerably better than average offering, from the story and performance standpoint."
+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 17 '36

I DREAM TOO MUCH. N 29 '35 95min RKO

Players: Lily Pons, Henry Fonda, Eric Blore, Osgood Perkins
Director: John Cromwell

"Two young music students are happily married until [the] girl wins success first and [her] husband resents her supporting the family. She arranges his operatic score as a musical comedy; it scores a hit and he becomes a celebrity while she retires to domestic life." Box Office

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Enjoyable; Y: Excellent; C: Mature but good."

Christian Century p94 Ja 15 '36

"Excellent."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Lily Pons' glorious, crystal-clear voice in lilting song will thrill music lovers. Slow tempo. Mature." DAR

"The story plot is somewhat shopworn, and the production is overlong, but it is so permeated with beautiful music and with the charming personality of Lily Pons that these weaknesses can be easily overlooked. Directed with originality, it is wholly delightful entertainment. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"A lively and pleasant story with some of the best singing possible to hear on the screen. A couple of grand opera selections and new music by Jerome Kern. Family." Nat Bd of R

"This picture . . . is above average entertainment. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"To lovers of music, grand opera in particular, this picture offers much. . . . Alcoholic marriages have always been frowned upon and using this method of bringing together the principals was a breach of good judgment and good taste. Adults." Nat Fed of Business and Professional Women's Clubs

"Of course, Lily Pons' birdlike notes dominate the film which is notable also for refreshing comedy and adroit turns of plot." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Delightful music, pleasing scenery, good cast, and direction, all tend to make a highly entertaining picture. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Among the many delightful musical numbers, the star's rendition of the 'Bell Song' from 'Lakmé' is memorable for its exquisite charm and clarity. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"The plot is perhaps stereotyped but because of the original humor, novelty of Parisian settings and skill of the cast, this fact does not detract materially from its entertaining qualities. This may be recommended as one of the best of the finer type of musical films. Adolescents: excellent; children: good." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"Excellent. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Excellent entertainment; Y and C: Splendid."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is the singing, Miss Pons's lively personality and the acting of the cast assembled around her that give the picture its merit. The story is rather obviously fabricated, as are most such stories, to provide the setting for her songs. Though this department as a rule yields to none in its admiration for Mr. Kern, the film might have been even better if there had been more operatic music. Miss Pons is not always available to sing for the movies. And there are other singers who can carry Mr. Kern's melodies, pleasant though they may be." E. F. Melvin

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Ja 2 '36

"Mme. Pons reveals a talent for gaminerie besides displaying her soloist abilities in an operatic presentation of the Bell Song from 'Lakmé,' and singing several of the compositions of Jerome Kern and Dorothy Field."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 13 '35

"The motion picture debut of petite Lily Pons, the fragile diva, will be a surprise to cinema followers, for they will find a sparkling, lovable new personality who carries from the stage of the opera a great voice that is set on film as naturally and capably as the performance of an established cinema comedienne, to the music and laughter of a musical comedy bubbling with fun." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p219 D 20 '35

"I will say that I, personally, get some of my best cinema thrills when one of the real singers is hitting on all eight—and I, myself, can't sing a straight line. I like singing, but I hate singers, and I am going on a one-man rampage if I have to listen to any more biographies of singers. Most of these singing pictures would be better if they expurgated everything but the singing. 'I Dream Too Much' . . . is exceptionally clever in getting its songs into the picture . . . but it is another singer plot, just the same—better than most, but a singer plot, nevertheless." Don Herold

Life p20 F '36

"Miss Lily Pons contrives to sing a little more in tune and with less of a vibrato than at the Metropolitan. It is said that she possesses moderate comedy sense. That may very well be. Perhaps in her next picture the scenarists will permit her to prove it." Robert Stebbins

— + New Theatre p41 Ja '36

"[Miss Pons's] English is not always as clear as it should be in the Kern numbers, but her voice is effectively recorded and registers with genuine effectiveness. In addition, she plays her scenes of gamin comedy with genuine charm and handles her emotional episodes as well as necessary." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p15 N 29 '35

"Equipped with a good romantic story, hampered only slightly by slow direction, this new musical film is a happy occasion. . . . The script is full of pleasant fantasy, the cast a handsome and engaging one, the score and Lily Pons's voice equally delightful to music lovers." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p36 N 29 '35

"Fortified by superb mechanical recording, Miss Pons proves to be a thorough delight in this conventional and musically undistinguished tale." Andre Sennwald

+ — N Y Times p7x D 8 '35

"Besides possessing one of the loveliest voices in the world, Miss Pons is an accomplished and attractive actress who can hold her own in the company of more experienced performers. . . . One can see that the plot is not exactly striking, but, nevertheless, the little fable is so engagingly and humorously performed that it makes for an entirely charming little screen comedy. Chiefly, though, the film is concerned with giving Miss Pons chances to sing. This she does beautifully. . . . All in all, the occasion is quite a triumph for both the star and screen." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p31 N 29 '35

"In general, the story is bright and lively. . . . [Miss Pons] does so well that I feel she deserves the best, and I think that this film just misses being one of the great charmers. The trouble is that old one which always seems to turn up in musical movies. . . . It's plot trouble. Too much plot. Too much situation. There is less of that kind of thing here than usual, but there's enough to take off the fine edge of things." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p121 D 7 '35

"When the star is [singing] the entertainment is wholly delightful, but when the director insists upon following the dictates of the

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

I DREAM TOO MUCH—Continued

scenarists, the film is deluged with narrative of lingering tendencies. Romance is its keynote, but John Cromwell, the supervisor, makes so many sidetrips in search of variety that the action is cluttered. Miss Pons does not sing often enough and more of her voice and less of the story would not be amiss." Louise Mace

+ — Springf'd Republican p2 Ja 2 '36
Time p45 D 9 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Despite shortcomings of a thin story this is a delightfully entertaining picture with Lily Pons' marvelous singing alone worth the price of admission. . . Good direction," by John Cromwell, Operatic-musical-comedy."

+ Box Office p29 D 7 '35

"Lily Pons has absolutely everything, including an accent which in itself is lovable."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 D 28 '35

"Much amusing comedy, a fine production, a good supporting cast and painstaking direction. They ought to like it."

+ Film Curb p13 D 1 '35

"All they have promised for Lily Pons in her first for the screen has been more than fulfilled. She is sensational. Besides a gorgeous voice, she has genuine dramatic ability both in her comedy scenes and her dramatic interpretations."

+ Film Daily p7 N 27 '35

Motion Pict Daily p10 N 18 '35

"It also presents a newcomer to the screen, whose vocal ability is known, but whose flair for comedy is certain to prove a pleasing surprise to picture fans. . . It's almost certain that after this picture audiences will want to see her again."

+ Motion Pict Herald p70 N 23 '35

"Family comedy with music. 'I Dream Too Much' will not only bring to movie millions Lily Pons' voice but it will reveal her as a comedienne who has more than her voice to mark her as potential starring material. Well produced, with no check on the production cost, [the film] aims not at class appeal but entertainment which should attract all classes."

+ N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

"Songs are none too well spotted. . . Photography would have been good if the cameraman and the director had taken more care with close-ups."

— + Variety p15 D 4 '35

I FOUND STELLA PARISH. N 16 '35 84min
First national

Players: Kay Francis. Ian Hunter. Paul Lukas. Sybil Jason

Director: Mervyn LeRoy

A famous London actress with a prison record, desiring to protect her child, flees to New York where a reporter digs up the scandal of her past. Later he learns of her innocence and of her love for him.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Interesting; Y: Good; C: Beyond them."
Christian Century p1664 D 25 '35

"A well mounted picture that will hold its audience because of the chain of gripping dramatic events which are woven together by dialogue, settings, fine direction and acting. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 30 '35

"Adults and young people."
Jt Estimates N 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p195 D '35

"Good. Adults & young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"This is absorbing entertainment for adults."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 1 '35

"Mature."
Wkly Guide N 9 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'I Found Stella Parish' is merely an ordinary Hollywood film, uninspired but mechanically close to perfection. All the English scenes in it, of course, are wrong. . . [It] has a cinematographic unity and coherence that would be remarkable if these qualities were not common to so many American films. The mechanism, for example, does not creak." D. W. Buchanan

— + Canadian Forum p15 Ja '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '35

"The entertainment [is] reasonably good."
Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p16 N 4 '35

"Flowery dialogue does not help to make the plot less preposterous, nor the characters more likable." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p46 N 4 '35

"A sorry tale and one that has but few redeeming qualities. . . Miss Francis's unfortunate lisp continues to plague this corner; it makes even more unbelievable the notion that London could regard her Stella Parish as the Duse of the day." F. S. N.

— N Y Times p24 N 4 '35

Reviewed by Gerald Breitgam
N Y World-Telegram p14 N 2 '35

"The background is authentic and the drama occasionally verges on melodrama."
Springf'd Republican p2 N 15 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p54 N 16 '35

"It is nothing remarkable, just a bit above average in the dramatic line."

+ — Film Curb p6 N 15 '35

"A generally satisfying affair, especially for the women fans, chiefly because of the good performance by Kay Francis in a role that covers a wide range."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 N 2 '35

"Family drama."
N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

I GIVE MY HEART. O 1 '35 85min
Associated British

Players: Gitta Alpar. Owen Nares. Hugh Miller. Patrick Waddington

Director: Marcel Varnel

Made in England from the operetta The Du Barry, by Paul Knepler and J. M. Welleminski. "The story pictures the elevation of Jeanne, a Paris milliner, to the role of King's mistress in succession to the dead Madame Pompadour. The intrigue by which she is first married to the penniless Count Dubarry and then introduced to the King, in preference to the candidate of a rival court faction is treated in a musical comedy vein." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p146 D '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

"Gitta Alpar, from Vienna, has a series of good numbers and sings them all, particularly the title theme song, very well. She is the main appeal of the picture and her voice compensates for some shortcomings as a screen actress."

Motion Pict Daily p6 N 14 '35

"It is also well staged and notably better costumed than many British efforts, and its best spectacular effects come at the right place—the end."

+ Motion Pict Herald p66 N 16 '35

I LIVE FOR LOVE. S 28 '35 64min Warner
Players: Dolores Del Rio. Everett Marshall
Director: Busby Berkeley

In this light musical comedy a temperamental actress quarrels with her leading man and later when he becomes a great radio star she falls in love with him.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Well mounted, this picture is ably cast, interestingly directed, has good photography, and the beautiful voice of Everett Marshall adds much to its entertainment value. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 3 '35

"Fine singing and beautiful clothes in an otherwise undistinguished film. Family."

— + Jt Estimates S 15 '35

"Fair. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M N '35

"A mildly amusing light musical comedy. . . Slow motion but good direction, beautiful stage settings, gorgeous gowns. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"Family."

Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A commonplace musical of back-stage life."

— N Y Times px5 O 27 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

"Only mildly entertaining and is only saved by some excellent comedy and some songs."

— + Film Curb p11 O 15 '35

"Family comedy with music."

N Y Exhibitor p36 O 10 '35

I LIVE MY LIFE. O 4 '35 99min MGM

Players: Joan Crawford. Brian Aherne. Frank Morgan

Director: W. S. Van Dyke

From the story Claustrophobia, by A. Carter Goodloe. Set against a lavish background of New York society and outdoor scenery in Greece, this film tells the story of a spoiled young heiress and a serious young Irish archeologist who meet, quarrel and marry.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Christian Century p1358 O 23 '35

"This lively comedy is beautifully mounted and presented. [It is] a most entertaining picture, adroitly directed, most fittingly cast, with Joan Crawford, doing the best work of her career. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 5 '35

"Mature."

Jt Estimates O 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p195 D '35

"It is amazing to discover that the most hackneyed, threadbare plot when adroitly directed, beautifully mounted and enhanced by a well chosen, capable cast, can emerge as good entertainment. The picture has no ethical value and serves no problems, but the entire production is fast-moving, with clever dialogue, lavish stage settings and beautiful outdoor photography. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A and Y: Entertaining; C: Little interest." Par M p54 Mr '36

"The film abounds in the Van Dyke humor that enlivened 'The Thin Man.' The cast [is] full of likable players. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 5 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"W. S. Van Dyke's satirical directing touch helps largely in piling up the laughter."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '35

Reviewed by Richard Watts, Jr.

N Y Herald Tribune p9 O 12 '35

"One of the better Joan Crawford pictures. Nonsense, really, but enlivened by W. S. Van Dyke's direction."

+ N Y Times px5 O 20 '35

"An unusually alert series of tantrums and tussles."

+ New Yorker p4 N 16 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c O 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p56 N 16 '35

Film Curb p16 O 1 '35

"Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p35 O 10 '35

IF YOU COULD ONLY COOK. D 30 '35
73min Columbia

Players: Herbert Marshall. Jean Arthur. Lionel Stander. Alan Edwards. Leo Carrillo. Frieda Inescourt

Director: William A. Seiter

"It tells of a man and a girl who meet on a bench in Central Park and, because the only suitable want ad demands a couple, apply for the jobs of butler and cook in a country estate and get them. The man happens to be a millionaire, head of an automobile company, and the girl the orphaned daughter of a college professor. The man happens also to be engaged to marry within a week. Naturally he falls in love with his supposed wife, the cook." N Y Sun

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Pleasing; Y: Very good; C: Good." Christian Century p206 Ja 29 '36

"A sparkling comedy that keeps one chuckling throughout. Very good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; - Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

IF YOU COULD ONLY COOK—Continued

"Excellent entertainment. Family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"It is directed with a nice feeling for comedy values, and is excellently acted. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Jean Arthur delights with her naturalness, while Herbert Marshall's charm and ability will please. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"A sparkling comedy that keeps one chuckling throughout. Mature." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Light and lively. Family." Nat Bd of R

"Excellent entertainment with wide appeal in its blending of romance and humor. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 12 '36

Mo Film Bul p195 D '35

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Entertaining comedy; C: Mature." Par M p54 Mr '36

Selected Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Highly amusing comedy of two people who hired out as cook and butler to a man who turned out to be a racketeer. Light and lively. Family."

+ Wkly Guide D 14 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p6 D 24 '35

"'If You Could Only Cook' is a well-acted film, if you do not ask too much in the way of plausibility, and it will be found highly diverting." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p38 F '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

"One of the unsolved, but amiable, mysteries of Hollywood is the facility which expert scenarists have for transforming a feather into an honest yard of dapper wool. The plot-structure of Columbia's new flippant comedy is strictly in the feather school of lightweight story-making. The resulting scenario is excellent entertainment."

+ Lit Digest p22 D 21 '35

"Although the formula is familiar and the story not overrun with surprises, the photoplay is managed with dexterity and lightness, and, while you will find the work in a regulation plot tradition, you should enjoy its amiability and its easygoing romantic charm. . . Mr. Marshall and Miss Arthur are excellent in the leading roles, and Mr. Carrillo is effective in his characteristic part of jovial bandit. Lionel Stander, a really fine comedian, is immensely helpful as the gang chief's suspicious assistant, and the handsome Miss Inescourt obviously deserves better things than the small and unpleasant role of the routed fiancée." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p9 D 28 '35

"'If You Could Only Cook' is a gay, light comedy concocted along the same lines as 'Hands Across the Table' and 'It Happened One Night.' William A. Seiter keeps the audience chuckling from that first scene of a wedding rehearsal to that last extraordinary wedding sequence. Jean Arthur, at her forthright comedy best, and Herbert Marshall, not required to be at all noble this time, make a good romantic comedy pair." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p25 D 26 '35

"Herbert Marshall, wearing too often a hat like reporters are supposed to wear but seldom do, strives solemnly to coax the most out of the lead of [the film] but the texture of the production is too uneven. It has laughs but lacks pace. . . The sentimental touches which have marred films of the light-and-airy genre before have been applied again, although sparsely—and the inevitable result is like woolen patches on a fluffy print frock." M. B.

+ N Y Times p21 D 26 '35

"A merry movie full of light and laughter and it's all clean fun." Louise Mace

+ Spring'd Republican p2 D 26 '35

"'If You Could Only Cook' has a quality most easily assessed as charm, which definitely compensates for such minor shortcomings as its title."

+ Time p28 Ja 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Smart, refreshing entertainment geared for laughter and pleasure. It will delight the average fan."

+ Box Office p23 D 21 '35

"An entertaining yarn, well acted and produced. . . Marshall, Arthur and Carrillo turn in fine performances, picture has been well directed and should have appeal for all classes. Quite a bit above general program grade."

+ Film Curb p12 D 15 '35

"Despite a story that is not of very great weight, this production has been handled with ingenuity and tempo that make it thoroughly palatable fare for the fans at large. It's in the 'It Happened One Night' mood, with some good writing and continuous action to keep interest consistently keyed up."

+ Film Daily p3 D 27 '35

"Good entertainment. The production and acting are excellent. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports D 28 '35

"Clever dialogue and cast do much to give an ancient story audience appeal. . . The story and screen play are unconvincing, but the dialogue helps to smooth over impossible situations."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 D 11 '35

"Though the story may be far-fetched, the acting [and] writing [are fine], with the result a show that can be strongly recommended. Family comedy."

+ N Y Exhibitor p38 D 25 '35

"In this far-fetched bit of whimsy there's a mixture of humor and heart-tugging that should appeal to any class of audience. Neatly blended performances are turned in by Herbert Marshall and Jean Arthur, while the direction has all that it takes to keep them absorbed in a Cinderella theme."

+ Variety p44 Ja 1 '36

"Old masquerade pattern of rich man posing as poor man to find true love has been delightfully refreshed in smart writing, capital direction and persuasive comedy performances in this one. . . Only minor drawback to picture is occasional slowness of pace—a little too much lagging in dwelling on the assumed man-and-wife relationship of the butler and the cook in the midsection of the piece."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 7 '35

I'LL NAME THE MURDERER. Ja 27 '36
67min Puritan

Players: Ralph Forbes. Marion Shilling.
Malcolm MacGregor

Director: Raymond K. Johnson

"Story depicts columnist as a one man police organization who, in opposition to the police and a special investigating organization, solves a very complicated double murder and brings gangster leader to answer for the crimes." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Poor. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency F '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A tale of a newspaper columnist that will fit in nicely in the smaller spots. It is not big-time by any means but is a pleasing piece of entertainment for the not too particular."

+ — Film Curb p12 F 22 '36

"With night club sequences, some singing that runs to the usual pattern, it has some fair performances throughout, looks much more attractive than the usual low budget pictures. Estimate: for double features, neighborhoods."

+ N Y Exhibitor p59 Mr 10 '36

"Story and dialog are well written, but marred by faulty and jumpy editing. With faults eliminated it will bring picture up to the fair program class."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 12 '36

IN OLD KENTUCKY. N 22 '35 84min 20th century-Fox

Players: Will Rogers. Bill Robinson.
Charles Sellon. Dorothy Wilson

Director: George Marshall

From play of same title by Charles T. Dazey. "Will Rogers in a story about the feud between two horse trainers. He has charge of a steed that runs best on a wet track, and a rainmaker assists in the dénouement wherein the heroine rides the winner in the time-honored way of this long-popular melodrama of the stage." (Christian Science Monitor)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Good; Y and C: Excellent."
Christian Century p1574 D 4 '35

"Excellent. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A, Y and C: Excellent."
Par M p54 Mr '36

"Family. Junior matinee."
Wkly Guide N 9 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Never has Mr. Rogers been so versatile or ingratiating as in this film. The familiar mannerisms, lovable as they were are less apparent. No longer does Will slouch through the film twisting up his face or rumpling his hair, but moves purposefully and gives several exhibitions of tap dancing, modeled on Bill Robinson's, and almost as good as the original."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 15 '35

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 16 '35

"The last of the Will Rogers films is likely to be regarded with mingled emotions. Possessing its pleasantly farcical humors and its traces of clumsy plot maneuvering, 'In Old Kentucky' must be judged chiefly on your reaction to the posthumous sight of one of the nation's most revered figures indulging in extravagant comedy." Richard Watts, Jr.
N Y Herald Tribune p10 N 30 '35

"This is a typical Rogers film, plenty of hokum, plenty of laughs, enough of the Oklahoman's homely philosophy. Since it must be a farewell, it is well that this is a cheerful farewell." Eileen Creehan
+ N Y Sun p8 N 30 '35

"From the treasure trove of the old Charles T. Dazey melodrama, which first saw the light of Broadway back in Ninety-four and has run through two previous screen editions, Sam Hellman and Gladys Lehman have purloined enough material for a warm, human and jolly comedy. Mr. Rogers has seldom found himself in finer fettle or in more agreeable company. 'In Old Kentucky' can be listed as a first-rate comedy and a handsome epitaph to twentieth century America's first humorist." F. S. N.

+ N Y Times p24 N 29 '35

Reviewed by William Boehnel
N Y World-Telegram p31 D 5 '35

"[The picture] is a rather minor affair."
John Mosher

+ New Yorker p122 D 7 '35

"Will Rogers is gone but his memory will linger through the fine understanding and humorous readings he has given his screen characters."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 N 21 '35

Time p46 D 9 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 N 30 '35

"'In Old Kentucky' is a delightful comedy."
+ Variety p15 D 4 '35

IN PERSON. N 22 '35 85min RKO

Players: Ginger Rogers. George Brent

Director: William A. Seiter

Based on a serial story of same title by Samuel Hopkins Adams. "A famous movie star suffers a nervous breakdown when mobbed by an admiring throng at a personal appearance. Disguised as an unattractive bachelor maid, she seeks solitude in a mountain retreat with a student of nature, who penetrates her incognito with happy results." (Calif Cong-of Par & Teachers)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Perhaps; Y: Amusing; C: Little interest."
Christian Century p1606 D 11 '35

"Good."
+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Adults: entertaining; 8-18: amusing; possible for family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"The direction is slow moving, the cast too good for so trivial a picture which is somewhat redeemed by the beautiful dancing of Ginger Rogers. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"The picture has plenty of action and the dialogue is amusing, but somehow the story misses fire as a satire on personal appearances. Good. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Nicely staged with some good dancing and singing, this film is acceptable family entertainment." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An undesirable Cabaret scene, in which Ginger Rogers dances on a table, is introduced, having no bearing on the plot. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Some good music and two clever dance routines for good measure [are included in this film]. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"It makes no pretense at either plausibility or subtle characterizations, but it attains its mission of providing an evening of whole-

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

IN PERSON—Continued

some fun. 12-16: amusing; 8-12: no interest."

Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
+ — Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"Family."

Jt Estimates N 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p196 D '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Rollicking comedy; C: Little interest."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"A romance, some lovely mountain scenery, clever dancing and singing give this picture its entertainment value. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Bright and literate with some incidental sly digs at movies, radio, and human folly in general. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 16 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p4 N 22 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

"This is Miss Rogers' first starring vehicle, and it is pretty sad. The story is a pulp romance, and VERY dull. . . Here is a nickel's worth of entertainment for which theatres everywhere are getting from forty to eighty-five cents, with stage shows sometimes thrown in which usually is a case of minus instead of plus." Don Herold

— Life p21 F '36

"The film goes on being quite reasonably bright all through. . . [It is] a pleasant, easy little picture."

+ New Statesman & Nation p188 F 8 '36

"[The] vehicle is so feeble and so clumsily padded that it is not likely to cause much of a sensation. . . and the thoughtless, instead of laying the work's defects on a third-rate script, are likely to blame it on the innocent Miss Rogers." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p18 D 13 '35

"The atmosphere is light, the idea fresh and the performances fairly spontaneous. . . [It] is a pleasant comedy." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p36 D 13 '35

"With many a huff and a puff, 'In Person' works up some laborious fun out of the situation, prolonging it far beyond its normal life-span." Andre Sennwald

— N Y Times p31 D 13 '35

"Among the complaints that may honestly be lodged against the narrative of 'In Person' are that it is pat and trifling and that it fritters away to nothing as it is unreel. The story of a spoiled and headstrong woman who is finally brought to her senses by a strong man who ignores her is a fairly standardized one by now. That in itself, however, is not a serious criticism, because if it were treated in a gay and sparkling manner and done with wit and imagination it could still result in a gay and frolicsome entertainment. Since the present version of this theme is told in a heavyhanded manner and is altogether lacking in invention, we may perhaps be pardoned if we point out that what it resolves itself down to is the traditional tug-of-war between two headstrong characters, with nothing to distinguish it from countless other variations of the same plot. . . Only middling fair is the best that can be said of 'In Person.'" William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p31 D 13 '35

"The Ginger Rogers movie has its bright moments, what with Miss Rogers herself being in evidence throughout most of it. Oddly enough, Hollywood has seized the occasion to show off one of its pretty stars as a fright. The plot demands it, and Miss Rogers doesn't shirk the problem. . . The whole sketch has its mildly lively incidents, a number of them somewhat solidified, to be sure, by George Brent's rather unbending behavior. I should add, perhaps, that though Miss Ginger has a chance to do a turn or two on her toes, she has no big Astaire moments in this little comedy." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p89 D 21 '35

Springf'd Republican p4c Ja 19 '36

Time p41 D 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

"[The picture] can be depended upon to keep an audience in, rare good humor throughout its presentation."

+ Film Curb p9 N 15 '35

"RKO has done handsomely by Ginger Rogers' first starring film, providing George Brent as the leading man, light romantic comedy and good songs."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 O 30 '35

"The picture, while being different in every way from those featuring Miss Rogers and Fred Astaire, does provide Ginger with ample opportunity to exercise her singing and dancing forte."

Motion Pict Herald p57 N 9 '35

"Family comedy."

N Y Exhibitor p36 N 25 '35

"Away from the Fred Astaire partnership, which catapulted Ginger Rogers into radiance as a screen satellite, 'In Person' is an unfortunate debut starring effort for her. It may fetch an abnormal amount of negative comment at the expense of Miss Rogers when it's strictly a script fault."

— Variety p12 D 18 '35

INDESTRUCTIBLE MRS TALBOT. See Lady consents (new title)

INVISIBLE RAY. D 30 '35 72min Universal

Players: Bela Lugosi. Frances Drake. Boris Karloff

Director: Lambert Hillyer

"Deep in Africa, a scientist discovers an invisible ray that contains all the destructive and part of the beneficial qualities of cosmic creation. When his domestic happiness is menaced he uses the ray to turn killer." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"The ensuing fantastic story is rendered plausible by a highly imaginative script, good cast and excellent photography. Adults: thrilling; 14-18: interesting; 8-14: no." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"One of the most logical and plausible fantastic mystery tales yet brought to the screen. . . Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"The change in a scientist from a man of intelligence and poise to that of a madman infused with radium poison is not pleasant to behold. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Interesting and very well photographed, this film will fascinate audiences over 14 who enjoy the fanciful and pseudo-scientific." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An impossible fantasy with no constructive value. The drinking scenes are objectionable. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Although some excellent astronomical slides are used to enhance credibility, the whole idea is based on false principles of science. . . Adolescents of the older groups; children: no." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 18 '36

"The story is convincingly told; the direction thoughtful and intelligent; each member of a most able cast gives a realistic performance; lighting and photography effectively used, in all an exceptional entertainment for the mature audience."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ja 8 '36

"A spectacular and fantastic thriller of the horrific type. . . Suitability: adult. It is very definitely not a film for children or for the nervous of any age."

Mo Film Bul p28 Ja 27 '36

"A: Horror melodrama; Y and C: No." Par M p54 Mr '36

"A thrilling and dramatic horror story." Wkly Guide Ja 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Marguerite Tazelaar
N Y Herald Tribune p8 Ja 11 '36

"Universal, which seems to have a monopoly on films of this sort, has made its newest penny dreadful with technical ingenuity and the pious hope of frightening the children out of a year's growth. There is evidence, too, that Carl Laemmle wanted to say 'boo' to maturer audiences. In a printed foreword is the legend, 'That which you are now to see is a theory whispered in the cloisters of science. Tomorrow these theories may startle the universe as a fact.' Boo right back at you, Mr. Laemmle!" F. S. N. N Y Times p9 Ja 11 '36

"If the object of a horror film is the terrorizing of the timid moviegoer let us doff our caps to 'The Invisible Ray,' which in lieu of subtler qualities to keep its plot moving, substitutes a medley of pseudo scientific experiments, gruesome murders and vandalism. Granting the premise, then, that not much sense is ever expected from a shocker, 'The Invisible Ray,' by incredible but crudely effective clashes between a half-crazed scientist and the people he believes ruined him, achieves its purpose and constantly keeps its audience on pins and needles. . . Although 'The Invisible Ray' is nothing to write home about, it is, in spite of its unbelievable antics, fairly exciting." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p21 Ja 11 '36

Spring'd Republican p2 Ja 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p38 D 7 '35

"It packs the chills and thrills and all fans who like this sort of entertainment will go for it. . . It is a bit above average popular entertainment."

+ — Film Curb p16 Ja 18 '36

Film Daily p3 Ja 11 '36

"A well-produced horror melodrama; it holds one in tense suspense. But the material is extremely gruesome, and the closing scenes leave one with a sickening feeling. Too gruesome for children, adolescents, or Sundays. Adult entertainment."

+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 11 '36

"On the whole the film is good entertainment, interest-holding and salable, and largely without the 'horror' theme which has featured many of the films of Karloff and Lugosi."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 11 '36

"This production is a typical Karloff-Lugosi shudder picture and therein lies its entertainment values. . . Of interest is the fact that Karloff appears without the distorted makeup of his 'Frankenstein' pictures."

+ Motion Pict Herald p39 Ja 25 '36

N Y Exhibitor p13 Ja 25 '36

"It isn't blood-curdling to the point achieved in some Hollywoodian efforts but it is different and fairly entertaining. . . Scenes in Africa are a bit absurd but the radium idea and the power it generates makes a grand excuse for horror stuff."

+ — Variety p18 Ja 15 '36

"'Invisible Ray' deservedly will stand among the top productions in Universal's fine gallery of mystery and horror fantasies, a class of pictures on which this studio virtually has a patent. . . It will fulfill every entertainment requirement wherever bizarre and macabre melodrama is relished. . . Karloff has never done a more impressively macabre character nor given a more credible and well conceived performance. Transition of the scientific zealot to the mad destroyer is superbly managed."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 11 '36

INVITATION TO THE WALTZ. N 14 '35 80min
Associated British

Players: Lillian Harvey, Wendy Toye, Carl Esmond, Harold Warrender

Director: Paul Merzbach

Made in England, "An English dancing girl is asked by the British ambassador to Wurttemberg to influence the impecunious duke to sell his army to the Allies instead of to Napoleon. She is in love with an officer, who is ignorant of her mission and who assumes that she has become the duke's mistress. Napoleon descends on the city, the dancer is captured and the officer faces court-martial for trying to arrange her escape, but Napoleon frees the girl and benevolently arranges for her to carry off her lover concealed in a trunk." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p146 D '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"The production has not made the most of the material or of the artists, the general atmosphere being one of staginess. The American appeal of the picture seems likely to be slight."

— Motion Pict Daily p7 O 30 '35

"The waltz theme is well used and generally the musical background is attractive, but the production as a whole is not very expert and many good situations are inadequately used."

— Motion Pict Herald p65 N 16 '35

IT HAD TO HAPPEN. F 14 '36 78min 20th century-Fox

Players: George Raft, Rosalind Russell, Leo Carrillo, Arline Judge, Alan Dinehart

Director: Roy Del Ruth

Based on the novel, Canavan, by Rupert Hughes. "The story centers around [a city laborer] and his fast rise in the political life of New York and the romance that won the hand of the country's richest girl." (Hollywood Reporter)

IT HAD TO HAPPEN—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Implausible and ethics twisted. Usual Raft 'acting' and English. A: Depends on taste; Y: Better not; C: No."

Christian Century p415 Mr 11 '36

"Adults: entertaining; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. [It is] a highly improbable romance. Mature." DAR

"The story is lacking in idealism and the picture spares us none of the sordid and depressing details of the game of politics. Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Very handsomely mounted, this far-fetched story presents an undercurrent of rotten politics and deals very casually with divorce and remarriage. Terse dialogue and accurate atmosphere. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Adults will find it an absorbing picture, interesting in its characterization and motivation. The family will enjoy it for its clean wholesome entertainment, and children will like the humor and drama." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul F 15 '36

"This unlikely story is made plausible and thought provoking by skilful direction and excellent character interpretations. Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) F 8 '36

"Adults and young people."
Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"Could this picture have been intended for satire? Anything can happen in America and sometimes does, but this production is hardly clever enough to put over its thesis, assuming that it has one. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"An implausible story is made somewhat convincing because of a capable cast. . . Illogical episodes and a dubious ending detract [from its value.] Adults."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women F 5 '36

"Fair. Objectionable in part."
Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"Adults and young people."
Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The followers of Raft will be pleased to see him in a role unlike the others he has played, one which in my opinion makes demands upon him beyond his ability to meet satisfactorily. Twentieth Century presents him as an actor instead of as a type. As a type he has distinction; as an actor he has his weaknesses. Miss Russell, though, is a delight. . . The story is somewhat slow in getting under way, in letting us know what it is going to be about, but when it gets going it moves along briskly. It is not a story you will believe readily, but it will hold your interest, and that is all that matters."

— Hollywood Spec p7 F 15 '36

"Though it is somewhat less than compelling cinema fare, 'It Had to Happen' is a satisfactory movie of the unpretentious sort. . . The surprising and most gratifying thing about the picture, though, is that it shows that Raft can handle a comedy scene when given the chance." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p28 Mr 21 '36

"Could you do anything with George Raft and a script about how the humble ditch-digger, turned honest politician, won the heart of Mayfair's most elusive and richest jewel?"

— New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"On the whole, it is rapid, amusing, artificial entertainment." Marguerite Tazelaar
N Y Herald Tribune F 15 '36

"As entertainment 'It Had to Happen' seems to me to be woefully inept and childish and this in spite of the fact that it has in its cast the lovely and talented Rosalind Russell, who does her best to help matters along." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram F 15 '36

"Rosalind Russell, still a rookie Myrna Loy, and Raft, whose arrogance may be taken as an expression of his delight at not having to do a rumba sequence, act it pleasantly enough."

+ Time p58 F 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Well-knit success story of lowly Italian emigrant's rise to political power and wealth." Family."

+ Box Office p25 F 29 '36

"It is an entertaining bit of business."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 F 22 '36

"It's a typical Hughes story and if you like this author perhaps you'll enjoy this picture. It must be said that Raft does better work than usual while the balance of the cast is quite satisfactory. Direction cannot be complained of and the production is up to 20th Century standard."

Film Daily p13 F 1 '36

"Not even the combination of George Raft and Rosalind Russell can save this from being just ordinary entertainment. It is all talk instead of action. . . Not for children or adolescents. Adult entertainment."

— + Harrison's Reports F 22 '36

"Good entertainment, with George Raft in the best part he has had in ages, acting it with his best ability. That's the rating of Darryl Zanuck's latest, 'It Had To Happen.'"

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 27 '36

"Built on a popular, semi-topical theme, this is a comedy-drama with all the earmarks of an attractive feature."

+ Motion Pict Daily p28 Ja 28 '36

Motion Pict Herald p44 F 15 '36

"'It Had to Happen' should have no trouble all the way down the line. Estimate: good program anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p37 F 25 '36

"'It Couldn't Happen' would be a more appropriate title for this picture. A lot of good production effort is tossed away, in it, on an extremely unworthy subject. . . Rosalind Russell, co-starred with and playing opposite Raft, wears some stunning [clothes] and gives a neat performance, but she's always up against the problem of seeming real in unreal situations. . . An error was committed in giving Raft several too lengthy speeches. Raft's playing weakness, outside of gangster roles, is permitted to show up too prominently ever so often, particularly in the anti-climactic recrimination scene in which he pleads himself out of a bribery indictment."

— Variety p12 F 19 '36

IT'S A GREAT LIFE. D 20 '35 64min Paramount

Players: Joe Morrison. Paul Kelly. Charles (Chic) Sale. Rosalind Keith. William Frawley

Director: Edward F. Cline

This tells the story of two young men who join a C. C. C. Camp. They find the going tough in the camp under the leadership of a war-hardened sergeant. They both fall in love with the same girl and after one shows his heroism and rescues his comrades during a terrific forest fire, the other steps out and lets him win the girl.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Moderately diverting; Y and C: Interesting and wholesome."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"There is not much of a plot and the best we can give this is just program fare."
+ — Film Curb p12 Ja 25 '36

"Ordinary program fare. The story is inane, and the action slow. . . The production is hardly worthy of a Paramount release. Suitable for all. [Family.]"
— + Harrison's Reports Ja 18 '36

"Mild, it is suitable only for family type, small town or neighborhood audiences."
+ — N Y Exhibitor p33 Ja 10 '36

IT'S IN THE AIR. O 11 '35 80min MGM

Players: Jack Benny, Ted Healy, Una Merkel, Nat Pendleton

Director: Charles Reisner

"Two young men, living by their wits, through shady activities, inadvertently become heroes through a stratosphere adventure." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Feeble; Y: Dubious ethics; C: No."
Christian Century p1606 D 11 '35

"A light entertaining comedy, suitably cast and well directed. Family."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 5 '35

Mo Film Bul p146 D '35

"Good. Adults and young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"An excellent cast and competent direction, realistic photography are responsible for the success of this farce. . . Because of questionable ethics, the picture is suitable for adults only."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A: Farce; Y: Amusing, if unethical; C: Doubtful."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p3 N 9 '35

Liberty p23 N 16 '35

Reviewed by Marguerite Tazelaar
N Y Herald Tribune p15 N 8 '35

Reviewed by Eileen Creelman
N Y Sun p28 N 8 '35

N Y Times p18 N 8 '35

"An engaging bit of nonsense with some good and some not-so-good gags in it." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p11 N 11 '35

Time p53 O 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p56 N 16 '35

"It's all nonsense but highly amusing."
+ Film Curb p7 O 15 '35

"It's not a pretentious picture, but it does appear to be one that has entertainment to offer."
+ Motion Pict Herald p66 N 16 '35

"A laugh show that can't help but please those who like their fun. Family comedy."
+ N Y Exhibitor p34 O 25 '35

ITTO. Ja 28 '36 90min Eureka

Players: Simone Berriau, Moulay Ibrahim, Ben Brick, Mohaud Youssef

Directors: Jean Benoit-Levy, Marie Epstein

This film was made in Morocco and has English sub-titles to translate both the native dialect and the French language. "[It] is a drama of North African tribesmen involved in war with the first white men they have ever known, the conquering French. Dissension between the various tribes, with some of them going over to the French, leads to tragedy for the young hero and heroine." (N Y Sun)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Very good. Objectionable in part."
Nat Legion of Decency F '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Although it may provide documentary reportage on the difficulties of tribal conquest in Northern Africa, it is singularly devoid of dramatic compulsion. Even as imperialistic propaganda the work falls far short of conviction. It does not redound to M. Benoit-Levy's credit that he has lent his name, if not his talents, to such an unmitigated piece of jingoistic nonsense. The best that can be said of 'Itto' is that the photography, at times, is extraordinarily effective." Howard Barnes
— + N Y Herald Tribune p13 Ja 30 '36

"'Itto,' because of the authenticity of its background—Hollywood art directors could never get the feeling of that harsh yet picturesque landscape—and because its theme seems almost as real as its setting, is the most vivid of all the Moroccan melodramas. . . Had the acting been equal to the opportunity, 'Itto' might have been an important picture." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p26 Ja 29 '36

"'Itto,' the new importation contributes more to the cause of French imperialism than it does to that of entertainment. . . Scattered, unhappily, at too-distant intervals through the film are some brilliant episodes and photographic studies which make one regret all the more that 'Itto' was not what it might have been." F. S. Nugent
— + N Y Times p15 Ja 29 '36

"Although 'Itto,' the new French film won a prize of some sort at the Venice International Exposition last year, it has none of the qualities which put 'La Maternelle,' 'Crime et Châtiment' and 'Maria Chapdelaine' among the first flight screen entertainments. . . 'Itto' is a puffy little weakling celebrating romantic life in the Atlas Mountains of Morocco, with feeble shots of native customs and ceremonials in it to give it an authentic flavor. The only one who does reasonably good work is Simone

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ITTO—Continued

Berriau as Itto; the others try, but are handicapped by the wearisome circumstances under which they labor." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p19 Ja 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This latest French importation is a superior travelogue of Morocco and contains a weak story upon which the direction of Jean Benoit-Levy and Marie Epstein is lost. The film may be acceptable for 'little theatre' audiences with its high technical skill and photography which is a treat to the eye."
Motion Pict Daily p2 Ja 30 '36

IVORY-HANDLED GUN. O 30 '35 59min Universal

Players: Buck Jones. Charlotte Wynters. Frank Rice

Director: Ray Taylor

"[The] action revolves around an ivory-handled gun that is in the possession of a clan which has been engaged in a long feud with the Jones side. Jones' mission is to recover the gun and reestablish the Jones family. In true hero fashion, he accomplishes the job." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A, Y and C: Usual Western."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Curb p14 D 1 '35

Film Daily p8 N 19 '35

"Buck Jones is up to his usual standard in this rough and tumble Western. There is plenty of guntoting and shooting, horseback riding and hand-to-hand encounters which meet all requirements of the fastidious action seekers."
+ Motion Pict Daily p7 O 31 '35

"Family Western."
N Y Exhibitor p36 N 25 '35

"Contains usual number of implausible situations and incredible stunts, but will get over with the Western fans. . . Frank Rice turns in neatest rough-and-ready Western characterization uncovered in horse operas for months. Head and shoulders above others here though supporting cast is satisfactory. Charlotte Wynters is welcome relief from usual sugary heroines of these pictures, though a slightly English accent is incongruous."
+ — Variety p15 Ja 22 '36

J

JUDGMENT BOOK. N 1 '35 61min Beaumont

Players: Conway Tearle. Bernadine Hayes. Howard Lang

Director: Charles Hutchinson

In this tale of the lawless west, a group of cattle owners ruthlessly dominate a town and its citizens. A young man comes out to run the town newspaper after the death of his uncle and soon learns of the dictation of the group. When they attempt to intimidate him as they had his uncle, he determines to clean them out.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: Good action Western with picturesque scenery."
Par M p54 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An outdoor drama that is different. Tale of frontier days offers excellent entertainment. Plenty of fast-action and excitement when Tearle cleans up a lawless town."
+ Film Curb p18 N 1 '35

"The picture may be satisfactory as the second half of a double feature program, since it has at least a portion of the expected western action."
— + Motion Pict Daily p7 D 26 '35

"Family Western."
N Y Exhibitor p38 N 25 '35

JUST MY LUCK. N 11 '35 76min New century

Players: Charles Ray. Anne Grey. Eddie Nugent

Director: Russel R. Heinz

"Ray is cast as an employe in an automobile tire factory. He has perfected a rubber substitute which he is unable to make his employers inspect seriously. Buffeted about, and made the butt of practical jokes, Ray drifts through the picture until his employers, faced with a rubber shortage, send for him to investigate his substitute. His company's competitors have meanwhile engaged labor agitators to call a strike at the plant, and keep Ray away from the office. In the ensuing melee Ray is knocked down many times before things are settled and he wins the girl, Anne Grey, his employer's daughter." Motion Pict Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"Ray has a poor vehicle for his attempted comeback. [The] familiar character he made famous is seen again."
— Film Curb p15 D 1 '35

"Charles Ray works very hard in this picture to revive the character of the abused awkward boy which he made famous, but handicapped by a weak story and production which lacks professional finish, only in occasional flashes does he achieve his purpose."
— Motion Pict Daily p8 N 11 '35

"'Just My Luck' isn't strong enough to attract, although the star turns in a sincere, effort-trying performance. Family comedy drama."
— N Y Exhibitor p56 D 10 '35

K

(*)KANNIBAL KAPERS. N 21 '35 7min Columbia

Director: Charles Mintz

"Krazy Kat starts off in the middle of the ocean and is flung by a fish into a palm tree on a tropical isle. He tries to entertain the cannibal chief and enrages the regular entertainers." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family-junior matinee."
Wkly Guide Ja 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is a fairly-amusing cartoon."
+ — Box Office p48 Ja 18 '36

"The cartoon has clever [joke sequences], and moves fast."

+ Film Daily p14 Ja 3 '36

"[It has] little novelty. . . An ordinary cartoon offering."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"In the absence of any interesting plot, Mintz has savages run through various dance forms and the hot-cha orchestra display the versatility with instruments that only a cartoon will allow. Result is so-so. Fair."

+ N Y Exhibitor p31 Ja 10 '36

KIND LADY. D 13 '35 78min MGM

Players: Aline MacMahon. Basil Rathbone. Doris Lloyd. Donald Meek

Director: George B. Seitz

Based on the play of the same title by Edward Chodorov, which in turn was taken from a short story, The Silver Mask, by Hugh Walpole. A kind lady, collector of famous art treasures, befriends a needy stranger who turns out to be a suave and vicious leader of a gang of art thieves. As a guest in her house he torments and terrorizes her, brings in a weird assortment of characters, prepares to sell her art collection, and so completely frightens the old lady and deceives her friends that she cannot inform anyone of her predicament. In the finale, she does get news to the outside and finally triumphs over the gang.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Of no interest to children. Very good for adults."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Adults: very good; 14-18: good; 8-14: no interest." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Poorly edited and directed. Mature." DAR

"An outstanding picture by dint of splendid direction, expert acting and excellent photography as well as a sympathetic and exciting narrative. The director has fully utilized the possibilities of an atmosphere of sinister mystery, the effect of which is aided by appropriate musical accompaniment. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"This attention-compelling melodrama, well cast and well acted, with notable characterizations by Aline MacMahon and Basil Rathbone, is intensified by effective music and settings. Adults and young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"An excellent cast and fine direction, because of rare ability, only succeed in making this unpleasant story more morbid and depressing. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"This tense mystery story by Hugh Walpole will please those who like the unusual in picture entertainment. . . Suspense and interest are sustained until the very end of the picture because of good direction and sincerity of the cast. Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A sinister story filled with painful details and offering anything but entertainment." Nat Soc of New England Women

"There is very little relief, and somehow the conclusion, though satisfactory lacks strength. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Characteristic of Walpole's stories of the Herries clan, filled with evil forebodings and odd people, it is directed with understanding of its singular moods and tenses and is well cast. The suspenseful machinations of vulture-like crooks preclude its suitability for young children. Adults." Mrs T. G. Winter + -- Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Spellbinding melodrama; Y: Tense; C: No."

Par M p54 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Unusual in plot, with a fine melodramatic tenseness. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide D 7 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p34 D 7 '35

Film Curb p18 D 15 '35

"There is a fair amount of strong action and suspense, but the story as a whole does not make very comfortable amusement."

+ -- Film Daily p3 D 27 '35

"This melodrama is too horrifying for sensitive people. . . Hardly suitable for children, adolescents, or Sundays. Adult entertainment."

Harrison's Reports D 21 '35

"Director George Seitz builds suspense, once the plot starts, with a scene where the gang closes in on Miss MacMahon. This serves as a tense climax. The cast, almost entirely British, gives good performances."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 N 29 '35

"On paper this production promised much. On the screen it results in so much plot and so little entertainment that few can understand what it's all about. . . As screen material, it is a demonstration that if there are to be double bills, there must be double bill pictures."

+ -- Motion Pict Herald p68 D 7 '35

"Generally a melodrama that has been well handled, considering the material, it is, however, restricted in the name division, should please best in neighborhoods."

N Y Exhibitor p38 D 25 '35

"Stands out as one of Miss MacMahon's best acting contributions, with Rathbone running her a close second. Chief flaw is the tedious build-up to a fairly intriguing plot."

+ -- Variety p58 Ja 1 '36

KING OF BURLESQUE. Ja 3 '36 83min 20th century-Fox

Players: Warner Baxter. Jack Oakie. Alice Faye. Charles Quigley. Gregory Ratoff. Arline Judge. Dixie Dunbar

Director: Sidney Lanfield

Based on the novel Day Never Came, by Vina Delmar. Not satisfied with the sure profits of the dime trade in cheap burlesque, a producer risks his fortune in one mad gamble and moves to Broadway over the protests of his partner. He becomes the undisputed king of lavish musicals until he meets a once wealthy society girl who, hard pressed for money, consents to a marriage. She inspires him to stage three "arty" plays which are failures and after he loses all of his money, she leaves him. Then a fake millionaire, his old partner and the soubrette from his former burlesque aid him up the ladder of success once again.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

KING OF BURLESQUE—Continued

"Originality in scenario treatment lifts this film out of the category of 'just another musical show.' Adults: good; 14-18: good; 8-14: unsuitable. Family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Trite account. Mature." DAR

"An entertaining picture with clever dialogue. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Interesting picture. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"The plot is of course one of the old standbys, but the picture makes excellent use of the talent assembled. Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Light entertainment for the family with scant interest for young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"A good example of this type of picture. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"Old story but with fresh handling it is made into fast-moving, entertaining drama. Family." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 4 '36

"Good. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Objectionable in part."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Jolly comedy romance."
Par M p54 Mr '36

"Jolly entertainment."
+ Wkly Guide Ja 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 25 '36

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 11 '36

"The musical comedy film never strays very far from the formula of its school, but it is lively, good-looking and tuneful, and for these reasons it should be greeted as one of the pleasant entertainments of the new cinema season. Although the plot is not enormously stimulating, it is serviceable enough as a framework for the music and the production numbers, and, above all, for a number of exceptionally bright bits of humorous badinage of the wisecracking school, which lose nothing from the expert delivery of Jack Oakie and Miss Arline Judge." Richard Watts, Jr.
+ N Y Herald Tribune p14 Ja 16 '36

"[This is] one of the fastest, liveliest and most tuneful musicals the season has witnessed. . . 'King of Burlesque,' being a story of show business, is strikingly original in neither plot nor atmosphere, not even in characterizations. That is surprisingly unimportant in this case. . . [It] is a nice piece of work." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p20 Ja 16 '36

"If you are willing to overlook the antiquity of the fabric and concentrate on its trimmings, 'King of Burlesque,' may be set down as one of the screen's more entertaining ventures in the musical comedy line. . . Our advice is to overlook the story entirely and concentrate—as you probably will without being told—on the comic pursuits of Jack Oakie and Arline Judge who, until now, never have loomed very seriously as contenders for comedy crowns." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p25 Ja 16 '36

"It would have been a great deal heartier if its topic were less familiar. But it is entertaining enough for a pleasant and agreeable if not exceptional hour in the cinema. . . In a less skilfully played and directed production the narrative's banalities would be more apparent. But because the players and the director bring a certain freshness and vigor to it 'King of Burlesque' emerges a reasonably entertaining film." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p15 Ja 16 '36

"The little acts and songs and bits that are scattered through this woeful story are quite funny and lively, and refresh a spectator who might otherwise be oppressed by the revelations of highbred fidgets." John Mosher

New Yorker p63 Ja 25 '36

"'King of Burlesque' [is] one of the year's best musicals."

+ Time p28 Ja 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] will capture any audience from New York's Broadway to the most obscure main street. . . Tuneful laughfest, a real show for every showman and every patron."

+ Box Office p25 Ja 4 '36

"The old backstage story brought forth again and it is only mildly entertaining. . . It will provide fair entertainment for the fans but they aren't going to rave about it."

+ — Film Curb p13 Ja 4 '36

"Only fair. . . There is nothing offensive in the story, and so it is suitable for all [Family]."

+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 18 '36

"Twentieth Century-Fox is hitting a handsome stride in musicals with its second tuneful film ringing a positive bong on the well-known bell. . . Oakie was never funnier than in his Jolson imitation and crying jag scene. Arline Judge, determined on marriage, is a perfect foil for the rapid-fire buffoonery, Baxter makes the extremes of the mood count; Miss Faye scores in the song and dance numbers; Miss Barrie is charming and convincing as the social registerite, and Dixie Dunbar draws individual applause in a dance."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 D 24 '35

Motion Pict Herald p49 Ja 4 '36

"Estimate: Satisfactory anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p33 Ja 10 '36

Variety p14 Ja 22 '36

"It's the familiar story of the man who married the wrong girl, but so well written, brightly dialoged, that is takes on a new countenance. Picture is packed with laughs, most of them handled by Jack Oakie who gives a sterling performance. Production is noteworthy both in supervision and intelligent handling of the story. . . Dialogue is excellent writing by the Markey-Tugend combination. Their continuity flows easily, is well written. James Seymour has made a good adaptation of the none too original Vina Delmar story."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 21 '35

KING OF THE DAMNED. Ja 20 '36 75min
Gaumont British

Players: Helen Vinson, Noah Beery, Conrad Veidt

Director: Walter Forde

Based on the play of the same title by John Chancellor. The film was made in England. Convicts in the Devil's Island penal colony unable to bear the harsh treatment of the gaolers, mutiny and take over its government. Under the leadership of Noah Beery they turn the island into a communal workshop. In the end they surrender on a promise that they will receive justice.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Adults. . . Though not entertaining in the usual sense this timely theme is thought provoking."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 1 '36

"The tempo is slow and there is no comedy relief in this story of bitterness and revolution. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 4 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Social drama; Y: Mature; C: No."

Par M p54 Mr '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Wkly Guide Ja 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Finely sincere acting by Veidt and Helen Vinson make this better than just a scene of horror." Laura Elston

+ — Canadian M p38 F '36

"Mr. Veidt, rarely seen these days, is forceful in the rôle, and has the excellent help of the still rarer screen personality, Noah Beery."

Lit Digest p19 Ja 25 '36

"So obvious, sensational and blatant is the story that it is doubtful whether the cruel injustice dealt to the tortured prisoners will depress you too much. . . The film, while paced rapidly, wastes too much time over certain sequences and is not always clear in its story-telling as it might be. The lighting, while effective, in its shadow quality and atmospheric feeling, leaves something to be desired for the strained eyes of the spectator, and the arty camera work proves most too self-conscious." Marguerite Tazelaar

— + N Y Herald Tribune p4 F 1 '36

"Although 'King of the Damned' deals with a penal colony in the Caribbean and possesses most of the elements necessary for blood-curdling melodrama, it has been put together in a lax manner and its story has been permitted to become so preposterous that the result is pretty mediocre in every respect." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p21 F 1 '36

"This is a minor film about a penal settlement of some unnamed country on some unnamed island in the Caribbean." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p69 F 8 '36

"The story of a wicked commandant and a mutiny led by a convict with ideas of social reform is unconvincing." Graham Greene

— + Spec p50 Ja 10 '36

"A penal colony story, enlivened by floggings, garrottings, and miscellaneous misery. . . You never care much whether they end up as heroes or shark bait."

Stage p8 F '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A regular he-man's picture. Should please in practically any situation."

+ Film Curb p9 F 8 '36

"The British studio went heavy on the depressing phases of this penal colony drama of Santa Maria and overlooked the good possibilities for building the romantic side of the story between Conrad Veidt and Helen Vinson. . . So all that remains is a rather heavy and stodgy recital of a revolt plot engineered and carried through successfully by Conrad Veidt, and the only relief in sight is the grand work of Noah Beery as the tough convict sentenced to death before his fellow-prisoners."

— + Film Daily p7 F 1 '36

"This British made melodrama is good entertainment, suitable for American audiences, particularly men. . . It may be a little strong for children. Good for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports F 1 '36

"There is fighting aplenty and it is hair-raising stuff in the scenes of the convicts' capture of the barrack square and of the shelling of the settlement from a cruiser. . . Veidt is a very gentle revolutionary, but many will respond to the emotional appeal of his last demand for justice for the oppressed, which nevertheless does not quite lift the film out of the class of effective melodrama."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 18 '36

"In sheer strength of incident and in scale of production the film has showman values. Outstanding are scenes in which the revolting convicts, paraded for the garrotting of one of their comrades, storm and capture the barrack square; grimly original also are the episodes in which the captured officers are made to welcome officers from a cruiser and to pretend that all is well, because the convict servants who wait at table have pistols. . . Its appeal, which is definitely to adults, rests almost entirely on the exceptional realism of its details and the strength of the revolt and execution scenes, reinforced by the fact, already indicated, that it can be sold to certain audiences as an indictment of the system of punitive settlements."

+ Motion Pict Herald p39 Ja 25 '36

"Made on a scale that indicates no expense was spared, 'King of the Damned' is well-produced melodrama, backed by good performances. Moving rapidly, strong on suspense, with excellent mob scenes, it will please melodramatic followers in any spot and will prove satisfactory."

+ N Y Exhibitor p26 F 10 '36

"Forde, who rates high as a native producer, made the most of the fight scenes, and despite occasional patches where it doesn't convince, the film generally has plenty of punch."

— + Variety p19 Ja 15 '36

KING SOLOMON OF BROADWAY. S 16 '35
70min Universal

Players: Edmund Lowe, Dorothy Page,
Pinky Tomlin, Edward Pawley

Director: Alan Crosland

This musical melodrama tells how a debonair partner in a Broadway night club loses his interest to a gangster in a game of poker, rescues a wealthy girl who has been kidnapped and re-wins his palace of revelry.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Depends on taste; Y: Unwholesome; C: No."

Christian Century p1471 N 13 '35

"While the presentation is attractive, photography good, Pinky Tomlin and his music pleasing, the direction and cast adequate, the picture is not constructive because of the tawdry story and much unnecessary drinking. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 25 '35

Mo Film Bul p147 D '35

"A lavish social drama. . . Moments of good entertainment are afforded by Pinky Tomlin who steals every scene in which he appears. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A and Y: Waste of time; C: No interest."
Par M p55 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"All of this should somehow make for more excitement and good hearty entertainment than is to be found in this curiously outdated melodrama of what once was called the Great White Way." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p8 O 19 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

KING SOLOMON OF BROADWAY—Continued

"A feeble comedy melodrama."

— N Y Times p5 O 27 '35

Springf'd Republican p6 N 14 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p36 N 23 '35

Film Curb p19 O 1 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p37 O 10 '35

KISS ME GOODBYE. D 9 '35 66min Celebrity

Players: Arthur Riscoe. Naunton Wayne.
Magda Schneider

Director: Carmine Gallone

Made in England. "The theme is that of two London playboys hitting Vienna, meeting a little hostess in a night spot, and promoting her into a musical comedy by a ruse of getting the director of the opera to hear her sing against his will. Then the old stuff of the little girl making good in a big way. The two London lads who are both in love with her realize that they must be good sports and save their friendship by losing the girl." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: Passable."

Par M p55 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A charming Viennese actress, Magda Schneider, makes her bow to American audiences in this foreign-made musical. Miss Schneider's pleasing singing voice, captivating accent and attractive smile will carry her far if she is given the proper material. Her present vehicle has few entertaining qualities, the star and the supporting players struggling valiantly, but unsuccessfully, with a weak story and inferior direction."

— + Box Office p25 Ja 4 '36

"This production is so far inferior to the independent product from Hollywood in the same field of musical romance that it is out-classed in every department. Magda Schneider alone is worth while. She has real talent and personality, but the inept story and direction leaves her sunk. Add to this good photography, and that's all the most kindly critic can say for it."

— Film Daily p4 N 30 '35

"A fair musical picture of program grade. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 4 '36

"The star sings effectively and the film's music is attractive, but the story is almost too light. . . The comedy elements are fairly well handled with an occasional touch of slapstick."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 N 30 '35

"The production ends on [an] indecisive note and because of it the picture suffers from lack of completeness. The ending, however, is in keeping with the whimsical tenor of the story, which is perhaps too light. The singing sequences and the comedy help to balance the production and its dearth of story value."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p63 D 14 '35

"What is for British audiences a fair musical comedy is not necessarily entertainment for our own people. [The] picture is often recorded badly, has little plot, has a parochial viewpoint."

— N Y Exhibitor p40 D 25 '35

KLONDIKE ANNIE. F 28 '36 80min Paramount

Players: Mae West. Victor McLaglen. Philip Reed. Harold Huber

Director: Raoul Walsh

"In self-defense, Mae kills the wealthy Chinese, who has been keeping her cooped up as an entertainer in his resort in San Francisco. She boards a freighter bound for the Klondike. Victor McLaglen is the captain of the ship and he [falls in love with her.] At Seattle, Victor learns his passenger is wanted for murder. At Vancouver, they pick up a settlement worker, Sister Annie, who is bound for the Klondike, too. Annie dies and Mae becomes Sister Annie. She makes a great success of settlement work in the rough-and-tumble town. While there the handsome policeman, Philip Reed, falls for her and she likes him, too. However, she realizes McLaglen is the man for her and she goes back to San Francisco to face the music, believing that the self-defense alibi will clear her." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Disgusting; Y: Unwholesome; C: No."
Christian Century p446 Mr 18 '36

"It is most evident, however, that this picture is made to exploit the particular talents of Mae West with the usual wise-cracking innuendoes. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Typical West risque dialogue. Victor McLaglen is fine. Adults. Mediocre. Unwholesome." DAR

"The dramatic situations are so evidently created for the purpose of giving full scope to Miss West's peculiar talents that there is hardly a note of sincerity in the whole production. Her reformation seems but a temporary one and the questionable taste of her actions and dialogue is very apparent. Adults." E Coast Preview Committee

"Quite shameless is the characterization of a Christian worker which will give rise to well-merited objections. Replete with insinuations, the picture is a typical Mae West vehicle with the usual amount of risque and pungent wisecracks and obvious sex appeal. Adults: matter of taste." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Mae West, limited to one type of role, labors valiantly to give vitality to an improbable and shoddy story. . . 'Klondike Annie' impresses one as being an artificial and theatric contrivance designed to exhibit Miss West's robust good nature and her flamboyant personality without skirting too near the objectionable. A good deal of this picture is in questionable taste. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A combination of sophisticated farce and melodrama, this film will undoubtedly meet adverse criticism in many quarters. Nevertheless, it has definite dramatic structure, the acting is very real and the motivation is logical. It deals, of course, with a side of life ignored by polite society, but it is not without a note of genuine truth. Definitely adult." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A picture full of questionable and suggestive dialogue and action. . . In the masquerade [of a Christian worker, Mae West] still seems to bring her love life, [also] the situation she creates in the Settlement House will not meet the approval of any member of the Protestant Churches. Even the men missionaries or settlement workers are caricatures. The picture is a direct insult to the many good self-sacrificing men and women who enter this field of work. Not fit to be shown." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul F 29 '36

"It is difficult to gage the entertainment value of the film for others, but for us she has been a buxom woman too long for us to be sympathetic when young heroes emote over her as a 'lovely girl'. . . It fails because its motivation is insincere, and the humor is at the expense of religious missionaries. . . Miss West's field is too limited to attempt to camouflage the type of character which she alone presents to her public. In attempting to avoid censorship the production merely becomes ludicrous. . . Adolescents, 12-15: no; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"In spite of its attempt at compromise and the obvious concessions made to censors and others who object to this brand of vulgarity we find the same Mae West with her strut and eye-rolling as well as the garb and voluptuous manner of the gay 90's. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women F 19 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The truth is that La West needs to change her act. The rolling gait, the husky tones, the words spoken through slightly parted teeth, even the form of the dialogue are very familiar by now. There is a singular lack of variety to her acting. Not only is she the same in one part after another, but there is an unvarying sameness to her expression within a given characterization. She can be amusing the first or second time. But by the fourth or fifth she is drawing perilously close to boredom. Her audiences are still impressively large. But they used to roar with laughter. Now they only look and listen." E. F. M.

Boston Transcript p4 F 29 '36

"In Mae West's new picture the Production Code Sapolio missed a spot or two. Mae West still is the arch-exponent of the hurly burly, the double entendre and the questionable-taste, though talking and acting limitedly."

J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p524 Mr 6 '36

"'Klondike Annie,' is not worth seeing but its career will be well worth watching. If Paramount is foolish enough to release it generally, it is going to be met with an uproar of protest by all the organizations which stand for good taste and decency in screen entertainments. . . The whole thing reveals the functioning of a foul mind at the peak of its odor. It is a horrible picture, a revolting one, a disgrace not only to Paramount but to the entire film industry. And it bears the purity seal of the Hays organization."

— — Hollywood Spec p5 F 20 '36

"'Klondike Annie,' Mae West's outspoken history of a bad woman turned revivalist, is the worst picture she has ever made. It is dull, dirty, and poorly played. Its noisy attempts at robust life are contrived with self-conscious leering." (1 star) Beverly Hills

Liberty p29 Mr 21 '36

"As long as Miss West is moving about in the select underworld set of San Francisco . . . she is in old-time form and is as vulgarly amusing as only she can be at her best. For the rest of the time, however, her vehicle and her performance are as dull as they are cheap, and that is no small tribute. . . 'Klondike Annie' is vulgar without being funny and rowdy without being gay. . . Anyway, I think we've had enough of Miss West for a while." Richard Watts, Jr.

— — N Y Herald Tribune p14 Mr 12 '36

"It is somehow the most distasteful role Miss West has yet played. Mae West as a comedienne burlesquing sexy dramas is not nearly as offensive as Mae West in a settlement worker's bonnet talking of religion and good deeds. The reformation seems as phoney as the costume, and just about as becoming. . . 'Klondike Annie,' dullest film she has made, is both the cleanest and the most offensive." Eileen Creelman

— — N Y Sun p20 Mr 12 '36

"Mae West's 'Klondike Annie' really does not merit the agitation it has caused. Neither as healthily rowdy nor as vulgarly suggestive as many of her earlier pictures, it emerges on the screen as a tiresome and rather stupid combination of lavender and old japes. . . It is, of course, highly ironic that the more she attempts to please the censors the more she displeases them. . . It is unfortunate that there can be no truce between Miss West and the censors. Under present restrictions, there is no place on the screen for her former Rabelaisian humor; but there is no place anywhere for the stupid substitute that Miss West now is trying to pass as comedy. We found 'Klondike Annie' quite unconvincing, quite witless, quite archaic and quite a bore."

F. S. Nugent

— — N Y Times p18 Mr 12 '36

"Among the complaints that may safely be lodged against 'Klondike Annie,' the new Mae West picture, are that it is feeble, shambling, bogus, completely lacking in good taste and thoroughly dull. Even if there weren't sufficient reasons for excoriating the film for its bad taste, it could still be condemned on the grounds that it is about as tiresome an offering as has come along in weeks. . . It has a few brief moments in the beginning when it is amusing. . . But for the most part it ambles along aimlessly and tiresomely, trying to get its laughs by some bewhiskered jokes and at the expense of ridiculing religion, which someone thought would be funny but which is indelicate, insensitive and tasteless. In the end, when it has finally run its course, some ninety minutes of valuable time have forever disappeared." William Boehnel

— — N Y World-Telegram p19 Mr 12 '36

"Also a surprise to scientists, Miss Mae grows less surprising to her public as she continues to be the same Mae in picture after picture. Such a stalwart and confident personality should not be asked to alter the general line of her behavior, perhaps, and in the deadly level of the commonplace, she stands out a refreshing oddity on the face of the globe. . . There are men, as usual, all about her, eloquent with their admiration, and for once Miss Mae allows an actor of consequence (Victor McLaglen) to share her quaint honors." John Mosher

New Yorker p75 Mr 21 '36

"Mae West's new story, written by and for herself, is undeniably her worst."

— — News-Wk p32 Mr 7 '36

"The current one differs only in detail from earlier Mae West films. . . As usual, the comedy depends mainly upon the incongruity between Mae West's up-to-date wisecracks and their fin de siècle background."

Time p44 Mr 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Of course the picture is a bit risqué but it wouldn't be a Mae West yarn if it wasn't. McLaglen is swell and balance of cast okay. Direction and production [are] all that could be asked for. It's another West success."

+ Film Curb p14 F 15 '36

"The picture is Mae's all around. She still has the knack of putting over lines as only she knows how, and her fans should like her in this number. Under Raoul Walsh's direction the plot moves along smoothly with interest held throughout."

+ Film Daily p3 F 10 '36

"It takes La West back to the nineties where she is most effective and, despite some unsavory aspects of the plot, is a better tailor-made vehicle than her last two modern stories. . . It is expected that several sequences will be toned down before release. Unlike previous West pictures, situations rather than lines offend. One scene is particularly distasteful. This is where Mae changes clothes with the dead Sister. It is unnecessary to show the flash of the dead woman with her hair curled and dressed in flimsies. Other dangerous situations are the relationship with a Chinese and some of the things that are said from the settlement platform."

KLONDIKE ANNIE—Continued

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 F 5 '36

"Previewed in the Alexander Theatre, Glendale. Audience reaction vividly denoted thrill and surprise that might be interpreted as shock. . . . If creating controversy based upon objections to the moral and ethical character of the picture can be construed at this time as being desirable exploitation or interest-creating asset, audience reaction gives every indication that this should appease the most rabid."

Motion Pict Herald p44 F 15 '36

"Back to 'She Done 'Em Wrong' technique, Mae West should turn in a good gross in 'Klondike Annie.' Again the bad woman who turns straight, who has a penchant for double entendres, Mae swaggers through the picture, handing out laugh lines between melodramatic moments. . . . Adult in theme, the picture may not be for children but looks as if it is made for showmen."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 F 25 '36

"Newspaper attacks will probably pulmotor the chances of this one materially. As a picture it is again Mae West with the usual formula of wisecracks. That is no longer enough. . . . The mission scenes are merely the peg for some canting hypocrisy and a farcical development that may give more offense to earnest church workers than anything since Chaplin's 'The Pilgrim.' It is in this, rather than the supposed indecency, that offense is apt to be found. And it is unnecessary. . . . Miss West really ought to let someone else have a word as to her stories. There is a rough, if unpalatable humor in the mission scenes. . . . But in general the picture lacks comedy points. . . . 'Annie' is badly told, insincerely acted and largely lacking in the salty quips anticipated."

— Variety p17 Mr 18 '36

"Subject matter contained in 'Klondike Annie' is highly controversial, will possibly be considered in bad taste by many a fan. Nevertheless, picture is well produced, acted and directed, should please those who rave over La West's personality, her ability to handle broad characterizations. . . . [The story] falls down. Dialog is the usual type for Miss West, in spots extremely stupid in order to build up to a blackout finish for the star. There's plenty of double entendre spotted throughout the picture, handled in Miss West's best fashion."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 5 '36

KNOCK-OUT. F 28 '36 86min Bavaria-film

Players: Anny Ondra. Max Schmeling. Hans Schonrath

Director: Karl Lamac

Dialogue film made in Germany with English sub-titles. Also called Ein Junges Madchen—Ein Junger Mann. "A story about the rise of a prize-fighter and his romance with a pretty blonde." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fairly entertaining."

Film Daily p6 Mr 2 '36

"'Knock-Out' proves that Max Schmeling is still clever with his mitts but that the acting to be done in his family will be done by his wife, Anny Ondra. Both are in the film, but the only thespian ability is displayed by Miss Ondra. . . . Even with its apparent flaws, this feature should prove a welcome change of fare for German-speaking houses."

+ — Variety p27 Mr 4 '36

L*LAC AUX DAMES. Ja 14 '36 90min Franco-American

Players: Simone Simon. Jean-Pierre Aumont. Rosine Derean. Michel Simon. Odette Joyeux

Director: Marc Allegret

Based on the novel, Martin's Summer, by Vicki Baum. The film was made in France and has English sub-titles. Eric, a young, impractical and impoverished engineer acts as a swimming instructor at a famous Austrian resort hotel. There he meets Puck, an elfish young girl whose father owns an estate on an island. She loves him but he in turns falls in love with Danielle, daughter of a wealthy manufacturer. Danielle's father is opposed to their marriage and he takes his daughter away. Ill, starving, Eric is found by Puck whom he tells of his love for Danielle. Puck realizing he will never love her, brings Danielle back to him.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."

N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Lac Aux Dames,' belongs to the nymph school of literature, with its portrayal of puckish character and thin bohemian situation. The practical French have attempted to nail its flights to solid earth, thank goodness, but still wafting through the picture's hollow plot comes ethereal essence of strained artiness. . . . Very likely the picture has been badly cut, for its string of episodes does not always make sense. It is a series of fantasies set against a beautiful background of the Austrian Alps, and the lovely lake which plays such an important part in the story. The swimming exhibits are handsome, M. Jean-Pierre Aumont (Eric) proving himself an excellent swimmer and diver, if not a breath-taking actor, and the carefree, sunny atmosphere surrounding the indolent vacationists is refreshing." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p14 Ja 16 '36

"The views of the Tyrol are so stunning that they completely over-shadow the fragile little love story. . . . The film is rather poorly cut and slight in its plot, and whatever moderate pleasure it affords is due to its lovely backgrounds and to its pleasant players." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p19 Ja 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is an enjoyable love story, filmed in the beautiful background of the Tyrol, with some music and dancing, and acted by an excellent cast. Principal player is Simone Simon, a very engaging actress, who is now at the 20th Century-Fox studios in Hollywood."

+ Film Daily p12 Ja 16 '36

"This French importation of the adaptation of a story by Vicki Baum presents strong and interesting drama. . . . Largely devoid of action, the film nevertheless tells an interesting story of young romance and its trials and happiness."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 16 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

(s) LADIES LOVE HATS. N 1 '35 19mim Educational

Players: Ernest Truex. Mary Jane Barrett. Cora Witherspoon

Director: Al Christie

Based on the magazine story, High Hats, by Roy L. McCardell. "This short subject describes the adventures of a husband who unwittingly causes his wife to wear a hat belonging to another woman. Since this woman is regarded as a social leader and the possessor of a vituperative nature, the husband, is admittedly in a tough spot." (Motion Pict Herald)

Trade Paper Reviews

"Truex does a neat bit of comedy work throughout."

+ Film Daily p10 O 30 '35

"[It] is a reasonably entertaining comedy of the usual Truex variety. For once Truex does not come out the loser."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 N 7 '35

Motion Pict Herald p75 N 23 '35

"The story is slightly effeminate. . . Fair."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p27 N 10 '35

"Mildly amusing. Not enough devotion to detail as more laughs might have been squeezed out of [a] couple of fair and off-usual-track situations."

— Variety p13 D 18 '35

LADY CONSENTS. F 7 '36 75min RKO

Players: Ann Harding. Margaret Lindsay. Herbert Marshall. Walter Abel. Edward Ellis

Director: Stephen Roberts

Ann Harding portrays a young woman in love with her husband who consents to a divorce when she realizes that he is in love with another woman. As it becomes apparent that the second wife has married only for social position and luxury, the husband is very unhappy. Over the death bed of his father, he meets his former wife and they renew their love. After a divorce, they are remarried.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Interesting; Y: Doubtful; C: No."

Christian Century p311 F 19 '36

"Intelligent action, pointed dialogue and amusing repartee, with considerable casual drinking and tricky manipulation of situations which brings about the inevitable happy ending. Mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature." DAR

"This variation of the old triangle theme is well and smartly done. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The story is of no particular value and the picture of smart society with the implication of continuous casual drinking is not edifying. Distinctly an adult film." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Full of human interest. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"The easily managed marriage, divorce, and remarriage of the principals involves a good deal of strategy on the part of an understanding wife, but the picture makes such things seem rather like a pleasant way of breaking the monotony of existence. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 1 '36

"Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ja 22 '36

"There is a general atmosphere of drinking, gaming and easy divorce. Adults."

Jt Estimates Ja 15 '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 22 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Dramatic romance; Y: Mature; C: No."

Par M p55 Mr '36

"The production is to be commended for its dignified treatment of an important and ever-present problem of modern life. Adults and young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide Ja 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a neatly played conversation piece."

Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p42 Mr '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 25 '36

"The Lady Consents' can not be singled out as a production of outstanding character, being rather solid every-day entertainment of which the largest part of the screen is constructed." J. P. Cunningham

+ — Commonweal p440 F 14 '36

"Here is a demonstration of how to make agreeable entertainment out of threadworn material cut to the pattern always used in the repeated telling of the story on the screen. There is nothing new in it, no surprising situations, no unexpected punches, but you will find 'The Lady Consents' to be as delightful an evening's diversion as you could wish for. . . Ann Harding never was more delightful. She gives the suffering wife the relief of a sense of humor; indulges in no heroics or lamentations, but always is womanly human and earns the full measure of audience sympathy."

+ Hollywood Spec p10 Ja 18 '36

"In 'The Lady Consents,' Ann Harding, the screen's Public Ennui No. 1, shows what a large amount of anguish a wayward husband can cause a wife. Miss Harding suffers considerably, though she does attempt at times to hide her broken heart behind feeble and heavy-handed wisecracking. . . Though most of the players are bogged knee-deep in charm, Ilka Chase and Walter Abel give the film some good moments. Edward Ellis, who plays Mr. Marshall's father and who tries to reconcile the couple, steals the show. But stealing 'The Lady Consents' is, at most, only petty larceny." Beverly Hills

+ — Liberty p50 F 29 '36

"Ann Harding deliberately relinquishes that most relinquishable and stubborn of ex-juveniles, Herbert Marshall, to the scheming Margaret Lindsay. Eventually, Marshall returns to his senses and returns to Ann. Everything returned but your money at the box office."

+ — New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"Unless the cinema is deceiving us once again, the word 'lady' must have been invented for the exclusive use of Miss Ann Harding. . . Always you will see Miss Harding as a victor over the powers of evil by the sheer force of her nobility. In fact, it is my fear that she is so filled with spiritual sweetness that she ends by making you just a trifle resentful of so much greatness of soul. . . One virtue of the picture is that it presents Miss Lindsay in the proper sort of role. Hitherto she has striven chiefly to be a heroine and she is less than perfectly equipped for such a role. As a shallow and selfish villainess she is admirable, and I predict that if she continues in such unsympathetic parts she will be vastly successful in her cinema career." Richard Watts, Jr.

N Y Herald Tribune p7 F 8 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LADY CONSENTS—Continued

"The screen's leading exponents of suffering nobility, Ann Harding and Herbert Marshall, exhibit their customary gallantry and restraint under fire, in the new film. . . [It] drags Miss Harding through the divorce courts once more, but manages to be much more amusing about it than usual. 'The Lady Consents,' for all its expected talk of good sportsmanship and its tears behind the smile, is much livelier than most of Miss Harding's dramas. . . The trouble with it probably lies in the writing of Miss Lindsay's part. This is a heavy handed characterization, bald and obvious in its conception as in its dialogue. Miss Lindsay, dressed almost as unbecomingly as Miss Harding, has little chance to make the scheming Jerry a human being. Because of that, the drama becomes little more than a charade in which to exhibit the stars in the type of role they have played so often and so profitably." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p25 F 5 '36

N Y Times p23 F 8 '36

"It twitters aimlessly along for some eighty minutes or so, and when it is over leaves the cinema just about where it found it. . . Some of the film's monotony is relieved by the good acting of the cast. . . But in spite of their efforts 'The Lady Consents' remains one of the least interesting of the current cinema's entertainments." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p25 F 5 '36

"The story of a disrupted home, told in homily and cliché."

— Stage p8 Mr '36

"Ann Harding has a clause in her contract which permits her to select her own stories. The only kind of stories she likes are those in which she appears as a lady who, disappointed in love, eventually gets what she wants by mouthing whimsicalities beneath a stiff upper lip. 'The Lady Consents,' true to type, is less painful than most of Miss Harding's pictures."

+ — Time p48 F 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p29 Ja 25 '36

"The three leads are almost perfect and Edward Ellis turns in a remarkably fine performance. It's a great woman's story and the ladies will go for it. . . This is the sort of entertainment that should fare well in both the big and small town theatres. An attraction that can be shown in practically any class of theatre."

+ Film Curb p15 Ja 18 '36

"Well handled triangle drama, nicely directed and acted, with special appeal for women."

+ Film Daily p7 Ja 14 '36

"Good! It is an interesting marital drama, with deep human appeal. Although the plot is of the familiar triangle variety, it is somewhat more significant than pictures of this type because of the unusual relationship between Ann Harding, the wife, and Edward Ellis, the father-in-law. . . Not for children or adolescents. Good for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports F 1 '36

"This is dramatic romance with smart dialogue and intriguing situations."

Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 13 '36

"A picture that should make audiences laugh much and maybe sob a bit, it's a story of heartache, sacrifice, frustration and triumph of more than ordinary appeal to women."

+ Motion Pict Herald p44 Ja 18 '36

"Smart from the first camera turn, likely to be most pleasing in class sectors, it will probably have its troubles in the mass neighborhood sectors where smart drawing room comedies lose their appeal. Because the actors have strong followings, however, this may overcome its handicaps."

N Y Exhibitor p27 F 10 '36

"It is a well-made picture and even if the plot is somewhat mechanical at times, the results are a bit above average for this type of story, the type that could easily have been botched up. The indications are that box-office reaction will be fair or better. Sophisticated audiences will [respond] more to this kind of merchandise than the folks in the sticks."

+ — Variety p18 F 12 '36

"Though the P. J. Wolfson story is none too original, [it has been] dialoged so expertly that the tale of the divorced woman who wins her husband back from his second and unsympathetic spouse, takes on a refreshing atmosphere."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 11 '36

LADY IN SCARLET. N 20 '35 66min Chesterfield

Players: Reginald Denny. Patricia Farr. Dorothy Revier

Director: Charles Lamont

A nonchalant detective finds the solution to the murder of an antique dealer after suspicion turns to the man's wife, his assistant, a business rival, a doctor, and a lawyer.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Mo Film Bul p172 N '35

"Smoothly and entertainingly told story Family."

+ Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Entertaining; C: Little interest."

Par M p55 Mr '36

"A regulation murder mystery logically solved by an amateur detective. The suspense is well sustained and moves to a satisfactory climax. Well acted and directed. Entertaining for followers of mystery drama. Adults and young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a murder mystery drama that should please lovers of this sort of film fare. It has its moments of comedy also."

+ Film Curb p5 Ja 4 '36

Film Daily p7 D 21 '35

"There is somewhat more than the usual amount of humor and entertainment in this mystery film than in the usual run of such independent product."

Motion Pict Daily p3 D 27 '35

"Family mystery drama."

N Y Exhibitor p36 N 25 '35

"Fair murder mystery."

+ — Variety p12 Ja 8 '36

LADY OF SECRETS. Ja 25 '36 75min Columbia

Players: Ruth Chatterton. Otto Kruger. Marian Marsh. Lionel Atwill

Director: Marion Gering

This film was formerly called No More Yesterdays. Based on the novel, Maid of Honor, by Katherine Brush. Ruth Chatterton

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

plays the part of a young woman whose lover is killed in the war. She is compelled by her father to rear her illegitimate child as her sister. When the child grows up, complications in her love affairs cause the mother much anguish, but in the end all turns out well.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Good; Y: Perhaps; C: No interest."
Christian Century p415 Mr 11 '36

"Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee
Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."
Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Although the theme, that of the interference of parents in the lives of their children, has universal appeal, the tame and complicated story moves slowly and is darkened, but not deepened, by the unconvincing melodrama which dominates it. Adults and young people."
— + Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Mature."
Wkly Guide F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Ruth Chatterton returns to the screen after an uncommonly long absence in a motion-picture likely to divide film-critics into bitter, sullen camps. Already, at preview in Hollywood, Columbia's 'No More Yesterdays' has caused critical division. . . 'A daring, dramatically high-lighted story of maternal love, told without pulling punches, but with fine subtlety and restraint, gives the [film] appeal not only to the Chatterton and Kruger followers, but to the vast audience of entertainment seekers,' the Hollywood Reporter decides after seeing the film. . . No such commendation, however is found in the criticism in the Hollywood Daily Variety, which bluntly, and with pungent phrasing, takes an entirely opposite view."
Lit Digest p20 Ja 11 '36

"It can be said for Miss Chatterton that no matter how poor her material she gives freely of her talent, never stooping to walk through her lines or offer an indifferent performance. Had Mr. Gering leavened his production with a little humor, or had the script writers turned the light of modern psychology upon their weighty efforts, the piece might not have seemed such stilted hokum." Marguerite Tazelaar
— N Y Herald Tribune p8 F 24 '36

"This stress on plot has kept the picture from making full use of mood and characterization. The acting, like the script, is conventional. The theme should have been moving, the climax poignant. Instead, the script is routine and the acting almost wooden. . . In spite of its stereotyped treatment 'Lady of Secrets' does at least have a central theme not yet worn out by constant use on the screen." Eileen Creelman
— + N Y Sun p8 F 22 '36

"A picture that sashays back and forth in space and time without progressing far in any direction, 'Lady of Secrets,' is scarcely worthy of its cast. . . The result, in the curious mathematics of the cinema, is zero." B.R.C.
— N Y Times p12 F 22 '36

"No less a shining star of the fiction field than Katherine Brush is credited with the original story, and such recognized practitioners of stage and movie writing as Zoe

Akins and Joseph Anthony fashioned the screen play, while Ruth Chatterton plays the leading role. With such a star-spangled combination you might reasonably expect at least a modicum of perfection in their combined efforts. But 'Lady of Secrets' lacks every proof that its perpetrators are anything but a group of ambitious amateurs." William Boehnel
— + N Y World-Telegram p15 F 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p27 Ja 4 '36

"This is a tale of mother-love that ought to spell box office. It is well played by the leads and supporting cast and has been well produced and directed. It will have a particular appeal for women, of course. Chatterton turns in a remarkably fine performance in a difficult role."
+ Film Curb p5 Ja 4 '36

"Ruth Chatterton returns to the screen with another story that ticks her. Though she and the rest of the good cast try hard, and despite all the efforts of Director Marion Gering, the yarn is one of those creaky mother-love things that may get a little appreciation from part of the feminine clientele but not from the fans at large unless the story has some novelty or big punch, which this one hasn't got."
— + Film Daily p13 F 21 '36

"A somewhat slow-moving drama of mother love, with an appeal mainly to women. Parts of it are unpleasant owing to the cruelty inflicted on Ruth Chatterton by Lionel Atwill, her domineering father. . . Not for children, adolescents, or Sundays."
— + Harrison's Reports F 1 '36

"A serious problem drama, this is essentially a woman's picture. Impressive in character, slow moving dialogue is the interpretive medium as the action is noticeably played down. Told both as a straight story and in retrospect, this formula show aims at sympathy for the leading player. . . Convincingly acted in the spirit of the story, the picture's appeal is directed mainly at the more serious-minded audience contingents. Kruger's and Miss Chatterton's fans may find much to please them. General audiences, however, are apt to find the picture too deep and complicated to hold sustained interest."
+ Motion Pict Daily p7 D 26 '35

"When she last appeared in pictures, heroine Ruth Chatterton was slipping at the box office. Columbia picked her up, placed her in 'Lady of Secrets.' Miss Chatterton may not slip further but she will not advance very far in her path back to box office prowess. . . Bearing little that doesn't seem familiar, the picture will have to be helped by whatever star draw the female star still retains. . . Estimate: weak for de luxers."
— + N Y Exhibitor p42 Ja 25 '36

"Ruth Chatterton, back to the screen after a long absence, is still having trouble with her offspring. This time she is also having trouble with the play, the direction and occasionally with the photography. . . It adds up as a creaky old-fashioned and stilted production of a story hard to swallow. . . The talk is often hackneyed, the dramatic moments are hokum and the direction is stiff. It's just one of those productions that petered out all along the line. . . As a whole an excellent cast is wasted."
— Variety p37 F 26 '36

"Lacking [star] names and with the most familiar of stories, 'No More Yesterdays' will have to struggle for its living. The picture is draggy throughout, extremely talky. Despite being well produced and written, it lacks the motivation to hold interest. . . Marion Gering's direction is heavy-handed throughout. Picture has but few light moments. Half of the story is told in a single flashback. There's little happening that is not telegraphed away in advance."
— Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 24 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

LAND OF PROMISE. N 20 '35 60min Urim
Palestine picture corp

Players: People of Palestine

Director: Juda Leman

"The film is a pictorial record of the achievements of the 300,000 Jews who have poured into the Near East in the last fifteen years, enduring hardships reminiscent of the pioneers of the last century to cover the arid, barren land with orange groves, thriving settlements and bustling towns." N Y World-Telegram

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: Interesting and impressive."
Par M p55 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 13 '35

"While the film is in the nature of a travelogue, it is never dull because of the vigor and liveliness of its theme; also because it has been produced, directed and edited by experienced persons." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p17 N 22 '35

"Rarely has the camera presented such magnificent portraiture, nor used it with more telling effect. As a factual account of life in Palestine, colored slightly no doubt, by the film-makers' point of view, the picture is complete. Whether as a newsreel of the new Palestine, as a documentary film of historic and sociological importance or as pictorial entertainment, 'The Land of Promise' deserves being seen." F. S. N.

+ N Y Times p27 N 21 '35

N Y World-Telegram p22 N 21 '35

Reviewed by John Mosher
New Yorker p122 D 7 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Impressive picture of Palestine-rebuilding by the Jews is entertainingly developed."

+ Film Daily p8 N 19 '35

"Juda Leman, a German refugee, has done a fine job in his handling of the theme, skillfully applying his directing talent to make this a splendid production. . . The picture is not regulation entertainment and, as such, will have a limited appeal among average audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 N 19 '35

"'The Land of Promise' is a complete recording of the multifarious activities engendered by a migratory and pioneering people. [It is] an interesting and instructive production."

+ Motion Pict Herald p70 D 7 '35

"Well photographed, with interesting narration by announcer Ross, tasteful musical accompaniment, this is inspiration for all Jews. . . Its appeal is limited, however, to sections strongly Jewish. Family travel."

+ N Y Exhibitor p55 D 10 '35

"For Zionist meetings, religious sessions and other sectarian affairs it's highly meritorious, being the most comprehensive treatise on the Palestine subject yet devised, and telling more about Palestine, and with more power and authority, than reams of printed data and hours of lecture platform dissertations."

+ Variety p30 N 27 '35

LAST DAYS OF POMPEII. O 18 '35 85min
RKO

Players: Preston Foster. Basil Rathbone.
Dorothy Wilson

Director: Ernest B. Schoedsack

Suggested by the Bulwer-Lytton novel of same title. The scene is Jerusalem and Pompeii during the first century A. D. under the Roman Empire. "The adventures of an upright blacksmith who loses wife and child because of his poverty and then determines on an unscrupulous career of wealth. As gladiator, as slave dealer, as horse trader and as armed mercenary, he builds a fortune for himself and his adopted son, only to find in the end that the doctrines of Christ have influenced his heir more profoundly than his own credo of financial success." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fine of kind; Y: Probably good; C: No."
Christian Century p1439 N 6 '35

"A brilliant, dynamic and powerful spectacle which carries a message of the ever-present conflict between material and spiritual forces. Family, emotional for young children."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 26 '35

"Director Schoedsack, who ranks high in the production of the spectacular, should be complimented for his skillful handling of the masses in the arena, and for the delicacy and restraint displayed in the introduction of the Christ. . . Adults: good; possible for family."

+ Jt Estimates O 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p172 N '35

"Good. Adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"'Last Days of Pompeii' frankly bears no relation to the old Bulwer-Lytton novel except in its title." J. S. H.

Nat Bd of R M p14 N '35

"This picture is most interesting with its well told story, its fine cast, sincere portrayals, expert direction, lavish stage sets, fine photography and spectacular scenes. Family, but not for small children."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Good spectacular drama."
Par M p55 Mr '36

"Unusually human for so spectacular [a] production. Magnificent pictures of ancient Pompeii and Jerusalem, culminating excitingly in the famous eruption of Mt. Vesuvius. Family. Recommended for church use."

+ Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p8 O 16 '35

"Spectacular melodrama. . . Parents will use discretion about taking their children to a film that closes with scenes of terror and destruction that may be frightening."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

Liberty p27 N 9 '35

"There is enough heart interest and plot and historical aura in this strut-and-fret movie to keep you interested until Vesuvius pops, and then the real show begins." Don Herold

+ Life p22 D '35

"'The Last Days of Pompeii' is shrewdly arresting." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p16 O 17 '35

"Although it is persuasively staged and excitingly narrated, the work is rather more absorbing in its straightforward melodrama than in the later phases." Andre Sennwald

+ — N Y Times p29 O 17 '35

Springf'd Republican p4c D 29 '35

Time p52 O 28 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

"Flawlessly directed and enacted by a cast that do it full justice."

+ Film Curb p18 O 1 '35

"Family drama."

N Y Exhibitor p37 O 10 '35

LAST OF THE CLINTONS. N 15 '35 60min
Ajax

Players: Harry Carey, Betty Mack, Del Gordon, Victor Potel

Director: Harry Fraser

A range detective breaks up a gang of rustlers and wins the girl.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Melodrama of the West."
Par M p55 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is the final one in the first series of four Carey action Westerns, and looks to be about the best so far."

+ Film Daily p7 N 12 '35

"This Western is routine material of its kind, containing that amount and sort of action which is usually found pleasing by the youngsters and those of the adults who still enjoy western fare."

— + Motion Pict Daily p6 N 14 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p56 D 10 '35

LAST OF THE PAGANS. D 13 '35 72min MGM

Players: Ray Wise, Lotus Long

Director: Richard Thorpe

Native dialogue with English subtitles. Filmed in the South Sea Islands. Based on the novel Typee, by Herman Melville. "On a wife hunting expedition, Mala finds Natita and takes her back to his island to marry her. Natita learns to love the boy, but before the marriage ceremony, Mala is abducted and taken to the phosphorus mines on a nearby island. During a blast, he helps to save a white boss, and for his deed, Natita is sent for. The officials want to ship her back, because they believe she is the wife of a chief. After being jailed for becoming violent, Mala escapes, finds his Natita and they sail away to a new life on another island." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Family." Calif Congress of Par &amp; Teachers

"Good. Light entertainment; beautiful scenery. Mature." DAR

"Good atmosphere, and a touching love story. Family." Nat Bd of R

"Here we have a picture which is absorbing entertainment despite the fact that all of the dialogue is in native tongue with English sub-titles for so clearcut is the entire action that every bit is most understandable. . . Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"The photography is exquisite, the settings beautiful and the direction excellent. Outstanding. Family-mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The story becomes [too] harrowing and over-melodramatic for enjoyment. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

Fox W Coast Bul D 28 '35

"This picture, somewhat of a travelogue, most artistically photographed and well acted, shows in all its beauty the native life of islanders, and the dramatic effect of storm, sky and sea."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
D 16 '35

"It is an interesting and vivid picture. Outstanding. Excellent entertainment. Family."

+ + Jt Estimates D 15 '35

"Carefully synchronized music also aids an appreciative understanding of the moods and emotional reaction. The film is especially notable for its pictorial beauty. . . It is consistently appealing and entertaining, with many novel features."

+ Motion Pict &amp; Family p2 Ja 15 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: South Sea idyll; C: Interesting."
Par M p55 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Good atmosphere, and a touching love story."

+ Wkly Guide D 21 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 4
'36

"While the new picture cannot compare in beauty or artistic achievement to 'Moana,' 'Tabu' or 'White Shadows in the South Seas,' it is reasonably interesting; its workmanship is competent and its camera studies pleasing. Its plotty story rather cheapens the pastoral beauty of the theme and setting." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p13 Ja 9 '36

"'Last of the Pagans,' keeps up to the high standard of South Sea Island location films. . . Richard Thorpe, director of 'Last of the Pagans,' has brought home a sturdy moving, exciting melodrama as well as a pictorially memorable film. It is well worth seeing." Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p26 Ja 9 '36

Reviewed by F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p25 Ja 9 '36

"It is a rather ambling and familiar little romance." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p29 Ja 9 '36

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p61 Ja 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p34 D 7 '35

"It is a fine example of painstaking direction and seldom has a more entrancing production been released."

+ Film Curb p18 D 15 '35

"With the South Sea Islands for a setting, this picture is a beautiful piece of work. The love story of the boy and girl is simple and realistic and wisely remains native throughout. The writer and director have included some very good thrill scenes, which help to hold one's interest. The dialogue is all native with explanations given by a few subtitles."

+ Film Daily p4 D 11 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LAST OF THE PAGANS—Continued

"Delightful entertainment for discriminating audiences, something on the order of 'Tabu.' . . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 4 '36

"Located in the South Sea Islands, this picture tells the exotic love-drama of a primitive native couple. Essentially, its elements are those common to all dramatic romances. Sub-titles explaining the Polynesian dialect and movement are made understandable by the interpreting medium. Its love interest is idyllic and the sympathy of the stimulating drama is powerful and appealing. Intelligently produced and directed, it is acted with a simplicity rare in current attractions. . . . As the native courtship customs are depicted in song and dance, Herbert Stothart's musical score accentuates the romance and drama. . . . The charm of the beautiful backgrounds is excellently accentuated by Clyde De Vinna's expert photography."

+ Motion Pict Daily p13 D 7 '35

"Unusual photography has captured the full charm of strange and beautiful backgrounds. . . . To make the feature, a large company of actors, technicians and production crew spent months on the Islands, as a result of which all that will be seen on the screen is actual and authentic. As the backgrounds are real, so is the character of the story. With simple humans featured, it concentrates on humaneness in its strange love interest and gripping drama."

+ Motion Pict Herald p50 N 16 '35

"Metro has produced a sincerely made South Pacific idyll, one that may do its best in the better type houses, but which ought to be saleable anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p38 D 25 '35

"Probably will mostly make double bills but elsewhere it may also do some fair single role business. Picture is weighted down with native chatter (often with English titles appended on film) that means little. This is counter-balanced in later footage by good mixture of suspense and dramatics."

+ Variety p19 Ja 15 '36

LAST OUTPOST. O 11 '35 72min Paramount

Players: Cary Grant. Claude Rains. Gertrude Michael. Kathleen Burke

Directors: Louis Gasnier. Charles Barton

Based on novel Drums by F. Britten Austin. "Against a background of border warfare with uncivilized tribes of Kurdistan and the African Sudan, during the Great War, we see the rescue of a British officer by a member of the Secret Service Department, their subsequent friendship and its peril when love enters in the comely person of Nurse Hayden." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fairly good; Y: Thrilling; C: Unsuitable." Christian Century p1439 N 6 '35

"An entertaining drama due to fine work by an able cast. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 12 '35

Mo Film Bul p173 N '35

"Good. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unconvincing and tedious. Adults."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A: Fair Western; Y and C: Interesting." Par M p55 Mr '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"A beautifully photographed and interesting, although rather confusing story. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide O 5 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"An ill-considered release at this time, with machine guns mowing down hordes of dark natives."

— Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '35

"[It is] a stereotype of the same old excessive and silly romance of two uniforms and a girl. It is not wholly bad, however; Claude Rains is in it. The first half is excellent, good enough to make what follows doubly regrettable."

+ New Statesman & Nation p937 D 14 '35

Reviewed by Andre Sennwald
N Y Times px5 O 13 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c D 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p34 N 23 '35

"Paramount fell down trying to make another 'Bengal Lancer.'"

— Film Curb p7 O 15 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p35 N 10 '35

LAUGHING IRISH EYES. Mr 10 '36 70min Republic

Players: Phil Regan. Walter Kelly. Evelyn Knapp

Director: Joseph Santley

"Kelly, fight promoter of the Irish-American A. C., goes to Ireland to find a good fighter to restore the prestige of his club. Miss Knapp, his daughter, accompanies him. There she meets and falls in love with a blacksmith, Regan, who wins a singing contest at a fair."

Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide F 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"That it perhaps will hold up its end of a double bill is about the best that can be said for this picture. . . . It is a sad waste of acting ability. Phil Regan has possibilities, possessing a pleasing personality and a singing voice of ingratiating quality. He can be built into a favorite if given better vehicles than fell to his lot in his first starring production." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p10 Mr 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a mixture of Irish blarney, songs and the prize ring that is excellent entertainment. It should appeal to all classes, male and female. It gives Phil Regan his first big chance and he comes through in great style." . . . This one can be highly recommended."

+ Film Curb p16 Mr 7 '36

"For the popular houses of all classes it [will] please audiences of all types. And we are free to state that it carries more real human appeal and downright entertainment than a big slice of the more pretentious productions. . . . You can shout about this as grand entertainment for the entire family and you'll have no kick-backs. For Irish communities [it will be] a cleanup."

+ Film Daily p5 Mr 4 '36

"Very pleasant fare it is, with a limited budget expertly handled for entertainment values and it will dual to good returns pretty well up the scale."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 5 '36

"Light and entertaining, although unpretentious fare, this should prove satisfying in the smaller situations particularly. It is tuneful and often amusing, and a film which should be easy to sell in the Irish communities. Phil Regan, in the lead, sings several Irish songs in attractive fashion."

+ Motion Pict Daily p29 Mr 4 '36

"Here's a show that is not only entertaining but also one that readily lends itself to unique and effective interest-creating exploitation. For entertainment purposes it blends the sock of prize ring thrill action with the appeal of music tinged with love interest. . . . Previewed at the Fairfax Theatre, Los Angeles, subsequent-run neighborhood house. The audience watched picture intently, occasionally breaking out into applause in appreciation of Regan's singing and the thrill action."

+ Motion Pict Herald p58 Mr 14 '36

"Well cast and studded with a group of names that mean box office for any independent picture, 'Laughing Irish Eyes,' though marked by production carelessness, should be able to hold its own outside of the de lusers. In the [neighborhood houses], it has a good chance of being the top of double bills. . . . Story is none too original but well written, and holds up throughout."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 5 '36

LAWLESS BORDER. D 10 '35 58min Spectrum
Players: Bill Cody. Molly O'Day. Martin Garralaga.

Director: Ray Kirkwood

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y and C: Interesting Western."
Par M p55 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Interesting Western with more than the usual amount of dramatic and romantic sequences. Action, however, has not been neglected with Bill Cody providing enough hard-riding and gun fights to please the most exacting lover of adventure films."

+ Box Office p33 D 28 '35

"The love interest is well handled and more attention paid to developing dramatic scenes than in most Westerns. This makes up for some overemphasis in close-up scenes with too much explanatory conversation."

+ Film Daily p4 D 11 '35

"Designed for juveniles. While not enjoying a full quota of action and suspense, the material presented will satisfy the youngsters who go in for this sort of entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 D 11 '35

"Photography is only fair, together with editing and recording; but acting is competent, casting excellent, story certainly as good as in other Westerns. Family Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p40 D 25 '35

LAWLESS NINETIES. F 15 '36 57min Republic
Players: John Wayne. Ann Rutherford. Harry Woods

Director: Joseph Kane

A western melodrama of the early days of Wyoming when the territory applied for admission to the Union.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A fast-riding, hard-shooting action yarn has been wisely placed against an authentic historical background with excellent results. The story of those turbulent days when Wyoming was still a territory seeking admission to the Union as a State is ideal material for this higher type of Western which will furnish exciting entertainment for audiences everywhere."

+ Box Office p13 Mr 14 '36

"Fully up to the standard of the Wayne Westerns. . . . While Westerns are pretty much alike as to plot, an attempt is being made by producers to make them a bit different. In this case it has been done successfully."

+ Film Curb p16 Mr 7 '36

"The yarn whips into a series of knock-down fights and gun play with plenty of furious riding. . . . The finale is a pitched battle at the edge of the barricaded town and the clean-up of the gang and capture of the leader. Has all the exciting stuff the fans will go for."

+ Film Daily p7 F 29 '36

"An excellent Western; it is packed with action and comedy and has been photographed amid beautiful scenery. One thrilling and exciting situation is where Wayne, attacked by two ruffians, is forced to fight for his life. . . . Suitable for all. Family."

+ Harrison's Reports Mr 21 '36

"A western yarn built around the efforts of the lawless element to control the vote of Wyoming territory when it applied for admission to the United States in 1890, and the manner in which Government agents protected the voters. This picture is fast-moving and lively action fare, good for the week-end program or on a double bill."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Mr 2 '36

"Although the picture is a run-of-the-mill action drama, similar in plot and trimmings to previous members of this series starring John Wayne, it has the stuff which, taken as a whole, has proved successful with audiences in most situations where this type film is presented."

+ Motion Pict Herald p53 Mr 7 '36

"Estimate: fast moving Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p55 Mr 10 '36

LAWLESS RANGE. O 3 '35 57min Republic
Players: John Wayne. Sheila Mannors

Director: Robert N. Bradbury

Mysterious raids on ranches in an isolated valley containing gold deposits are uncovered by a shrewd government agent in this western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"A, Y and C: Good Western melodrama."
Par M p55 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p35 N 23 '35

"'Lawless Range' can hold its head high because its action is [good] . . . its story keeps moving at a rapid speed. Family Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

LAWLESS RIDERS. D 28 '35 57min Republic
 Players: Ken Maynard, Geneva Mitchell
 Director: Spencer Gordon
 A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p10 D 28 '35

"Estimate: satisfactory Western anywhere."
 + N Y Exhibitor p42 Ja 25 '36

LEATHERNECKS HAVE LANDED. F 22 '36
 65min Republic

Players: Lew Ayres, Isabel Jewell, Jimmy
 Ellison, James Burke

Director: Howard Bretherton

A hot-tempered marine in constant scrapes with his fellow soldiers is dishonorably discharged when he is involved unwittingly in a murder. He joins a gun smuggling gang in Shanghai and later has a chance to help the marines in a battle with raiders whom he had supplied with guns.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Very good. General patronage."
 Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"Family."
 Wkly Guide F 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is not a big picture, but it is one of the neatest jobs of picture making I have seen for some time. . . As a result of the intelligent direction Bretherton gives the well constructed story, we have a picture which will give satisfaction to any audience." Allan Hersholt

Hollywood Spec p11 F 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Appropriately titled 'The Leathernecks Have Landed,' this offering lands directly on the box-office front with barrage of sure-fire entertainment that should capture one hundred percent family patronage."

+ Box Office p25 F 29 '36

"An entertaining picture with the Marines as a background. It is fast moving, amusing and has several thrilling sequences."

+ Film Curb p8 F 29 '36

"Good popular entertainment with an action story and nice work by a capable cast."

+ Film Daily p18 F 17 '36

"A pretty good action melodrama. It is a little slow in getting started, but once it finishes establishing the different characters it becomes exciting and holds one's attention to the end. . . Suitable for all. Family."

+ Harrison's Reports Mr 7 '36

"It packs a lusty dramatic wallop and a vein of genuine sentiment and it is so well made that it ranks with the best independent productions of the year. Only the lack of strong box office names will keep it from soaring and as it is, it will head double bills to a swell profit."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 13 '36

"Although the story has some elements of weakness, there is enough fighting to satisfy those who enjoy two-fisted action."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 F 15 '36

Motion Pict Herald p44 F 25 '36

"Estimate: good programmer, saleable anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p55 Mr 10 '36

"Picture should hold up its end on generality of programs, and here and there may ride solo. . . Howard Bretherton's direction soundly builds up the melodrama with punch and suspense, without sacrificing valid character, an excellent job in every respect."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 13 '36

LEAVENWORTH CASE. F 10 '36 65min Republic

Players: Donald Cook, Jean Rouverol, Norman Foster, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Maude Eburne, Warren Hymer

Director: Lewis D. Collins

Based on the novel of the same title by Anna Katherine Green. "Although there are a number of suspects, the murderer is identified for the audience at the start. The point is to have the detective discover the killer. However, the person who unravels the mystery is not the detective but the comic hard-of-hearing old maid aunt." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Murder mystery; Y: Doubtful; C: No."
 Par M p55 Mr '36

Wkly Guide Ja 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"While this one won't set the world afire its bound to hold its own in most situations."

+ Film Curb p12 Ja 11 '36

"Entertaining murder mystery with good cast and emphasis on the comedy angle. . . Its best point is the comedy work of Warren Hymer and Maude Eburne."

+ Film Daily p9 Ja 6 '36

"In adapting this from the novel, the producers have altered the plot considerably; to such an extent, in fact, that the story is unrecognizable. It is, however, a good murder melodrama, holding the spectator in fair suspense throughout. . . Unsuitable for either children or adolescents, in theatres where murder melodramas are not shown to them. Good adult entertainment."

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 18 '36

"Of average entertainment value and providing little that is new, the picture is benefited by good names."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 Ja 3 '36

"In this picture, a murder mystery embellished with comedy and romance and with drama building suspense, the motive for murder and the mystery of how it is done are made evident in the first few sequences. Thus it differs materially from the usual manner in which mystery drama features are presented."

Motion Pict Herald p53 Ja 11 '36

"What should have been an intriguing sleuth-murder mystery film wobbles badly through inept casting and slovenly direction. Net result is that 'The Leavenworth Case' is just another detective melodrama, lacking good draw names and destined for double programs."

+ Variety p14 Ja 22 '36

"Fair. . . Mystery is exploded after the first ten feet but there's enough interest to hold . . . not too particular audiences. Direction indicates haste."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 31 '35

LEGONG. N 15 '35 50min DuWorld

Players: Native cast

Director: Marquis Henri de la Falaise

"A slight story relates the love of the boy, Nyong, for the girl, Saplak. Unfortunately, he is betrothed to Poutou, [and] cannot break off lest she lose face before the community. The clandestine affair is found out by Poutou; she eases herself out of the way, via suicide."

N Y Exhibitor

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p4 N 14 '35

"The picture has been produced with care, and many of its backgrounds, against the sea, in the market place, and those for the dance of the virgins, are handsome reproductions in natural colors." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p19 O 3 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"[A] pictorial review of [a] beautiful island as it really is."

+ Film Curb p12 O 15 '35

"Adult melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p36 O 25 '35

LIEBELEI. F 27 '36 68min Elite tonfilm

Players: Paul Hoerbiger. Magda Schneider. Luise Ullrich. Gustaf Gruendgens

Director: Max Ophuels

Based on play of same title by Arthur Schnitzler. German dialogue film made in Vienna with English sub-titles. "Having fallen in love with a fraulein, a young officer is haunted by the complications of a former affair with a married woman. In the end he has to fight a duel with the husband." (Variety)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is suffused with German sentimentality and approaches again in spirit those pictures that came out of Germany several years ago when they were producing such things as 'Two Hearts in Waltz Time.' . . . The story is presented with persuasive charm and believability. It is rather old-fashioned in its settings and atmospheric feeling, as it should be, of course. The performances are excellent." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p13 Mr 4 '36

"'Liebeleil' is not epochal, but it is a charming, Old World, sensitively performed and absorbing photoplay which ends on a note of poignant tragedy. . . . With so somber a tale at its mercy, the wonder of 'Liebeleil' is that it can at the same time be so mellow, radiant and tender a picture. But it is, and that can be attributed only to the players, their director and to the photography." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p18 F 28 '36

"I, for one, however, must admit to mixed and troubled feelings about this latest cinema importation. It is extremely well acted, and there is a great deal of charm in its curiously pathetic and tender little love story. But it tells this tale in such a languid manner that most of its effectiveness is lost. . . . All of this would be pretty unbearably archaic and depressing if it were not for the work of a really expert cast of players who recite it tenderly, carefully, often charmingly and sometimes even movingly." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p25 Mr 4 '36

"It's mostly about lovers walking around the block in a drizzle. That's how you feel, anyhow, after two or three hours of it." John Mosher

New Yorker p76 Mr 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is a better than average foreign production with very good cast, good direction, fine acting and the best in the way of photography. The story is a romantic drama with a tragic ending."

+ Film Daily p7 F 29 '36

"Spoken in German and fitted out with English subtitles, Arthur Schnitzler's tragic romance ranks well above the average importation of its kind in dramatic power and general makeup. To an audience of evidently Teutonic origin in attendance at the 55th Street Playhouse, New York, the picture appeared to be immensely amusing in its early stages, gripping in its closing sequence."

+ Motion Pict Herald p58 Mr 14 '36

"It is a picture of few virtues and many obvious limitations, even for the Teutonic market in the United States. Performance, direction, sound and photography passable but undistinguished."

— + Variety p31 Mr 4 '36

LIMELIGHT. (Release date not determined)
65min Wilcox

Players: Anna Neagle. Arthur Tracy. Ellis Jeffreys. Tilly Losch

Director: Herbert Wilcox

This film was made in England. "A [chorus girl] hears a down-and-outer singing in the street, and when the star singer of her show loses his voice within a half hour of the first night she drags the boy in and pleads with the management to give him a chance." (Variety)

Trade Paper Reviews

"There are some good ballet scenes, but in the absence of really convincing story values it stands or falls as a singing show by Tracy. His numbers are well put over and balance his lack of screen personality."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 25 '36

"The high spots of this picture are the graceful dancing in it and Arthur Tracy's fine voice. . . . There is too much repetition; too much flashing back to the same stage set and recurrence of song scenes. But withal there is an air of sincerity that makes the story pleasing, if not epoch-making. . . . Interesting, but maybe the appeal will be more local [England] than universal."

+ — Variety p27 Mr 11 '36

LITTLE AMERICA. O 4 '35 52min Paramount

Players: Members of the second Byrd Expedition

Director: Dario Faralla

A scene-by-scene account of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's second Antarctic expedition; filmed by John L. Herrmann and Carl O. Peterson who were among the band of fifty-six men comprising Admiral Byrd's crew and staff. The picturization of the expedition shows how the colony lived during the long months of winter night, how scientific information of all sorts was recorded and even how they discovered that microscopic life existed.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Thrilling scenes of unloading the ship, preparations necessary for their existence through the long Arctic night, the care of the dogs, the terrific storms, the dangerous crevasses,

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LITTLE AMERICA—Continued

the scientific research made, and the almost tragic ending of Admiral Byrd's solitary vigil in the trackless waste are but parts of this most stirring and educational drama. Excellent entertainment. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 12 '35

"This film has excellent educational values for it glorifies the best in human life—devotion to science, self-sacrifice, and high courage. Family."

+ Jt Estimates O 15 '35

"Very good. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"It is a valuable document of history in the making. . . . Excellent entertainment. Family and junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Entertaining and instructive."
Par M p55 Mr '36

"This picturization of Admiral Byrd's second expedition to Little America is an inspiring narrative of devotion to science. . . . This film has excellent educational values, for it glorifies the best in human life—devotion to science, self-sacrifice and high courage. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

"Both entertaining and instructional. Recommended to Exceptional Photoplays Committee. Suggested for schools and libraries and for list of films worth keeping permanently available. Family. Junior matinee."

+ + Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[This] is a splendid, forthright, dramatic motion-picture, complete with sound, conversations, even hints of plot-structure. The drama is real and convincing. . . . This is the first of the factual polar films accomplished with fine coordination among cameramen, writers with a sense of drama, and the events themselves. It is more nearly a feature fictional film in form than a factual narrative, but there is no spurious filming here. It was 'shot' in Little America. . . . Advance screening took place first in Hollywood."

+ Lit Digest p28 O 12 '35

"The film is disappointing in not revealing why Admiral Byrd engaged in his lonely experiment or what he did while at his farthest south and in giving no word of explanation from him regarding the solitary sojourn. . . . The picture is interesting from beginning to end and is accompanied by intelligent comment." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p19 O 15 '35

"The photography is generally excellent and the sound recording clear." F. S. N.

+ N Y Times p19 O 15 '35

Springf'd Republican p6 N 21 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

Film Curb p8 O 15 '35

"Family drama."

N Y Exhibitor p35 O 25 '35

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY. F 28 '36 98min
United artists-Selznick International

Players: Freddie Bartholomew. Dolores Costello Barrymore. C. Aubrey Smith. Guy Kibbee

Director: John Cromwell

Based on the play of same title by Frances Hodgson Burnett. Previously made as a silent film. "It tells of a youngster whom fate elected to yank out of happy surroundings and set down in a tradition-encrusted manor house of age old English aristocracy to become Lord Fauntleroy, heir presumptive to the title, The Earl of Dorincourt." (Motion Pict Herald)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Frances Hodgson Burnett's classic as adapted by Hugh Walpole is an outstanding picture. Handsomely mounted, the settings, costumes, and decorative details give indication of careful consideration of the period and the social environment to be portrayed."

+ + Motion Pict & Family p4 Mr 15 '36

"A story which might easily have become saccharine and sentimental avoids every pitfall because of tasteful direction and exceptional acting, and in addition this young English actor may well be called an ambassador of good will, interpreting to American children the customs and habits of another land. We recommend this as an ideal family treat. Adolescents, 12-16; highly entertaining; children, 8-12; excellent."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Delightful, particularly for those who remember; Y and C: Splendid."

Par M p55 Mr '36

"Suggested for schools and libraries. Family. Juvenile."

Wkly Guide F 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There was bound to be a good deal of sentiment in 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.' That is the way Frances Hodgson Burnett wrote the story. But in adapting it to the screen Hugh Walpole has avoided as much sugary sweetness as he could. . . . 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' has merits to appeal to the masculine as well as the feminine audience." E. F. Melvin

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 7 '36

"'Little Lord Fauntleroy is no longer the oversentimental lace and old lavender Fauntleroy of Mary Pickford's portrayal of the early 1920's. Instead, he stands, happily, in the enactment of Master Freddie (David Copperfield) Bartholomew, a thoroughly human youngster, a regular little fellow whose movements require no strain of the imagination to understand why he worms his way into the crabby old heart of the Earl of Dorincourt." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p552 Mr 13 '36

"While I do not agree that the script is the best that could be written from the book, I grant it is quite good enough to permit John Cromwell to give us a picture which should satisfy audiences throughout the world. The story of Little Lord Fauntleroy is classic hokum. It is all sentiment, its goodness dripping with virtue and its badness yielding to virtue triumphant. If the story had no classic background and had been submitted to a Hollywood producer as an original, its progress toward the screen would have come to an abrupt stop at the desk of the first reader who scanned it. But it has become a classic, so it comes to the screen and will do big business at the box-office." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p5 F 29 '36

"The most prying and suspicious psychologist will pass over the mother-and-son situation in the picture, and Freddie wears no curls.

What's more, the astute producers have allowed him a good gutter brawl in the streets. 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' has overtones of 'Skippy' in his 1936 version."

Lit Digest p20 Mr 21 '36

"Almost any screen rendering of Frances Hodgson Burnett's famed story . . . would automatically have been assured of an enthusiastic response from female cinemaddicts. However, not content to let the production depend upon the haloed sentimentality of its source, Producer Selznick has made this picture much more than a stock sample of Hollywood lavender and old lace. . . . Handsomely rewritten for the screen by Hugh Walpole, beautifully staged, and superbly directed by John Cromwell, it affords proof that Selznick International is off to a flying start and offers an actors' holiday to Freddie Bartholomew, C. Aubrey Smith and Dolores Costello Barrymore."

+ Time p48 Mr 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Little Lord Fauntleroy' is another triumph for David O. Selznick. Laughter and tears are expertly woven into a cinematic fabric that resolves itself into magnificent entertainment patterned for mass and class appeal, and definitely establishes Freddie Bartholomew as the screen's greatest male child star. Family."

+ Box Office p35 Mr 7 '36

"This will be popular with all types of audiences, but will have especial appeal for women. It is full of warm heart interest and is a credit to all concerned in its making."

+ Film Daily p9 F 25 '36

"Excellent! It is a warmly human, deeply moving, as well as humorous story. Excellent for all. Family."

+ + Harrison's Reports Mr 21 '36

"Strictly in the mood which has characterized all of his recent pictures, such as 'A Tale of Two Cities,' the producer has turned to the sticky and minor classic of Frances Hodgson Burnett and, by dint of considerable ingenuity and intelligence, has fashioned an attraction which should send parent-teacher associations out cheering and club-women into ecstatic raves over this celluloid exploration into motives pure and chivalry untarnished."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 F 25 '36

"As conceived, prepared, acted, directed and produced, it is a valuable piece of screen merchandise. In every way it is potentially promising as being entertainment at least as important to exhibitors and theatre-goers as was 'David Copperfield,' the picture that introduced its star, Freddie Bartholomew."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 F 25 '36

"It will delight all manner of audiences, critical or casual, with its high comedy, effective pathos, genuine feeling and fine dramatic unfoldment, and will clean up financially from the ace [houses] to the subsequents because of its sheer merit and irresistible human appeal. . . . It may well be that young Bartholomew's sensitive and wholly captivating performance will make him a high contender for top acting awards for 1936. His ability to invest his restrained childish comicalities with genuine pathos give him as much appeal to men as to women—and 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' will score as a strong mixed-audience picture."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 21 '36

LITTLEST REBEL. D 27 '35 70min 20th century-Fox

Players: Shirley Temple. John Boles. Jack Holt. Karen Morley. Bill Robinson. Frank McGlynn

Director: David Butler

From the old play of the same title by Edward Peple. A little Southern girl, caught in the turmoil of the Civil War loses her mother and finds her father taken prisoner by a Yankee officer. She pleads with him to free her father. When he does so, both he and the father are sentenced to death. Then she goes to the Great Emancipator himself to plead for her father and the Northern officer.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Shirley gives one of her most charming performances. Excellent."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Family." DAR

"Fascinating entertainment with a nice blend of humor and pathos that is largely due to Shirley Temple's beguiling charm and remarkable talents and the gifted dancing and acting of Bill Robinson. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family. Junior." Nat Bd of R

"Photographed with artistry and grace, it has a tear-drenched beauty, only momentarily lighted by whimsical comedy. Bill Robinson, as the faithful family slave, shares laurels with little Miss Temple. The balance of the cast is finely adequate but it is the clowning, the singing, the tap-dancing and the spontaneity of these two which will captivate all." Mrs T. G. Winter

"12-16; good; 8-18; exciting but good." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"Once in a blue moon there comes a picture which will prove delightful to every member of the family; from little sister right through to Grandma and Grandpa. . . . Family and junior matinee." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"This is a delightful story. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent for family." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul D 28 '35

"The delightful naturalness of Shirley Temple, the dramatic appeal of her work with John Boles, her expert dancing with Bill Robinson, again win the heart of the audience, giving to this talented child added honors. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) D 16 '35

"Very good. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Appealing, with Shirley Temple: C: Excellent."

Par M p55 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide D 14 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The Civil War seems to have been fought, according to this picture, simply to harass poor little Shirley Temple. . . . In 'The Littlest Rebel' battles are fought on Shirley's front lawn and raiding parties tramp through the parlors of her splendid Southern mansion, in spite of her efforts to repel them with a slingshot. It was not, as you might say, a war that went to waste, however, as it gave the wonder tot a chance to black up, be determinedly merry in distressing circumstances, sing a few tunes, weep with the old realistic heart-break . . . and best of all, dance. When Shirley Temple and Bill Robinson team up, they work a heel and toe magic that is unsurpassed by any of their contemporaries. Though half a century of time divides the two, Robinson is as feather-footed and nimble as his small partner and Shirley is as adroit, inventive and entralling as he. This reviewer would gladly swap the noble officers, both Blue and Gray, of the film, the rude Yankee plunderers, the too-quaint-for-words slave, John Henry, the darky cook named Roosevelt and throw in Abraham Lincoln, who displays his brooding profile in one scene—all for another glimpse of Robinson and Temple doing their sidewalk strut and the tap on a flight of stairs.” M. E. P.

LITTLEST REBEL—Continued

+ — Boston Transcript p4 D 21 '35

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 5 '35

“Dextrous young Shirley Temple makes her début in so-called ‘straight drama,’ but not without a generous sprinkling of the Shirley Temple smile, song and dance. A Civil War ‘meller,’ but not quite a Civil War ‘tear-jerker.’” J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p244 D 27 '35

Reviewed by Robert Stebbins
New Theatre p41 Ja '36

“I must confess that I invariably encounter films starring child players with skepticism and a trace of discomfort. As frequently as I have seen little Miss Temple, I find myself still unreconciled upon approaching her latest vehicle. Yet so amazing is the talent and persuasiveness of the most famous of baby actresses that each time I am slowly won over by her remarkable expertness and end filled with admiration. Here Miss Temple is in her best vein, whether acting or singing, whether being comic or emotional, and the result is that you will find no debunking of the baby Bergner in this vanquished commentary.” Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p22 D 21 '35

“The little star is entertaining her large and fervent audience in a picture that is probably her best since ‘Little Miss Marker.’ . . Shirley Temple remains, through some happy miracle, still a wonder-child, and a likeable as well as an extraordinary one. She has dropped some of her mannerisms and lost the air of self-consciousness so apparent for a while. The dimples are still in excellent working order; she dances more gayly than ever; and she does some heavy crying with heart-breaking naturalness.” Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p28 D 20 '35

“You may have got the mistaken notion from ‘So Red the Rose’ that the war between the States was filled with ruin, death, rebellious slaves and horrid Yankee barbarians. ‘The Littlest Rebel’ corrects that unhappy thought and presents the conflict as a decidedly chummy little war. The film is shrewdly spiced with humor and there is a winning quality in the utter shamelessness of its sentimental phases.” Andre Sennwald

N Y Times p30 D 20 '35

“Whether or not Miss Temple’s art is more mature than Frank McGlynn’s as Lincoln, may be a question, but it certainly seems more mature to me than the art, as we love to call it, of John Boles or Jack Holt, two of the gentlemen of the piece. . . In the eyes of all parents who are tired of working, Miss Temple must indeed be the model child.” John Mosher

New Yorker p57 D 28 '35

“The horrors of the Civil war are kept well in the background, so that the youngest Shirley Temple fan will not find the film too grim. Judging from the reaction of last night’s audience, it is entertaining adult fare as well, even the highly sentimentalized Temple-Lincoln scene going over big.” Louise Mace

+ Springfield Republican p2 Ja 2 '36

Time p16 D 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

“This has splendid comedy relief.”

+ Box Office p29 D 7 '35

Film Curb p13 D 1 '35

“Among the best of the Shirley Temple pictures. Highly enjoyable for any audience. The spotlight is on Shirley most of the time, the story has a lot of charm, a little sentiment, and with Shirley playing her role very naturally, the picture is a highly enjoyable one. Bill Robinson is there with his dancing, and with Shirley they are some combination. Besides his dancing, Robinson carries a large acting assignment, which he handles very well. . . The screen play moves along nicely with never a dull moment.”

+ Film Daily p8 N 22 '35

“Shirley Temple carries the burden of this picture on her shoulders and is entirely responsible for whatever entertaining values it has. The plot is feeble. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]”

+ — Harrison’s Reports D 21 '35

“Shirley Temple is this picture’s prime entertainment and commercial asset. The singing, dancing and smiling Shirley scores a personal triumph, her first straight, starring dramatic role.”

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 N 20 '35

“In this, an adaptation of an old and popular legitimate stage attraction, there is a singing, dancing, acting Shirley smuggling her way into the hearts of foe and friend alike, in a dramatic role which mingles tears and heart throbs with smiles and laughs, as the story narrates one of the most pungent romantic dramas of the Civil War.”

+ Motion Pict Herald p50 N 16 '35

“Family comedy drama.”

N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

“All bitterness and cruelty has been rigorously cut out and the Civil War emerges as a misunderstanding among kindly gentlemen with eminently happy slaves and a cute little girl who sings and dances through the story. Bill Robinson and the child again dance. This is surefire, and it bespeaks plenty of hoofing rehearsal. Robinson is once more the trusty family butler who guards little missy. [There is] no trace of the Edward Peple play in the Burke film version. . . [The] story is synthetic throughout but smart showmanship instills the illusion of life. Besides which the picture has good tempo.”

+ Variety p15 D 25 '35

LONE WOLF RETURNS. D 31 '35 69min Columbia

Players: Arthur Hohl, Melvyn Douglas, Gail Patrick, Thurston Hall

Director: Roy William Neill

Based on the novel of the same title by Louis Joseph Vance. An international jewel thief plans to steal a collection of jewels from a wealthy young woman. When he meets her at a social function he falls in love with her and decides to go straight. Another gang of thieves really steal the jewels and arrange matters so as to throw suspicion on the reformed thief. Through a clever ruse he rounds up the gang and recovers the jewels.

Audience Suitability Ratings

“Class A. General approval.” N Y Archdiocese
Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

“Unobjectionable for general patronage.”
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

“A and Y: Entertaining; C: If interested.”
Par M p55 Mr '36

“The implausible story is complicated, but never confused, has effective comedy, is cleverly directed, very well acted and constantly entertaining. Adults and young people.”

+ Sei Motion Pict F 1 '36

WKly Guide Ja 11 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Mr. Neill presents his story with such freshness it almost achieves the deft touch of a Vandeyke or a Capra. It is gay and lilting in its rapid pace, and it bends to the director's humor as a weed in the wind. The staging, too, while not elaborate, is never drab, and the performances are excellent." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p7 F 3 '36

"The international jewel thief, one of Hollywood's most overworked brain children, is with us again in a periodic revival of Louis Joseph Vance's 'The Lone Wolf Returns.' . . . The time may pass pleasantly enough if this sort of thing is new to you, or if you may be beguiled into a more charitable mood by the performance of Mr. Douglas. . . . Speaking for ourselves, we thought the Lone Wolf had picked the wrong night to howl—wrong by fifteen years." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p25 F 4 '36

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Mystery, romance and a dash of comedy have been neatly blended by Director Roy William Neill in this entertaining melodrama. Family."

+ Box Office p13 Mr 14 '36

"There is an abundance of first rate comedy and the story moves along at a fast pace. All in all it provides, better than average program entertainment."

+ Film Curb p7 Ja 25 '36

"While its theme has been done over and over, this crook drama makes a generally entertaining program number principally on the basis of a little freshness in handling and the work of an able cast."

+ Film Daily p10 F 4 '36

"A moderately entertaining crook melodrama of program grade. The action is somewhat slow and the situations far-fetched. Comedy has been put into some of the situations but it is forced and tends to retard the action. The closing scenes are fairly exciting and hold one in suspense. . . . Because of the robberies it is unsuitable for children, adolescents, or Sundays. Adult entertainment."

+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 18 '36

"A well-blended concoction of comedy, romance, crook intrigue and light drama, this is enjoyable entertainment. While not pretentious in cast or production values, it succeeds in being amusing. The story is well conceived, acted and directed."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 Ja 15 '36

"The followers of the Louis Joseph Vance novels are numbered in the legions and the pictures that preceded this provide a ready-made audience. The fact that the picture is a combination of mystery and drama and plays up a type of criminal that is probably more pleasing to women patrons than other thieves would seem to indicate a campaign directed towards both sexes."

+ Motion Pict Herald p48 F 15 '36

"Estimate: good neighborhood programmer."

+ N Y Exhibitor p42 Ja 25 '36

"Cast, director and writers have done well with this Louis Joseph Vance story. Resulting entertainment is deft society-crook comedy that rates top position on any dual assignment."

For the beautiful heiress to fall blindly in love with the suave thief in spite of later revelations taxes the credulity. As does the crook's reformation. But it's not stressed and is put over so glibly that the average audience won't mind. Proper suspense is injected in tight scene when one false move means turning the slick Lone Wolf over to his enemies or the cops. [It is a] perfect example of exciting situations."

+ Variety p33 F 5 '36

LOVE BEFORE BREAKFAST. Mr 2 '36 72min
Universal

Players: Carole Lombard. Preston Foster. Janet Beecher. Cesar Romero. Betty Lawford

Director: Walter Lang

Based on the novel, Spinster Dinner, by Faith Baldwin. "The plot deals with a millionaire's pursuit of the lady of his choice. He buys an oil company so that another suitor can be sent to Japan and thereby removed from competition. The girl rebuffs all his advances, meeting trick with trick, until he suddenly abandons the chase. The tables are quickly turned. The pursued becomes the pursuer. After a rescue at sea, the couple are married by the captain. They are still arguing." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Family. Amusing."

+ Wkly Guide F 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is an extremely tiresome and silly picture . . . [which] talks incessantly, but a great deal of background music eases the pain of listening to it but does not condone its many faults."

— Hollywood Spec p11 F 29 '36

"The hero and heroine of the new film represent types that Hollywood seems to find peculiarly fascinating. . . . In private life you would find both of them selfish, arrogant and unmannerly bores, but on the screen you are supposed to think them inexpressibly charming. . . . On behalf of the film it can be said that the dialogue is frequently more sprightly than the plot. The acting, too, is passable. Mr Foster is quite credible as the romantic executive, Miss Lombard is at least less mannered than usual as the girl." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p8 Mr 16 '36

"It's rather a merry piece in its unostentatious way, fast, lively, and good looking. Carole Lombard, surrounded by leading men usually seen in heavy roles, has to carry most of the fun single-handed."

+ — N Y Sun p10 Mr 14 '36

"A story thin to the point of emaciation is padded out with blatantly effective lines, boisterous incidents and scene after scene involving the stylized mouth and eyebrows of Miss Carole Lombard sufficiently to make of 'Love Before Breakfast,' a quantitatively passable picture. Incidentally, collectors of titles that have little or no bearing on their supposed subject-matter will find this one a veritable museum piece." B. R. C.

+ — N Y Times p10 Mr 14 '36

"This is another footling adaptation of a story by Faith Baldwin, the popularity of whose work in Hollywood may be due to the fact that no visible effort is required to translate it to the screen. . . . Miss Lombard resents Mr. Foster's methods with such fury that her actions seem less a study in feminine psychology than a problem for psychiatry."

Time p58 Mr 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Smart, amusing story of love among the socialites that has good family appeal."

+ Box Office p35 Mr 7 '36

"Three of our favorites in the lead, Carole, Preston and Cesar and do they score!"

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 F 22 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LOVE BEFORE BREAKFAST—Continued

"A rather sophisticated comedy this will undoubtedly do nicely especially in the smaller spots."

+ Film Curb p15 F 22 '36

"Handsome production values, and the parading of a lot of fancy apparel by Carole Lombard to delight the feminine clientele, do much to cover up this story's lack of substantial or novel plot. . . . There is no development in the way of genuine action, the story being largely a matter of conversation."

Film Daily p7 Mr 14 '36

"A fair comedy; it should please romantically inclined young people. There is nothing unusual about the story, which is another modern version of 'The Taming of the Shrew.' . . . Suitable for all. Family."

+ — Harrison's Reports F 29 '36

"One long howl from start to finish, Universal has a smash box-office comedy in 'Love Before Breakfast.' . . . For any house, this adds up to money in the bank. It simply can't miss. . . . No short synopsis can do justice to the infectious humor of the piece. It is farce pure and simple, mad farce. Lang's direction strikes a swift tempo [from the] opening scene and never lets down. He points without seeming to point all the sophisticated laughs and gets everything possible out of the material."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 15 '36

"This picture attempts to overcome its plot deficiencies by resorting to dialogue which may or may not amuse. . . . A pseudo-sophisticated comedy, this picture will doubtless please in many localities."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 F 17 '36

"Built upon the premise that a man and a woman can't get along either with or without each other, this picture stacks up as the kind of attraction for any kind of audience. . . . Wholesome, while having just enough of that intimate romantic quality to keep interest continually pepped up, the yarn concentrates on fun."

+ Motion Pict Herald p41 F 25 '36

"Universal had many headaches before 'Love Before Breakfast' went into production. The result on the screen should be a panacea for any head condition of either the studio or exhibitors, for the picture is topnotch entertainment, headed for good returns in anybody's theatre. . . . Picture belongs to Miss Lombard who does the best work she has done in some time. Her transitions are admirably done. She changes pace continually, never lets down. Her handling of the comedy situations is near perfect."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 15 '36

LOVE ON A BET. Mr 6 '36 80min RKO

Players: Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie, Helen Broderick

Director: Leigh Jason

"Gene Raymond makes a bet with his uncle that he will leave New York dressed only in his underwear, arrive in Los Angeles, ten days later with a good suit, $100 in cash and a sweet-heart. If he loses, he goes to work in the uncle's meat packing house. If he wins, he will receive sufficient money to produce a play of which the cross country trip is the plot." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Hardly; Y: Probably good; C: Little interest."

Christian Century p415 Mr 11 '36

"Good. . . . Amusing comedy; dialogue vulgarities." DAR

"Lots of sparkle to it and plenty of laughs. Family." Nat Bd of R

Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Clean, clever comedy, expert direction and excellent acting by Helen Broderick greatly aid this production. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"It is a gay and refreshing comedy—moving along smoothly, if over a few improbable situations. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A good family picture." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The whole, however, is marred by snatches of vulgar dialogue. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul F 29 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates F 15 '36

"'Love on a Bet' is a light farce of modern American life bearing a resemblance to that type of comedy which holds 'It Happened One Night' as its pattern. It assembles improbable situations and fast-flying wisecracks into an amusing but insignificant and inconsequential piece of entertainment. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: little interest."

+ — Motion Pict R F '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women F 19 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide F 15 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The offering, I am told, was intended to be an unimportant program feature. It emerges as one of the most charming comedies of the past twelve months, primarily because of its superb direction." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p14 F 15 '36

"The coy Mr. Gene Raymond is even more whimsical and winsome than is his pretty custom in 'Love on a Bet,' the newest and most distressing of the cinema's innumerable efforts to repeat 'It Happened One Night.' . . . It is only fair to say that if you would enjoy a transcontinental motor trip with Mr. Raymond, you may find the new film more enlivening than did this correspondent, who would rather travel alone. . . . All of this is told amid an outpouring of minor league banter that struck me as being curiously lacking in hilarity after, say, the first ten minutes. For that long it is passable. Miss Barrie isn't immensely helpful as the girl of the story, but then she really cannot be blamed too greatly for that." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p15 Mr 5 '36

"The fun is fairly constant, the atmosphere gayly romantic and the characters amusing. . . . 'Love on a Bet' is a thoroughly artificial piece, acted competently but hardly with brilliance. It is well above average for its type of film." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p21 Mr 5 '36

"Having a diverting and fresh story angle at its disposal and with a cast and director in amiable mood, the picture becomes an engaging treatise on the plausibility of the impossible. . . . Miss Broderick is priceless, as ever, in a rôle that is perfectly suited to her wry, straight-faced humor, and Mr. Raymond and Miss Barrie carry the comedy-romance along splendidly. . . . In brief, after one more good word for the script writers and for Leigh Jason's direction, 'Love on a Bet' is a mighty pleasant little comedy." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p25 Mr 5 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

"After the success of 'It Happened One Night' it was inevitable that we should see a good many melodramatic comedies of romantic young people hitch-hiking their way up and down and across the continent. . . . The latest offering in this cycle is called 'Love on a Bet.' But don't be inveigled into expecting something as skillfully directed, attractively played and highly entertaining as 'It Happened One Night.' Indeed, why be inveigled into it at all? For 'Love on a Bet' is just an inconspicuously poor film. However, it is to be hoped that with 'Love on a Bet' out of its system the weakened but still live cinema will begin its slow, uphill convalescence. . . . Potentially, it probably is a fairly amusing idea. But it has been written so maladroitly and it is so clumsy in its mechanics that it seems to me to be an enormously silly entertainment." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p19 Mr 5 '36

"'Love on a Bet' . . . is nothing at all. [It] could be pretty well dozed through entirely, I should say. Helen Broderick, in her more acrid style, contributes an occasional bright moment, but the two young people chiefly in evidence, Gene Raymond and Wendy Barrie, are inclined to be a bit casual about the few little stunts asked of them." John Mosher

— New Yorker p75 Mr 14 '36

"The title is self-explanatory. Gene Raymond bets his wealthy uncle he can leave New York in his underclothes and no money, and arrive in Los Angeles ten days later with $100, a suit of clothes and a fiancée. He does, but audience reaction is 'what of it?'"

News-Wk p40 Mr 14 '36

"The result herein is a 75-minute exhibit of biceps and boyish charm by Gene Raymond, pleasantly relieved by glimpses of Wendy Barrie as the fiancée and Helen Broderick as her sharp-tongued aunt."

Time p57 Mr 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Love on a Bet' is a good box-office bet for the family trade. It is riotous comedy full of humorous situations and spiked with witty dialogue. Family."

+ Box Office p27 F 15 '36

"Great stuff."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 F 22 '36

"It is one of the most amusing films we've seen in some time and offers real entertainment for any sort of audience."

+ Film Curb p13 F 8 '36

"You can chalk this in your date book right now as a light and breezy comedy of two modern lovers that will send your patrons out hugely pleased and completely entertained."

+ Film Daily p5 F 28 '36

"A pretty good comedy. . . . Some of the gags are old, but they are still funny enough to amuse the average picture-goer. . . . Suitable for all."

+ Harrison's Reports F 22 '36

"This is tops in frolicsome, uproarious mirth that's as clean as a whistle, and hits major league class in entertainment. It's minor league in names, but provides more laughter per footage than many of its highly-touted brothers. . . . Exhibitors can bet on 'Love On a Bet' to outlaugh any picture in a long time."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 31 '36

"This romantic farce, loaded with situation and dialogue laughs, rates as splendid family entertainment. . . . The picture should be sure-fire in all but de luxe houses."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 F 1 '36

Motion Pict Herald p55 F 8 '36

"Estimate: good program comedy; best for neighborhood houses."

+ N Y Exhibitor p35 F 25 '36

"Making no pretense at anything more, 'Love on a Bet' succeeds in being a pleasant comedy that dishes up an hour or so of satisfactory entertainment. It won't rate better than moderately on the draw because it hasn't the kind of names that attract, but it won't chase 'em once they're in."

+ Variety p15 Mr 11 '36

"Top-notch comedy, which if it had stronger names in the cast, would be headed for strong returns. As it is, it should be a profitable programmer, good enough to stand by itself except in the bigger ace houses. In the subsequent runs, it should make money. . . . Raymond romps through the picture in a nice easy manner as does Miss Barrie. Both give excellent performances but it remains for Miss Broderick to steal the picture. She handles the flip lines in a grand manner and tops her previous screen performances considerably."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 31 '36

M

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION. Ja 6 '36 110min
Universal

Players: Irene Dunne. Robert Taylor.
Charles Butterworth. Betty Furness. Sara Haden

Director: John M. Stahl

Based on a novel of the same title by Lloyd C. Douglas. In this dramatic tale, an unpleasant young wastrel's drunken actions have caused the death of a distinguished brain specialist and also the loss of sight of the doctor's beautiful wife. Sobered and penitent after this second tragedy, the young man decides to become a great healer himself and to live by a mystic philosophy of giving secretly and permitting no re-payment. Years later, distinguished as the world's greatest eye specialist, he operates on the blind woman and enables her to regain her sight.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Notable; Y: Mature; C: Beyond them." Christian Century p158 Ja 22 '36

"In short, a picture one must not miss. Family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. The essence of Douglass' fine book has been preserved in the very fine adaptation. Mature." DAR

"Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"'Magnificent Obsession' [is] one of the most beautiful and significant pictures of the year." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Robert Taylor is to be commended for his excellent work. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"1935 bows itself out with one more significant and beautiful and unusual picture." Mrs T. G. Winter

"The story is well staged so that many individuals seen, stand out in memory for pictorial qualities as well as notable direction. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Ja 12 '36

"A rarely significant and appealing drama of human emotions in which the application of a Christian philosophy overcomes destructive forces. Carefully produced, this picture with its large and able cast is understood and sympathetically directed by John M. Stahl.

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION—Continued

Irene Dunne's characterization of Helen Hudson is one of beauty and sincerity while Robert Taylor's interpretation of the once irresponsible young man is notably fine. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
D 30 '35

Motion Pict & Family p2 Ja 15 '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Ja '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Poignant human drama; Y: Mature; C: Beyond them."

Par M p55 Mr '36

Wkly Guide Ja 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The formidable task of transferring a copious but very popular novel to the screen has been accomplished with a maximum of deliberation and a minimum of imagination. Once again, there is a demonstration of the limitations of the cinematic medium when the characterization and description so essential to a comprehension of the original fiction version are telescoped and condensed to the comparatively narrow confines of a scenario for the screen. The massivity of the production, the proportions and the problem presented by the author of the novel are too formidable and the combined efforts of the cast and the director are hardly equal to its demands." R. S.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 11 '36

"If the movie version softens a bit the spiritual tone of the novel, and focusses on the dramatic in the story, it has not been to its disadvantage as a picture. . . On the whole, the movie version has been admirably conceived, and will undoubtedly stand as one of the month's undoubted successes." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p37 F '36

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 4 '36

"The work of the principals, Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor, is sheer artistry, finely developing the concentrated series of dramatic incidents and moved by the fine hand of John M. Stahl, whose specialty is this kind of material." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p330 Ja 17 '36

"The 'Magnificent Obsession' was a magnificent conception and it is done magnificently, but it is a story which I am afraid will not have wide popular appeal. . . [It] takes nearly two hours to tell a story which failed to evoke from me the sympathetic response I must give a motion picture before it can return dividends in the way of satisfactory entertainment. Failing to hold my interest because of the lack of sympathy, each scene seemed to prolong it unnecessarily. All of which does not mean you will not enjoy it. Other reviewers are loud in its praise."

Hollywood Spec p12 Ja 18 '36

"Of all the tarnation, torturizing pictures I've seen this season, 'Magnificent Obsession' takes the potassium cyanide sundae. I know that it will probably be passed over my veto by a large vote, but I hereby send it back to Hollywood with my venomous disapproval. . . It is one of those stories full of people who have things happen to them to 'change the entire course' of their lives." Don Herold

— Life p28 Mr '36

"If you care for pseudo-philosophical drama, 'The Magnificent Obsession' may be your dish, as we say around the literary clubs. . . The acting, I fear, isn't terribly impressive, although Miss Dunne plays the blind girl with her customary sincerity and quiet charm. Mr. Taylor is too cute for my taste, but that will hardly keep him from becoming a cinema darling of the girls." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p9 D 31 '35

"[It] has a certain spiritual quality, less emphasized on the screen than in the best-seller. Three scenarists and a writer of 'added dialogue' have done much shifting about of Mr. Douglas's plot. The picture could have done nicely without that added dialogue. There is more talk, unnecessary pointless talk about matters unrelated to theme or plot, in this picture than in any other production of the past year or more. The story rambles on for a good two hours, not all of it quite as good as it should have been. Some ruthless editing, the cutting out of at least half an hour of loosely woven sequences, would have tautened the drama and high-lighted the characters. 'Magnificent Obsession' is not obsessed with realism, at any rate. . . [This does] not seem to be distressing the 'Magnificent Obsession' admirers. Their interest seems to be in the philosophy which guided Robert's rise to power and brilliance. That remains intact on the screen, with the rest of [the film], a heavily sentimental, long-winded drama of the popular tear-jerker type." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun D 31 '35

"Despite its mystic appurtenances, the drama is strictly of the made-to-order kind, and its movements are never remarkable for their conviction or plausibility. Not having to take either himself or the story seriously, Charles Butterworth gives an admirable performance. His dead-pan clowning in the film's chief comedy rôle is quite [its] best feature. Miss Dunne rises to what probably should be respectfully referred to as dramatic heights as the blind girl. Mr. Taylor plays the reformed wastrel with such aggressive charm that the only word for his performance is cute." Andre Sennwald

— + N Y Times p17 D 31 '35

"Since Lloyd C. Douglas, a shrewd and practical artisan at fashioning popular novels, invented them, the events in [the film] have a certain best-seller flavor about them. . . Being unfamiliar with the novel on which the film is based, I cannot say now that these events stood up in print. But on the screen, stripped of their essentials, they have a peculiar nickel-weekly magazine story ring. Taking a commonplace little tale about the reformation of an obnoxious playboy, Mr. Douglas has blown it up to grandiose proportions by coating it with a touch of religion that looks pretty phony and a lot of love and self-sacrifice. To make the whole thing a little more palatable he has put it against a wealthy Westchester background. . . Some of the acting is good, and some is bad, but this is probably less the actors' fault than that of a shallow and obviously fabricated narrative." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram D 31 '35

"Nothing alleviates the woebegone trickeries of 'Magnificent Obsession,' not even the presence of Irene Dunne. Poor Miss Dunne seems oppressed by the plot. Apparently, she gave up any struggle to better it long before the camera began its work." John Mosher

— New Yorker p76 Ja 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A box-office winner with thrills, heart throbs and humor so delicately interwoven that one wishes for more of it. Family."

+ Box Office p33 Ja 18 '36

"This is an excellent screen version of the best-seller of the same name. It offers entertainment that should have wide appeal and is suitable for all classes of audiences."

+ Film Curb p14 Ja 4 '36

"Good sentimental drama with human interest and romantic angles giving it general appeal. Based on the best-selling novel of the same name, this attraction makes good popular fare. . . Miss Dunne and Taylor do excellent work as the leads, with plenty of strength in the supporting cast and effective touches in John M. Stahl's direction. There are also occasional comedy touches."

+ Film Daily p6 D 31 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

"Aside from the fact that in the closing scenes there is a minor fault, in that Robert Taylor, the hero, is supposed to have become a famous surgeon within six years—more competent than men with years of training, the story is highly interesting and grips one's attention. There are situations that will tear at one's heartstrings. Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 11 '36

"In this tender story of faith and hope and charity, the old assertion that the greatest of these is charity is repeated with delicate shadings of emphasis, with accelerating and retarding tempo, and with an emotion-stirring restraint that suggests a symphony developed from a folksong. The 'magnificent obsession' is the theory that a man who lives a life of service achieves an exalted happiness for himself and remolds the lives of those whom he serves. . . . Magnificent is too violent an adjective to describe the work of the principals. But it is sheer artistry. Taylor is gay and irresponsible in the earlier scenes, dignified and tender as the story proceeds. He has a splendid speaking voice. . . . It's one of the important pictures of the year, beautifully presented and directed by a master director, John M. Stahl."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 D 31 '35

"This production strikes a responsive chord by the fineness of its portrayals and the humanness of its drama."

+ Motion Pict Herald p52 Ja 11 '36

"Though not exclusively so, this is emphatically a woman's picture, told with charm, done handsomely. . . . Estimate: word-of-mouth boulder anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p43 Ja 25 '36

"[It] is another in a recent crop of artistic film successes which is a credit to the industry on the whole. . . . If its 110 minutes running time makes it appear a bit sluggish, the sensitive and intelligent development and motivation of this poignant romance ultimately makes the initial lethargic progression appear justified. . . . 'Magnificent Obsession,' with its metaphysical theme of godliness and faith likewise seems to enter the exhibition arena at a psychologically appropriate period. Whether construed in relation to present-day world turmoil, or to a very limited sphere within the average auditor's immediate contacts, the spiritual background of 'Magnificent' is magnificent. . . . Cast, cameraman and the librettists, along with Director Stahl, rate all the bouquets coming their way for the combined good results of their total efforts."

+ Variety p12 Ja 8 '36

"'Magnificent Obsession' presents a spiritual theme with delicacy, beauty and power in terms of human, moving drama along lines of popular entertainment. It has been intelligently approached and impressively produced and should register solidly. . . . Care, time, pains and intelligent forethought put into the offering by Stahl and E. M. Asher, as associate producer, are fully justified by result in giving Carl Laemmle a winner, both from the prestige and financial angle. In addition, contributions from every department are topnotch. . . . Miss Dunne is never off key. . . . Her scenes while blind are magnificent, and final episode in hospital is one of most powerful emotional enactments screened during the past year. Much of the story is carried by Taylor, and he plays it superbly, both as the flippant reckless youth and the matured, sobered man. His performance and personality will do much to support the picture's special appeal to women."

+ + Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 31 '35

MAKING OF A KING. D 9 '35 82min Deka

Players: Emil Jannings, Leopoldine Konstantin, Werner Hinz, Claus Clausen

Director: Hans Steinhoff

The German film Der Alte und der Junge Koenig with English subtitles. "It is the story of how Frederick the First of Prussia, played by Jannings, forced his eldest son, who was to become Frederick the Great, to put aside youthful occupation with light things and school himself in kingship. The Crown Prince so hated the idea that he sought to escape from Prussia and go to his mother's native England; to this plan his friend, Lieut. Katte, was privy, and when it was discovered, the King ordered that Katte be put to death and that the Crown Prince witness the execution to learn what disloyalty to a nation means. This estranged son and father, but made the son at least a student of state-craft, who is reconciled to the King he is to succeed on his deathbed." (N Y Sun)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Emil Jannings is as good as we thought he was. He is still, in round numbers, the greatest of all screen actors. . . . His power is all the more appreciated when you find yourself held spellbound in a picture in the German language, even when you understand only a little German, as I do. The English titles give you the drift, and Jannings sweeps you. He is tender, humorous, sweet, then stern as iron, devastatingly fierce, tragic. Do not miss 'The Making of a King.'" Don Herold

+ Life p20 F '36

"Germany has sent us an official cinematic embodiment of fascist philosophy and ideals. . . . [It] furnishes a complete category of fascist tenets—hatred of other nations, male-superiority, destruction of culture, suppression of individual rights, a total minimization of human life and an insane glorification of the military." Robert Stebbins

New Theatre p22 Ja '36

"Though rather clumsy in its manner and lumbering in its story telling, it possesses an undeniable interest, not as a historical chronicle but as a statement of the official Nazi attitude toward the philosophy and ethics of history. . . . I might add that all of this is presented with earnestness and admiration. If you think I have exaggerated, go and see for yourself. I must say, though, that I found the whole thing just a trifle chilling." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p17 D 10 '35

"'The Making of a King' is heralded here as a hit in Europe. . . . Jannings dominates the film, but Werner Hinz, as the Crown Prince, would have stolen it from many another player, so well does he take his part. . . . There is no doubt but that it is intended as propaganda for the present German Government, with its glorification of country above self, of the martinet in the King. Some of the speeches, in fact, are said to have been cut out of the film as Nazi propaganda when it was shown in Austria. But it remains good entertainment." D. C. A.

+ N Y Sun p31 D 10 '35

"A prefatory note declares that [the film] has been careful to observe strict historical accuracy, and this is entirely possible. It simply happens that the picture has been molded into Dr. Goebbels's scheme of propaganda and public enlightenment, and is obviously designed to work up pro-Nazi hysteria for the past glories of the nation. Judged strictly on its dramatic merits, it emerges as quite the best film that has come out of Nazi Germany, and it presents Emil Jannings in one of his most brilliant characterizations. . . . At the same time, you cannot resist the dramatic skill that has gone into the drama, and the genuine emotional vigor with which it tells of the conflict between two iron temperaments." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p31 D 10 '35

"Although it is as grim and brutal a portrait of a ruthless man as the screen has ever produced, it is also a rousing dramatic characterization. . . . Mr. Jannings' performance as the incredible Wilhelm is at once unbearable and fascinating. It is a performance that blends brutality, meanness, cheapness and a

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MAKING OF A KING—Continued

blind heroic quality in an altogether brilliant manner." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 D 10 '35

"I shouldn't call this one of the major Jannings portraits, but it's a good, sound, sensible picture of the old bully, somewhat on the more than usually sympathetic side. . . [It] follows pretty much the usual outlines in the history books of young Frederick's early life. . . The film is a Jannings picture, and the hero of the piece is the old man, not the youngster, and I don't think the story slumps or just becomes Nazi propaganda, as some insist it is, because Jannings gives the elder Frederick's side of the story too." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p89 D 21 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"[An] impressive German dialogue film with Emil Jannings in a masterly characterization."

+ Film Daily p13 D 10 '35

"Once again the sly German cinema makes faces at the world in this feature. It isn't obvious, in the Russian manner. It doesn't even call itself propaganda; it poses, instead, as historical narrative. But propaganda it is, nevertheless. . . [The] picture has a set of English titles which don't quite make sense but which manages to translate all the important speeches about the holiness of state and country and the necessity to submerge all personal impulses for the general good."

+ Variety p19 D 11 '35

MAN HUNT. F 1 '36 65min Warner

Players: Marguerite Churchill. William Gargan. Ricardo Cortez. Charles (Chic) Sale

Director: William Clemens

A small town school teacher in love with a newspaper reporter admires the stories of the bad men of history which an old gunfighter relates. When a notorious gangster breaks jail and is pursued by a trainload of G-men and star newspaper reporters, he hides in the teacher's home. How she and the young man capture the criminal and outwit the pursuers makes up the story.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature, Good." DAR

"Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Drinking and too much shooting make it unsuitable for children. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 25 '36

"Family. Mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ja 11 '36

"While the story is thin, the natural characterization of Chic Sale as the sheriff and the interesting picture of small town life will entertain many. Family. Mature."

Jt Estimates Ja 15 '36

"The direction in this picture is slow moving and undramatic though smooth but the story itself is inane, incredible and impossible. [The] attempt at humor falls very flat. . . Newspaper reporters are portrayed in an unnecessarily stupid manner. Family"

— Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 15 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"A and Y: Amusing satire; C: Entertaining."

Par M p55 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Audiences which seek their screen entertainment only in the big, first run theatres, miss a lot of excellent little pictures which are turned out for the neighborhood houses and small-town exhibitors who cannot pay the fancy prices demanded for the big stars. And because these class B offerings must be made economically, they have, as a rule, simple little stories which provide for much outdoor shooting against backgrounds provided without cost by nature. . . I found 'Man Hunt' thoroughly enjoyable. . . This class B picture has been given a class A cast."

+ Hollywood Spec p13 Ja 18 '36

Reviewed by Beverly Hills

Liberty p29 F 16 '36

"While 'Man Hunt' fails to follow the excellent models set by some of Warner's earlier gangster pictures—'Little Caesar' or 'The Public Enemy', for example—it is rather an amusing little film yarn, aided by a cast of competent and experienced players. The absurdity of its plotty doings gives it an unintentional comic twist, and Chic Sale, Civil War deputy, out to capture single-handed the desperado who so grimly stalks through the piece, is a unique characterization. Whether the picture could have been better, with the ingredients supplied by the script writers, plus the able performances, is debatable. As it stands, it results in just another 'movie.' Marguerite Tazelaar

— + N Y Herald Tribune p13 Ja 30 '36

"It works up quite a bit of excitement itself in the telling and more than its share of good-natured humor." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p26 Ja 29 '36

"Periodically, some major film company, after having warmed over certain outstandingly lucrative successes of the immediate past, will put them all together—as a thrifty housewife mixes a hash from the leftovers of former banquets—in the hope that they will prove edible, if not exactly appetizing. Such a picture is 'Man Hunt.'" B. R. C.

— N Y Times p14 Ja 30 '36

"There is a new film call 'Man Hunt.' But don't be inveigled by that into expecting one of those two-fisted, sharply-spoken, fast-moving melodramas of the underworld like 'G-Men' and others of this ilk. In fact, why be inveigled into it at all? For it is just an inconspicuously poor film." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p19 Ja 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Simple down-to-earth story, expertly developed to intrigue and satisfy family patronage."

+ Box Office p29 Ja 25 '36

"Lots of excitement with Chic Sale, the ex-sheriff being on the job." L. S. Niemeyer

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 F 29 '36

"Here is a picture that surely ought to keep any class of audience well amused while it is on the screen. It rates high for this sort of entertainment."

+ Film Curb p15 Ja 11 '36

"Amusing comedy drama with good amount of action and laughs plus romance."

+ Film Daily p8 Ja 29 '36

"A fair program comedy-melodrama. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ — Harrison's Reports F 8 '36

"A comedy, this satirizes G-Men and big shot newspaper reporters, and evidently was produced for the small town, giving that patronage opportunity to laugh at the 'wise' city folks.

It has been smartly conceived and intelligently directed and acted."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 4 '36

"The title suggests something tensely dramatic. The show is just the opposite, a comedy that should provide a good time for average audiences, as it gayly kids and laughably derides glorified G-men and wise guy big shot newspaper reporters while it heroizes a trio of country folk. It makes no pretense at being anything but amusing entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Herald p52 Ja 11 '36

"Apparently intended for the program division, 'Man Hunt,' because intelligent scripting, direction led otherwise, is surprise attraction that while still a programmer as far as grosses go should be a better than average entertainment offering for subsequents, neighborhoods. Estimate: good programmer."

+ N Y Exhibitor p43 Ja 25 '36

"[The] tale is simply told, and is comic, not grim, with chief entertainment depending on ludicrous satire on the art of man-hunting as practiced both by the common run of peace officers and the concoctors of film melodrama."

Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 3 '36

MAN OF IRON. D 21 '35 60min First national

Players: Barton MacLane, Mary Astor, John Eldredge, Dorothy Peterson

Director: William McGann

Based on the novel, Country Boy, by Dawn Powell. "The story of a steel mill worker who rises from foreman to an executive position. His success goes to his head and he nearly loses everything, but comes down to earth when he realizes how nearly he has lost his best friends." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Adults and 14-18: fair; 8-14: mature." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Mature; 14-18." DAR

"There is material here for a strong picture, but something went wrong with the adaptation—the result is a picture that is illogical in its development, confused in its ideas, and false in its psychology. Disappointing. Adults," Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A gripping melodrama, well acted and in parts very dramatic and exciting. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This picture does not have any exceptional entertainment value. The movement is slow and the dialogue is stilted. It is not a true portrayal of the American working classes, and unfortunate that it should be shown at this time when class distinction should not be stressed. It will be received with resentment by many. Adults." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Rather a slow moving, ponderous picture with a good lesson. Adults and family." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 23 '35

"The humorous possibilities are rather overworked in a production which moves slowly and unconvincingly through a series of situations whose entertainment value is materially weakened by too much emphasis and exaggeration. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Suitable for church halls, schools or family night programs." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"It is fairly entertaining in its development. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"A human interest story . . . satisfactorily cast and capably directed, with a nice intermingling of comedy and drama. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 14 '35

"A dull hackneyed story and slow moving, stagey direction prevent a capable cast from making other than a tiresome uninteresting picture. Adults, if any."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women N 1 '35

"A and Y: Fair; C: Little interest."

Par M p55 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide N 23 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p17 D 6 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '35

"A Warner Brothers film that even exceeds 'Black Fury's' insults to the American working class." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p41 Ja '36

"Although Mr. MacLane, a really fine actor, as he has demonstrated on numerous previous occasions, acquits himself handsomely in the leading role of Chris Bennett, the odds are against him. As a result his real debut as a star must be deferred until he is given material more suitable to his talents. But neither [the supporting cast] nor the star is able to overcome the handicaps the story imposes upon them, and so 'Man of Iron' must be set down as another of the current cinema's weaklings." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p27 D 11 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p27 N 23 '35

Film Curb p6 N 15 '35

"[This is] basically a man's picture."

+ Film Daily p7 D 7 '35

Motion Pict Daily p12 N 4 '35

"A man's story, the picture nevertheless is hardly of the caliber to serve as anything but an average attraction."

+ Motion Pict Herald p64 N 16 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p36 N 25 '35

"[Story] fits MacLane well, but it won't fit the fans. An action programmer, it will just get by on double bills. . . . Written entirely according to formula and with some disregard for plausibility, [the] story is principally at fault. As in many stories of its kind, the rise of MacLane from the shop to the vice-presidency, although he can't dictate a letter, is a bit sudden."

— Variety p19 D 11 '35

MAN WHO BROKE THE BANK AT MONTE CARLO. N 29 '35 66min 20th century-Fox

Players: Joan Bennett, Colin Clive, Ronald Colman

Director: Stephen Roberts

From the play of same title by Ilia Surgutchoff and Frederick Albert Swan. A Russian refugee prince reduced to driving a taxi in Paris is sent by his friends, who have pooled their resources, to break the bank at Monte Carlo by a system they have worked out. He does that and falls into the hands of unscrupulous persons who arrange for him to lose the money.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

MAN WHO BROKE THE BANK AT MONTE CARLO—Continued

"A and Y: Entertaining; C: No interest."
Christian Century p62 Ja 8 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Pleasant entertainment, with smooth action and attractive settings. Adults and 14-18: good; 8-14: uninteresting." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Mature; 14-18." DAR

"The Monte Carlo settings are very elaborate and the Alpine mountain scenes add a note of majestic beauty. Good. Family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Ronald Colman gives his usual clear cut interpretation of the mysterious adventurer, but Joan Bennett is ineffective as the adventureress. The direction is uneven in that the director shows promise of something outstanding and never quite fulfills that promise. Disappointing. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Colorful and beautifully staged, the picture will interest adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Well directed and cast. Adults." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Authentic backgrounds of the Casino, romance, skullduggery and comedy, spun into a glamorous fairy tale. Adults." Mrs T. G. Winter

"There is nothing morally subversive, and a lesson is appended to the effect that gambling never pays. The dialogue is good but not outstanding. Perhaps one could wish that Ronald Colman had a little more dash in some of the scenes, but on the whole the mood is well sustained. 12-16: good; 8-12: mature." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 23 '35

"Adults."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 12 '35

"Pleasant entertainment, with smooth action and attractive settings. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates N 1 '35

"Good; family, mature."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Diverting; C: Mature."

Par M p55 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p17 D 6 '35

"Ronald Colman's slightly artificial style is given an excellent setting in a pattern story that is managed with intelligence and taste."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

"Mr. Colman lends dignity and effervescence and dress to the whole trivial affair, and makes of it a nice, fluffy, enjoyable picture. . . Miss Bennett has never electrified this phlegmatic critic, but if Mr. Colman thinks she is worth all that enthusiasm, then she is temporarily all right with me." Don Herold

+ — Life p21 Ja '36

"Mr. Colman plays the gambling emigre in his engagingly ironic manner, and when he is in his best form, he is one of the most likable of the screen's light comedians." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p18 N 15 '35

Reviewed by Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p32 N 15 '35

N Y Times p5 N 17 '35

"What makes [the film] so entertaining is not the letter of the story but the actors' friendly attitude toward the characters they are portraying and the glib manner in which they speak the piece's pleasant dialogue." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p27 N 15 '35

"It's all very Continental, but with the clear skies of Hollywood always above." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p96 N 23 '35

Spring'd Republican p6 N 21 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p31 N 23 '35

Film Curb p17 N 1 '35

"The light comedy is an ideal vehicle for the star and he gives a finished, polished performance."

+ Film Daily p4 O 28 '35

"With gayety that sparkles and bubbles as its outstanding trait, this comedy of adventuring in gambling, romance and intrigue is a feature that should prove as popularly alluring as is the significance of its title in sense and locale."

+ Motion Pict Herald p65 N 16 '35

"Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p31 N 10 '35

"Colman, looking a bit old, plays a little too seriously in most scenes and never gives his action the flair which would possibly have pulled this to the top. Miss Bennett chiefly looks pretty and plays without verve or histrionic distinction."

— Variety p16 N 20 '35

MARCIA NUZIALE. (Italian title) See Wedding march

MARIA CHAPDELAINE. S 29 '35 80min
France-film

Players: Madeleine Renaud. Suzanne Despres. André Bacque. Daniel Mendeille

Director: Julien Duvivier

From the novel of same title by Louis Hemon. "Film of rural life in French Canada, simple in plot—just the ordinary life of the people—but abounding in rich characterizations and the atmosphere of the countryside in its varying seasons." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Beneath the simple beauty of its scenes, the countryside and its habitants (so sympathetically acted by an excellent cast of players) is a moral beauty, unobtrusive but all pervading and deeply moving." J. S. H.

+ Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Recommended for church use, and for schools and libraries. Family."

+ Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p8 O 30 '35

"The film has power and is free from sentimentality. It was photographed partly in Canada and received an important cinema award in France for its quality."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '35

"Compared to the simplicity of the episode in the novel, the presentation in the film may seem over-elaborate. . . The quality of the acting is uniformly high." Robert Giroux

+ — Nation p447 O 16 '35

N Y Times px5 N 3 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MARY BURNS, FUGITIVE. N 15 '35 $4min
Paramount

Players: Sylvia Sidney, Melvyn Douglas,
Pert Kelton, Alan Baxter

Director: William K. Howard

A young girl, owner of a mountain tea shop, unwittingly falls in love with a notorious gangster and is sentenced to prison on circumstantial evidence. How she escapes, finds a job and is menaced by her gangster sweetheart forms the plot of this melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Good of kind; Y: Not the best; C: No."
Christian Century p1606 D 11 '35

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"The convincing acting of Sylvia Sidney and some beautiful outdoor settings make up, in a measure, for the trite story. Fair entertainment for adults. Possibly family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"The plot moves to a strong climax and the acting is of a high quality. Particularly noteworthy is the photography of the grim prison scenes with their symbolic lights and shadows. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 23 '35

"An intensely interesting picture due to fast tempo, realistic characterizations and skilful direction. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 18 '35

"Sylvia Sidney gives a logical, sympathetic portrayal and is supported by a competent cast. The direction is smooth and efficient and the suspense well timed. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates N 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p197 D '35

"Very good. Adults & young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women N 1 '35

"A and Y: Fast-moving public enemy drama; C: Too mature."

Par M p55 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide O 16 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

"It threatens to be just another prison persecution picture, but pretty soon the story swings into new territory and is as gripping as is good for you. . . Sylvia Sidney, who was pitifully miscast and inadequate as the secretary in 'Accent on Youth,' is in clover in the rôle of Mary, where she can suffer and suffer and suffer." Don Herold

+ Life p21 Ja '36

"An exceptionally good cinema melodrama, shrewdly conceived, sagely produced and expertly acted." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 N 16 '35

"This is exciting, swiftly paced entertainment. . . [There is] plenty of action, straightforward narration, and direction which wastes no time on details and exposition. It hasn't much time for comedy relief either, relying upon pace and suspense to carry the entertainment." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p8 N 16 '35

Reviewed by Andre Sennwald
N Y Times p19 N 16 '35

"An exciting and entertaining melodrama played with unerring skill by its entire cast. . . It is a crisply spoken, fast-moving, exciting and altogether satisfying piece of work." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p24 N 16 '35

"Sometimes I thought that 'Mary Burns, Fugitive' was also intended as an outline of a mental case, but then I realized I was just facing the cerebral processes of our usual heroine." John Mosher

— New Yorker p96 N 23 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c N 24 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p34 N 23 '35

"A fast moving, exciting G-Men-Gangster melodrama that is somewhat different from the usual run. . . Grade A melodramatic entertainment suitable for any type theatre or audience."

+ Film Curb p9 N 15 '35

"This is just the type of picture that fits Sylvia Sidney perfectly and she scores handsomely in a suspenseful yarn with plenty of action, punch and emotional love interest."

+ Film Daily p7 N 9 '35

"Grim in all but its romantic phases, the action, dialogue and situations are skilfully blended to create and maintain interest."

+ Motion Pict Daily p13 N 8 '35

"As a gangster production the picture is sensational. . . It presents a better than average combination of stars, supporting cast and story values, and offers a real drive to stimulate feminine interest."

+ Motion Pict Herald p63 N 16 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p37 N 25 '35

"In retrospective analysis the picture is replete with phoney touches and short-of-convincing characterizations, yet William Howard has made it move with a deceptive tempo that hides basic flaws. [The] picture was not well thought out in advance but it was ably worked out in the shooting."

— + Variety p16 N 20 '35

LA MATERNELLE. O 14 '35 85min Studios
Photosonor

Players: Madeleine Renaud, Paulette Goddard, Mady Berri, Henri Debain

Directors: Jean Benoit-Levy, Marie Epstein

Based on Prix Goncourt novel of same name by Léon Frapié. "Marie, sensitive, nine year old daughter of a prostitute, attends a day nursery in an impoverished quarter of Paris. From Rose, an educated girl who due to economic circumstances has become the nursery's maid of all work, she receives the only affection and understanding [she has] ever known. . . When she sees Rose in the arms of Dr. Libois, who cares for the health of the nursery children, she becomes thoroughly distrustful and attempts suicide. She is rescued and finally reconciled to the marriage of Rose and the doctor." (Springf'd Republican)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"No other film since 'The Road to Life' has had the same quality of children being natural among themselves." E. G.

+ Nat Bd of R M S '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The acting—if it could be called that—in the characters that count is completely unforced. Paulette Goddard gives so amazing

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LA MATERNELLE—Continued

a performance as the problem child, a mixture of shyness, stubbornness and affection, that it seems a completely natural expression of herself. . . It is the children and their problems that make the picture something out of the ordinary. It may not be altogether pleasant. But neither is the life from which these children are taken." E. F. M.

+ + Boston Transcript p10 D 26 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

"The restrained and rather trancelike acting of Madeleine Renaud as Rose did not balance the primitive force of all the nameless juveniles among whom she moved like an angel." Mark Van Doren

+ + Nation p548 N 6 '35

"M. Benoit-Levy who made the film, deserves immense credit not only for the selection of types and the perfection of the performances, but for the straightforwardness and high effectiveness of the drama. In fact, he has directed so well that his grown-up actors are almost as good as his histrionic children." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p19 O 15 '35

"It ranks among the most brilliant screen works of the year, but its excellence resides in the passionate honesty of its approach and the magnificent manipulation of its subject matter, rather than in any superb camera qualities." Andre Sennwald

+ + N Y Times p5 O 20 '35

"A superior and honest sketch of the children of Montmartre—the real Montmartre, not the tourists."

+ New Yorker p4 N 16 '35

"It is a straightforward presentation of the psychological reaction to her environment of a child, Marie."

Springf'd Republican p7c O 13 '35

Time O 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Motion Pict Herald p64 N 16 '35

N Y Exhibitor p37 N 25 '35

(*)MAYFLOWER. D 27 '35 7min Educational Directors: Frank Moser. Paul Terry

"The Paul Terry cartoon character comes over on the Mayflower and helps to enliven the voyage of the early fathers of our Best Families. Landed on Plymouth Rock (which consists of a small boulder with a Plymouth hen hatching her brood), the cartoon hero and his blunderbuss and dog soon run afoul of the Indians." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is a snappy and for the most part somewhat original cartoon subject."

+ Box Office p48 Ja 18 '36

Film Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"In this cartoon there is some good invention which will put it over. . . A good one in the cartoon line."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 Ja 9 '36

"Clever, funny, Good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p31 Ja 10 '36

MELODY LINGERS ON. N 9 '35 84min United artists-Reliance

Players: Josephine Hutchinson. George Houston. John Halliday. Mona Barrie

Director: David Burton

From a novel of same title by Lowell Brentano. A young piano student falls in love with a dashing opera singer who has joined the army. He is killed and she is forced to leave her baby at a convent. Later she becomes a famous pianist, sees her son brought up to manhood by adopted parents and induces them to let him develop his inherited musical talent.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A moving tale, slow in spots but generally worth while. Good."

+ — Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Unconvincing. Adults." DAR

"A somewhat complicated and lengthy plot is balanced by the splendid voice of George Houston and the expert acting of Josephine Hutchinson who heads an exceptionally fine cast. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Mature audience; 18 years up." Nat Bd of R

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 30 '35

Mo Film Bul p198 D '35

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 1 '36

"A: War drama; Y: Mature; C: Unsuitable." Par M p55 Mr '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide N 9 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

"Josephine Hutchinson is a good actress, not one of the by-the-grace-of-Max-Factor girls—but she's squandered in this interminable heart-yanker." Don Herold

— Life p34 Ja '36

"For all its pictorial beauty, and the sometimes touching performance by Miss Hutchinson, [the film] is, we fear, too labored and drawn out, and has too much of the scent of lavender and old lace in its flowery folds." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p19 N 7 '35

"The drama is complicated, prolonged, and highly sentimental." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p23 N 7 '35

"The film falls lamentably short of perfection." F. S. N.

— N Y Times p27 N 7 '35

"Old-fashioned and stereotyped in narrative and treatment." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p19 N 7 '35

"In a straightforward manner made all the more dramatic through its simplicity, the story of the brief romance of an American girl pianist and an Italian opera singer unfolds against the background of war-torn Italy. . . One of the most strikingly moving scenes the screen has ever presented is the one in which Ann Prescott, who has gained entrance to the convent nursery through trickery a year after her separation from her infant son, steals from crib to crib to find that she cannot recognize her own child."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p51 N 16 '35

"[The] cast and director have struggled with a threadbare plot and it is to their credit that they have made the film fair entertainment."

+ — Film Curb p10 N 15 '35

"A generally absorbing and sympathetic story even though its basic theme is of familiar pattern."

+ — Film Daily p11 N 7 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"It deals in sympathy stirring elements which have a quick appeal to womanhood."

+ Motion Pict Herald p60 N 9 '35

"Family drama."

N Y Exhibitor p29 N 10 '35

MELODY TRAIL. O 14 '35 60min Republic

Players: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Ann Rutherford

Director: Joseph Kane

A Western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p35 N 23 '35

"This is a crackerjack Western with plenty of thrills and it also has catchy musical numbers."

+ Film Curb p17 O 1 '35

"Once again Western maker Nat Levine has turned out an open air picture that can't help clicking. Family Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p36 O 10 '35

"Average dual fare. . . Gene Autry, who has been on radio, is featured here. All proceedings at outset are built about his singing, a welcome change, if nothing else."

+ Variety p34 D 11 '35

MESSAGE TO GARCIA. Ap 10 '36 88min 20th century-Fox

Players: Wallace Beery, Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Alan Hale

Director: George Marshall

Based on the novel of the same title by Lieutenant Andrew S. Rowan and the essay of the same title by Elbert Hubbard. This story tells of the historical delivery by Lieutenant Rowan of the famous message from President McKinley to General Garcia in Cuba. Beset by a spy and a Marine deserter who is paid by both friend and foe, Lieutenant Rowan accompanied by a Cuban martyr's daughter is finally successful.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adult and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Mr 1 '36

"In spite of its popular cast and the stirring historical incident on which it is based, the picture misses its mark and is lacking in vitality and verve. . . Poor taste is shown in the numerous scenes of torture and pain. Adults: young people."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Peculiarly thrilling for American hearts."
Canadian M p43 Mr '36

"All the basic story material [the writers] had could have been written on a postage stamp. Memory fails to conjure another instance of intelligent padding comparable with this one, for 'A Message to Garcia' is interesting for every foot of every reel. It is a splendid picture, a notable contribution to what is proving to be a season of notable productions. . . I am assuming that before the picture is released the torture scenes . . . will be shortened by judicious cutting. We had enough sadism in 'Mutiny on the Bounty' to last all season. In 'A Message to Garcia' as it was previewed there is far too much of it." Allan Hersholt

+ + Hollywood Spec p7 Mr 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Picture is a slow starter, but gathers momentum and builds suspense as it unwinds."

+ — Box Office p13 Mr 14 '36

"This is a slow moving melodrama. . . Incidentally there is an over-abundance of horror stuff [which] most audiences will not particularly care for. It cannot hope to do much in the big spots but may get by in the smaller theatres. . . A scene where Boles and Stanwyck are tortured is just a little too much and one which the women certainly will not like."

+ Film Curb p17 Mr 7 '36

"The message of this robustious adventure picture . . . is one of profits and more profits at the little glass cage. Darryl Zanuck has struck twelve for exhibitors again. For this is as high-tension a discharge of entertainment voltage as anyone could desire. . . This is a grand job of picture-making throughout and there are a host of credits earned."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 2 '36

"Tactfully produced to avoid the possibility of injuring Spanish sensibilities, this is a thrill action, sometimes horror-tinged picturization of Lieutenant Rowan's famous Spanish War adventure. . . George Marshall's direction assures that where melodramatic adventure and romance are enjoyed, the film should satisfy. The historical background plus the name strength provide ample opportunity for unique and timely showmanship."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Mr 3 '36

"Semi-historical in character, but for entertainment purposes more a thrilling, romantic melodrama, the picture affords many opportunities for exceptional interest-creating showmanship. The drawing [power] of the principals and chief supporting players being above average, the legend that surrounds Rowan's heroic accomplishment easily can be made the basis for timely and topical exploitation that should arouse the interest of both adults and youngsters."

Motion Pict Herald p56 Mr 14 '36

"Carrying the message to Garcia, an adventure in personal bravery and patriotic duty preceding the Spanish-American war which became an inspirational classic to young Americans of a generation ago, must actually have been meagre in dramatic episode, if this screening pretends to follow Lieutenant Rowan's true experiences. The picture, largely because of thin story, emerges as mediocre melodrama, with a curious lack of punch and no high sense of the heroic. On merit it will command only fair returns, and will require heavy campaigning to make the grade."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 2 '36

METROPOLITAN. N 8 '35 79min 20th century-Fox

Players: Lawrence Tibbett, Virginia Bruce, Alice Brady

Director: Richard Boleslawski

A temperamental prima donna refuses a role at the Metropolitan and forms her own opera company, taking with her a young singer from the chorus to be her leading man. He takes charge of the new company when she becomes too temperamental, obtains funds from an heiress and raises the curtain on Pagliacci.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Fair; Y: Fairly good; C: Harmless."
Christian Century p1664 D 25 '35

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 30 '35

"Delightful entertainment for the entire family."

+ Jt Estimates N 1 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

METROPOLITAN—Continued

Mo Film Bul p173 N '35

"A, Y and C: Operatic comedy."

Par M p55 Mr '36

"Superb rendition by Mr. Tibbett of several favorite semi-classical and operatic selections woven into a light and amusing story. . . Thoroughly satisfactory entertainment of the highest order. Suggested for musical programs. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family."

++ Wkly Guide N 2 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The British Film Institute [critics] who are good judges, had said of 'Metropolitan': 'The quiet, unexpected ending of the film, after the prologue to 'I Pagliacci,' besides being extremely effective in itself, is typical of the restraint and economy of the film as a whole. It is as full of genuine drama and natural humour, and as instinct with good taste, and appreciation of the worth of music, as it is free from vulgarity, sentimentality and high-browism.' That was all true, every word of it." D. W. Buchanan

+ Canadian Forum p11 Mr '36

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

Reviewed by Beverly Hills
Liberty p46 N 30 '35

"A lot of movies are merely better than bridge or fishing or poker, but a film like 'Metropolitan' is an experience. . . It manages, incidentally, to have a lot more of a sense of humor than most movies about musical critters." Don Herold

+ Life p22 D '35

"Mr. Tibbett still lacks some of the pictorial attributes of the Hollywood romantic hero, a lack that somewhat hindered him in his earlier adventures with camera and sound track, but in his current vehicle his magnificent voice is so wisely utilized and the variations on the plot theme are so gayly handled that 'Metropolitan' becomes easily the best example of its school since Miss Grace Moore's first screen triumph." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p19 O 18 '35

"Superbly stirring in its choice and execution of the musical numbers, it is also a gay and spirited satire on the social exclusiveness of opera management. . . 'Metropolitan' is very likely the best musical film of the season." Andre Sennwald

++ N Y Times p27 O 18 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c D 15 '35

Time p54 O 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

Film Curb p17 N 1 '35

"Lawrence Tibbett, using his voice generously, scores a triumph in this backstage opera story. . . The picture should be favorably received by Tibbett admirers."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 O 17 '35

N Y Exhibitor p31 N 10 '35

MIDNIGHT PHANTOM. N 21 '35 63min
ReliablePlayers: Reginald Denny. Claudia Dell.
Lloyd Hughes

Director: B. B. Ray

A murder mystery with police headquarters as setting. A dozen policemen are cast as possible murderers but eventually the problem is solved by one of them.

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Curb p15 D 1 '35

"The cast is a competent one, and except for a couple of spots in which cutting would speed up the action, the direction is of the fastest type."

+ Film Daily p9 N 21 '35

"This is something of a mystery film which rates as only ordinary fare. . . For a murder mystery too much time is permitted to elapse before the murder is committed and too little in uncovering the real culprit."

— + Motion Pict Daily p15 N 27 '35

"Family mystery drama."

N Y Exhibitor p56 D 10 '35

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM. O 9 '35
132min Warner

Players: Dick Powell. James Cagney. Anita Louise. Mickey Rooney. Joe E. Brown. Jean Muir

Directors: Max Reinhardt. William Dieterle
Music: Felix Mendelssohn. Arranged by Erich Wolfgang Korngold

Based on the play by William Shakespeare. "Shakespeare's fantasy of lovers fooled by the fairies in the Athenian woods on midsummer's night." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Max Reinhardt's production stands supreme among all screen presentations, as a lavish and magnificent fantasy. It is so exquisite in its beauty, charm, feeling, and mood, so enchantingly and artistically presented, one feels transported to the realm of fairyland. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 22 '35

Motion Pict &amp; Family O 15 '35

"This particular translation of Shakespeare into cinema . . . throws into clear relief the utter unsuitability of much of the play to the demands of the screen. It fails most noticeably, partly because of the basic silliness of the plot, and partly because of a generation which is accustomed to seeing the same thing done much more amusingly in a Noel Coward play." J. A. T.

— Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Sounds, settings, rhythmic movement, lights, and shadows, blended with the majesty of Mendelssohn's music, are as dramatically effective as any line in the play or any portion of the plot. Fairies and gnomes come to life before one's eyes. Natural and supernatural are imperceptibly and harmoniously interwoven. [The picture] emerges as Shakespeare might have visioned it. The cast is an impressive one, carefully chosen and fitting in their roles. . . All who love the beautiful and have any imagination will revel in the exquisite artistry of this lovely 'Dream'. Family."

++ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Entertaining."
Par M p55 Mr '36

"Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family."
++ Wkly Guide O 5 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p8 O 16 '35

"Mendelssohn's music, ingeniously arranged by Erich Wolfgang Korngold, and given acceptable orchestral interpretation, adds a continual charm to the magnificent photography." E. C. Sherburne

+ + Christian Science Monitor p16 O 15 '35

"Give me Shakespeare and actors (who maybe mumble half the words) and I'm bored. This goes for Warner Bros. 'A Midsummer Night's Dream'. . . You get a lot of pleasant shocks; you get, for instance, Dick Powell reading Shakespeare about as well as anybody you every heard trying it. . . Eventually, however, you get sleepy. And I blame Shakespeare for this, rather than Warner Bros. Shakespeare is not right for a wide-awake evening in the modern cinema. . . But anybody who can take about two-and-a-half hours of luscious photography, thoroughly intelligent direction, and gorgeous production of Shakespeare will have a good time." Don Herold

Life p22 D '35

"Shakespeare is for the ear, not the eye; to hear his fairies talk is to believe them, but merely to see them maneuver in white rayon is to know that they are studio flesh and blood." Mark Van Doren

— Nation p491 O 23 '35

Reviewed by John Marks

New Statesman & Nation p557 O 19 '35

"One of England's foremost Shakespearean authorities cheerfully describes the film as a historical event. . . [It] is a superb choice for a spectacular production to introduce Shakespeare seriously to the movie public." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p31 O 8 '35

"The elaborate ballet is a tedious humbug and the dancing business on the double-exposure moonbeams is street-corner magic after you have read of these wondrous matters at their source. This is most distressing and there is no way of knowing what the cinema could possibly have done about it. . . I am afraid that we shall have to give 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' back to the naked boards that cushioned it. . . But if the magic is pale, the fun has what we like to believe is the true Elizabethan flavor." Andre Sennwald

+ — N Y Times p5 O 18 '35

"Herr Reinhardt, lavish and fanciful rather than imaginative, is uncertain of his new medium. Although in his treatment of the Athenian woodland, the silver birches, thick moss, deep mists and pools, there are sequences of great beauty, there are others of almost incredible banality. . . The acting is fresh and vivid for the very reason that it lacks what Mr. Carroll calls 'proper Shakespearean diction and bearing.'" Graham Greene

+ + Spec p606 O 18 '35

"The film actually has the illusion of a dream. Certainly Will Shakespeare himself could have had no greater ambitions for his play."

+ Springf'd Republican p5c S 22 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"It proves the motion picture is an art. [It is] a credit to all concerned in its making."

+ Film Curb p12 O 15 '35

N Y Exhibitor p35 O 25 '35

MILKY WAY. F 7 '36 83min Paramount

Players: Harold Lloyd, Adolphe Menjou, Verree Teasdale, Helen Mack, William Gargan

Director: Leo McCarey

Based on the play of the same title by Lynn Root and Harry Clork. "[Harold Lloyd] is a timid, inoffensive and slightly daffy deliverer of bottled milk who, by an ingenious string of fortuitous circumstances, gains a national reputation as a fighting man; is jockeyed into a series of fistic encounters, and finally into a battle for the middle-weight championship of the world, which he wins because his opponent is given sleeping medicine by mistake." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Good of kind; Y: Amusing; C: Good." Christian Century p446 Mr 18 '36

"Family and junior matinees." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature. Continual laughter marked the preview appreciation of Harold Lloyd's gag-and-situation comedy." DAR

"Family. Juniors." Nat Bd of R

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"An exceptionally amusing farce with hilarious situations, good dialogue and able direction. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 15 '36

"Family and junior matinee."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) F 8 '36

"Students of motion picture dramaturgy will do well to challenge the use of dialogue in many of the scenes as to whether or not less speech might not improve the technique. . . Students will profit by noting the 'build-up' and the delivery of laugh-provoking lines and situations."

Motion Pict & Family p8 F 15 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: excellent."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Wholesome entertainment for the family and junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women F 5 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Wholesome entertainment for the family and junior matinee."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Plenty of amusing situations. Family. Junior."

+ Wkly Guide F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Harold Lloyd may be the 'starred' attraction in 'The Milky Way' but he should be prepared to share the glory of its inevitable popularity with every principal member of his supporting cast and with the scenarists and director who helped so substantially in its creation. For this picture is a gilt-edged cinematic bond with a guaranteed income." R. S.

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 1 '36

"Promises a little more than the usual amount of plot in a typical Lloyd comedy." Canadian M p43 Mr '36

"'Milky Way' writes a new leaf as the contributor of a thousand laughs, inspired by a concoction of true Lloyd nonsense that is so cleverly set down in action, dialog and gag situations that it leaves one limp." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p414 F 7 '36

"Even though the noise it makes will leave you somewhat wilted by the time the fade-out comes, you will find 'The Milky Way' good fun. It is a comedy of situations, some of which are mirth-provoking, and at least one of which would make a wooden Indian laugh. When you see the picture, you will spot the situation I mean—the one in which Harold Lloyd shares a taxicab with a colt. . . It is physical comedy which asks your intellect to go off shift and allow the rest of you to have a whale of a time. It is not a fruitful subject for an analytical pen except for the extraneous thoughts it suggests."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MILKY WAY—Continued

+ Hollywood Spec p14 F 1 '36

"Harold Lloyd has turned out more than his share of good comedies, but none, that we can remember, any funnier than 'The Milky Way.' [It] is rather familiar stuff. . . . But it has been crammed with so many grand gags by the scenarists and so swiftly directed by Leo McCarey that you'll be laughing too much to notice the plot. . . . 'Milky Way' is sturdy enough to stand up under the adjective hilarious." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p28 Mr 7 '36

"Unlike Chaplin's one-man show, the new Harold Lloyd comedy is up-to-the-minute in construction, the work of many hands, all laid out expertly. . . . By and large it is very near the top for screen comedy." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub p75 F 26 '36

"Harold Lloyd might have waited much longer than two years for an acceptable script if Broadway had not provided that brisk, caustic, facile bit of horseplay, 'The Milky Way.' As it is, he has the perfect vehicle for his gifts as a farceur. . . . His talents for reducing the sublime to the ridiculous have never been more efficacious."

+ Stage p9 Mr '36

"It is an entirely unsophisticated and uproariously funny farce. However, unlike Chaplin's 'Modern Times' which would have been nonexistent without Chaplin, 'The Milky Way' might have been a shade funnier if Producer Lloyd had cast someone other than himself in the leading role."

+ Time p58 F 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"There's no top milk in 'The Milky Way.' It is pure cream of the comedy crop, traveling at a fast pace through a series of hilarious situations. Family."

+ Box Office p23 F 1 '36

"Packed to overflowing with legitimate laugh sequences this is decidedly one of the best Lloyd has ever made. . . . There isn't a dull moment in the entire feature."

+ Film Curb p11 F 1 '36

"The laughs are so fast and furious in this Harold Lloyd fun riot that one is really thankful for the few calm moments in which to recuperate. At the box-office, it should hit big money everywhere. In a role tailor-made to his talents, Harold Lloyd should panic his army of old fans, and should add a host of new ones who know him as a name but haven't seen him."

+ Film Daily p8 Ja 28 '36

"An excellent comedy. It is fast-moving and comical, with hardly a dull moment. . . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports F 8 '36

"It registers a laugh-count of about two a minute for its entire length and that is something of a record, even for Lloyd. So there should be nothing but smiles at the box office wherever it goes. . . . The star is, of course very much his amiable, agile and unabashed self, always likeable and always effortlessly funny. Sharing his laugh-making is the impeccable Adolphe Menjou, now a gum-chewing and vociferous fight promoter, full of wild activity and surprising bits of facial comicality."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 Ja 25 '36

"With uproarious comedy and to the tune of a thousand laughs, Harold Lloyd returns to the front rank of screen funmakers. Farce and hokum, moving with speed and holding a [thrill] in every sequence, the film is a credit to everyone connected with it and should prove one of the season's ace attractions. An indication of what to expect is the reaction of the preview audience, which giggled, guffawed and roared at the nonsensical action and clever dialogue. . . . The entire cast does a fine comedy job, their performances leaving the audience limp."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ja 27 '36

"Here is gold-plated amusement which at the preview provoked more laughs than it's possible for anyone to clock. It's nonsensical farce hokum foolishness, cleverly and cleanly set down in action, dialogue and situations. . . . The fun starts at the beginning, gets funnier as the picture progresses, and winds up with a burst of ridiculous foolishness, relevant and irrelevant to the theme, that just chopping it off is an act of kindness and charity. . . . Previewed in Los Angeles Paramount Theatre. It so hit the preview audience that its continued roaring laughter resulted in their inability to hear half of the picture."

+ Motion Pict Herald p46 F 1 '36

"This starts off slowly, builds up rapidly till there are moments positively screaming fun and satire. The lower brand Lloyd comedy is sure to get 'em. . . . Estimate: will do well anywhere, with selling."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 F 25 '36

"The picture emerges on the screen as one of the funniest comedies since the advent of talkies. It should prove a money picture everywhere. . . . Lloyd gives an excellent characterization of the meek guy throughout the picture, never gets out of character. He has lost a lot of his former schoolboyish habits which aids him greatly. . . . Picture can live up to most anything zealous press agents will say."

+ + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 25 '36

MILLIONS IN THE AIR. D 13 '35 70min Paramount

Players: John Howard, Wendy Barrie, Willie Howard, Benny Baker

Director: Ray McCarey

"'Millions in the Air' tells the tale of the soap king's daughter who hides her identity to go on her father's amateur hour with a young ice cream salesman. When the young man learns who she is he walks out, but the dear public insists on a return engagement, and there they are." N Y Times

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Family and junior matinee." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Excellently directed, the film furnishes an hour of delightful entertainment. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Romance and comedy well blended. Family." Nat Bd of R

"Uneven, fair direction, a good cast and some vulgarities. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Several very clever specialty acts add much to the entertainment value." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A lively story sympathetically told and embellished with some particularly delightful incidental humor of a radio broadcast room. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"No entertainment value. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"It is amiable and wholesome entertainment for an unexact public. Adolescents: yes; children: suitable." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ — Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"This romantic comedy amusingly presented, well cast, with clever bits of song and dance, provides light entertainment with especial appeal to radio audiences. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
D 4 '35

"Family and junior matinees."
Jt Estimates D 15 '35

"Fair. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36
Nat Bd of R M Ja '36

"A: Diverting; Y and C: Wholesome."
Par M p56 Mr '36
Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"A light and amusing story [with] romance and comedy well blended."
+ Wkly Guide D 7 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 7 '35

"Even the professionals in this picture (including the authors) are blighted by their association with amateurs, with the possible exception of Willie Howard, whose bosom peeking act in the Rigoletto quartette is as funny as it was fifteen years ago." Don Herold
Life p21 F '36

"Too many cooks, it is said, spoil the broth, so it may be due to the large number of gentlemen who have had a hand in the production of 'Millions in the Air' that the film has its blemishes. The Paramount picture is a kaleidoscopic confusion with more dull stretches than a film should have. . . Let it be said now, however, that while this observer considers this picture mediocre, she would pay the price of admission gladly for the sole purpose of hearing Willie Howard sing 'Rigoletto' again. You are bound to get your money's worth in quantity, if not in quality. The tunes are bright, the radio-studio atmosphere good, with excellent sets, and the direction, while distracted, is fast enough to be enlivening. It is just that there is too much of everything, except Willie Howard." Marguerite Tazelaar
— + N Y Herald Tribune p23 D 12 '35

"It was about time for somebody to do something about the amateur radio racket. Well, Paramount has done it. Its new picture kides the amateur hour at 8 P. M. on Sunday nights, even though it does pull its punches in the end. Before these punches are pulled, to give us a routine romantic ending, there is some delicious satire and genuine comedy about the theatre-of-the-air as presided over by Major Edwards with his gong and his sweet, patronizing voice." M. J.
+ — N Y Sun p37 D 12 '35

"It depends, of course, on what you want from the movies. 'Millions in the Air' is predicated on the assumption that, having heard several of these radio amateur hours, you would like to see one without having to go to the broadcasting studio. To make sure that you will see a good one, Paramount has assembled a clever collection of professionals to play the amateurs." F. S. N.
+ N Y Times p33 D 12 '35

"As the Italian iceman who is determined to sing 'Rigoletto' over the ether even if he has to pose as a Scotchman and a French scientist to do it, Mr. Howard is a continuous source of delight. A sly and skillful comedian, his slapstick highjinks are responsible for most of the entertainment's pleasantness. Amusing as he is however, his are qualities that would show to even greater advantage in a film of somewhat quicker pace, of more compelling situation. Like most slapstick comedians, he requires a background of stress and turmoil. 'Millions in the Air' is an easy-going and meandering film which never bothers to quicken its plot and which provides Mr. Howard with a minimum of situations." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p33 D 12 '35

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p90 D 21 '35

Spring'd Republican p4c Ja 5 '36

Time p36 D 23 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p35 D 7 '35

"Wholesome, entertaining."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 D 21 '35

"Plenty of real laughs in this one and some good musical numbers. . . This one should please any audience that appreciates amusing entertainment and is suitable for any situation. Good direction, nice production and well cast."

+ Film Curb p20 D 15 '35

"[This is] first-rate entertainment with a variety of radio specialties plus romantic interest."

+ Film Daily p4 D 12 '35

"Just fair program entertainment. The plot is a familiar one, and the background, that of an amateur broadcasting radio station, has been used in too many other pictures to be novel. Suitable for all [Family]."

+ — Harrison's Reports D 21 '35

Motion Pict Daily p15 N 22 '35

Motion Pict Herald p58 N 30 '35

"Though the story is inconsequential, entertainment values are strong."

+ N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

"If nothing else, 'Millions' does provide a first picture break for Willie Howard. It's unfortunate that the ace stage comedian's lens debut should be in a poor film."

— Variety p12 D 18 '35

MIMI. O 8 '35 98min First division

Players: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Gertrude Lawrence

Director: Paul Stein

Adapted from Murger's La Vie de Bohème and produced in England. Murger's wistful romance with our old friends of the Latin Quarter alternately rollicking and starving in garrets and studios of Paris. This is a version of the story used in the opera La Bohème with interpolations of Puccini's music. A masked ball scene has the Barcarolle from Tales of Hoffmann for setting.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Wkly Guide O 12 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Miss Lawrence sings only one song and the camera is unkind to her delicate beauty. Mr. Fairbanks suffers and triumphs with unremitting intensity." M. E. P.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 N 15 '35

"The thrice-familiar story does not detach well from the operatic presentation with which it is now generally associated."

— Christian Science Monitor p16 N 16 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MIMI—Continued

"Puccini's music has been blended effectively with the action to heighten the dramatic atmosphere in certain sequences. . . The film is fortunate in its choice of players. Gertrude Lawrence's portrayal of Mimi is sensitive and sympathetic, while Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., absent from the screen of late, is a handsome and virile Rodolphe." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p54 N 16 '35

MISS PACIFIC FLEET. D 14 '35 65min Warner
Players: Joan Blondell. Glenda Farrell.
Hugh Herbert. Allen Jenkins. Minna Gombell

Director: Raymond Enright

Based on a short story of same title by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan. "Romantic comedy is the theme as a couple of stranded show girls get mixed up with a bunch of sailors and marines. For mechanical motivation, it rings in a beauty contest which causes more excitement within the fleet than a war would." (Motion Pict Herald)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Silly; Y: Poor; C: No."
Christian Century p158 Ja 22 '36

"Good."
+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Vulgarity. Adults." DAR

"A very mediocre picture. Adults, if they care for such." E Coast Preview Committee
— Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"Fair. Adults, if any."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Slapstick comedy; Y: Trifling; C: Doubtful."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '35
N Y Herald Tribune p10 D 7 '35

"'Miss Pacific Fleet' is an utterly foolish, unimportant little picture turned out by Warner Brothers, apparently in a moment when they just didn't care." M. J.
N Y Sun p34 D 9 '35

N Y Times p7 D 15 '35

"Although [it] features four of the most reliable and talented comedians on the Warner Brothers lot, their efforts are completely wasted in a generally feeble and unimportant offering." William Boehnel
— N Y World-Telegram p18 D 9 '35

"A hilarious comedy."
+ Springfield Republican p6 D 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p39 D 7 '35

"Good cast strive to put this one over but somehow or other it just misses out. Original story [is] better than picture. There are several laugh sequences but about the best rating we can give it is just ordinary program stuff."
— + Film Curb D 1 '35

"Slapstick comedy."

Film Daily p7 D 7 '35

"Warners' stock comedians struggle valiantly with a slight story and turn in a routine comedy."

— Motion Pict Daily p8 N 20 '35

Motion Pict Herald p64 N 30 '35

"This is strong on laughs. Family comedy."
+ N Y Exhibitor p55 D 10 '35

"A farce comedy isn't expected to have much sense but it should have some laughs. That way, this picture barely qualifies—it has some laughs; but not enough. . . Raymond Enright's direction gets in a few fairly hilarious scenes at a good pace."

— + Variety p19 D 11 '35

MR. COHEN TAKES A WALK. F 12 '36 80min
Warner

Players: Paul Graetz. Violet Farebrother.
Chili Bouchier. Mickey Brantford

Director: William Beaudine

Based on the short story of the same title by Mary Roberts Rinehart. This film was made in England. "The tale turns on the fortunes and family troubles of Jake Cohen, who has risen from peddler to head of a great London department store. Seeking surcease, he tramps in the country for a week or so and finds solutions for his own and his children's problems." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul D '35

"Good. Objectionable in part."
Nat Legion of Decency F '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] has some amusing sections—principally those wherein Mr. Cohen, who has worked himself up in the dry goods business to the ownership of London's biggest emporium is shown soliciting customers from the front of the store."

New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"Were it not for the expert performance of Paul Graetz (Mr. Cohen) the piece would be just so much boring hokum. As it is, this central figure's full and complete characterization results in a warm, human and emotionally stirring story. As our own George M. Cohan casts a spell upon his audience, Mr. Graetz, while altogether a different type of actor, captures attention by the mellowness, the finish and the feeling of his performance." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 F 14 '36

"It is an engaging tale, with Paul Graetz, genial and droll, in the central role. In spite of American directorship, however, the pace is slow and deliberate; and the picture shares that defect of most English films, a real climax. Here the final situation revolves about a strike in the department store, a problem solved so quickly and simply by Mr. Cohen that it seems hardly a problem at all. . . The comedy is quietly amusing. . . Mr. Graetz has made Mr. Cohen a human, pathetic and pleasantly humorous study of character. It is as drama that the picture seriously lacks force." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun F 14 '36

"The simple but sure-fire device of injecting a sunny-haired Irish lass into a situation complicated by parental matchmaking in another direction is bound to produce diverting entertainment (remember 'Abie's Irish Rose'?) and it certainly pleased the audience yesterday." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p13 F 13 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Paul Graetz, a non-Aryan German in exile in England, gives an extraordinarily fine performance in the role of Mr. Cohen. . . An eloquently rich characterization, it is one of the finest performances of the season. . . In case you are addicted, as many movie-goers are, to pretty little anecdotes that are pure of heart and that are more charm than drama, 'Mr. Cohen Takes a Walk' may entertain you. For others it will be limping in movement and pedestrian in speech, a painfully sweet, toothless and most industriously whimsical little dish, more than well enough served by the aforementioned Mr. Graetz." William Boehnel
+ — N Y World-Telegram F 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Having the nostalgic quality in its basic structure of the 'Abie's Irish Rose' pattern, delightful English backgrounds and ingratiating performances by Paul Graetz and the entire cast, the picture offers much that is refreshing. Family."
+ Box Office p37 Mr 7 '36

"It is not adapted to the big spots but will very likely get by and please in the smaller towns and neighborhoods. Has considerable human interest and appeal and has been rather well produced. Of course there are no 'names' for the marquee and it will be tough to put over as a single feature."
Film Curb p15 F 22 '36

"Pleasing little tale from British studio has strong human appeal for family trade."
+ Film Daily p7 F 13 '36

"A moderately pleasant program comedy, with human interest; it should appeal mostly to mature people. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"
+ — Harrison's Reports F 22 '36

"[It] offers simple but enjoyable entertainment. Although the names of the players will be unfamiliar to American audiences, the performances are good, that of Paul Graetz in the leading role, as Jake Cohen, being especially outstanding. It is a thoroughly human story and one which should be found generally appealing, and often amusing."
+ Motion Pict Daily p11 F 13 '36

"Short on names, with emotional angles some neighborhoods might enjoy, 'Mr. Cohen Takes a Walk' ought to be seen before dating. Estimate: for certain spots only."
N Y Exhibitor p59 Mr 10 '36

"With no names other than the director's for the marquee and with an uninviting title of a not too well-known story by Mary Roberts Rinehart, 'Cohen' is going to have a rocky road for his walking unless it is sold intensively. There is something there to sell, but it does not look well on the front of the house to the shoppers. . . The story has been developed too slowly. There is too much time spent in developing the character of the lovable old man. . . There is a tug at the sight of the merchant prince delighting in playing store, but the punch which a picture requires is largely lacking. It is a story of charm but not of vigor."
+ — Variety p12 F 19 '36

MISTER HOBO. N 22 '35 80min Gaumont British

Players: George Arliss, Gene Gerrard

Director: Milton Rosmer

Made in England and known there as The Guv'nor. In this film, George Arliss plays a gentle French tramp known as "Spike," a sentimental, sly and unkempt old gentleman with a fund of stale homilies about nature and a hatred of money and indoor shelter. When he is arrested for illegal fishing, he phones a famous banker and tells him that his name is Francois Rothschild and asks for help. The banker, also a bearer of that famous name, tries to stave off a crash by making him a figurehead president, but "Spike" foils the plot, puts his tramp clothes on again and takes the road to the south.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Very good; Y: Excellent; C: Good."
Christian Century p207 Ja 29 '36

"George Arliss is presented in an entertaining interlude quite different from the important historical roles with which he has become associated. . . Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Family, but mature for children." DAR

"The plot is thin; merely a vehicle for George Arliss. Suitable for Church halls, Catholic schools or family." Int Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Family." Nat Ed of R

"Leisurely and charming in mood and philosophy, this picture is enlivened by enough action, vigor, and timely incidents to maintain interest. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"This picture, while stressing the educational and social values rather than the entertainment values, will hold the interest because of clever direction, capable cast and humorous episodes. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Pleasant entertainment, although rather slow, and not up to the standards usually maintained by Mr. Arliss. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Delightful, dramatic and interesting. Good supporting cast. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"One likes [George Arliss] whether he is hobo or pseudo-banker, though the story is rather thin and improbable. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"Terse lines, amusing and unexpected situations and a pervading atmosphere of well-being make this film a typical vehicle for its star. Adolescents: good; children: wholesome, though possibly mature." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 12 '36

"The picture is ably cast, well directed and affords delightful entertainment. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) D 30 '35

Mo Film Bul p145 D '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Entertaining; C: If interested." Par M F '36

"This rather improbable story is made plausible through the whimsical and artistic treatment, the homely philosophy and subtle touches of George Arliss in a simple and naive role. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Family." Wkly Guide N 30 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Neither the producers nor the director succeeded in lifting the production above the pale of a busman's holiday, which may have been deemed a lark by Mr. Arliss but which, in reality, is an unnecessary exposure of his otherwise enviable reputation to ridicule." R. S.

— Boston Transcript D 13 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MISTER HOBO—Continued

"The story is poor stuff for one of Arliss' ability, and even that ability seems to suffer. This is poor fooling, not even up to the mark of his one or two undistinguished offerings." Laura Elston

— Canadian M p38 F '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '35

"Mr. Arliss, like the Pied Piper, still will beckon his admirers of long standing in his latest picture, made abroad, for the familiar artistry of his performance, the fine shading of his characterization and the graceful old-school quality of his acting. For the younger, more impatient generation he may seem a bit fossilish, and his whimsy, it must be confessed, proves at times a trifle wearying, yet 'Mister Hobo' is genuinely entertaining, for the most part." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p7 F 8 '36

"He contributes, as usual, most of the picture's drama, such as it is, and all its humor. The other players, partly because their roles are almost imperceptible in size, are hardly noticeable. . . . Whenever Mr. Arliss gets hold of a good line or situation it brightens into comedy. Mr. Arliss doesn't get hold of many good lines in 'Mister Hobo' unfortunately. This is, of all his films, probably the easiest to forget." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p8 F 8 '36

"Nothing startling, as you can see, but a welcome substitute for yet another of Mr. Arliss's historical self-portraits. Mr. Arliss plays the hobo with obvious relish, if not with complete conviction. Even in patches, he suggests Richelieu or Disraeli—possibly at a masque. But that may be because the burden of tradition is all against an Arliss tramp. The cast, otherwise, is British and minor." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p19 F 8 '36

"Although the character Mr. Arliss portrays in 'Mister Hobo' is different, his interpretation of the part is the same he has been giving in all his recent pictures. For the only variation in Mr. Arliss' letter-perfect and satisfactory but familiar acting of late has been the name of the character. Whether playing a Wellington or a Richelieu or a hobo as he is now, his bag of tricks is the same in each instance. The result, since Mr. Arliss is an accomplished actor, is a sound and technically efficient but standardized and dull piece of work." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p21 F 8 '36

"Mr. George Arliss, who has dressed up as Disraeli, Voltaire, Richelieu, Wellington, Rothschild, now dresses up as a French tramp, and I suppose those who like Mr. Arliss will like his latest film. . . . He belongs, of course, to the 'bird-song at morning, star-shine at night' school, and his admirers need not fear that he has lost any of his usual refinement or sentiment, his cultured English accent, the Universal certificate. . . . I am not an admirer of Mr. Arliss, but I found this film rather more tolerable than his recent appearances as the family Wellington, the family Voltaire." Graham Greene

+ — Spec p14 Ja 3 '36

"Not a very ambitious picture, though its gentle satire is pleasant and it enables Mr. Arliss to give a nice piece of characterization rather outside his usual range."

+ Springfield Republican p7c Ja 12 '36

"It is a joy to see Mr. Arliss as a hobo. It was all he needed to show him as one of the finest comedians we have. You must not take 'Mister Hobo' seriously for a moment, except to check where it is playing."

+ Stage p11 Ja '36

Time p39 D 2 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Made in England, but with a French locale, its assets are excellent photography, amusing philosophic dialogue and a capable supporting cast, although no one matters except Arliss, whose portrayal of the lovable hobo is one of the most natural and human of his career. Family."

+ Box Office p25 F 29 '36

"Arliss in the role of a vagabond hardly seems possible but the star puts it over in fine style and registers strongly. . . . Made in England it is above the average British production."

+ Film Curb p4 Ja 4 '36

"This is the type of role that fits George Arliss perfectly, and gives him more opportunity to be his genial, lovable self than some of those more imposing parts that he has played as historical celebrities."

+ Film Daily p3 F 8 '36

"This is a pleasant British-made comedy, suitable for American audiences, especially where George Arliss is a favorite. . . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 18 '36

"English-made, this has a human, appealing story. Returns will probably show best where Arliss is liked. Family comedy drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p38 D 25 '35

"'Mister Hobo' is a fair picture. . . . Its eighty minutes, coupled with a placid and not too punchy story, account for a noticeable lethargy. . . . The proceedings of 'Mister Hobo' are indubitably slow, and it is hard to reconcile a tramp, no matter how venerable and merry, with the world of finance. . . . It's to Arliss's histrionic credit that he makes what he does stand up so well."

+ — Variety p16 F 12 '36

"Direction is ragged, allows some of the players to overact, others to underplay their assignments. Maude Howell, who has been writing the Arliss scripts for several years, has made a good job of the continuity and dialog, getting in as many American expressions as possible with an eye to this market. Settings are very good as are the selections of the exteriors of the French countryside."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 24 '35

MLODY LAS (Polish title). See Young forest

MODERN TIMES. F 12 '36 90min. United artists

Players: Charles Chaplin. Paulette Goddard. Carter de Haven. Chester Conklin

Director: Charles Chaplin

Chaplin portrays a worker in a factory who does a routine task at an endless conveyor belt. After a time the deadly monotony of the task causes a nervous breakdown. When he is cured, he cannot find a job. In an innocent attempt to return a red flag which has fallen from a truck, he finds himself leading a gang of radicals in parade. Naturally the police arrest him as the red leader. He is happy in jail where food and a bed are provided until he meets a gamin whom he is anxious to befriend. Then he wants to stay out of jail but due to misadventures, he is re-arrested. Finally he is freed, they both obtain work and the closeup finds them hand in hand walking down the roadway into the dawn.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A, Y, and C: Excellent."

Christian Century p383 Mr 4 '36

"Family and junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature." DAR

"Adults & young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Family and junior matinee." Nat Bd of R
 "Family." Nat Soc of New England Women
 "Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"Family. Most entertaining."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
 F 10 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"With every laugh at the indomitable little hero, we feel a pang of remorse, for we laugh at him not with him. The comedy grows out of frustration, out of his constant attempt to make good and his inability to adjust himself to the world about him. The picture affords a rare opportunity for study of pantomimic expression, of dramatic structure and of theme treatment."

+ Motion Pict & Family p4 F 15 '36

"It is the kind of picture which, if it amuses you while you are watching it, will give you an enormous amount of pleasure in recollection. Adolescents, 12-16: very good; children, 8-12: good fun."

+ Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Family and junior matinees."

Nat Council of Jewish Women F 15
 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Recommended to Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family. Junior."

+ Wkly Guide F 8 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Though for the most part it clings to the technique that he used in 'City Lights,' five years ago, it has one epoch-making moment. . . The rest of the film is in the established Chaplin tradition decorated with new arabesques. In these later days of movie speech, it is no small tribute to the comedian's genius that he can make a picture of feature length, practically without dialogue, that at its best is vastly funny and that even in its less inspired moments" can hold the attention of an audience." E. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 15 '36

"There is only one Charlie Chaplin; there is only one actor who could leave five years between appearances and have friends waiting with eager anticipation for his return. . . The story mainly in pantomime rivals the best that Charlie Chaplin has done, and there is no better." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p41 Mr '36

"The picture is strictly Chaplinesque in that it uses methods and incidents that have always characterized his work as a film clown who got his effects through pantomime and who rose to top rank because he took time enough to melt down and remind, until they shone like new coins, the jokes that mankind has always laughed at. Charlie's character of the little tramp persists in the new film, symbol of all that is ineffectual in the spectator. Is it not at our own misfire moments that we laugh when we observe the failures of this well-meaning incompetent? The fun arises out of his inability to obtain a foothold in a society that requires of each person some measure of efficiency. He has none. Society can do nothing with such a misfit but swat him. And so the custodians of law and order are ever just around the corner. The periodic arrival of the patrol wagon becomes as much a leit-motif of the action as the recurrent theme song, 'Hallelujah, I'm a Bum!'" E. C. Sherburne

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 11 '36

"'Modern Times' arrives at last, after three years of premeditation, two years of preparation and production, and an outlay of $2,000,000 of Chaplin cash. Not all of this huge expenditure of time and effort and money, however, shows materialistically on the screen, its expenditure being peculiar to Mr. Chaplin's method of doing things. With no particular place to go after nearly a quarter-century of screen frivolities, Mr. Chaplin takes his time. . . Not that 'Modern Times' can be dismissed so lightly entertainment-wise. But the press-agent heraldry which preceded the first public showing would lead one to expect more." J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p468 F 21 '36

"We should thank our gods that we still have left one artist brave enough to stick to the medium which made him great. . . There are moments in the picture which show Charlie overcoming the stiff competition of his own appearance in previous pictures. I cannot remember seeing anything on the screen—not even scenes in other Chaplin pictures—which, for pure cinematic brilliancy, will stand comparison with his pantomimic accompaniment to the song he sings in a cafe sequence in 'Modern Times.'"

+ + Hollywood Spec p3 F 15 '36

"Uneven, but with great moments, the film easily overcomes its old-fashioned photography and staging. . . The comedy is set on a story as starkly grim as any ever sent out from Hollywood. Indeed, if 'Modern Times' were anything but a laughing matter, it would be too strong for popular consumption. . . Yet, for all its roughhouse surface, the picture really is a delicate thing, with a quality too elusive to be set down on paper. Whether or not Chaplin is the genius that many believe, he has created a figure that stands a good chance of immortality—a laughable and sharp caricature whose appeal is international and whose humor is timeless." Beverly Hills

Liberty p28 Mr 21 '36

"Charles Chaplin was not disappointing. He was exactly as good as he had ever been before, and all of him was there; which is a way of saying that 'Modern Times' is one of the most interesting spectacles to be seen in America today. . . There is nothing that is not funny for him, or that cannot be made so. His line is laughter. And I for one am glad that he has kept to it." Mark Van Doren

+ + Nation p232 F 19 '36

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub p48 F 19 '36

"It was slow in the making, late to appear, and now, dear me, it's ten years behind the times. . . 'Modern Times' gets us no further on Chaplin's obstinate and sentimental journey back into silence than we were with 'City Lights'; indeed, not so far. It's much less funny." John Marks

New Statesman & Nation p226 F 15 '36

"The cinema's First Immortal returns to us after an absence of almost five years in a comedy for fun-lovers, antiquarians and philosophers. For the fun-lovers, it presents the great Chaplin in a piece of slapstick hilarity, which, if it is not quite a worthy successor to 'City Lights,' 'The Pilgrim' and 'Shoulder Arms,' is still one of the great triumphs of hearty motion picture rowdiness. For the antiquarians, it offers a brilliant example of the greatest tradition in film history, that of the glorified tramp comic and the missile thrower, brought up to date, with the latest uses of sound and fury presented intact. For the philosopher, it provides, amid its frantic physical insanity, a sardonic contemplation of current events, done from a surprisingly direct, if intermittent, leftist viewpoint. . . There are many scenes in 'Modern Times' that are magnificently hilarious, but it must be confessed that there is no climax or episode that quite belongs in the first flight of the Chaplin tradition." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 F 6 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

MODERN TIMES—Continued

"This, in spite of its title, is a silent film, somewhat old-fashioned in technic but boasting some grand slapstick. The comedy is regulation Chaplin, broad, sentimental and, at its best, very funny. 'Modern Times,' of course, is not always at its best. The absence of dialogue, along with frequent, unnecessary and decidedly dull written titles, often makes the film seem something out of the Museum of Modern Art's Film Library. The picture opens with a reference to 'humanity crusading in pursuit of happiness,' a description which doesn't seem to have much to do with the rest of the production. . . Mr. Chaplin himself, in one of the picture's brightest moments, even sings in an unknown language, acting out the story and dancing a bit. If he'd had the courage to try dialogue throughout the film, 'Modern Times' would probably have been a good deal more hilarious. . . In direction as in sound technic it is behind the times. The star has been occasionally careless in letting his spectators see the mechanics behind his gags, especially in his scenes as a distraught waiter. And the Hays organization, reported to have cut out six sequences because of vulgarity, might well have taken cut too, that scene with the minister's wife." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p27 F 6 '36

"Rumor said that 'Modern Times' was pre-occupied with social themes, that Chaplin—being something of a liberal himself—had decided to dramatize the class struggle, that no less an authority than Shumiatsky, head of the Soviet film industry, had counseled him about the ending and that Chaplin, accepting that advice, had made significant changes. . . We should prefer to describe 'Modern Times' as the story of the little clown, temporarily caught up in the cogs of an industry geared to mass production, spun through a three-ring circus and out into a world as remote from industrial and class problems as a comedy can make it. . . So it goes, and mighty pleasantly, too, with Charlie keeping faith with his old public by bringing back the tricks he used so well when the cinema was very young, and by extending his following among the moderns by employing devices new to the clown dynasty. This morning there is good news: Chaplin is back again." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p23 F 6 '36

"I prefer to think of Chaplin as the most ingratiating and brilliant clown that the screen or the stage has produced, who combines superb inventive humor with pathos in an extraordinarily effective manner. Let others tell you of what hidden momentous comments on the current social scene 'Modern Times' possesses. I prefer to think of it as grand knock-about, satirical nonsense that needs no apology or label. . . About Chaplin's performance it may be said that it is glorious and that he is still the most inventive and comical actor in the world, as well as one of the greatest pantomimists. . . Put down, then, this 'Modern Times' as a grand film, one that will melt your heart as well as tickle your funnybone." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p27 F 6 '36

"In spite of all this talk about the Chaplin significance and the comment his new film makes upon social conditions today, I found 'Modern Times' a movie of the old school. . . In all, it's a rambling sketch, a little at loose ends at times, sometimes rather slight in effect, and now and then secure in its rich, old-fashioned funniness." John Mosher

New Yorker p65 F 15 '36

Reviewed by Graham Greene
Spec p254 F 14 '36

"Your manifestations of mirth, such as rolling in the aisle, splitting your sides, and laughing until you cry, are in for a glorious workout. He is very funny, this Mr. Chaplin."

+ Stage p9 Mr '36

"It is a gay, impudent and sentimental pantomimic comedy in which even the anachronisms are often as becoming as Charlie Chaplin's cane."

Time p44 F 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"What the average showman wants to know is—'is it box-office?' Gentlemen, it is our guess that it will give 'City Lights' a run for the record. And that will be something. Family."

+ Box Office p27 F 15 '36

"Perhaps not quite as good as his previous pictures but a laugh fest nevertheless. The fun is kept moving at a fast pace and there is hardly a dull moment in the entire picture. . . It will give entire satisfaction and all followers of the celebrated star will find it decidedly to their liking."

+ Film Curb p13 Ja 11 '36

"Excellent! Five years absence from the screen has not diminished Chaplin's art. In his usual fashion, he can provoke laughs or tears, and keep the audience absorbed in whatever he is doing. Good for all. [Family.]"

+ + Harrison's Reports F 15 '36

"'Modern Times' is brilliantly executed, and is a well-thought-out production. The picture is a two-hour almost continuous gale of laughter with side-splitting gags generously distributed throughout the five major sequences and the several minor ones. . . The narrative is broken up into separate episodic sequences which seem to lack continuity in tying various threads of the story together but Chaplin evidently felt his story more true to the life of a tramp and didn't need to have a sustained theme in the usual manner of screen story development. . . [The] ending comes abruptly and unexpectedly leaving the audience hanging in air. But this is the way Chaplin's genius follows the indefinite pattern of life itself."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 F 6 '36

"It is this reviewer's belief that the film will prove a formidable attraction. Firstly, because it has Chaplin in virtually every scene and because the audiences curious to see him and with their money waiting must mount into the millions. Secondly, because of its content. . . Nowhere did the distinguished premiere audience react as it did to the crudest jibe of all at big business. This was an automatic feeder for the workers, a patented idea designed to reduce the lunch hour and to increase efficiency. Chaplin becomes the test tube for the experiment. What happens between mechanically contrived soup and meat plates, a revolving ear of corn, a persistent chin wiper and the bewildered Chaplin make for a panic of yells and shouting glee. It is a gem of comedy invention played superbly."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 F 6 '36

"'Modern Times', constructed as all Chaplins have been, is a succession of gags and feats of funny business, beaded along the gossamer thread of a plot as slight as a Shubert operetta. . . The picture wins its title and the best and newest of its business from the addition of a theme that may be termed Man vs. Machine, wherein Mr. Chaplin is presented as the most conspicuous victim of the assembly line speed-up method of today's industry, in a symbolic mill that makes nothing but comedy. . . This picture, with lively and often humorous musical scoring and many incidental sounds and occasional voices, is essentially in the technique of the silent days—in other words, it is motion picture."

Terry Ramsaye

+ Motion Pict Herald p9 F 8 '36

"If proof were needed that Chaplin is great, here it is. . . Estimate: on the gold standard anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p37 F 25 '36

"'Modern Times' is as 100% a one-man picture as probably is possible. Produced, starring, authored, composed (special music) and directed by Chaplin, the pantomimist stands or falls by his two years' work as it unreels. Not only does he not falter but Chaplin perhaps scales new heights in maintaining a barrage of guffaws that is the more remarkable considering the advanced comedy efforts that have hit the screen since the advent of sound. . . Some of the titles are extraneous, and the new school of film fans may even be startled, along with their elders, at this seeming crudity after being steeped in dialog so long."

+ Variety p16 F 12 '36

"It isn't up to previous Chaplin efforts, like 'City Lights' or 'Gold Rush.' Comedian follows his customary formula of downtrodden character, and has gone back to his first technique, but he seems to have tried to merge this old time manner with 1935 speed."

Picture is episodic and quite spotty. There are a few brief flashes of the old Chaplin artistry, but these have been generally undeveloped in desire to keep picture moving. . . Much touted radical inclination of picture seems to be mostly talk. If Chaplin intended to be propagandist then he has been the best in America since 'Easy Street.' It's all just a part of the Chaplin formula. It is a fact, however, that left wingers will go big for 'Modern Times' because they can read anything they want into film. Certain of the sequences most easy to turn into satire on modern economic conditions brought noticeably the biggest reaction from Saturday night preview crowd."

+ - Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 30 '35

(*)MOLLY MOO COW AND THE INDIANS. N 15 '35 8min RKO

Director: Amedee J. Van Beuren

A Rainbow Parade cartoon. "Molly and her two duck friends are on their way to Oregon when they meet up with Indians. Molly does a very funny Tarzan act through the trees to save her pals." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict N '35

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Junior matinee."

Wkly Guide O 26 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Color is excellent in this subject, which is splendidly animated and has lots of novelty and humor. . . The complications are very diverting."

+ Film Daily p11 N 7 '35

"A bright color cartoon with a pioneer background, this makes for general, appealing entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 N 7 '35

(*)MOONLIGHT AND MELODY. D 11 '35 21min Educational

Players: Lucille Page, Buster West, Tom Patricola

Director: Al Christie

"The plot concerns the efforts of Buster West to marry Lucille, who heads the musical revue, while the owner of the theater who is also the chairman of the board of Buster's father's concern, is trying to win a bet that he can take Lucille out after the show." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Some pretty good dancing which atones for a very familiar plot. Family."

+ - Wkly Guide O 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"A very [fine] musical comedy in tabloid form, with one of the finest line of beauties in the chorus, they being the girls from the current Broadway hit, 'The Sketch Book.' These girls alone make the short stand out, but there is plenty more besides."

+ Film Daily p6 O 29 '35

"A musical comedy short subject, which has considerable in the way of entertainment."

Motion Pict Daily p13 N 1 '35

Motion Pict Herald p64 N 9 '35

"[It has] some names that will mean something as well as some good dancing, comedy and singing. Very good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p32 O 25 '35

MOONLIGHT ON THE PRAIRIE. N 2 '35
60min Warner

Players: Dick Foran, Sheila Manners

Director: D. Ross Lederman

"A cowboy clears himself of a murder charge and aids a young widow in gaining possession of the ranch from the predatory hands of rustlers." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Fine horsemanship, beautiful outdoor scenery, [and] pleasing cowboy songs add to the entertainment value of this well directed Western. Family and junior matinees"

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p148 D '35

"Very good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"This Western melodrama . . . is better than average with its beautiful photography and fine horses. The cast is a good one with villainous villains and heroic hero. Family and junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A and Y: Western melodrama; C: Thrilling." Par M p56 Mr '36

"A well worthwhile production. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

Film Curb p18 N 1 '35

"Lacking any particular distinction because of the stereotyped nature of its plot material, this outdoor action [story] is just a fair picture of its kind."

+ - Film Daily p4 N 11 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p31 N 10 '35

MORALS OF MARCUS. N 15 '35 73min Gaumont British

Players: Lupe Velez, Ian Hunter, Adrianne Allen, Noel Madison

Director: Miles Mander

Based on a play of same title by W. J. Locke and filmed in England. A middle-aged titled archaeologist rescues a young hoydenish Turkish girl whose father is about to make her marry an ugly, rich old man. The girl falls in love with her rescuer but he doesn't return her affections until she has run away with a caddish young man.

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

MORALS OF MARCUS—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Fairly good; Y: Better not; C: No."
Christian Century p1638 D 18 '35

"A: Fair; Y and C: Unsuitable."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It will do] nothing to help along the cause of English-made pictures. Had Gaumont-British been as shrewd as it often seems to be, the company might well have bought back the rights to 'Morals of Marcus.' That studio has not made pictures like this for a long time. . . The heavy-handed treatment of a venerable plot leaves it decidedly lacking as drama." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p16 Ja 13 '36

"Despite its moments of exhilarating comedy, the new film manages to be aggressively dull when Lupe Velez is not busy exercising her fiery temper or being unconsciously amusing in her attempts to scale the proverbial dramatic heights." T. M. P.

— + N Y Times p14 Ja 13 '36

"As entertainment 'The Morals of Marcus' is considerably less than satisfactory." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p23 Ja 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Due chiefly to the vivacious work of Lupe Velez, this adaptation of the old play by W. J. Locke makes moderately satisfying fare that should please."

+ — Film Daily p7 Ja 14 '36

"Family drama."

N Y Exhibitor p29 N 10 '35

"Lupe Velez is substantially responsible for making 'Morals of Marcus' palatable program entertainment. The American star has a part that is rich in possibilities for her and she makes the most of it. . . It is a bit implausible. Its most fanciful element is the willingness of a titled English scientist to take into his home in London the girl who stowed away in his cabin on the voyage from Syria back to England. But without this premise there would be no story and no picture."

+ — Variety p19 Ja 15 '36

MOSCOW NIGHTS. N 6 '35 76min Denham-United artists

Players: Harry Baur, Laurence Olivier, Penelope Dudley Ward

Director: Anthony Asquith

Based on the French play, Nuits de Muscovie, by Pierre Benoit. The film was made in England. "The story is . . . about a handsome young officer who loses at baccaret money which he has not got, and who is then court-martialled for treachery which he has not committed." (New Statesman & Nation)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p174 N '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This is the most enjoyable and distinguished British film which we have seen. . . Mr. Anthony Asquith, with a story far weaker than that of 'The Man who Knew Too Much,' has made a much more interesting film. He is now a master of his medium; this film shows his gift for getting the best out of his actors; in fact, his proved abilities entitle him to be regarded as the most effective and accomplished director which this country has produced."

+ New Statesman & Nation p736 N 16 '35

"There is some very excellent photography, and the cutting is crisp and clear; there are also plenty of touches of humour, and the effort to catch the atmosphere has not proved entirely beyond the director's compass. With all these good facets the diamond should be flawless, but somehow or another it isn't." Mark Forrest

— + Sat R p480 N 16 '35

"Mr. Anthony Asquith's new film, is completely bogus. Momentarily forgetting 'The Dark Angel,' I wondered, as I came out from the assembly of peeresses and minor royalty and the high shriek of friend recognising friend into the blue glare of searchlights, whether this was the worst, as well as the most ballyhooed, film of the year. Mr. Asquith was once a promising director, though he was always more tricky than imaginative. Now his bag of tricks seems empty." Graham Greene

— Spec p814 N 15 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"The outstanding features are Baur's very realistic picture of the moujik-millionaire and Olivier's debonair soldier. . . There is good pictorial appeal and plenty of Russian songs and Russian dancing."

+ Motion Pict Daily p15 N 22 '35

"A colorful transcription of a French original which had a big success in Paris. Advantages enjoyed by the English language film include production by Alexis Granowsky and the appearance in a dominating role of Harry Baur, the French character star, who has a personality as distinct and in its way as powerful, as that of Jannings."

+ Motion Pict Herald p63 N 30 '35

"This is a triumph for Anthony Asquith, director, in that you are actually transported to Russia in 1916, and no book could give you a more vivid spectacle of things as they existed at that time. . . The success of this development of plot is no accidental touch, but the result of skilful cutting. Its technique differs somewhat from anything seen before, and, as such, is most arresting."

+ Variety p39 N 20 '35

MURDER AT GLEN ATHOL. N 1 '35 69min
Invincible

Players: John Miljan, Irene Ware

Director: Frank Strayer

Based on the novel of same title by Norman Lippincott. "[A] detective story writer is thrust into a triple murder mystery, solves it, bows out nicely with a last minute twist." (N Y Exhibitor)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Mediocre; Y: No value; C: No."
Christian Century p1471 N 13 '35

"A: Moderately entertaining; Y: Demoralizing; C: No."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"So thoroughly unpleasant it will please only mystery play addicts."

— Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '35

"'Murder at Glen Athol' is familiar stuff most of the way." T. M. P.

— + N Y Times p11 F 29 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 N 23 '35

"A smart murder mystery melodrama that holds the attention. Capable direction keeps the spectator in doubt as to the guilty party until the final fade out."

+ Film Curb p12 D 15 '35

"With a Clue Club novel, a story that should intrigue, 'Murder at Glen Athol' is popular murder mystery [material] that shouldn't fail to entertain. Family mystery drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p29 N 10 '35

MURDER OF DR. HARRIGAN. Ja 18 '36 67min
First national

Players: Kay Linaker. Ricardo Cortez.
Mary Astor. John Eldredge

Director: Frank McDonald

Based on the novel, From This Dark Stairway, by Mignon G. Eberhart. "A murder is committed in an effort to gain possession of a new anasthesia formula." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p174 N '35

"A fairly interesting murder mystery, with a capable cast, suspense maintained throughout and a surprise solution. . . . The part of the dipsomaniac is unnecessarily vivid. Adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A: Interesting; Y and C: Not recommended."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Wkly Guide Ja 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 25 '36

"While its setting is a hospital, the general impression one gets from the behavior of the characters is that the action takes place in a madhouse. . . . The plot is unraveled with as little suspense as possible, and one might add, with as little acting as possible. . . . The picture apparently was made as quickly and inexpensively as possible. If it ever had a logical, sensible story, there is little trace of it on the screen, while the comic relief only adds to the onlooker's melancholy." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p15 Ja 23 '36

"The Murder of Dr. Harrigan,' as the new picture insists, occurs in a self-service elevator of one of the larger metropolitan hospitals. It is well to bear that in mind; otherwise you will be bound to suspect that it took place in a lunatic asylum filled with manic depressives pretending to be doctors and nurses. Some second-hand knowledge of hospital routine compels us to confess that we do not believe there ever was such an institution as Dr. Harrigan's. The mere suggestion that there might be, upset us so thoroughly that we never were able to concentrate on the Harrigan case. It reached some sort of conclusion on the screen, but it is an unsolved mystery so far as we are concerned." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p27 Ja 21 '36

"[It] is pretty good fun in spite of its defects. Since no one expects much plausibility from a murder mystery, it is easy to forgive some of the farfetched goings-on in the Melady Memorial Hospital in the interests of suspense and excitement. And in this respect 'The Murder of Dr. Harrigan' has its fair share. . . . The film limps occasionally and at times verges on the preposterous, but it has its moments of interest." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p13 Ja 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Possibly a bit slow in starting but once the murders are done the pinning of the crimes on guilty party is well worked out."

+ — Film Curb p12 N 1 '35

"As murder mysteries go, this rates above average and should give full satisfaction to lovers of this type of fare."

+ Film Daily p8 Ja 21 '36

"A fairly good murder mystery melodrama. . . . All the action takes place in a hospital, and moves at a fast pace. But there is a bit too much padding; the characters are shown walking to and fro too much. The closing scenes, where the murderer is trapped, hold one in suspense. . . . Not suitable for children, adolescents, or Sundays. Adult entertainment."

+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 18 '36

"Family mystery drama."

N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

"A murder mystery that's too routine to inspire more than casual audience interest. It's along formula lines from the threat of murder down to solution of the murder, plus another death. No names in the cast for marquee attention and doubtful if results will be any better than lukewarm."

— + Variety p15 Ja 22 '36

MUSIC GOES 'ROUND. F 21 '36 65min Columbia

Players: Harry Richman. Rochelle Hudson.
Walter Connolly. Michael Bartlett. Edward Farley. Michael Riley. Lionel Stander

Director: Victor Schertzinger

This film was previously known as Rolling Along. "It retells the story about the musical comedy star who takes a vacation and finds a showboat troupe whose players are so bad that he lures them to Broadway to become, without their knowledge, the comedy hit of his new revue." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Mediocre; Y: Perhaps; C: Little interest."

Christian Century p446 Mr 18 '36

"Excellent. Mature. Family." DAR

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Family and junior matinees." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Highly entertaining for family." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 29 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) F 24 '36

"Family and junior matinees."

Nat Council of Jewish Women F 19 '36

Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"[This is] another fast moving film of careful casting and handsome mounting. . . . The characterizations are well defined, with the burlesque scenes deftly sketched." S. M. Mullen

+ Scholastic p30 Mr 7 '36

"Highly entertaining for family."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"A gay and clever story. Family."

+ Wkly Guide F 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Once you are advised that the work is called 'The Music Goes 'Round' you know that you are in for innumerable variations on the song hit that makes pessimists about America's destiny so merry. . . The chief pleasure of the film lies in the presence of that endlessly delightful comedian, Lionel Stander, who is current runner-up to W. C. Fields and Donald Duck as the most delightful of the post-Chaplin clowns. He really is funnier than Mr. Richman and should have been given more to do." Richard Watts, Jr.

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MUSIC GOES 'ROUND—Continued

N Y Herald Tribune p7 F 22 '36

"The Farley and Riley song doesn't, until the last reel really crash full strength into the picture named after it. . . Well frayed as that melody is by now, this is still the high point of the picture, with Michael Bartlett's operatic rendition the freshest bit of comedy as well as the only good singing in the film. . . The musical, at any rate, is intended for fervent admirers of Harry Richman, and not for those who can take his entertainment or leave it alone." Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p8 F 22 '36

"Just when we were beginning to hope that we had heard the end of it, Columbia has had to go out of its way to stir up the whoa-ho-hoing of 'The Music Goes 'Round.' Not satisfied merely to use it as the title for the creaking antique, the producers went to the trouble of luring Mike Riley and Ed Farley to the Coast. . . If we really wanted to be nasty about it, we could say that this Farley-Riley sequence is the best thing in the new picture. . . So often before has this formula story been used that it requires something more than a Harry Richman and a Rochelle Hudson to keep you from yawning in its face." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p12 F 22 '36

"If you like Harry Richman and can still stand 'The Music Goes 'Round and Around,' you will find a certain amount of entertainment in this stereotyped and shambling musical. . . If you don't, there is very little to recommend in the film. The cast includes admirable actors who are wasted in a pretty dull and innocuous song and dance entertainment." William Boehnel

N Y World-Telegram p21 F 22 '36

"The film is slight and seesaws along pleasantly; and even in the morning (I like to see films in the morning, so I can be free to dream in the afternoons), the audience actually joins in and sings and sings away when it comes to 'The music goes 'round and around.'" John Mosher

New Yorker p58 F 29 '36

"'The Music Goes 'Round' had been completed under its original title, 'Rolling Along,' when the insane little song called 'The Music Goes 'Round and Around,' popularized by two Manhattan night club entertainers, became an overnight sensation. . . Unfortunately, by last week 'The Music Goes 'Round and Around' had definitely ceased to be a hit. . . In other respects it has little novelty to recommend it beyond the presence in the cast of Harry Richman, whose Times Square baritone and face of a dissolute mastiff have not been on display for cinemaddicts since 'Putting on the Ritz' in 1930."

Time p25 Mr 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"While this one has its moments, it only rates as average entertainment, and seems destined to click best outside Metropolitan centers. It is slow in tempo, particularly in the showboat scenes. Richman's voice comes over most acceptably, but he screens as almost anything except a romantic juvenile. Family."

+ — Box Office p57 Mr 7 '36

"The song from which the title is taken has had more publicity than any such number in years. This will all help to get 'em in. It's a songfest that is very entertaining and will undoubtedly please in any situation. . . Grade A entertainment."

+ Film Curb p4 F 29 '36

"While the 'Music Goes 'Round and Around' song was an afterthought and plays just an incidental part in this production, it supplies the highlight of the picture and no doubt will serve its purpose both as entertainment and as a box-office stimulant."

Film Daily p10 F 24 '36

"Just a fair musical comedy. If spectators can overlook the triteness of the plot, they may find a few features to amuse them. . . Suitable for all. Family."

+ Harrison's Reports F 29 '36

"It shapes up as a highly diverting and fast-paced musical, ranking well up the current scale and looks like a strong box office offering that will hold its own up and down the line."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 24 '36

"Relying principally on that infectious, tantalizing and ubiquitous tune, 'The Music Goes 'Round and Around,' Victor Schertzinger has bundled all the action into the last few reels of this musical. Up to the time Harry Richman introduces the zippy number in an extravaganza in which he is interested vitally, the pace unfortunately is slow. However, as soon as the first strains of the popular melody are heard, the picture takes on life. . . Lavishly produced, this film has one of the best current exploitation possibilities. Everyone knows about the song by now and it's a matter of telling the paying public that the song is a highlight of Richman's picture."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 F 22 '36

"The picture, as a whole, isn't a pretentious one by any means, but its production values are excellent. . . Victor Schertzinger directed, and his later sequences appear to be better than the earlier ones, for during the early reels the action continually slips back and seems always to lose momentum. With the arrival of Farley and Riley, and their song, things immediately pick up and move on to a rapid climax. . . Exhibitors might do well to remember when preparing their campaigns that Harry Richman is well known on Broadway and in many cosmopolitan cities, but that in many a town he will be a newcomer."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p44 F 25 '36

"Estimate: entertaining musical; needs hot handling."

N Y Exhibitor p54 Mr 10 '36

"Some tall hurdling will have to be done to bring this one into the money. With the freak tune which inspired the film's remaking and retitling decidedly on the way out, it might be to the exhibitor's advantage to side-track the Mike Farley-Ed Riley angle and put the full pressure of ballyhoo behind the story and the musical score which agitated the original production. In any event, the picture doesn't presage a bright outlook for the major spots."

+ — Variety p15 F 26 '36

"With the popularity of the song taking a fast drop in the past 10 days, advantage of the title is doubtful. However, there's no doubt as to the topnotch entertainment value of the picture. It is smartly produced by Max Winslow, excellently directed and ably written and cast. The picture can go on its own anywhere in the neighborhood houses. It should be a winner [as] family entertainment."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 20 '36

MUSIC HATH CHARMS. D 1 '35 65min Associated British

Players: Henry Hall, Carol Goodner, Lorna Hubbard, Billy Milton

Director: Thomas Bentley

Made in England. "The basic idea is to trace the effect of broadcast music on the lives of some of the millions who listen to it. Typical are a couple tricked by mischievous elders into a breach of promise dispute, a couple of white explorers in danger from savages, the wife of one of the explorers, who almost lets a flirtation go too far. In each case the music, carried over the air, brings about a happy ending." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p148 D '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"A vehicle for the personality and famous dance band of Henry Hall, celebrity of the British Broadcasting Corp. . . . The episodic character of the film is no drawback; what is, is that some of the episodes are very good and some very, very crude. Under the former head is an extremely funny travesty of a trial in court and a series of episodes of traffic policemen and others carrying on the rhythm of the theme tune. There are real laughs also in scenes picturing Hall and his band entertaining waifs and strays."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p7 O 30 '35

"The idea, good in itself, is unevenly developed, some of the scenes being very funny and some so crude that one cannot imagine the film appealing to American audiences without considerable cutting or, better still, retakes."

— + Motion Pict Herald p61 N 9 '35

MUSIC IS MAGIC. N 1 '35 66min 20th century-Fox

Players: Alice Faye. Ray Walker. Bebe Daniels. Frank Mitchell. Jack Durant

Director: George Marshall

Based on the play, Private Beach, by Gladys Unger and Jesse Lasky, Jr. "Three boys and a girl go broke in vaudeville and come to [the] film colony where they haunt executives, wreck cafes and run riot generally. When a star becomes temperamental, the girl gets her chance to replace her and make good." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fair of kind; Y and C: Probably entertaining."

Christian Century p62 Ja 8 '36

Mo Film Bul p198 D '35

"Fair. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Entertaining."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"In spite of some boisterous comedy contributed by Frank Mitchell and Jack Durant in a labored effort to relieve the ennui, the picture fails to overcome the handicap of a ponderous scenario." R. S.

— + Boston Transcript p17 D 6 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 N 30 '35

Film Curb p18 O 1 '35

"Flimsy story and lack of originality in treatment are apparent from outset."

— Variety p16 N 20 '35

MUSS 'EM UP. F 14 '36 70min RKO

Players: Preston Foster. Margaret Callahan. Alan Mowbray. Guinn (Big Boy) Williams

Director: Charles Vidor

Based on the novel, Green Shadow, by James Edward Grant. A rough and tumble detective specializing in the solving of mysterious shootings and kidnap threats is called in to unravel a mysterious kidnapping and two murders. This he does to everyone's satisfaction.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Hopelessly complex mixture of mystery, comedy, romance and poor taste, that leaves audience wondering what it is all about. Over-shoots its mark badly. . . . A: Only fair; Y and C: No."

Christian Century p383 Mr 4 '36

"Poor characterizations and loose ends which fail to tie mark this mystery melodrama. . . . The semi-solution of the whole is hastened by Detective Tip O'Neil plus the rough and ready methods of the local cops in dealing with as unpleasant a group of gangsters as ever flickered on the silver sheet. Waste of time for adults; children: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Adults." DAR

"A baffling mystery story—with plot so involved and tangled the audience remains baffled for days!! It is quite unethical and perhaps adds to the public's contempt for law enforcement officers when they are portrayed as being stupidly brutal and dishonest for no real purpose as in this picture. A good cast wasted!! Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Well cast but lacking in continuity. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A poor story well acted and directed. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

— Fox W Coast Bul F 1 '36

"A mystery melodrama with a fairly interesting plot, but unconvincingly presented. Adults and young people."

+ — Jt Estimates Ja 15 '36

"The name of the picture is a warning which should be heeded, for plot, characters and motives are so thoroughly messed up in this mystery melodrama that one loses interest in the characters and in the outcome. Adolescents, 12-16: no, low ethical standards; children, 8-12: no indeed."

— Motion Pict R F '36

"This is a slow-moving, confused detective story which proves mediocre entertainment. Adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 22 '36

"Good. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency F '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"When its title was flashed on the screen I assumed its wording had reference to the characters in the story, but as the unreeling progressed I discovered it referred to the audience. 'Muddle' would have been a better word, but 'muss' gives you an idea of the impression the picture will make on the mind of an audience. . . . Other confusions keep the plot muddled up and the audience bewildered. You may judge the quality of the story material from the fact that even Alan Mowbray gives a poor performance. Foster's detective is a caricature and Williams' comedy deplorable. No reason is apparent for Paul Porcasi's presence in the cast, which at least gives the whole thing consistency, as there is no apparent reason why it should have been made."

— — Hollywood Spec p14 F 1 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

MUSS 'EM UP—Continued

"A delightful exercise in mayhem, in which the hero continually begs the chief of police to let him beat the truth out of gangland with a rubber hose half filled with buckshot."

New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"I imagine that even at the end of the film you will be somewhat in doubt as to a few of the plot complexities and that you may not completely understand one or two of the hero's most telling clues, but that should not keep you from enjoying the adventures recounted with such pleasant vigor in 'Muss 'Em Up.'" Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p7 F 3 '36

"'Muss 'Em Up' proves increasingly surprising—and surprisingly good mystery film entertainment—as it goes along." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p21 F 3 '36

"Here in 'Muss 'Em Up' is a fascinating mystery melodrama of the early Dashiell Hammett and Raoul Whitfield school—a mystery melodrama which you will have to admit is tough enough and fast enough to remind one of 'The Maltese Falcon,' 'The Glass Key' or 'Murder in the Bowl.' . . . Where 'Muss 'Em Up' rises notably above the level of most mystery films is in its characterizations. . . . Indeed, these types as well as the others, are more than just melodramatic—they are authentic portraits of certain peculiar elements in American life and the slight exaggerations in their characterization for dramatic purposes have been accomplished so dexterously that one can barely detect them." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 F 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A mixture of mystery, comedy and gangster fare, spiked with hilarious situations and wise-cracking dialogue that unwinds as satisfactory program entertainment."

+ Box Office p23 F 1 '36

"Another in the cycle of gangster pictures and a pretty good one. At least it has a few new twists and a number of laugh provoking comedy sequences."

+ — Film Curb p13 Ja 25 '36

"This is a robust mixture of mystery and comedy which should do nicely as a program number. . . . Charles Vidor's direction makes for a moving affair, with the mystery and comedy held in nice balance. Preston Foster does an excellent job as the hard-boiled private detective."

+ Film Daily p8 Ja 21 '36

"A pretty good program mystery melodrama, with an appeal to men because of the rough action. The story is somewhat complicated, but since it moves fast it holds the spectator's attention fairly well throughout. . . . Because of the kidnapping plot it may prove unsuitable for children or adolescents. Good for adults."

+ — Harrison's Reports F 1 '36

"Unfortunately for this otherwise acceptable production, the mussing up process was followed by the script writers with the result that the audience is frequently left wondering what the story is all about. The valiant efforts of a really good cast cannot triumph over the incoherency of the script, which sets out to be a mystery thriller, but succeeds in being only a mystery."

— Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 17 '36

"The way things have been complicated, the matter of keeping track of what's going on or what the story is all about and at the same time trying to form any logical anticipations as to the way the yarn is going to work out, serve more to tax the powers of observation than they do to entertain or amuse."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p38 Ja 25 '36

"Estimate: fair gangster programmer."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p27 F 10 '36

"The by now well-known phrase of the New York police commissioner to 'muss 'em up' in instructing his department to go after criminals provides both the theme and the title for another police yarn. . . . More a man's picture than a woman's. Nearly everyone gets mussed up except the cops and the neighbor's cat. The police methods may be considered a little rough in the wrong places by some people, but, through some of it, laughs are drawn."

Variety p12 F 5 '36

"Pandro Berman has given the picture an excellent cast which plays the story to the limit. Charles Vidor's direction is fast, takes advantage of all the comedy situations of which there are many. . . . Erwin Gelsey has injected a lot of smart dialog into the picture, has used a lot of slang unfamiliar to most audiences but well fitting the characters."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 16 '36

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY. N 8 '35 133min
MGM

Players: Charles Laughton. Clark Gable. Franchot Tone

Director: Frank Lloyd

Adapted from the trilogy, Mutiny on the Bounty, Men Against the Sea and Pitcairn's Island by Charles B. Nordhoff and James Norman Hall. The barbarous discipline imposed by Captain Bligh of the "Bounty" on his men during a two year's voyage to the South Seas eventually led to the most famous mutiny in British history. Bligh and eighteen loyal seamen were set adrift in the ship's launch and sailed to the Dutch East Indies while the mutineers returned to Tahiti and later to the inaccessible Pitcairn's Island where they burned the "Bounty."

A Guide to the study of the screen version of Mutiny on the Bounty, prepared by Frederick Houk Law, is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents per copy. The Guide covers historical facts, dramatic values, character portrayals and suggestions for further reading.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A Excellent; Y: Strong but good; C: Too strong."

Christian Century p1574 D 4 '35

"Excellent."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Pictorially and dramatically, 'Mutiny on the Bounty' rates as one of the outstanding productions of film history. Adults and 14-18: excellent; 8-14: too much brutality for nervous children and sensitive adults." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Mature; 14-18." DAR

"This outstanding picture is a notable contribution to the art of the cinema in a season that has already produced an unusual number of fine pictures. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Excellent. Family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family audience; 12 years up." Nat Bd of R

"Outstanding. Family—mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"To all who love the salt tang of the sea and tales of courageous adventure, this film is heartily commended." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The whole production is outstanding and congratulations are due to all who have had a part in it. Rather harrowing for young children but suitable for the family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family, except that the cruelty of some of the scenes will prove too much for sensitive adults or children." Mrs T. G. Winter

"Adults. Too harrowing for children." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
++ Fox W Coast Bul N 23 '35

"The sharp and terrible reality of the cruelty from which was born the new maritime code of today is so vividly presented that the picture becomes one of the truly great productions of the year. Family, too tense for the very young or sensitive."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 14 '35

"Here at last is the picture for which the film industry should have saved their favorite adjectives, colossal' and 'stupendous.' Mature, family. (Strong fare for sensitive adults or children.)"

+ Jt Estimates N 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p198 D '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Tremendous epic drama none should miss; C: Violent for sensitive." Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A film that must be labeled for adults only because of its violence, yet one that adds a chapter to the history of the abolishment of injustice toward the defenseless weak."

+ Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

"Mutiny on the Bounty is the cinema at its best, and it does a job which the legitimate stage, lacking sweep and scope and sky and sea, could never hope to achieve. The only reservation I wish to make is that those two Tahitian sweethearts seemed snatched right out of the Vassar daisy chain." Don Herold

+ Life p21 J '36

"Charles Laughton, whose performance as Captain Bligh in 'The Mutiny on the Bounty' fixes him in my mind at any rate as by far the best of living actors. I had thought him that before, but the current picture leaves no room for doubt. Frank Lloyd's direction has amplitude and clarity, and the film has many other merits besides the chief one—its making perfect use of such an artist. It is Mr. Laughton, however, whom we watch; and I cannot believe that this is to be accounted for on any other theory than that he has resources beyond the power of even the most brilliant direction to conceive. No man could be told to do what he does. He would have to know how—to know, for instance, how to be Captain Bligh, and how to be him in such fullness that no inconsistency appeared between the tyrant of the Bounty and the hero of the open boat on that impossible voyage to Timor." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p658 Ja 1 '36

"The zest and careful research of Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall are responsible for the present version of the story; without their books Hollywood would never have come near this gold mine. But Nordhoff and Hall were not shrewd creators of fiction—their 'Mutiny on the Bounty' was sometimes dull and frequently ineffectual, when you came to separate their handling of the story from the story itself, and their best passages were those where they were transcribing testimony, quoting from logs. It remained for the movies to give the thing a strong line of action and a fictional body." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub p74 N 27 '35

"It can stand handsomely on the qualitative analysis. . . It has excitement and beauty and power and its presents the motion picture spectacle as it should be conceived. . . The film is . . . remarkably faithful to the letter and spirit of the Nordhoff-Hall narrative. . . Pictorially the film is superb. . . The cast . . . is excellent." Richard Watts, Jr.

++ N Y Herald Tribune p6 N 7 '35

"A good show . . . a smashing, blood-curdling melodrama of the sea and the men who sail upon it." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p8 N 9 '35

"The magnificent adventure culled from the trilogy by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, is this department's favorite picture of the month. . . Here is one of the great motion picture odysseys and Charles Laughton's performance as Captain Bligh is, to my mind, the most distinguished of the year." Andre Sennwald

++ N Y Times p7x D 8 '35

"The film is brilliantly acted. . . Everyone connected with the production deserves to be congratulated for turning out a really superb film." William Boehnel

++ N Y World-Telegram p22 N 9 '35

"Frank Lloyd has handled the whole shipload well, except in Tahiti. Tahiti always gets Hollywood a little unnerved, and, as the picture is long, those Tahiti romances, Tahiti leis, and so on, might have been cut quite a bit. You've seen that kind of thing a lot. You haven't seen anything quite as good of its sort, I suspect, as the rest of the film." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p99 N 16 '35

"'Mutiny on the Bounty' is a superb piece of work which contains the three essentials for a first-rate film—a good story with a minimum of dialogue, plenty of movement and a large canvas. The story was ready to hand and the only difficulty which could have presented itself was what to omit; this difficulty has not been quite overcome for the film is overlong and cuts could be made in the sequence which follows the arrival of the Bounty in Tahiti." Mark Forrest

+ Sat R p32 Ja 4 '36

Spring'd Republican p2 N 15 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"A superb production viewed from any angle. Call it raw meat; brutal; cruel—yet it remains a motion picture masterpiece, flawlessly produced, magnificently directed, portrayed with complete conviction."

++ Box Office p27 N 23 '35

"[This] dramatic tale of the sea can be chalked up as one of the finest pictures ever made."

++ Film Curb p8 N 15 '35

"This is one of the most important productions since the inception of talking pictures. It is grim, gripping and pictorially perfect."

+ Film Daily p7 N 1 '35

"Famed in fact and fiction [its] dramatic appeal is deep and primal, sometimes sadistic, thrilling and always interesting. . . Production values are the acme of perfection with entrancing seascapes photographed by Arthur Edson vying with the action and music to achieve rare eye and ear effectiveness. . . This is a rich contribution to the screen's progress."

++ Motion Pict Daily p5 O 29 '35

"Expensively produced, not one single detail necessary to emphasize the motivating story in all its vividness being ignored, the show is a remarkable demonstration of complete picture making technique."

+ Motion Pict Herald p57 N 9 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p36 N 25 '35

MY MARRIAGE. Ja 10 '36 73min 20th century-Fox

Players: Claire Trevor, Kent Taylor, Pauline Frederick, Paul Kelly

Director: George Archainbaud

"The scion of a socially prominent family marries the daughter of a racketeer, thereby incurring the disapproval of his fashionable mother. This snobbish individual makes life miserable for the young bride until it is discovered that the girl's father, who has been mysteriously killed, was shot by the socialite's other son." Int Fed of Cath Alumnae

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fairly good; Y: Perhaps; C: No." Christian Century p446 Mr 18 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"The outstanding action and admirably spoken lines of Pauline Frederick, as a conniving mother-in-law, lend plausibility to a melodrama involving a family of social registerites and the beyond-the-pale bride of one of its members. Adults: good; 14-18: fair; 8-14: uninteresting." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Adults." DAR

"This picture is well acted, highly entertaining, with all ethical values satisfactorily presented. Adults and young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Good acting by Claire Trevor and Pauline Frederick. Good. Family." Int Fed of Cath Alumnae

"An excellent cast and fine direction add much to this tense melodrama." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Good cast, weak story poorly directed. Fair. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A very dramatic story, well constructed, convincingly acted and nicely staged." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A picture with a deeply involved plot which is subordinate to the characters. . . The picture though rather negative in its ethical value, is above the average, especially when the higher social element is depicted. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"This is first class melodrama with a high entertainment value for those who enjoy the nervous excitement induced by rapid-fire action. It is mechanically plotted and uses hackneyed situations and typical characters, but is saved from banality by the sincerity of the acting and the stressing of nobility of human motivation as opposed to false and vulgar pride. The play is oversentimentalized but despite this it manages to maintain a level of dignity and proportion. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 30 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Entertaining; C: Mature." Par M p56 Mr '36

"A production notable for the smart gowns of the feminine members of its cast. Adults." + Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 13 '35

"Although the cast assembled by Twentieth Century-Fox strives nobly, it is unable to animate a formulaized screen play which . . . never rises above being mildly interesting. The material for sound melodrama is there—three fatal shootings and an unsavory domestic crisis—but it just doesn't jell." T. M. P.

— + N Y Times p12 F 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one opens with great promise, but fails to deliver fully in long drawn-out fades and slow action."

— + Box Office p25 N 30 '35

"[This is] one of these all too familiar mother-in-law stories that have been done to death. This one is just ordinary program stuff with nothing to pull it out of the 'just average' class."

— Film Curb p13 D 1 '35

"Because of the fact that it is well handled, 'My Marriage' should do all right as a program number. However, the story of the mother-in-law, who is always menacing the happiness of the newly married couple is familiar. George Archainbaud's direction keeps things moving along and he gets some nice performances from the players, all of which helps to maintain interest."

+ Film Daily p8 N 19 '35

"Fair program entertainment. Although the plot is routine, one's attention is held because of the sympathy that Claire Trevor, the heroine, awakens by displaying a noble character. . . Suitable for all. Family."

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 25 '36

Motion Pict Daily p10 N 18 '35

"Treating of swanky, sophisticated people, the story is told in an unsophisticated way, as it aims its appeal at average audiences. . . The action is such that it recommends itself to general adult audiences. Its theme being too deep for juvenile understanding or appreciation, a campaign calculated to arouse the interest of persons more mature should be adopted."

+ Motion Pict Herald p70 N 23 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p55 D 10 '35

"Fairly well plotted and pretty capably produced as well as played, 'My Marriage' manages to hold its own for the neighborhood trade, and in some spots ought to be able to protect the box office without a companion picture."

+ Variety p37 F 26 '36

MYSTERIOUS AVENGER. Ja 17 '36 56min Columbia

Players: Charles Starrett, Joan Perry

Director: David Selman

A western melodrama

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"It has nothing new or arresting to recommend it. Family."

— Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: good Western anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p20 F 10 '36

MYSTERY OF THE MARIE CELESTE. N 14 '35 80min Hammer

Players: Bela Lugosi, Shirley Grey, Arthur Margetson, Edmund Willard, Cliff McLaglen

Director: Denison Clift

The film was made in England. "[The] story is laid in 1872, when crews were shanghaied. Sailing ship Mary Celeste is floating in the vicinity of Gibraltar with not a soul on board. Captain Morehead, of another vessel, boards her, tows her into port, and claims salvage. [The] picture opens with Morehead's suit before the Admiralty court for salvage money, then switches to the events preceding the legal action, and finishing with a return to the court." (Variety)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p174 N '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"[An] outstanding role is played by Bela Lugosi as a seaman who had sailed in the boat six years previously and been thrashed until he is a mental and physical wreck. . . Illusion of the vessel at sea is excellent, barring the cabin scenes. Despite terrific storms, the cabin does not sway one bit. [There is] good direction throughout, but [a] morbid and unsatisfactory story. Very strong for those who like tragic entertainment."

+ — Variety p21 D 4 '35

N

NAVY WIFE. N 29 '35 58min 20th century-Fox

Players: Claire Trevor. Ralph Bellamy. Jane Darwell. Ben Lyon

Director: Allan Dwan

Based on the novel, Beauty's Daughter, by Kathleen Norris. "A triangular romance about a Navy nurse who marries a Navy widower and then struggles painfully to supplant his affection for his dead wife." (Boston Transcript)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"This picture with its interesting background of navy stations, while not notable, in its production is well cast, adequately directed, has humor and at times rises to dramatic heights. An entertaining picture. Adults and young people."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 25 '35

"Good. Adults & young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"This is a social drama with a slow moving, entertaining story, well directed and capably acted. Adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Fair; Y and C: No value."
Par M p56 Mr '36

"This adaptation of Kathleen Norris' novel, 'Beauty's Daughter', will not find favor with those who enjoyed the book. . . However, clever dialogue, interesting scenes in a Navy-base hospital and vigorous comedy of sailors on 'shore-leave' contribute much to the entertainment value of the picture. Adults."

+ — Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p4 N 22 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

"The very saccharinity of the story, which boasts even an angel-faced little cripple with long curls and a brave smile, may have its usual effect upon Miss Norris's army of constant readers. It is just a time-killer and . . . can be recommended only to inveterates of Miss Norris's magazine serials of domestic turmoils." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p26 Ja 6 '36

"Only a few short paragraphs need be devoted to 'Navy Wife' which contains nearly all the nickel-weekly cliches about misunderstood love, strung together in a flimsy and generally preposterous manner." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p23 Ja 6 '36

Springf'd Republican p6 D 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 N 30 '35

Film Curb p18 O 1 '35

Motion Pict Herald p35 Ja 25 '36

"Family drama."

N Y Exhibitor p34 O 10 '35

"So much extraneous matter has been permitted to creep into early sequences that the director obviously had to skim the surface of the more moving scenes when the plot actually hit its pace."

Variety p12 Ja 8 '36

NEVADA. N 29 '35 60min Paramount

Players: Larry (Buster) Crabbe. Kathleen Burke. Monte Blue

Director: Charles Barton

Story from the novel of same title by Zane Grey. Two jail-breaking outlaws decide to go straight and prevent a gambler from swindling a man out of his ranch. They take over the ranch when he dies, fight rustlers and settle down.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Mediocre; Y and C: Fair."
Christian Century p158 Ja 22 '36

"Good."
+ — Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Family." Nat Bd of R
Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"Fair. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Fair Western melodrama; C: Thrilling."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Good scenery and minor characterizations, and generally true atmosphere. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide N 23 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p34 N 23 '35

"[A] typical Western that will satisfy where pictures of this type are liked."

+ — Film Curb p9 N 15 '35

"A pretty good Western. . . Suitable for all, and for Sundays where Westerns are shown. [Family.]"

+ — Harrison's Reports D 21 '35

"An outdoor action drama, this fast moving feature combines all the dramatic, comedy, menace, wild riding and conflict essentials that are appealing to Western fans and juveniles."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p9 N 7 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

NEVADA—Continued

"Not a pretentious attraction, but withal one that is intelligently produced, acted and directed, the show has all the showmanship elements necessary to stir the enthusiasm of outdoor action fans."

+ Motion Pict Herald p64 N 16 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p37 N 25 '35

NEVER TOO LATE. N 27 '35 57min Reliable Players: Richard Talmadge. Thelma White. Robert Frazier. Mildred Harris

Director: Franklin Shamroy

"Richard Talmadge plays the part of a detective pursuing a gang of blackmailers who have stolen a necklace from the police commissioner's wife. He poses as a second story man to gain the gang's confidence, rounds them up and returns the necklace in time for his commissioner's wedding anniversary." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: Undistinguished crook drama; C: Doubtful."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The acrobatic Richard Talmadge jumps, tumbles and fights his way through this one in a manner which will please the patrons who like his sort of stuff. The story doesn't amount to much but is framework enough to tie in a series of automobile chase scenes, fist fights and across-the-roofs acrobatics the Talmadge fans expect."

+ — Film Daily p7 N 27 '35

"With no distinguishing features, either of player, or performance, or situation, it may prove fair on a dual program. A full quota of police-bandid automobile pursuits is included, which makes for action, at least. Every opportunity seems to have been hunted to permit Talmadge to play the acrobat in his battles with the crooks, from which he always emerges the victor, often at great stretch of the imagination."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p15 N 27 '35

"Once more athletic Dick Talmadge scores in a rapid-fire action story. . . Talmadge fans will be more than satisfied with this one. Family action drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p40 D 25 '35

NEW FRONTIER. O 24 '35 60min Republic

Players: John Wayne. Muriel Evans

Director: Carl Pierson

"Story of the opening up of homestead lands in the old Cherokee Strip." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family audience; 12 years up." Nat Bd of R
Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"A, Y and C: Good Western."
Par M p56 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide O 5 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

"Contains all the snappy action that lovers of out-door action dramas could ask for and is a high grade Western in every respect."

+ Film Curb p17 O 1 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p36 O 10 '35

Variety p13 D 18 '35

NEW GULLIVER. N 1 '35 76min Moscow film studios

Players: V. Konstantinov

Director: A. Ptushko

Puppeteer: F. Kransy

Based on Gulliver's Travels by Jonathan Swift. "The narrative depicts the adventures of a young Russian lad in the Lilliput kingdom, where the royalists at first cater to him in an effort to employ him for their ends, but later direct warfare against the giant, who takes up the cause of the oppressed workers and aids them in achieving victory." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Amusing; C: Entertaining."

Par M p56 Mr '36

"An unusual film from Russia in which, except in the prelude, all the characters but one are represented by puppets. These puppets are extraordinary in expressiveness, unlike anything the movies have produced before. The film is propaganda, but for young people that would be unnoticed in its general entertainment value. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family, junior matinee."

+ + Wkly Guide N 30 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 16 '35

Lit Digest p25 N 2 '35

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation p604 N 20 '35

"The English titles add to the effect of the picture and are amusingly rather than clumsily, written. 'The New Gulliver' is a striking and original cinema experiment." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p16 N 4 '35

"The Russians animate a puppet world with a technical brilliance and a richness of comic imagination that rivals Walt Disney's pen-and-ink masterpieces. . . The film's satirical thrusts make for magnificent humor." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p24 N 4 '35

"A thoroughly engaging and comically imaginative satire. . . The whole thing is so charmingly managed and with such technical finesse and genuine wit that one is hardly aware of the sledgehammer propaganda that it is driving home. . . Fresh in form and un-hackneyed in treatment." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p15 N 5 '35

"Crisp, graceful, and witty." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p97 N 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Excellent for juveniles, although much political propaganda has been introduced. This last will be overlooked by the children while watching the massive human being overpowered by thousands of marionettes."

+ Box Office p33 D 28 '35

"Clever and fascinating adventure novelty. . . Humor and satire are well sprinkled amid the dramatic excitement, and the production is helped considerably by a good musical background."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

+ Film Daily p6 O 29 '35

"This Russian effort, in its particular field, is one of the most remarkable films . . . in almost two decades. . . The manipulation of the puppets, their well-nigh human gestures and postures, the extreme accuracy in scale and the enormous cleverness with which the inhabitants of Lilliput are handled combine into a sum total of enterprise, ingenuity and charm which are constantly intriguing and arresting."

+ + Motion Pict Daily p8 O 29 '35

"Adult drama."

N Y Exhibitor p37 N 25 '35

NEXT TIME WE LOVE. Ja 27 '36 85min Universal

Players: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Ray Milland, Grant Mitchell

Director: Edward H. Griffith

Based on a novel called, Next Time We Live and also, Say Goodbye Again by Ursula Parrott. "[It] is a quiet, sensitive and intelligent cinema study of love and careers. Its hero is a young newspaper man who wants to be a foreign correspondent. Its heroine is a romantic girl who is all mixed up between her desire to be a successful wife and mother and her interest in a stage career. They are constantly being driven apart by their confused longings and the economic situation in which they find themselves, and in the end death and their ambitions, not the departure of their love, bring an end to their wistful, rather wide-eyed confusion." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Excellent. Mature." DAR

"Mature." Nat Bd of R

"Adults. Excellent." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A poignant, somewhat tear-drenched drama which will perhaps appeal most strongly to women. Mature." Mrs T. G. Winter
Fox W Coast Bul F 15 '36

"Mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The production is a superior type of problem cinema, greatly aided by convincing characterizations and intelligent direction, always interesting, although occasionally lacking in realism. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Although a little mature for children there is nothing harmful in this delightful picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"It is a picture which will be remembered. . . Adolescents: yes; children: too mature." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"It will have wide audience appeal. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 8 '36

"A distinguished cast develops this theme convincingly with realistic acting and a humor which is close to tears. Excellent photography. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"Good. Adults and young adults."

+ Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A dull and ponderous tale which is overly romantic together with direction which is heavy and unoriginal causes Margaret Sullavan to appear to extremely poor advantage. Family."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women F 5 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A picture for those who enjoy sniffing for an hour or so and wringing out damp handkerchiefs. . . In contrast, to the prevailing marshmallow atmosphere, is the roughage supplied by Robert McWade as a dyspeptic managing editor." M. E. P.
Boston Transcript p3 F 21 '36

"The story is just old stuff, the usual Ursula Parrott love formula, but Griffith tells it so brilliantly, so smoothly, so feelingly, your sympathy goes out to the people it concerns, and never for a moment during the unreeling will your attention wander from the screen. . . Quite often after seeing a picture I have enjoyed thoroughly, I find reviewers declare it to possess great appeal to women. I do not know if I am a sissy, or what else may be the matter with me to make me thoroughly enjoy a picture my confreres classify as entertainment principally for women; but I suppose this one is another of the sort. It is a beautiful love story which should stir the romantic impulses of women of all ages, but, and I don't care who knows it, it kept my emotions stirred up during its entire showing; I thought it tender, sweet and human, and I smoke a pipe, play poker and swear."

+ Hollywood Spec p5 F 15 '36

"So finely wrought is this suavely sentimental tale, so nicely balanced are its values, and so surely is it played that it becomes quite likely the best thing of its uncommon sort the talkies have yet offered. . . It is a great credit to all concerned with this decidedly articulate film that its simple story, told without frills, attains the emotional height it certainly does. . . It is, rather, a handsomely proportioned merger of good writing and sympathetic playing. And it comes as a somehow gay and sad offering to delight and move the intelligent moviegoer." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p35 Mr 14 '36

"In 'Next Time We Love' [the leading characters'] tragedy is not dramatized with any exceptional sapience and there are times when the general adult quality of the work fails just a trifle, but, on the whole, the photoplay, if far from being exciting, never fails to be believable and to make sense. . . If [it] fails to be stirring and heartbreaking emotional drama, it is chiefly because the producers have refused to employ sentimental fireworks in their dramatization. The very absence of the customary hard-working heart throbs results in a certain understatement that is likely to keep those who might have been easy victims of a more shameless treatment of the subject in a state of lethargy and tearlessness. I think that the film is frequently too much in a minor key for true effectiveness." Richard Watts, Jr.
+ — N Y Herald Tribune p11 Ja 31 '36

"'Next Time We Love' is the kind of film known to the trade as a matinee picture, a grand picture for women to cry over and generally enjoy themselves. . . [It] is also one of those pictures that doesn't bear too much thinking about afterward. Even the most careless analysis can undo all Edward H. Griffith's excellent direction, can spoil even the sensitive performance of Margaret Sullavan, and the cheerful tearful mood of the whole production. That mood, built up so carefully by every one concerned, is the film's chief asset. A harsh word of reality could so easily shatter it; and it is really too pleasant a mood to shatter unnecessarily." Eileen Creelman
N Y Sun p18 Ja 31 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

NEXT TIME WE LOVE—Continued

"It is probably ungracious, and unexpected, to reproach a producer for having turned out too faithful a version of a novel. But, while there are some which are perfect screen material (witness 'Mutiny on the Bounty'), there are others which require something more than a literal translation if they are to become photographs and not animated readings of dialogue. 'Next Time We Live' was one of those and, in transferring it bodily to the screen, Universal has flown in the face of the cinema's first law—motion. Its investigation of the problem of marriage vs. career consumes something short of ninety minutes and most of your patience with Cicely Tyler," F. S. Nugent
— + N Y Times p16 Ja 31 '36

"What this story of a foreign correspondent and his actress wife, who, though they love each other dearly, prefer to remain parted so that they will not interfere with each other's career, would be like in less competent hands is something this department would rather not contemplate. However, since everyone connected with the production has done a first rate job it is easy to think well of 'Next Time We Love,'" William Boehnel
+ N Y World-Telegram p19 Ja 31 '36

"The chronicle seemed merely monotonous and uninspired, nor did I feel that the performers, Margaret Sullivan and James Stewart, particularly helped matters. Both had a way of gasping whenever they met, the gasp of the tragic nuance," John Mosher
— New Yorker p69 F 8 '36

"A confused adaptation of the story of an actress and her foreign correspondent husband."

Stage p8 Mr '36

"In her novel, of which the title, 'Next Time We Live,' was changed in Hollywood lest cinemaddicts suspect that it dealt with the Hereafter, Author Ursula Parrott [gives us] a maudlin discussion of the pangs of young love thwarted by circumstance. The chief merit of the picture is that with innumerable opportunities for doing likewise, it maintains an intellectual level which, while not exalted, is higher than that of its original. . . Margaret Sullivan's curious voice, which betokens depth of emotional reserve or a defect in her breathing apparatus, is well adapted for expressing the ambiguities of Author Parrott's heroine. However, the chief significance of 'Next Time We Love' in the progress of the cinema industry is likely to reside in the presence in its cast of James Stewart. A 1932 product of the Princeton Triangle Club who reached Hollywood from Broadway, where he appeared in 'Yellow Jack', 'Divided by Three' and 'Page Miss Glory', he disregards a long established cinema convention for such roles, ably introduces to Hollywood the character of a newspaper man who is neither drunkard, lecher nor buffoon."

+ — Time p26 F 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Poignantly dramatic and pathetically tragic, this story of a great love will impress all who see it with the natural quality of its dialogue and the superb performances of its leading players."

+ Box Office p17 F 22 '36

"Maintaining a high pitch emotionally throughout, the picture is chiefly geared to feminine taste, but it has plenty of general appeal."

+ Film Daily p5 Ja 31 '36

"A pretty good romantic drama, with an appeal to women. . . The story lacks action, but this is made up for its human quality. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ — Harrison's Reports F 8 '36

"A poignantly real and moving love story of young America that comes so close to home as to enlist the sympathetic response of everyone. Honest craftsmanship, an entire absence of cheap hokum and a production that is nearly perfect in every element makes this unpretentious picture an artistic and entertainment standout. Theater-goers of all classes will take it to their hearts and that means mounting takes at the box office, as the word gets around. . . The screen play is as lucid, simple and direct as a story that occupies the screen for eighty-five minutes could well be. There are comparatively few 'big' incidents in it and no characters that are not decent, likable people. Yet it adroitly avoids the banal or saccharine. Its dialogue is simple and unrestrained, yet probes deeply into the human heart."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 28 '36

"Brilliant in its dramatic power to stir the sincerest of human emotions, this is a story of a beautiful love brought face to face with life's sternest realities. Tastefully produced, intelligently acted and directed, the dialogue is the sole interpretive medium. Nevertheless, the gripping quality of the story held the attention of a preview audience in hushed silence throughout."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 29 '36

"The picture is a love story, probably one of the finest the screen has been privileged to present. It appears so because it deals in fundamental human equations, simply, sincerely and intelligently."

+ Motion Pict Herald p55 F 8 '36

"Thanks to a swell performance from heroine Sullivan, another from hero Stewart, it is a picture that will do better than good at the box office. . . Estimate: good women's picture."

+ N Y Exhibitor p37 F 25 '36

"Margaret Sullivan has been dealt a weakish, rambling narrative and a part that doesn't seem to be up her alley. Smothering the elfin quality that has helped lift the girl to prime attention is a thick cloak of ultra-sophistication, and the possibilities are that this off-key characterization will cause disappointment among a portion of her feminine following. . . [It] allows for little sympathy, either for the star or any other adult in the cast. . . Miss Sullivan endows her role with so many shifts of mood and character as to confuse the average fan."

— + Variety p12 F 5 '36

"'Next Time We Love' is the best Margaret Sullivan picture, and close to the best production Universal has ever turned out, for sheer dramatic merit. It has powerful emotional appeal in its delicately and poignantly told semi-tragic love story, and is a natural for women. . . One of the finest things about the picture is that it extracts highest entertainment values out of splendid love story without once descending to cheap note."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 28 '36

NIGHT AT THE OPERA. N 15 '35 96min MGM

Players: Groucho Marx. Chico Marx. Harpo Marx. Kitty Carlisle. Allan Jones

Director: Sam Wood

"A musical slapstick farce in which the Marx Bros. succeed in placing their musical proteges in a Metropolitan Opera performance." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Depends on taste; Y and C: Decidedly not the best."

Christian Century p207 Ja 29 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Mad clowning, clever dancing, pleasing vocal and instrumental music are entertaining features of this picture which will please the Marx Bros.' fans. Family and junior matinee."
 + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
 O 30 '35

"Very good for type. Family."

+ Jt Estimates N 1 '35

"Good for its type. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A good cast ably assists, the direction is good and there is some tuneful music. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 1 '35

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Marx Brothers mad; Y: Questionable in spots; many laugh-provoking situations; C: Not the best."

Par M p56 Mr '36

"The pleasant singing of lovely Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones, the unusual and amusing piano playing of Chico Marx and the harp number of Harpo Marx, are the highlights of this entertaining picture. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Wkly Guide O 16 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'A Night at the Opera' may not be the funniest Marx Bros. picture in the estimation of some critics, but it is a melange of crazy antics, smart dialogue and up-to-the-minute theme. . . It is quite natural that the funny Marx boys should burlesque, in their gorgeous travesty, this all absorbing subject [of opera.]"
 Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p38 F '36

"A boisterous, rowdy, and thoroughly delightful piece, 'A Night at the Opera' hits a swift pace from the opening and never slackens under the barrage of puns, songs, dancing, and insane antics that come tumbling on top of each other. Following the same general lines of their earlier hits, the Marx Brothers' new film is imbued with an undeniable freshness and enthusiasm that sweeps crazily, but none the less triumphantly, through the whole affair."
 Beverly Hills

+ Liberty p46 N 30 '35

"The chief appeal of the Marx Bros. is their total lack of inhibitions; in fact, a Marx show is a vicarious dry drunk for everybody; it makes a better person of you for half an hour; you'll walk crazy and cut capers on the way home, and your family will think you are going to turn out human after all." Don Herold
 Life p20 F '36

"It is absurd to be serious about the Marx Brothers, as I intend to be. But it would be more absurd to try being funny about them. At their best they are absolute, and this means that 'A Night at the Opera' is funny beyond the power of words to be funny. I think I have never seen an audience laugh so long and so hard. But it was not at words—not even at the words which George Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind had written for Groucho and Chico to say, and I do not forget that some of their puns were the best in years. It was at the three mad brothers themselves, Groucho and Chico and Harpo; at them and at the curious, cockeyed power with which they suddenly endowed all life. An energy was there at which one could do nothing but laugh." Mark Van Doren

+ + Nation p28 Ja 1 '36

"In a sense the film marks the highest point of the Marx Brothers' work. From the very beginning of their film career the thing that made their magnificent clowning memorable and kept it from descending to pure nonsense, however delightful, was the complete irreverence they expressed for the stiffshirt stooges of higher society. . . Unfortunately, the devastating devices of the brothers are placed at the service of the most insane juveniles of the current season, Miss Kitty Carlisle and Allan Jones, both presumably opera stars in the embryo where they had better stay. We can only hope that some day we may see these glorious satirists unimpeded by the supposed requirements of the film market."

 Robert Stebbins

New Theatre p23 Ja '36

"Here, at last, is really my kind of opera picture. . . If a W. C. Fields could be added, too, I think I could enjoy these dramatizations of the more rarified glories of song with proper completeness. It is pleasant to learn, by the way, that I have been right in my suspicion that what the baritones and tenors and sopranos have needed all this time has been to have the scenery dropped about them with the required frequency and for a few of them to be hauled into the wings and carefully trussed up by antic comedians. In a word or two, 'A Night at the Opera' seems to me just about as hilarious a photoplay as any screen comedy without W. C. Fields and Charlie Chaplin well could be. I would be enormously grateful to the eminent Marxes if only for the manner in which they sneaked a copy of 'Take Me Out to the Ball Game' into the orchestra's score for 'Il Trovatore.'" Richard Watts, Jr.

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p10 D 7 '35

"This is the picture which has been awaited with bated breath by rabid Marxists in New York, Shanghai, Hoboken and Deep Step, Ga. . . Anyhow, here they are—the Marx Brothers, as mad and merry and foolish as ever. . . The result is a perfectly wonderful time for those who subscribe to the Marxian philosophy of comedy. And that, as previously hinted, includes just about everybody." M. J.

+ + N Y Sun p10 D 7 '35

"Hereafter, when a musical film is threatening to put us to sleep, we shall have the courage to shout: 'Louder and funnier.' In 'A Night at the Opera' the boys take Verdi for their straight man, 'Il Trovatore' for their slapstick, and laughter for their muse. . . By slugging the tenor, kidnapping the impresario and slipping 'Take Me Out to the Ball Game' into the orchestral score, they have made the perfect opera picture. . . 'A Night at the Opera' is certainly the prize roughhouse comedy of the season. Verdi, whatever the music department may think of the heresy, is a swell straight man." Andre Sennwald

+ + N Y Times p7 D 15 '35

"George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind wrote 'A Night at the Opera.' . . It is their cockeyed notion that nothing would be funnier than to let the Marxes loose during a performance of 'Il Trovatore.' Just how right they are you will have to see for yourself, because this reporter cannot even begin to recount in cold print the loony goings-on that take place when Chico, Harpo and Groucho interrupt the gala opening of that opera. Sequence after sequence is filled with such explosive, rapid fire action and with such gleeful nonsense that when the picture is over your jaws ache from laughter." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p21 D 7 '35

"'Il Trovatore' is singled out for the honor of Marxist treatment, and never did I see that great classic rendered with quite such gusto, what with Harpo hither and yon from the orchestra to the top timbers of the building, and Groucho ever eloquent whether in parterre box or manager's office. It would have been a jolt to Verdi, anyhow. . . That Atlantic transit of theirs is another of the big moments of the film. . . The story moves so fast, though, that I don't think most people will sit back and brood over this and that turn of things. It may not be new or surprising, but it's quick and funny. Perhaps that's something." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p116 D 14 '35

"No comedians probably cause more argument than the Marx Brothers. . . Their appeal outside London is reported to be very small for the reason that the majority of people can't understand a word of what Groucho is saying and, if by any chance they do make any sense out of it, they are at a loss to know why he troubled to speak at all. . . . There is still a lot of superb drivell from Groucho, and Harpo's face and antics remain as vacant and full of disgusting glee as ever. Also, by way of compensation for loading them with a plot, both Chico and Harpo are allowed to play their instruments again; they have lost none of their skill." Mark Forrest

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

NIGHT AT THE OPERA—Continued

Sat R p309 Mr 7 '36

"The Marx Brothers spent two years of preparation for 'A Night at the Opera.' . . . [It] is said to rate as one of the best things these comedians have ever done for the screen."

+ Spring'd Republican p6c D 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p56 N 16 '35

"[This] probably will go down in history as the best the brothers have contributed to the screen."

+ + Film Curb p14 N 1 '35

"Family farce."

N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

"The punch of the Marx lads' latest, as with their previous pictures, is an ability to belt the customers with solid laughs on a high frequency basis for an hour and a half. That gags fall on top of each other makes no difference. The total score can't help but be uncommonly high. The comedy material is always good and sometimes brilliant. . . . There are two or three comedy situations which give cards and spades to most of the present day picture comedy written."

+ Variety p19 D 11 '35

NIGHT CARGO. (Release date not determined)
66min Peerless

Players: Jacqueline Wells. Lloyd Hughes.
Walter Miller

Director: Charles Hutchison

"Story has a romantic angle involving a native woman, with a murder side issue and other complicating developments, all of which are worked out for the usual overthrow of the villain and a happy fadeout for the lovers." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"This tropical melodrama cannot hope for anything much better than the smaller spots and the duals. It tells a familiar story with the usual native woman and for good measure a murder has been added."

— + Film Curb p15 Ja 11 '36

"Covering more or less familiar ground, this melodramatic yarn with a tropical setting makes moderately entertaining fare for the not too discriminating popular stands."

— + Film Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"The show has a title that might prove interesting but otherwise has little to make it stand out."

— + N Y Exhibitor p37 O 10 '35

NO MAN'S RANGE. O 18 '35 60min Supreme

Players: Bob Steele. Roberta Gale

Director: Robert N. Bradbury

"[A] Western about a cowboy who walks into a lot of trouble when he visits the stepfather he has never seen." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Entertaining Western. Family. Junior matinees." Nat Bd of R

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"A and Y: Western melodrama; C: Thrilling." Par M p56 Mr '36

"Family. Junior."

Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Well photographed, well paced with shooting, fights, [and] a slight romantic touch. Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p32 N 10 '35

NO MORE YESTERDAYS. See Lady of secrets

O

OLD CURIOSITY SHOP. D 21 '35 90min
British international

Players: Ben Webster. Elaine Benson. Hay Petrie. Beatrix Thomson. Polly Ward

Director: Thomas Bentley

Based on the novel of same title by Charles Dickens. "Nell, a plaintive child . . . endured most of the miseries Dickens delighted in describing. She didn't have the luck to meet his more comic characters. Hers was the fate of being pursued, for some seven reels, by that misshapen dwarf Quilp, a most odious creature, and not a very funny one. Worn out by fleeing through the English countryside with her doddering grandfather, the child finally dies of exposure and starvation. The old man, his mind quite undone by this last catastrophe, tries desperately to reawaken her cold little body as the story sadly ends." (N Y Sun)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: Authentically worthwhile; C: Sad."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A successful conveyance of sentiment and caricature that will be best liked by those familiar with the book."

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

"The picture is an interesting, humorous and melodramatic study of the Dickens story, set in the proper period and against authentic London and provincial English backgrounds. . . . No attempt has been made to modernize the story or divert it from the author's essential plan. And the result is a much finer portrait of the lives and times bound up in the novel than might otherwise have come through. The director shows skill and dexterity in his use of the grotesque, of contrast, and of effective light and shadow in his camera work. . . . For the picture-goer who enjoys an atmospheric study and perfection in performance 'The Old Curiosity Shop' is a holiday gift." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p9 D 24 '35

"This manages to be faithful, picturesque and dull all at the same time. . . . [It] is not a merry tale, as you may have gathered. It follows closely the novel, perhaps the most consistently sentimental of all Dickens's long novels. Nell, too good for this world, and her tiresome grandparent are somewhat trying in these realistic days of 1935. . . . [The film] in spite of its careful production, is apt to appeal

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

mostly to those who particularly admire the original, one of Dickens's less popular novels." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p15 D 23 '35

"It is said of 'The Old Curiosity Shop' that it conquered America for Dickens. Unhappily it is not possible to renew that graceful compliment for the British screen version. All the strange, wonderful people of the book are here, drawn as only Englishmen can know how to draw them, breathed to life with an affectionate literalness that will be ecstasy for the true Dickensian. . . Unless you know and love the novel well enough to accept the film as a series of animated illustrations, it is likely to impress you as a bad and rather pointless burlesque. For the script is muddy, the motivations obscure and the narrative an aimless and grotesque sort of business. . . Like most British films which are less than first-rate, this one is technically deficient, notably in the recording. The speech of English players on the screen, especially when there are Cockneys among them, is difficult enough to understand, but it becomes impossible when it is not perfectly recorded." Andre Sennwald

— N Y Times p15 D 23 '35

"Of course, sophisticates will probably snarl contemptuously at the sentiment and obvious plot mechanisms of the story, but those who still feel the charm of this great author's writings will find it entirely to their satisfaction." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p11 D 23 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"English-made pictures on occasion can be very good or very bad. 'The Old Curiosity Shop' based on a Charles Dickens work, is about as bad as they come. It will do nothing to enhance audience appreciation of Dickens on the screen. . . A foreword seeks to subtly alibi the manner in which the character of Quilp is developed and played. It is done, as the foreword points out, by a well-known Shakespearean actor, Hay Petrie. The way Petrie does Quilp or has been directed to do it makes it dubious as to whether the character is being played seriously or for comedy. Either way, it's bad. Petrie hops around like some strange animal with queer ideas of how to be a heavy. Sometimes it's pathetically funny."

— Variety p15 D 25 '35

OLD SPANISH CUSTOM. (Release date not determined) 60min Hoffberg

Players: Buster Keaton, Esme Percy, Lupita Tovar

Director: Adrian Brunel

This film was made in England. "Keaton is a wealthy American yachtsman who is promptly spotted by the natives as an American when he lands at a little Spanish town all dressed up as a bullfighter. The natives all palm off their wares on him. Keaton becomes the third man in a tangle for the favors of a dancer." (Film Daily)

Trade Paper Reviews

"Buster Keaton's frozen-face type of comedy provides some laughs, making this independent feature okay when coupled with a drama on double bills. . . Keaton is still popular with the children who will find plenty of enjoyment in the many chases and other slapstick stunts. Family."

+ — Box Office p27 F 15 '36

"About the best this one can hope for is the smaller houses and for the duals. It has several songs but the story is worn with age and the efforts to create comedy situations are not very successful."

— + Film Curb p8 Ja 25 '36

"Despite poor performances by the principal players, with the exception of Buster Keaton, and a creaky story, this British production provides some laughs and is okay for the popular houses."

— + Film Daily p8 Ja 17 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods; twin bills." N Y Exhibitor p31 F 10 '36

(*) ON ICE. N 6 '35 10min United artists

Director: Walt Disney

"[An] adventure on the ice, with Minnie learning to skate and Mickey as her instructor." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A highly amusing skating adventure. Family. Junior matinee."

+ Wkly Guide O 12 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Daily p14 O 31 '35

"Excellent."

+ N Y Exhibitor p27 N 10 '35

$1000 A MINUTE. N 7 '35 72min Republic

Players: Roger Pryor, Leila Hyams

Director: Aubrey H. Scott

Based on a story of same title by Everett Freeman printed in The Saturday Evening Post. A "continuously hilarious comedy about a penniless newspaper reporter who finds that his agreement with two millionaires to spend a large amount of their money in twelve hours is much more difficult than it sounds." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Mediocre; Y: Better not; C: No."

Christian Century p159 Ja 22 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Not constructive. Adults." DAR

"Some amusing incidents occur in the frantic efforts of the young man to dispose of his wealth but there is a doubtful value in a farce comedy of this sort, for the throwing away of money is never an edifying spectacle. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family; 12 years up." Nat Bd of R

— Fox W Coast Bul N 23 '35

"A and Y: Entertaining; C: Possible."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide N 2 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A passable melodramatic farce of its meaningless sort."

— + Christian Science Monitor p13 N 13 '35

"It may be enough to say here that, in its modest way, the film proves to be passable minor entertainment of the take-it-or-leave-it-alone variety. Its hero and heroine, Roger Pryor and Miss Leila Hyams, are not exactly stunning in their work, but many of the farcical humors of the tale have been efficiently devised and the work wisely adheres to a lively and vigorous pace." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p8 D 21 '35

$1000 A MINUTE—Continued

"The film is highly fortunate in its minor comedians and it is to them rather than to the principals that '$1,000 a Minute' owes its effectiveness." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p11 D 21 '35

Reviewed by Louise Mace

Springf'd Republican p2 Ja 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p33 N 30 '35

"[The] story moves along at a fast pace and comedy and dramatic situations are especially well graded. A picture that will appeal to all classes and one that has been given a class A production."

+ Film Curb p16 N 1 '35

"[The picture has] an interesting none-too-obvious plot that is different from the usual thing."

+ Film Daily p8 O 22 '35

"The direction never allows the action to slacken its pace one bit once the story starts moving, and every ounce of humor is drained from every scene."

+ Motion Pict Herald p61 N 9 '35

"An ace comedy that will have no trouble at all making customers shout its praises. Family comedy."

+ N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

Variety p15 D 25 '35

ONE-WAY TICKET. N 25 '35 66min Columbia

Players: Lloyd Nolan. Peggy Conklin. Walter Connolly

Director: Herbert Biberman

From novel of same title by Ethel Turner. "Prison officer's daughter marries a convict whom she has helped to escape. They are caught and pay the penalty, but look forward to a happy future." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Perhaps; Y: Doubtful; C: No."

Christian Century p62 Ja 8 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

Mo Film Bul p199 D '35

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Trifling; Y: Confused ethics; C: No."

Par M p56 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide D 7 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

"Not for children."

Life p30 Mr '36

"The picture is fair routine entertainment. . . There is a certain amount of colorful incident which gives it a human quality, a dexterity in the telling which gives it pace and suspense, and a performance which is animated and professional." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p9 D 31 '35

"'One Way Ticket' is a soft-hearted piece, sometimes a little soft-minded too. Its attitude is sentimental, and its leading characters are two of the most unintelligent young people that the screen has presented recently. That old reliable, Walter Connolly, keeps it out of the silly class."

+ — N Y Sun p11 D 30 '35

"It is difficult to write with any degree of persuasiveness about the film, because even the most delicate references to its plot are likely to stiffen your sales resistance. Yet 'One-Way Ticket' possesses a really skillful physical production, has freshness and individual style, and emerges as a considerably more likable photoplay than you might suspect from a brief digest of its story." Andre Sennwald

+ — N Y Times p35 Ja 1 '36

"Against much that is irredeemably childish some scenes stand out for effect and so the general result is lively and moderately satisfying. The acting possesses the great virtue of sincerity. Lovely and talented Peggy Conklin is excellent as Ronnie and there are fine performances by Lloyd Nolan and Walter Connolly, as the convict and the captain of the prison guards, respectively." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p11 D 30 '35

Reviewed by Louise Mace

Springf'd Republican p21 Ja 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p29 D 7 '35

Film Curb p4 N 15 '35

"Fair prison drama handicapped by implausible story although cast does good work."

+ — Film Daily p6 D 31 '35

"Departing radically from formula in theme and locale, this improbable dramatic romance is unique in its conception of screen entertainment. The initial action is set in a penitentiary."

— Motion Pict Daily p13 N 1 '35

"Family drama."

N Y Exhibitor p36 N 25 '35

"It possesses a good deal of action and where patronage is not critical the plot may seem different. However, it is the plot that makes the picture a weak sister. It is 'different' at the cost of credulity."

— Variety p12 Ja 8 '36

OREGON TRAIL. Ja 6 '36 58min Republic

Players: John Wayne. Ann Rutherford

Director: Scott Pembroke

A Western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Educational value should have appeal for youngsters, while the older folks will enjoy it as an opportunity to revive their younger days."

+ Box Office p29 Ja 25 '36

"Not up to the usual standard of Wayne Westerns."

+ — Film Curb p14 Ja 18 '36

"An outdoor action adventure picture, tinged with a light romance and told against pioneer history background, this satisfies as average entertainment. . . The picture makes good use of exceptional location shots."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"Here's a good example of stupid production as practiced by independent producers. There's no reason for the haphazard production methods displayed in this picture. . . 'Oregon Trail' has everything necessary to make excellent Western fare. Properly handled it would have been an outstanding picture for this type market. . . Some of the glaring faults, and indicative of the independents' habit of cheating, is a battle scene where three spectacular shots of men falling off cliffs and a number of other stunts are repeated twice. So apparent were these repetitions that the audience laughed."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 6 '36

O'SHAUGHNESSY'S BOY. S 27 '35 88min
MGM

Players: Wallace Beery. Jackie Cooper. Sara Haden

Director: Richard Boleslawski

"This human dramatic picture with its circus background, co-starring Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, as father and son, tells the story of O'Shaughnessy, the animal trainer who casts aside his career to search for his beloved little son, taken from him by his wife, and of his rehabilitation when he finally recovers the child and wins his love." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fine of kind; Y: Very good; C: If not too strong."

Christian Century O 8 '35

"The direction is expert and forceful, the handling of the circus scenes, especially the training of wild animals, most thrilling and spectacular. The entire cast gives very fine characterizations. . . This picture will have great audience appeal. Family; tense for young children."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 18 '35

Mo Film Bul p148 D '35

"The tumult, noise and ferocity of wild beasts make this too exciting for small children, but suitable for the family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A and Y: Good circus drama; Thrilling, but tense."

Par M p56 Mr '36

"Excellent acting and glamorous glimpses of circus life. Family."

+ Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"So long as it stays in the circus, [it] is a first-rate mingling of sentiment and melodrama. But when it begins to devote its attention to a lengthy examination of frustrated paternal affection it is far too tearful for comfort." E. F. Melvin

+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 19 '35

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

Liberty N 9 '35

"Gallons of tears in a mildly effective circus story that follows the formula of 'The Champ.'" Andre Sennwald

+ — N Y Times p5 O 13 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c N 24 '35

"O'Shaughnessy's Boy" is a wholesale and heartless orgy of tears. It is not our duty to recommend a picture of this kind. We resent, mentally and emotionally, such straining at our heart-strings."

— Stage p10 N '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p57 N 16 '35

Film Curb p16 O 1 '35

"Family drama."

N Y Exhibitor p35 O 10 '35

OUTLAW DEPUTY. D 3 '35 53min Puritan

Players: Tim McCoy. Nora Lane. Bud Osborn. George Offerman, Jr.

Director: Otto Brower

Western melodrama based on the short story, King of Cactusville, by Johnston McCulley.

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one will hold its own with the run of the mill Westerns, supplying an ample quota of the approved action stuff."

+ — Film Daily p8 D 3 '35

"Adults should be pleased with this one. [There are] no strained situations or awkward acting. Everything runs smoothly. Even the desperados decorating the scenery fit. . . [The] scenic shots are particularly fine. [The] playing of entire cast and direction merit commendation."

+ Variety p21 D 4 '35

P

PACE THAT KILLS. Ja 4 '36 64min Willis Kent

Players: Lois January. Noel Madison. Sheila Mannors

Directors: William O'Connor

"The story revolves around a couple of [youngsters], a brother and a sister, fresh from the country, who inadvertently get in with a gang which takes them to the big city where they become addicted to drugs. From here on the [story] runs the gamut, with Chinese joints, cocaine and opium addicts, and other underworld activities forming the background of the plot which ultimately stretches its tentacles into society." Motion Pict Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picture will undoubtedly do its best at the down-town houses where they cater to those who like the lurid. . . [It has] no outstanding names and will have to depend on its appeal to the sensation lover."

Film Curb p15 Ja 4 '36

"The film shows one of the most gruesome sides of debased existence and is likely to keep customers away with the exception of those spots where sensational exploitation will drag in a certain clientele as has been done before."

— — Motion Pict Daily p7 D 27 '35

"The way of the transgressor is hard. One way to make it harder would be to make him sit through this picture. At that he will be one of the few who'll see it for fans will stay away from it in millions. . . Acting, direction, photography and sound are all new lows."

— — Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 19 '35

PADDY O'DAY. Ja 17 '36 73min 20th century-Fox

Players: Jane Withers. Pinky Tomlin. Rita Consino. Jane Darwell

Director: Lewis Seiler

"Paddy O'Day, a little Irish immigrant girl, escapes from Ellis Island in a milk can and persuades a shy and eccentric young ornithologist to hide her until a kind Russian family gives her a home. Her charm wins her many friends and the influence of her personality brings them love and good fortune." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

PADDY O'DAY—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"A good story, well staged and directed. A: very good; 8-18: excellent; family and junior matinees." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Sentimental comedy. Family." DAR

"Another personal triumph for little Jane Withers. Good. Family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Fine entertainment, cast of exceptional merit, with delightful humor cleverly mingled with pathos. Splendid. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Good, wholesome and entertaining for the family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Jane Withers charmingly displays her varied talents for singing, dancing and acting, but is particularly charming when she forgets to use an Irish brogue. 8-16: excellent." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"This smoothly directed picture, replete with humor and pathos, has much to offer in the talent of little Jane Withers; the pleasing work of a well chosen cast; clever singing and dancing; and will delight all audiences. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 4 '35

"Excellent for the family and junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 1 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Entertaining; Y and C: Excellent." Par M p56 Mr '36

"Sympathetically told with a tear and a laugh, the film will appeal strongly to family audiences."

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"A delightful comedy which should win more fans for little Jane Withers and thoroughly entertain the entire family."

+ Box Office p27 N 23 '35

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 D 21 '35

Film Curb p17 N 1 '35

"Ace entertainment for all classes in story with plenty of laughs plus human interest and romance. A grand piece of comedy entertainment that should please all types of audiences."

+ Film Daily p6 O 29 '35

"Very good family fare. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 11 '36

Motion Pict Daily p9 O 28 '35

"Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p37 N 25 '35

PASSING OF THE THIRD FLOOR BACK. D 15 '35 86min Gaumont British

Players: Conrad Veidt. Renee Ray

Director: Berthold Viertel

Adapted from the play of same title by Jerome K. Jerome. "A Christ-like Stranger whose fine ability to understand the problems of those about him sets at rest the petty antagonisms, evil purposes, false illusions obtaining among the inhabitants in a London 'fashionable boarding house.'" (N Y Exhibitor)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Symbolic drama; C: Mature, but good."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Wkly Guide D 28 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The pious note has been toned down, the milk of human kindness in the original play has been agreeably watered, and the types in the small London 'private hotel' are observed with malicious realism." Graham Greene

+ — Spec p718 N 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Restricted to adults of the reflecting type, appreciating author's more subtle references and meanings, adults who can and will look further than superficial narrative."

+ N Y Exhibitor p29 N 10 '35

PASTEUR. Ja 30 '36 63min Lenauer

Players: Sacha Guitry. Jean Perier. Jose Squinquel. Francois Rodon

Director: Sacha Guitry

This film was made in France and has English sub-titles. "Beginning at the time of the Franco-Prussian War, when the fame of Pasteur was not yet firmly established, the action covers a period of slightly more than a score of years, ending with the remarkable worldwide celebration of Pasteur's seventieth birthday on December 27, 1892. The high spot of the picture is the first inoculation of a human being, a nine-year-old Alsatian boy, Joseph Meister, against rabies in 1885." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"From the point of view of performance, it is an excellent show; but in direction and story it is not so good. For most of the time it appears to be simply an animated photograph of M. Guitry speaking French. How then is the performance so satisfactory? Because the gentleman, it goes without saying, knows how to act even in a static state; his makeup certainly resembles that of the great scientist, and his lofty, dignified behavior is impressive. But a moving-picture needs to move, and of this, apparently, M. Guitry and his associates never thought; and it needs, even, ever so slightly, a plot." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p11 Ja 31 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"An actor should make up his mind just what he wants to do most—star, write or direct. He might be able to combine two of them successfully. Only Charlie Chaplin gets away with all three; and he hasn't always kept up to his early standards. Sacha Guitry, before starting 'Pasteur,' should have called in a competent director, some one to warn him tactfully that even the finest French diction and fervor couldn't make those long monologues interesting. . . M. Guitry's admiration of Louis Pasteur is apparent. So is his inability to write a movie scenario. He loses even the terrific drama of that first treatment for hydrophobia."

— N Y Sun p27 Ja 30 '36

"Viewed from the narrow standpoint of cinema entertainment, the picture lacks drama. Nevertheless, this Paris importation is well worth seeing. There are a few well-placed titles in English to help persons ignorant of French." H. T. S.

+ — N Y Times p14 Ja 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The film lacks strength in dramatic and production values."

+ — Film Daily p5 Ja 31 '36

"The characterization of Pasteur is ably portrayed by Sacha Guitry, with a good supporting cast, but since the film is almost wholly composed of lengthy speeches by Pasteur and comparatively little action or dramatic movement, other than that inherent in the man's fight for recognition, it is likely that only those with a knowledge of French will find the picture especially appealing. There are, however, sufficient English subtitle translations to make for ready understanding of the story, and the film is interesting."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p2 Ja 30 '36

"While supplied with English titles which enable one to understand the action, real enjoyment will come only to the French-speaking, for often, delicate nuances of gesture and speech constitute the real entertainment. . . Estimate: restricted."

N Y Exhibitor p59 Mr 10 '36

"It's tiresome and loquacious. Guitry emerges as a good actor but a poor director and writer. It's the first film he ever made. He is in the camera's eyes at all times and mostly talking rather than having anything take place. Guitry at least saw to it that his opportunities to perform in the major portion of the footage were not curbed. In fact, he forgot everything else."

— Variety p31 F 12 '36

PAY-OFF. N 9 '35 64min Warner

Players: James Dunn, Claire Dodd, Patricia Ellis

Director: Robert Florey

"A newspaper story in which the inherent decency of a 'Sports' reporter finally redeems him from the sordid dealings into which his love for a vain, shallow selfish wife had forced him." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Hardly; Y: No; C: No."

Christian Century p1606 D 11 '35

"Human and appealing. Mature." DAR

"A swiftly moving story, well acted and certainly plausible in the telling. A family film which will hardly appeal to young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Entertaining and fast moving. The handling of the crime situation points to a good moral. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 13 '35

"The production is ably portrayed by a well-selected cast, the direction is fast moving and understanding and the photography very good. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 3 '35

Mo Film Bul p175 N '35

"Good consistent characterization. Mature."

+ Nat Bd of R M N '35

"An able cast and fast moving direction with a bit of a glimpse into sports reporting. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p8 O 30 '35

"'The Pay-off' is one of the decidedly lesser works from the studios of the Warner Brothers." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p15 N 13 '35

Reviewed by Andre Sennwald
N Y Times p25 N 13 '35

"A decided disappointment." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p25 N 12 '35

Springf'd Republican p6 N 21 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p54 N 16 '35

Film Curb p10 O 1 '35

"Highly satisfying entertainment for the regular run of fans."

+ Film Daily p7 N 12 '35

"It is not a pretentious picture by any means, but it is one that does afford entertainment to audiences not too discriminating."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p63 N 30 '35

"Family action drama. . . Good program [picture.]"

+ N Y Exhibitor p35 O 10 '35

PEASANTS. Ag 28 '35 105min Lenfilm

Players: E. Younger, B. Poslavsky, A. Petrov

Director: F. Ermiler

In Russian with English subtitles. The setting is a collective pig farm in Soviet Russia. "The story is the tragedy of a man whose character and traditions made him impossible to assimilate into the new social order, the son of a rich farmer in whom the ideas and feelings of his family and class persisted so strongly that he could not fit into the co-operative scheme of things." (Nat Bd of R M)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Christian Century p1326 O 16 '35

"Rich, earthy background, peopled with rather bewildered children of the soil, and pictured with warm humor and understanding." J. S. H.

+ Nat Bd of R M N '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p8 O 16 '35

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

"Full of vitality, humor, and poignancy, and engages one's emotional interest by that sort

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PEASANTS—Continued

of full-bodied characterization one finds in the best of the Russian novels." Robert Giroux
+ Nation p392 O 2 '35

"The picture is simple, unaffected and full of natural juices, flavors, smells. . . The makers of a film like this manage to pervade the whole, finally, with one dominant characteristic—the compassion and tolerance and fierce love, the absolute tenderness they have for these people. . . In terms of the humanities there is something here, a tendency and broad feeling, that will surely be released some day into a work second to nothing whatever." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub p159 S 18 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"One of the better Russian importations in many months, this is good picture making, considering the technical end. That it contains propaganda can't be doubted. . . Technically, it is a triumph."

+ N Y Exhibitor p38 O 10 '35

PEG OF OLD DRURY. S 28 '35 75min British & Dominions

Players: Anna Neagle. Sir Cedric Hardwicke. Jack Hawkins

Director: Herbert Wilcox

Made in England. "A rough country girl, with thick Irish accent follows her worthless lover to London, tricks the manager into letting her walk on at Drury Lane theater, attracts the attention of the great Garrick, and soon has all London at her feet. She dances, sings, acts Shakespeare, fights a duel, is loving, saucy, angry and pathetic, and finally dies at the conclusion of a performance of 'As You Like It.'" (Springf'd Republican)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Herbert Wilcox, film director, has learned the obvious lesson of 'One Night of Love,' and in 'Peg of Old Drury' he has done for Shakespeare what Miss Grace Moore's picture did for opera. . . The settings are invariably pleasing and gay. [The film] is one of the best things that has ever come out of a British studio." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 S 21 '35

"The film is as slick and swift-moving as a Hollywood revue, and has music and dance and song. It wears its period dress lightly and to the manner born and never for one moment becomes dull or heavy." Joan Littlefield

+ Springf'd Republican p5c S 22 '35

PERFECT GENTLEMAN. N 22 '35 70min MGM

Players: Frank Morgan. Cicely Courtneidge. Heather Angel

Director: Tim Whelan

Based on a play of same title by Edward Childs Carpenter, which in turn was based upon a short story, The Prodigal Father, by Cosmo Hamilton. "The story is of the manner in which Morgan, ne'er-do-well and ever bragging father of a young, ambitious English country vicar, after causing much mental stress for his son sacrifices his own happiness for the boy, and of course wins out in the end." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A light comedy marred by a vulgar rumba. Good."

+ — Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Good photography, accurate settings, clever dialogue with finished diction, and a pleasing musical score. Adults and 8-18: good." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Audience liked the low-brow comedy. Mediocre. Adults." DAR

"Clever dialogue and excellent acting. Family." Nat Bd of R

"Clean humor and an entertaining story. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"A dull little comedy done in the English manner. Fair. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A genial comedy, nicely produced with a pleasant atmosphere of genuineness and sweetness. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"While not an outstanding picture, it is highly amusing, and the portrayal of much kindness and thoughtfulness, creates a wholesome atmosphere. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"This is strictly English comedy of the kind which delights the hearts of music hall audiences and is very good in its way. . . Adolescents: good; children: possible." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 7 '35

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 25 '35

Mo Film Bul p196 D '35

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Amusing; C: No interest."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"A light and highly amusing story. . . Clever dialogue and excellent acting on the part of Frank Morgan. Family."

+ Wkly Guide N 23 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '35

"If you have seen Cicely Courtneidge ploughing her way through heavy-footed English farces and broad comedies, you will be amazed at her improvement in her first Hollywood production. Of course it is Frank Morgan's superb clowning that puts the thing across, but [she] does a nice job too." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p38 F '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 21 '35

"While on the subject of the military we ought to mention a dainty bit of poison-pie, 'The Perfect Gentleman,' which M-G-M has concocted. It reminds us that no nation has a monopoly on jingoism. . . [It is] a flaccid melange of ancient gags [which] offers us the thousand times over-familiar Mr. Frank Morgan." Robert Stebbins

— — New Theatre p23 Ja '36

"Much to every one's surprise, [this] unheralded new picture which was hardly awaited amid ecstasies of anticipation, turns out to be an engaging and modestly heart-warming little screen comedy. . . The new work manages to be a surprisingly entertaining photoplay, despite its flimsiness of story and its occasional lapses into shambling sentimentality." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p18 D 19 '35

"[This is] a little hands-across-the-sea picture that must have been intended for English audiences rather than American. . . 'The Perfect Gentleman' will probably be popular abroad. It has that broad, obvious humor so much appreciated by music-hall audiences in London, and so flatly received here. Always on the verge of slapstick, sometimes it tumbles over the edge. It is not very funny even then." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p33 D 19 '35

"The Perfect Gentleman' is not a bad picture, it simply isn't a very good one. . . The film has a mealy, somehow undigested look; the narrative seems blurred as though from inept cutting, and its forays into sentiment are beeryly unconvincing." Andre Sennwald

— + N Y Times p33 D 19 '35

"[The] film is fair and has some pretty good moments in it. . . As a sort of modern Baron Munchausen, whose stories of his exploits as a major in the British army and a member of the Foreign Office are indeed whoppers, Mr. Morgan is a constant delight. His performance in this film, which is hardly worthy of his talents, definitely stamps him as one of the truly cleverest comedians now appearing on the screen. No less satisfactory, and also wasted on a mediocre part, Cicely Courtneidge, a talented comedienne of the British stage and screen, who makes her debut in an American film. . . Along with Mr. Morgan she manages to keep 'The Perfect Gentleman' nearly always interesting and sometimes hilariously funny." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p35 D 19 '35

"I warn you not to keep away from 'The Perfect Gentleman' just because of its title. You will find [it] very pleasant and easy-going." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p57 D 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p33 N 23 '35

"Although this is an English story it has that sterling actor, Frank Morgan, in the title role and a role that is most suited to him. He takes full advantage of it and registers a very fine performance. . . Perhaps because of the English locale and accents the general run of fans may not like it so much but it is good entertainment nevertheless."

+ — Film Curb p8 Ja 4 '36

"This production appears to have been designed primarily to suit the tastes of British audiences. . . Class and adult audiences over here will find it quite amusing, but for the general run of movie fans the picture's appeal may suffer somewhat."

+ — Film Daily p4 D 19 '35

"The able performances of Frank Morgan and Cicely Courtneidge are the outstanding features of this picture. Miss Courtneidge, one of the best known musical comedy stars in England, is not well known to American screen audiences, but her performance in this film should be worth selling."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 N 26 '35

Motion Pict Herald p65 D 28 '35

N Y Exhibitor p38 D 25 '35

"Miss Courtneidge is given every opportunity with an admirable supporting cast and a well written, if somewhat thin, story. However, film is too thoroughly British in situation and color to command more than average patronage over here, but this should be surefire at British box-offices. . . Doubtful if Morgan's assignment is sufficiently well known over here to get full valuation. It seems a bit overdrawn, where on the other side the type is well known, and it will be realized that he has done an almost perfect job. He doesn't seem to be acting. He is the sleek, well connected but impoverished cadger, and it is to be questioned whether he has ever done better work. Miss Courtneidge is brilliant. She is poised, quick to sense her comedy values and make the most of them, and in her few serious moments she does not founder."

+ Variety p15 D 25 '35

PERSONAL MAID'S SECRET. O 28 '35 53min Warner

Players: Warren Hull, Margaret Lindsay, Ruth Donnelly, Anita Louise

Director: Arthur G. Collins

Based on the short story, Living Up to Lizzie, by Lillian Day. "[A] maid's efficient aid is responsible for raising a struggling young couple to a position of social prominence in addition to saving her own daughter from scandal." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A most entertaining picture."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p149 D '35

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Refreshing comedy. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A and Y: Amusing; C: Little interest."

Par M p56 Mr '36

"A gay little story with a serious note at the end. . . Attractively staged and delicately photographed, the picture offers many laughs and introduces a lovable little boy actor. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

"Amusing human comedy. . . Nice characters and altogether pleasant. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p8 O 16 '35

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

"'Personal Maid's Secret' [is] a modest little screen treatise which combines a success story motif with a mother-love theme. . . [It] is another one of those peculiarly irritating little films which have some pretty good and some pretty awful stuff in them and which might, if someone had taken the trouble, been converted from a botch into a tolerable hour's entertainment." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p25 D 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

Film Curb p12 O 15 '35

"Here is a production which, while not pretentious by any means, appears to have the ingredients of a pleasing surprise for exhibitors, exceeding expectations of showmen and producers. It contains excellent material for exploitation."

+ Motion Pict Herald p53 D 21 '35

N Y Exhibitor p36 O 10 '35

"Miss Donnelly walks away with 'Personal Maid's Secret,' although three others co-featured do handsomely in their respective assignments. . . [She] brings to this character a warmth and realism that easily tops the excellent efforts of the others."

— + Variety p19 D 11 '35

PETER IBBETSON. N 8 '35 88min Paramount

Players: Gary Cooper, Ann Harding, John Halliday

Director: Henry Hathaway

Adapted from the novel by George du Maurier and from the play by John N. Raphael. It is "the tale of childhood playmates, long separated, who find each other too late. Mary is married to the jealous Duke of Towers. Peter, to avoid his murdering Mary, kills the Duke. He escapes from the grim Dartmoor Prison in his dreams each night, joining his Mary in a strange fantastic world of their own. . . Even death, when it comes to them in old age, cannot separate them long." (N Y Sun)

PETER IBBETSON—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Young people as well as adults will be captured by the charm of this film. The philosophy, however, of the later scenes is rather too mature for children. Excellent."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"The picture drags but the photography is excellent. Family audience; 12 years up." Nat Bd of R

"The delicate spiritual phantasy of Du Maurier filmed with beauty, with distinguished acting, with fine significance. . . The beauty of picturization has never been excelled. The dramatization is of rare distinction. Adults. Not understandable by children." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"Beautiful photography, magnificent settings, deft and understanding direction, excellent work by fine cast, with the characterizations of Ann Harding and Gary Cooper notably outstanding. An exquisite production. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 12 '35

"The direction is masterly, making the spiritual life of the two tortured souls seem almost believable. The photography is outstanding, the supporting cast most capable. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates N 15 '35
Mo Film Bul p199 D '35

"Very good. Adults & young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A rare treat for those who enjoy the beautiful and fine. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"The picture drags but the photography is excellent. Family."

+ Wkly Guide N 9 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The meeting of the lovers in their dream-world is done with a disarming honesty that is not so much dependent on trick photography as on the spirit in which they are treated. It is delicate stuff to handle, but Mr. Hathaway and his players manage it without a slip." E. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 23 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

"Eventually, the film goes completely mystic and haywire. As for me, Peter Ibbetson becomes just a lot of Peter Rabbit. Both Mr. Cooper and Miss Harding are better than usual. Miss Harding is kept within reasonable bounds by intelligent direction, and Mr. Cooper photographs well, as usual, but I still feel that he injects iron rods into any characterization that he attempts." Don Herold

+ Life p20 Ja '36

"A tasteful and handsomely photographed screen version . . . captures something of the graceful, nostalgic charm which some of us ancient sentimentalists recall as belonging to the celebrated Barrymore brothers' stage production of an earlier decade. . . Here is the escapist drama in its most thoroughgoing mood, but my fear is that its flight from reality and its profound conviction about the soul-satisfaction of a dream romance make it just a trifle too precious for this embattled age." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p15 N 8 '35

"The literary staff has done a competent if not an inspired job. . . Ernst Toch's musical background score is decidedly helpful in building up the picture's atmosphere, one that tries at least for the cheerful tears of 'Smilin' Through.' It doesn't quite succeed." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p32 N 8 '35

"Carefully avoiding the temptation to bathe the screen in misty photography and heavily remind his audiences that this is a spirit world, [the director] abandons conventional screen devices and boldly insists on the reality of the dreams. This is a shrewd modern touch and it goes far to make duMaurier's celebrated love story dramatically effective." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p18 N 8 '35

"Although it is emotional in the extreme, this version of 'Peter Ibbetson' is almost entirely devoid of those histrionic pyrotechnics that are ordinarily associated with emotional drama." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 N 8 '35

"The picture is sure of itself only in the early factual moments, and otherwise rather sterile." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p100 N 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p34 N 23 '35

Film Curb p20 D 15 '35

"The picture is hardly entertainment for the masses, and though an artistic success it is dull and slow."

+ Film Daily p14 O 31 '35

Motion Pict Daily p2 O 26 '35

"Courageously departing from formula, eschewing anything that condescends to theatrical artificiality in order to bring it within the realm of so-called popular screen material, it depends solely upon its story worth and accomplished acting performances by the two leading players and the featured support, in bidding for public favor."

+ Motion Pict Herald p60 N 9 '35

N Y Exhibitor p37 N 25 '35

PETRIFIED FOREST. F 8 '36 72min Warner

Players: Leslie Howard. Bette Davis.
Humphrey Bogart

Director: Archie L. Mayo

Based on the play of the same title by Robert Emmet Sherwood. A poetic frustrated writer in search of some meaning to life and a hunted outlaw killer sensing his doom are brought together for one dramatic hour in a little Arizona gas station-restaurant with an assortment of other people and wait under tense emotional strain for the posse to close in. A strange moving love grows within the hour between the wanderer and the girl at the gas station who, deserted by her French war bride mother, yearns to be an artist. To make this dream possible, the wayfarer makes over his life insurance policy to her and then taunts the outlaw into killing him before the posse arrives.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A beautiful, satisfying film so far as its production and acting go and everything else for which the production can be held responsible. . . Disguised as romance and 'broidered with such cleverly turned phrases as Robert Sherwood knows so well how to write—the result was a beautiful stage play and now is a beautiful and intriguing moving picture. But then, Leslie Howard, playing the part of a tax collector would be winning and altogether lovely."

+ Bks & Films F '36

"Warners deserve great praise for not cheapening the spirituality of this fine, thought-provoking, engrossing play. Mature. Excellent." DAR

"Leslie Howard and Bette Davis give unforgettable performances, while the lighting effects and stage sets are most unusual, the direction masterly and the photography remarkably fine. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"This picture will intrigue students of psychology, but will hold little interest for those seeking light entertainment. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Audiences over 14 years." Nat Soc of New England Women

++ Fox W Coast Bul F 1 '36

"Because of the limitations of its settings and because it is almost entirely dialogue, it may be criticized as not being ideal screen material. But this fact makes it a more startling achievement. . . The philosophy of the plot and the sophistication of the theme will hold no interest or understanding for any but the intellectually mature. The ending fortunately has not been softened in deference to what is supposed to be the preference of movie audiences. Adolescents, 12-16; no; children, 8-12; no."

+ Motion Pict R Ja '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Absorbing character drama; Y: Mature; C: No."

Par M p56 Mr '36

"Excellent. Mature."

++ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"The picture is exciting, often humorous, with more substance to it than most movies. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide Ja 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"That the producers confined themselves to the scenic restrictions of the stage play may have been sensible, but a more active imagination might have contributed welcome and pertinent embellishment. Finally, the small amount of 'telescoping' may have been necessary, but it deprives the screen play of adequate justification for the hero's complete infatuation for the desert maid who read Francois Villon, and his complete capitulation to a self-ordained destiny which smacks more of unmitigated bravado than it should. . . Bette Davis had an even more difficult job than she did opposite Mr. Howard in their last joint screen appearance. She fails to rise to the more exacting demands." R. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 F 8 '36

"Only superlative acting could lift the play, which has all the stuff of melodrama, into a clear and moving interpretation of the re-birth of a frustrated soul. But so admirable is the casting that 'The Petrified Forest' stands out in the ruck of average movie stories as a notable achievement." Laura Elston

++ Canadian M p40 Mr '36

"Hollywood admirably pursued the extraordinary limitations of setting in the tense atmosphere of the desert's Petrified Forest and gas station-restaurant locale, capturing in full the requirements that are necessary for a concentration of attention on the fine sensitivities of Robert Sherwood's haunting theme." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p414 F 7 '36

"'Petrified Forest,' more than any other picture I have seen, demonstrates that the screen is a more powerful medium for the presentation of a stage play than is the stage itself. . . Thanks to the League of Decency, it is free from the bawdiness that distracts the attention of the theatre audience from the theme of the drama. For the rowdiness in the play, Kenyon substitutes beauty in thought and expression to give the film version wider appeal than the play could attain. . . Howard, Bette Davis and Humphrey Bogart give magnificent performances. No lines ever were spoken on stage or screen more beautifully than Howard speaks those which expound his philosophy of life. And for Bette Davis it is another triumphant step in the march which seems to be leading to her ultimate recognition as the greatest actress on the screen."

++ Hollywood Spec p9 Ja 18 '36

"Though the film is too sleekly articulate, and Leslie Howard as the vagabond novelist is a bit too thick with the intellectual whimsey, 'The Petrified Forest' builds surely and effectively to a highly engrossing climax. . . The emotional peak is reached when Howard asks the gangster to kill him so that Miss Davis will get the insurance. That this neatly fatal tour de force has occasional beauty and pungency cannot be denied. And if its protagonist is too suave, too easy in expounding his lethal points, he has at least, we feel, erred on the provocative side."

+ Liberty p31 F 22 '36

"I, for one, do not find Mr. Howard's subtle simplicities engaging. Humphrey Bogart performs with some credit as The Killer, if you can overlook his lisp."

New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"It makes no attempt to conceal the fact that this is a straightforward photograph of a stage play, rather than a genuine motion picture. I think, too, that the vague efforts to enliven its static, conversational quality by intermittent camera activity serve only to emphasize the fact that 'The Petrified Forest' is not essentially cinematic material. Since the story was definitely planned for the theater, it tends to flatten out and become garrulous under the ministrations of the screen. Nevertheless, despite such revealing technical frailties, the picture is, through the sheer force of its amalgamation of contemplation and gunplay, invariably dramatic. . . Anyway, 'The Petrified Forest' is unusual and challenging fare for the filmgoer, despite its frank romanticism. And it is extremely well acted. Mr. Howard repeats his excellent and winning portrayal of the neurotic hero, and once more Humphrey Bogart provides a brilliant picture of a subnormal, bewildered and sentimental killer. Miss Bette Davis does not suggest the spiritual fineness of the heroine, the quality that might have made it worth while for such a man as the hero to sacrifice himself for her as well as did Miss Peggy Conklin in the play, but she manages the role attractively." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 F 7 '36

"The Warners continue to display their skill at transcribing plays into film. With their excellent version of 'Ceiling Zero' scarcely out of the first running, they now have brought in an entirely satisfactory screen edition of Robert E. Sherwood's philosophical melodrama, 'The Petrified Forest,' which was one of the graces of the Broadway theatre last year. . . Well done, although it defies every canon of cinema law, is 'The Petrified Forest.' Perhaps it was more effective on the stage; all we know is that it does well enough on the screen." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p14 F 7 '36

"Mr. Howard is wanly sensitive and Miss Davis is cast for a rôle somewhat too wholesome for her particular talent." John Mosher

New Yorker p65 F 15 '36

"'The Petrified Forest' reaches the screen virtually unchanged from the original played by Robert E. Sherwood. It has been shortened

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PETRIFIED FOREST—Continued

some and the leading woman's profanity, of necessity, has been omitted. It also has the same tragic ending. Warners wanted to change it, but Leslie Howard, who was in the play, argued so convincingly that an added scene showing him recovering from his gunshot wound was not used."

Springf'd Republican p5c Ja 26 '36

"An excellent adaptation of a Broadway hit."
+ + Stage p8 Mr '36

"Like the play, of which Screenwriters Charles Kenyon and Delmer Daves and Director Archie Mayo were daring enough to make the film an almost literal transcription, the picture is an enormously skillful romantic melodrama, so smoothly acted and so shrewdly written that even the pseudo-philosophy uttered by Leslie Howard seems worth listening to."

+ Time p48 F 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Petrified Forest' . . . comes to the screen as a tense, compelling drama. . . It will entertain and hold interest of any audience from fade-in to fade-out. Family."

+ Box Office p33 Ja 18 '36

"'The Petrified Forest' is one of the most striking productions it has ever been your reviewer's privilege to witness. . . It will thrill you, chill you and amuse you all at once, and that you will have to admit, is a mighty tall order."

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 Mr 7 '36

"This is an exceptional picture and most assuredly will make a name for itself and do well at the box office. Leslie Howard plays the role that he did in the stage play and gives a sterling performance. He is ably supported by Bette Davis and Humphrey Bogart, also playing his stage role, helps enormously to make this an outstanding picture. . . This is decidedly one of the best pictures to come out of Hollywood in some time."

+ + Film Curb p17 Ja 18 '36

"Leslie Howard is magnificent. Bette Davis does about the finest and most appealing work of her career. The direction is altogether skillful, and Archie Mayo has extracted every ounce of dramatic and emotional value. In fact the entire production is something to talk about."

+ Film Daily p8 Ja 21 '36

"Although both Leslie Howard and Bette Davis are popular, and the play from which it was adapted scored a success in New York, it is doubtful if it will get far in picture theatres. The masses will not find it to their taste, for it is not cheerful entertainment, and its message is 'defeatism.' . . Not for children or adolescents. Adult entertainment."

+ — Harrison's Reports F 15 '36

"This picture has power, prestige and strong entertainment value. The action takes place entirely within the confines of a gas station in the Arizona desert and at times reaches points of pronounced suspense. The unusual locale in which the picture is set forms a perfect background on which is displayed the psychological portraits of the characters."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 8 '36

"Here is a class picture with definite mass appeal. Stepping completely out of any rutted path, its striking power to stir the emotion of every human imagination establishes it as an attraction worthy of the attention of all."

+ Motion Pict Herald p46 Ja 18 '36

"[It] should be able to account for itself best in the class sectors, but is melodrama of a type that can be sold all the way down the line."

+ N Y Exhibitor p29 F 10 '36

"Out of Robert Sherwood's play Archie Mayo and a uniformly adroit cast have evolved a production that's certain to draw critical raves for its all-around quality, its fine adherence to mood and its deft blending of haunting melodrama with philosophic discourse. But it is doubtful whether the picture's box-office reaction will parallel its artistic success. 'The Petrified Forest' frequently shoots away over the head of the average filmgoer in both dialog, nuances and spiritual content, which makes it look as though the film will have to depend largely on the upper cultural brackets."

+ — Variety p16 F 12 '36

"'Petrified Forest' as a stage play contained in proper proportion about all the entertainment elements possible for an exciting and heart moving development of the theme. Screen play therefore adheres to the original very closely, with little elaboration or deletion, to present it as stirring melodrama with spiritual significances, quite away from the usual run of pictures. Result is an impressive, haunting offering, done with fine artistry and at the same time common appeal which will be especially relished by the more discriminating audiences without being limited to class trade."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 7 '36

PETTICOAT FEVER. Mr 13 '36 80min MGM

Players: Robert Montgomery. Myrna Loy. Reginald Owen. Winifred Shutter

Director: George Fitzmaurice

Based on the play of the same title by Mark Reed. "An airplane wreck forces an English lord and his fiancée to become the guests of a wireless operator in the frozen north. He hasn't seen a white woman for two years and he finds his feminine guest fascinating. . . The wireless operator shamelessly makes love to her. Then his former fiancée who had deserted him arrives." (Hollywood Reporter)

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one will have no trouble pleasing audiences. It is full of laughs and the comedy is of a refreshing nature. . . The roles are ideal for Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy and Reginald Owen and they romp through them for a heavy score of laughs."

+ Film Daily p7 Mr 14 '36

"A grand little laugh picture from beginning to end, 'Peticoat Fever' is something of a high comedy in the near sophisticated school. Box-office is assured by the personal drawing power of Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy, made doubly sure by happy casting in a popular success. If anything, the screen version of Mark Reed's stage play is an improvement upon the original."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 11 '36

"[It is] a smart comedy that should mean good returns. With the Montgomery-Loy names for the top draw, picture has good marquee value. Smartly written, directed, and produced, it has audience appeal both in the first runs and subsequent houses."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 11 '36

(*)PIRATE PARTY ON CATALINA ISLAND. N 2 '35 20min MGM

Players: Buddy Rogers. Marion Davies. Cary Grant. Virginia Bruce. John Gilbert. Chester Morris

Director: Lewis Lewyn

"Very effectively filmed in Technicolor, it takes the form of a pirate masquerade party on beautiful Catalina Island, where scores of film stars happen to be present and this gives the film a big-time cast and big fan interest." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 8 '36*Trade Paper Reviews*

"Corking good entertainment that's bound to please the majority of mass audiences, for there's never a dull moment."

+ Box Office p51 F 8 '36

"There is more attractive flash, sparkling action and general entertainment in this two-reeler than in some features."

+ Film Daily p8 Ja 23 '36

"Time and money were lavished on this outdoor short in Technicolor with results that are eye and ear-filling. . . It's a grand short."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 23 '36

"It should fit in on most any program."

Motion Pict Herald p49 F 1 '36

"Packed with names and stars this can be billed on the marquee to good advantage. Excellent."

+ N Y Exhibitor p39 Ja 25 '36

"On the Technicolor palette alone the short probably qualifies as adding color to film bills. . . Results are not uniformly favorable. In this instance Chester Morris makes himself look asinine dressed up as a pirate master of ceremonies and handed lines to read that peg him as sub-adolescent mentally. Slapstick comedy is certainly not his forte."

+ — Variety p12 F 5 '36

POWDERSMOKE RANGE. S 27 '35 72min RKO

Players: Harry Carey. Hoot Gibson. Guinn Williams. Tom Tyler. Bob Steele. Boots Mallory

Director: Wallace Fox

Based on the novel of the same title by William Colt MacDonald. A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Though the picture is fairly well directed and acted, and has beautiful scenery and fine horsemanship, it is not up to the best standard for Westerns. Family."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 18 '35

"The acting is capable and the scenery lovely, the dialogue trite but as this is undoubtedly meant for junior audiences they will not be too exacting. Family. (University Women object to its brutality.)"

+ — Jt Estimates S 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p175 N '35

"Fair. Adults &amp; young adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Adolescent boys will love it and so will their fathers, but [it is] too exciting for small children."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Thrilling Western."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Powdersmoke Range,' is regulation outdoor drama, with most of Hollywood's current Western stars appearing in it at one moment or another. This is a quaint piece, almost as old-fashioned as Mr. Chaplin's 'Modern Times,' unintentionally, it is sometimes nearly as funny. . . Like most Westerns, [it] is wholesome, good fare for children, and occasionally refreshing in its simplicity." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p14 Mr 9 '36

"Make no mistake about it, pardner, 'Powdersmoke Range' is a blood-and-thunder Western of the old school. Like its once popular predecessors, the new film offers precious little in the way of a story." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '36

"With so many expert gun-toters and horse-men in the cast it is reasonable to expect plenty of quick and straight shooting and furious riding, and that is exactly what 'Powdersmoke Range' gives you. The film moves along competently, it has dialogue with a tang that is well suited to melodrama of the West and it has plenty of action. . . If you like this sort of stuff—and don't pretend you don't—you'll get a kick out of these rough doings of the wild boys out on the range." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p21 Mr 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"You can hardly go wrong with this one and how they'll eat it up where outdoor action pictures are the favorites!"

+ Film Curb p18 O 1 '35

"RKO has a bangup Western release in 'Powdersmoke Range,' [containing] a topnotch cast, and, judging from Hollywood's recent horse opera output, an exceptionally good story. Will do moderately well on its own in some spots and has sufficient name strength to count for something in the dualers."

+ Variety p15 Mr 11 '36

PREVIEW MURDER MYSTERY. F 28 '36
65min Paramount

Players: Reginald Denny. Frances Drake. Gail Patrick. Rod La Rocque. George Barbier

Director: Robert Florey

"Film star Rod La Rocque, who has been warned that he will never live to see the picture he is making, is killed at the theatre preview. Publicity director Reginald Denny, assisted by Frances Drake, takes charge of the case, and the scene moves into the studio itself as the sinister activities of the murderer continue." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults and young people." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: entertaining; 14-18: fair; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par &amp; Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Interesting for adult audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 29 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates F 15 '36

"An average mystery tale doubles its effectiveness because the plot is laid in a studio interior where talking pictures are made. Adolescents: yes; children: too exciting."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women F 19 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PREVIEW MURDER MYSTERY—Continued

"Family."

Wkly Guide F 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This picture is one of the best murder mystery offerings we have had and one of the few good pictures Paramount has given us in some months. . . 'The Preview Murder Mystery' is well worth seeing if you like that sort of screen entertainment. Students of the screen should view it. Its depiction of what goes on in a motion picture studio will interest them."

+ Hollywood Spec p6 F 15 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Thrilling murder-mystery with studio background. . . It moves at a rapid and thrilling pace, is packed with tense situations, hair-raising suspense and should prove a money-maker in any situation. Family."

+ Box Office p25 F 29 '36

"Unusually entertaining murder mystery melodrama. . . Florey has done a mighty fine job of directing and taken all-in-all this picture should please in most any theatre."

+ Film Curb p14 F 15 '36

"A good murder mystery melodrama. The producers have resorted with success to all the old 'gags' to create the eerie atmosphere—mysterious openings of doors and windows, shadows, screams, and sudden deaths. Not for children or Sundays. Good for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports Mr 7 '36

"This high-tension mystery yarn is different. It is not merely bigger and better but it is a highly diverting novelty, for the three murders and all the excitement that follows take place on a motion picture lot, easily recognizable as the Paramount plant, and while the blood is tingling with the unflagging suspense of the story, the audience is on a close-up personally-conducted tour of the whole works."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 6 '36

"There is much in this that is refreshingly new in the way of a murder mystery, plus many inside revelations of the art of picture making which should provide unique entertainment for audiences and give the exhibitor a wealth of angles on which to base intriguing exploitation."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 F 7 '36

Motion Pict Herald p42 F 15 '36

"Estimate: saleable programmer."

+ N Y Exhibitor p35 F 25 '36

"This mystery opera, obviously a B picture, stands chances of getting important money through several exploitation angles. Cast contains a flock of names recognizable by the fans. Some of them are old timers, but they still mean something in numbers as they have been cast here. Picture is based on a murder, several of them in fact, within a studio. It's about the best inside stuff on studio workings seen. Fans who want to get a look-see on picture making should be satisfied with the atmosphere."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 6 '36

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND. F 28 '36
93min 20th century-Fox

Players: Warner Baxter. Gloria Stuart.
Claude Gillingwater

Director: John Ford

Based on the biography, Dr. Samuel Mudd, by Nellie Mudd Monroe. "Dr. Mudd was the Maryland country physician who set John Wilkes Booth's fractured leg after Booth had killed Lincoln. He was arrested later . . . and tried before a military tribunal. Despite his avowals of innocence, his protestations that he knew nothing of the assassination or of Booth's part in it and that his duty as a physician impelled him to treat the injured man, he was found guilty and sentenced to life imprisonment on Dry Tortugas, otherwise known as Shark Island." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults: excellent; 14-18: powerful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Suspenseful; well-produced. Mature." DAR

"A gripping story of mob hysteria, human heartbreak and tragedy following the assassination of President Lincoln. . . Family. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women

"One of the great pictures of the year. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This picture is well worth seeing for its historic value but is far too emotional for young children. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 10 '36

"Outstanding. This is a poignant melodrama of man's inhumanity to man, convincingly staged and stirring acted. Details of the Civil War period are carefully observed and the film is deeply moving. Mature."

+ Jt Estimates F 15 '36

"Superb work on the part of all the actors including the colored guards, gives the picture a dignity that makes its brutal scenes bearable and reclaims it from the cheapness of mere melodrama. . . Adolescents, 12-16; too brutal and sad; children, 8-12; emotionally upsetting."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"The entire supporting cast is most able, the photography is outstandingly fine while the musical scoring adds greatly to the dramatic highlights. Mature."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women F 15
'36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Recommended to Exceptional Photoplays Committee. Family."

+ Wkly Guide F 22 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"John Ford directed this picture with the same gripping power he displayed in 'The Informer.' Its reality is almost unbearable at times, stressing as it does the amount of ignominy and pain the human frame and spirit can endure. Not only the direction, but the acting and photography are masterly. Warner Baxter, as the unfortunate Dr. Samuel Mudd, does the finest acting of his career, both during the incredible trial, which is historically accurate, and in the succeeding scenes of the ghastly years on the island prison." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 29 '36

"A rousing melodrama for men chiefly, its general reception indicates."

Christian Science Monitor p13 F 29 '36

"As you view the picture your attention is held by the pictorial effectiveness of the scenes, the superb photography, outstanding direction and skilled performances, but in retrospect you find the production gains its impressiveness solely from its bulk and not from a sustained spiritual quality comparable with that which makes the Pasteur film outstanding, and which all pictures must possess if they are to be wholly successful. . . John Ford has no master in the art of making members of his cast give good performances. Warner Baxter never be-

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

fore reached such heights as he does in this picture, and Gloria Stuart displays histrionic ability never even hinted at before. . . . Certainly the production is one of the most impressive to come from any studio in a long time." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p7 F 29 '36

"Somehow 'The Prisoner of Shark Island' is neither so poignant nor so dramatic as it should have been. The film merely says that such things were so. It is up to the audience to sense the power of the facts behind the picture. . . . All in all, the film comes as a distinctive item for your more serious moments." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p51 Mr 28 '36

"Because it opens a new view of the War between the States and because it presents to the public a fairly closed chapter in that War, it is high among the important war pictures. . . . The film will take its place up forward among the best cinema achievements of the year. . . . It is a violent story, violently, relentlessly told. Warner Baxter in the name part gives one of the best performances of his long career and has the benefit of a cast obviously moved by the story they are enacting. 'The Prisoner of Shark Island' not only is historically important, but it is excellent entertainment."

+ + Lit Digest p22 F 22 '36

"'The Prisoner of Shark Island' comes perilously near to overusing [the Cinderella theme] with the result that an hour of the film is painful; but the pleasure which comes with the hero's vindication at last is enough to save what has gone before, and enough to prove that there is no such thing as excess in the drama of misunderstanding. . . . The film takes every advantage of its theme, and takes advantage also of the fact that the Civil War is still the richest background available to America's story. I have seen few pictures, this year or any other, more completely interesting than 'The Prisoner of Shark Island.'" Mark Van Doren

+ + Nation p292 Mr 4 '36

"Nunnally Johnson's script, a bit of screen writing that—although a little too unpretentious and right to come in for awards at the end of the year—will certainly stand up among the year's best. . . . 'The Prisoner of Shark Island' is a powerful film, rarely false or slow, maintaining the relentless cumulative pressure, the logical fitting of one thing into another until the audience is included in the movement and carried along with it in some definite emotional life that is peculiar to the art of motion pictures at its best." Otis Ferguson

+ + New Repub p110 Mr 4 '36

"Good directorial job by John Ford, who is responsible for 'The Informer.' The film starts out well with strict adherence to the central theme—the brutality of mad vigilante and military justice—but soon deteriorates into pure melodrama."

+ — New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"It uncovers a page from history, apparently little known about, which reveals an American 'Dreyfus Case' as a grim, brutal and shameful example of national injustice. . . . So vividly has Mr. Ford presented this 'hell hole,' and so logically has he built up the reasons for Dr. Samuel Mudd's exile, little doubt seems to remain as to the story's veracity. For in a series of pictures, dramatic and sensational, he shows how a man may be the victim of circumstances and of mob passions, without being guilty or without being stupid. . . . The picture is handsomely photographed and lighted. Its pace, while deliberate, suits the mood of the story, and the suspense, though not perhaps as sharp as it might be, does not make for dullness." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p15 F 13 '36

"This is excellent melodrama, with Warner Baxter cast exactly right in the starring role. . . . With a wealth of fact to draw upon, Scenarist Nunnally Johnson and Director John Ford have done at least full justice to their subject." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p26 F 13 '36

"[The story is] retold with commendable directness in [the] film. For that directness and for its sincerity you can thank John Ford, its director, and Nunnally Johnson, who wrote the story. There must be recognition, too, of Warner Baxter's entirely convincing portrayal of Dr. Mudd. . . . All these are commendable, but in its ultimate plot manoeuvrings, in the felicitous accident of the yellow jack epidemic which rescues Dr. Mudd from his underground dungeon and paves the way for his pardon, 'The Prisoner of Shark Island' becomes distressingly familiar. The verdict must be that, for all its vaunted biographical accuracy, the new photoplay is scarcely more than a well-fabricated edition of the Dreyfus-Devil's Island series that has become part of the screen's tradition. If it is history, it has repeated itself too often." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p13 F 13 '36

"The miscarriage of justice is bound to be immediately, automatically dramatic, stirring and powerful material for a novel, drama or film, and no matter how it is told must command attention and wring your heart. When, then, it is done with such radiance, compassion and indignity as here, its unparalleled injustice becomes all the more devastating, unbearable and heartrending." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 F 13 '36

"The surprise and embarrassment of this far from pretty little event in our past, one of our skeletons, as well as good handling of the scene in Ford's Theatre, are the valuable assets of 'The Prisoner of Shark Island.' Much more in the conventional pattern of the many prison pictures we have seen are the later sequences. Beginning with high promise, the film fades off. I am afraid Warner Baxter, known chiefly as an 'engaging' actor, fails to give his difficult rôle the force it needs. Students of American history may well reflect, however, on the earlier episodes."

+ — New Yorker p77 F 22 '36

"From the story of the court martial and imprisonment of a victim of hysterical Civil War frenzy comes one of the most powerful photoplays of recent months. . . . An obscure historical document becomes an important screen drama."

+ + Stage p8 Mr '36

"The picture is a splendid example of biographical melodrama which should appall its audiences, enrich its producers and remind Hollywood that United States history, no less than that of France, Mexico and Britain, contains rich veins of screen material which deserve to be mined by able writers."

+ Time p57 F 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This absorbing story of 'The Prisoner of Shark Island' will hold patrons prisoners through its sweeping dramatic power to the final fadeout. . . . Will have strong appeal to male patrons. Adult."

+ Box Office p25 F 29 '36

Film Curb p14 F 22 '36

"Despite its somber theme, this is a forceful melodrama; it grips the spectator, and holds his attention throughout. . . . Aside from the fact that it may be too strong for children, it is suitable for all."

+ Harrison's Reports F 22 '36

"Twentieth Century-Fox smashes through with a magnificent picture. It is that rare combination, an artistic triumph and a great money attraction. You can dust off all the adjectives you know to exploit it. Better yet, just quote the critics. . . . If any small liberties have been taken with history, it is more than justifiable in view of the magnificent results."

+ + Hollywood Reporter p2 F 12 '36

PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND—Continued

"A preview audience several times interrupted the film with applause. A courageous production, it calls for the same brand of sensationalism in selling as went into the making."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 F 13 '36

"The picture is one that took courage to make. But the only courage necessary to sell it is that which convinces that 'The Prisoner of Shark Island' is unusual and valuable screen merchandise. . . . Previewed in Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Hollywood first-run deluxer. The only interruptions to the hushed, suspense-packed atmosphere that held the customers came in the several times they applauded the picture's action."

+ Motion Pict Herald p59 F 22 '36

"Warner Baxter . . . turns in a capital performance as the titular prisoner of 'America's Devil's Island.' It's perhaps his top acting performance [and] a well-turned film job in every respect but its box office potentialities may be only moderate. Minimum of feminine appeal accounts for that. A highly effective musical score by Louis Silvers; the photography of Bert Glennon and the general technique combine towards a consummately fine production."

+ Variety p12 F 19 '36

"An outstanding picture, a strong man's picture, a superbly directed picture, in every respect spelling another triumph for John Ford. But if Ford gets a lion's share of credit for one of the important entries in this year's film gallery, as 'The Prisoner of Shark Island' will unquestionably be rated, the director by no means corners the plaudits. . . . It should by its own right of powerful dramatic entertainment score solidly at the box office, with strongest appeal to the male patron."

+ + Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 12 '36

PRIVATE LIFE OF LOUIS XIV. Ja 8 '36
88min General foreign sales

Players: Renate Müller, Dorothea Wieck, Michael Bohnen, Eugen Klöpfer

Director: Carl Froelich

The film was made in Germany under the title, Frauen um den Sonnenkönig. In this historical reworking of an old theme, Liselotte, a young princess of the unpretentious court of the Palatinate at Heidelberg is married to Philip, the younger brother of Louis XIV of France in order to further her father's futile dream of extending his domain. She quickly captures the favor of the king by her delightful combination of naïveté and wisdom but she is snubbed by her husband. Finally she saves her homeland from destruction and wins her husband.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Although the picture is by no means another 'Private Life of Henry the 8th,' Louis XIV, King of France, during the latter part of the seventeenth century, here comes through Herr Froelich's screen an animated figure, suave and agreeable, but lacking in the eccentric genius of Mr. Laughton's royalist. . . . The performance is smooth, with an able cast giving power to a script, which appears to be accurate. If there is a faintly Teutonic quality to the story that gives it a heavy rather than sparkling surface, the direction is deft enough to hold attention, and, of course, the logical and thorough characteristics of the German mind lend to the representation of the dazzling French court a steady, factual interpretation." Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p15 Ja 10 '36

"[It] proves the German studios have not lost their old knack. The photography is still not up to Hollywood standards; but the picture is a good, well-directed historical drama. In contrast to most Continental films, this one has an unusually elaborate production. The costumes are many and striking; the settings are large and imposing. They have not been permitted to smother the story. . . . Michael Bohnen manages to be impressive as well as occasionally and purposely ridiculous in the role of the Sun King, flirtatious, vain and arrogant. Dorothea Wieck is the quietly shrewd de Maintenon. The acting is excellent, the story entertaining, and the English sub-titles clear and frequent. Setting and characters, as well as the point of view, are distinctly Continental, describing problems and a period remote from American experience. Perhaps for that very reason—one that might prevent widespread popularity—this new German talkie is good solid entertainment for any one interested in historical tales of Europe in the seventeenth century." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p26 Ja 9 '36

"What counts is the excellent work of what really may be called an 'all-star cast,' linked with a fine display of many highly interesting scenes in the court and taverns of Paris, on the highways and at the home of Liselotte, all done with a lavish hand and correctly dated. Dorothea Wieck is right in her element as Mme. de Maintenon, the mistress with a religious bent whom the king finally married in 1684, after the queen's death. Michael Bohnen, the former Metropolitan opera singer, who apparently has abandoned the lyric stage for the films, makes a gracious and not too superior Louis. About the only technical fault is the rather free use of 'close-ups,' coupled with occasional coarseness in the screen texture. The Nazi propaganda in the picture is apparent but not obtrusive." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p25 Ja 9 '36

"The film is rather long and at times ponderous, but in spite of these flaws it manages to be reasonably entertaining. The acting is of a decidedly superior quality." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p23 Ja 14 '36

Reviewed by John Mosher
New Yorker p61 Ja 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Unusually interesting German dialogue film, expertly directed and acted, holds general appeal."

+ Film Daily p4 Ja 9 '36

"The film has been well executed and the performances are good. Numerous sub-titles in English make for easy understanding of the story by those unfamiliar with the German language of the picture. . . . Miss Müller and Miss Wieck are probably known in this country, and the film should have definite appeal in those communities where there are German people. There is, of course, the obvious underlying intent, in this German production, to paint the activity of the French king and his war minister in the light of unscrupulous ravages of the then separate German states. As a dramatic film, however, it offers a measure of entertainment."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p9 Ja 9 '36

"More Nazi propaganda, but not too thick and not especially annoying. Well made technically and fairly amusing from a general entertainment standpoint. Nevertheless, will find itself restricted to Teutonic audiences."

+ — Variety p19 Ja 15 '36

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER. Ja 24 '36 75min
20th century-Fox

Players: Victor McLaglen, Freddie Bartholomew, Gloria Stuart, Constance Collier

Director: Tay Garnett

Based on a short story, Gentlemen, the King, by Damon Runyon. The locale of the story is a mythical kingdom where an adventurous professional soldier is hired to kidnap the monarch as part of a revolutionary plot. When he finds the king to be a delicate, imaginative boy he refuses to have anything to do with the plot, but the young king goes along with him. Captured by revolutionists, they are sentenced to face a firing squad. The soldier escapes, captures a machine gun and wipes out most of the revolutionary forces in a single-handed encounter. He then returns the young king to his throne, pushes a few medals aside to make room for a new one and marches gaily off to further adventures.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Depends on taste; Y: Doubtful; C: No." Christian Century p311 F 19 '36

"Expert casting and action, plus sympathetic direction, lend plausibility to a far-fetched tale. Adults: good; 14-18: very good; 8-14: exciting. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The story, though inconsistent, is well told, has humor, pathos and suspense. [It] is especially well produced, ably cast and directed with Victor McLaglen and little Freddie Bartholomew giving notably realistic presentations. In all, most satisfying entertainment. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Too exciting for very young children." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Romantic drama with humor and pathos nicely blended which will please family audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 4 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Ja 1 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: delightful; children, 8-12: excellent."

Motion Pict R Ja '36

"Freddie Bartholomew, as the little King Peter, who has always been surrounded by pomp and dignity, but who craves the pleasures of an average American boy, is most appealing, while Victor McLaglen in an entirely new role of Soldier of Fortune who becomes the faithful slave and protector of the helpless, trusting little king portrays it with dignity and delightful humor. Fine for the family and junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 1 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Entertaining farce; C: Excellent." Par M p38 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ja 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p4 F 1 '36

"O.K. if you happen to be romantically minded."

— Canadian M p43 Mr '36

"'Professional Soldier' is a delightful picture, one of the few providing entertainment for the whole family. Children will flock to see it. . . By all means see [the picture.] It will thrill you as you always used to be thrilled when mother began with, 'Once upon a time—.'"

+ Hollywood Spec p16 Ja 4 '36

"McLaglen furnishes a thoroughly offensive portrait of an American spoiling for a fight. When you consider what a fuss the Spaniards raised because a member of the Guards was ridiculed in Paramount's 'The Devil is a Woman,' American complacency with McLaglen's misrepresentation is hard to understand. We can't be that disgusting."

New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"The photoplay is brisk enough and it has its amiable moments, but as a good, hearty amalgamation of the gangster saga and the mythical kingdom romance, it is not nearly as entertaining as it should be." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p13 Ja 30 '36

"Mr. Runyon's ideas are usually original in both plot and viewpoint. 'Professional Soldier' has a grand comedy-melodrama idea, never quite fulfilled by either scenarists or directors. His colleagues let Mr. Runyon down pretty badly this time. . . 'Professional Soldier,' although disappointing in its failure to make the most of a fresh idea, does still have that fresh idea and a good average quota of amusement value. It has, too, young Freddie, who is rapidly growing up. His diction is still, in spite of two years in Hollywood, the most perfect on the screen." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p27 Ja 30 '36

"Victor McLaglen struts through 'Professional Soldier' with such obvious delight in his rôle that it would be downright cruel not to pretend to enjoy it as much as he does. . . There is something communicable in watching the simple pleasures of a forthright soul. Before 'Professional Soldier' has progressed very far, you find yourself relishing the picture less for the entertainment it is giving you than for the joy it is affording its chief player. This is a silly state of affairs, we must admit, but that's the way it is." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 30 '36

"By writing about Zenda and Graustark in a tongue-in-cheek manner Damon Runyon has succeeded in turning out an extraordinarily entertaining mixture of romance and satire in 'Professional Soldier.' . . Under Mr. Garnett's direction [the cast] all play so exactly right that 'Professional Soldier' becomes first-rate fun." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 Ja 30 '36

"The light touch is very much needed in 'Professional Soldier.' I am afraid that even the initial idea, perhaps a good one, doesn't help enough. . . In the first place, my heart sank when I discovered that 'Professional Soldier' had to do with one of those fanciful kingdoms in the Balkans. And there was little in the film to pull the poor old heart up again where it belonged." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p69 F 8 '36

"Master Bartholomew snares the acting honors; Victor McLaglen's rôle is even less demanding than his old 'Sez you, sez me' parts." Stage p8 F '36

"With this central idea derived from a Damon Runyon story, 'Professional Soldier' might have been either a good parody of Graustarkian romance or a good example of it. Adaptors Gene Fowler and Howard Ellis Smith and Director Tay Garnett unfortunately tried to make it both, with the result that it is neither. In the mildly entertaining hodgepodge which emerges on the screen, the happiest moments are oddly enough, those in which 'Professional Soldier' takes itself most seriously. Admirers of McLaglen's work in 'The Informer' are not likely to be captivated by the simultaneous imitation of Jimmy Durante and Edward G. Robinson which he substitutes for an impersonation in this picture."

+ — Time p26 F 10 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 Ja 11 '36

"Mythical kingdom yarn presents a fair story. . . Suitable for most any class of audience and will be fairly well liked. Will not set the world on fire but offers satisfactory program entertainment."

— + Film Curb p13 Ja 4 '36

"From the title, one might expect something heavy, but the picture itself is a very enjoyable comedy with some very clever dialogue, especially Freddie Bartholomew's English interpretation of American slang expressions. . . Children especially will get a big bang out of the exploits of the braggart soldier and they will enjoy the boy King who wants to have some fun. . . The story itself is a very thin affair, but the dialogue in Gene Fowler's and Howard Ellis Smith's screenplay, plus what talk there was in Runyon's original, make the picture the enjoyable piece of fun that it is. The tale does go quite melodramatic toward the end but it makes for a strong finish."

+ Film Daily p3 D 27 '35

"A mixture of adventure, comedy, and romance; it should go over strong with young people. . . Good for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports F 8 '36

"This is a 1935 fairy tale, its technique combining the Mack Sennett fun-making theory with the éclat of a Lubitsch production. It [seems] to be audience entertainment that will have audiences, particularly children, volubly demonstrating their appreciation."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 D 24 '35

"Pure fun, moving in a way that vividly suggests that McLaglen, Bartholomew and all the rest had a lot of fun while making it, it should prove a tasty tidbit for those who like to laugh and don't care how the laughter is provoked. It should have the children standing up cheering and those more mature who are supposed to be a little dignified undoubtedly will have more than a little difficulty restraining their mirth."

+ Motion Pict Herald p48 Ja 4 '36

"Estimate: fair for de luxers; best for [neighborhood houses.]"

+ — N Y Exhibitor p42 Ja 25 '36

"'Professional Soldier' is in-between entertainment. Some of its sequences are amusing; some of the action is very fast. But fundamentally the story is not believable. . . Production is too meagre for the revolutionary sequences. Director Tay Garnett struggled with much shrewdness and partial success to make a handful of extras look like the Graustarkian army. Scantiness of production values gives the story a telltale studio quality that badly handicaps the development of acceptable make-believe."

— + Variety p12 F 5 '36

"'Professional Soldier' is comedy drama, with accent on whimsical comedy, and is not as swashbuckling as title might suggest. On the score of merit as a production it has faults, but none serious enough to detract from its sum-total as excellent audience entertainment. Story is a strange, beguiling kind of fantasy which never quite descends to sheer realism. . . McLaglen's fine impersonation compares favorably with his better screen exhibits, although not on the inspired plane of 'The Informer'. . . Frenzied battle does much to overcome some of the physically slow spots in middle of picture and to accelerate pace for smash finish. . . [The] pace is somewhat irksomely slow through earlier part of picture. Screen play's fine highlights have to overcome long delayed physical clash after expectancy of conflict had been set up, with broken suspense as a result. Picture also needed more active menace opposition in middle portion. These, and mediocre dialog throughout first part, are shortcomings of the offering."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 23 '35

PUBLIC MENACE. S 30 '35 63min Columbia

Players: Jean Arthur, George Murphy, Douglas Dumbrille, George McKay

Director: Erle C. Kenton

"Two adventurous young people, one a manicurist aboard an ocean liner and the other a live wire young reporter, a confirmed woman hater who has a habit of following false leads, together track down a notorious public enemy and incidentally develop their own romance." Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Hardly. Y: Not the best. C: No." Christian Century p1326 O 16 '35

"This well directed picture, fast moving and exciting, is treated in a light farcical manner, making it most enjoyable. The work of Jean Arthur and George Murphy is very good. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 23 '35

"Diverting for mature audiences. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates S 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p149 D '35

Nat Bd of R M O '35

"Only one objectionable scene makes this lively comedy questionable for the entire family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women p4 S 1 '35

"A and Y: Passable farce; C: No." Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Spring'd Republican p6c O 20 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Combination newspaper and gangster story which rates as only moderate entertainment in the program class."

— + Box Office p17 D 14 '35

Film Curb p8 O 1 '35

N Y Exhibitor p34 O 10 '35

R

RACING LUCK. O 28 '35 59min Republic

Players: Bill Boyd, Barbara Worth, George Ernest, Esther Muir

Director: Sam Newfield

A race track owner finds himself ruled off the course because his winning horse has been found doped. He suspects an unscrupulous rival and after many complications succeeds in clearing his own name.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"A, Y and C: Good action drama."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It abounds in typical situations aroused by keen rivalry and this element will undoubtedly please the younger patrons."
+ Box Office p25 N 30 '35

Film Curb p12 D 1 '35

Film Daily p8 N 19 '35

"It contains the usual amount of suspense, love interest and under-cover tricks which constitute horse racing."
+ Motion Pict Daily p6 N 19 '35

Motion Pict Herald p68 D 7 '35

"Family action drama."
N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

RAINMAKERS. O 25 '35 78min RKO

Players: Dorothy Lee, Robert Woolsey, Bert Wheeler, Berton Churchill

Director: Fred Guiol

"In a drought stricken region, two young men demonstrate the efficiency of their rain producer, despite strenuous efforts of a wily rival to disqualify them." Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Some suspense and amusing in spots. Family."
— + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

O 12 '35

"Absurd farce, quite innocuous and carelessly put together. Family and jr. matinee."
— Jt Estimates O 15 '35

"Family and junior matinees."
Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A: Matter of taste; Y and C: Good fun."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A poor example of slapstick melodrama."
— Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

"An obvious bid for the juvenile trade, the new Wheeler and Woolsey comedy merits no more than a note for the record. This would be that their current film is considerably less than hilarious and must be listed as another victim of the fallacy that runaway locomotives, laden with dynamite, are screamingly funny."
— N Y Times p13 N 2 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p51 N 16 '35

Film Curb p9 O 15 '35

"Juvenile entertainment tastes will probably enjoy the picture most."
+ Motion Pict Daily p4 N 2 '35

"Family farce."
N Y Exhibitor p34 O 25 '35

RED SALUTE. S 13 '35 78min Reliance

Players: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Young, Hardie Albright

Director: Sidney Lanfield

Known also as Arms and the Girl. "The effort of a foreign student Communist to destroy the ideals and principles of American youth is thwarted by the clever psychology of a young American soldier." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Mediocre; Y: Hardly good; C: Little interest."
Christian Century p1326 O 16 '35

"Unconvincing and so farcically treated that it loses its force and purpose and is also unwisely titled."
— Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

S 3 '35

"Treats a serious theme—the red agitator on the campus—too flippantly."
— Jt Estimates S 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p167 N '35

"Good. Adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"This picture fails to prove convincing because of a seeming lack of sincerity. Adults."
— Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A and Y: Trivial; C: Little interest."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The picture is muddled to the point of hopelessness and is obviously designed for the stupid." Robert Giroux
— Nation p447 O 16 '35

"A dim carbon copy of the mood of the celebrated 'It Happened One Night.'" Richard Watts, Jr.
— N Y Herald Tribune p10 S 30 '35

"One of the best comedies of the screen since 'It Happened One Night.'" Graham Greene
+ Spec p863 N 22 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

"Family comedy drama."
N Y Exhibitor p36 O 10 '35

(S) REG'LAR KIDS. O 19 '36 20min Vitaphone
Director: Ralph Staub

In color, featuring the Meglin Kiddies. "Two wealthy little boys produce a play, of which the proceeds are to be given to the children of the orphanage." (Endorsed Motion Pict)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good."
+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Its entertainment value is a matter of taste as the exploitation of very young children is distasteful to many. Family."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

O 1 '35

"Entertaining skit, especially for children. Family. Junior matinee."
+ Wkly Guide O 26 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"This technicolor subject has much to commend it. . . Family audiences will like this best, but it should have universal appeal. Good."
+ N Y Exhibitor p27 N 10 '35

REKA (Czechoslovakian title). See Young love

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

REMEMBER LAST NIGHT. N 4 '35 76min
Universal

Players: Edward Arnold. Constance Cummings. Sally Eilers. Robert Young

Director: James Whale

Based on the novel Hangover Murders written under the pseudonym of Adam Hobhouse. "Following a night of drinking on a Long Island estate in celebration of a wedding anniversary a member of the party is found dead. So they call in a famous detective . . . and the investigation gets under way, with the customary suspects, eccentric characters, additional murders, and general piling up of complications until the situation finally is cleared up." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A smart set murder mystery. Adults." DAR

"The picture carries a false, strident tone throughout, its artistry is nil and its moral tone is low. Incessant drinking and its attendant let-down of decencies constitute the humor, marital infidelities are laughed at and murder is treated with cheap and ribald comments. The spectator is given in detail a most unpleasant description of an electrocution. The entire production is an offense to all the decencies and cannot be recommended for any audience." E Coast Preview Committee
— Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"Spoiled by excessive drinking and a total disregard of ethical values. Sophisticated adults."

— Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 25 '35

"A fine cast, smart and sophisticated dialogue, fast moving direction and lavish, though somewhat gaudy, stage settings cannot redeem a picture so offensive to good taste. Adults."

— Jt Estimates N 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p199 D '35

"Unworthy."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Not recommended."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

"James Whale's direction forces bad acting out of all the capable players and succeeds only in accenting the ludicrous phoniness of the whole garbled affair." Beverly Hills

— Liberty p30 N 23 '35

"Its central characters, save a detective or two, belong to the aristocratic alcoholic set, and, between murders, they are so busy being antic and whimsical and debonair over their cocktails and high-balls that they not only become definitely offensive people, but manage to bring the entire institution of drinking into disrepute. Amid their handsome bars and expensive modernistic furniture, they mix homicide with their badinage to an extent that is likely to add a number of cinema recruits to the ranks of the W. C. T. U. and allied groups." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p19 N 21 '35

"Mildly entertaining comedy melodrama."

— + N Y Times p5 N 24 '35

"It is a lively but far from expert amalgamation of comedy and murder in the traditional 'The Thin Man' vein. At best, though, it is only fair entertainment." William Boehnel
+ — N Y World-Telegram p23 N 21 '35

Springf'd Republican p4c Ja 5 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

"Moves along at a fast pace, maintains the suspense until the end and provides very good entertainment. Cast, direction and production okay. A picture that should satisfy most any audience."

+ Film Curb p14 D 1 '35

"Because of unusual amount of comedy injected, plus a fine cast and spirited direction by James Whale, this murder melodrama emerges as a much more enjoyable affair than the ordinary run of such mysteries. . . While the suspense angle is well maintained, it is the laughs and the number of interesting individual performances that give the picture much of its entertainment value."

+ Film Daily p9 N 21 '35

N Y Exhibitor p31 N 10 '35

"It is bewildering in plot incident and characters so that the basic story can scarcely be followed while the superficial gloss of phoney sophistication neither fits a narrative in which four murders and two suicides are recorded nor carries conviction of itself. . . Not a good picture."

— Variety p14 N 27 '35

RENDEZVOUS. O 25 '35 91min MGM

Players: William Powell. Rosalind Russell. Binnie Barnes

Director: William K. Howard

Adapted from Major Herbert O. Yardley's book American Black Chamber. "The story narrates the activities of the German spy ring in America, its interception and its deciphering of the American code and the steps, centering around Powell as codist, to prepare a new one to confound the Teutonic espionage system and thereby keep U-boat torpedos from blowing up American troopships on their way to the front. . . The unfolding is always interesting and often gripping what with the match of wits between American and German intelligence, laboratory experimentation on invisible inks and the like." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Tops in film fare. A: excellent; 14-18: very good; 8-14: mature." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Splendid. Family—mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent film for family audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Some of the repartee is in questionable taste. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ — Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"A highly entertaining picture. Adults and family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 12 '35

"Family."

Jt Estimates N 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p175 N '35

"A and Y: Good spy drama; C: Mature."
Par M p56 Mr '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"'Class A' entertainment. It has all the gay brilliance of 'The Thin Man,' with a clever and intricate plot. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Highly entertaining comedy drama. . . . Brisk, amusing dialogue and the kind of role that suits William Powell so well. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 26 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Mr. Powell gives an expert performance. He always does in that kind of part. But Miss Russell almost beats him at his own game. She has a difficult assignment—to appear just a little silly without losing her charm—and she doesn't miss a stroke in either direction. It is all first-rate light entertainment." E. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript D 13 '35

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation p604 N 20 '35

N Y Sun p34 O 25 '35

"With Mr. Powell at his debonair best, 'Rendezvous' emerges as a lively and amusing melodrama." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p12 O 26 '35

"One of the most mystifying pictures ever released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer."

+ Springf'd Republican p6c O 27 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"An exciting and fast-moving spy melodrama that will delight and intrigue every member of the family."

+ Box Office p51 N 16 '35

Film Curb p14 N 1 '35

"Holds suspense and is well acted and directed."

+ Film Daily p4 O 28 '35

"M-G-M has retained much of the original as background, has woven into it romance and spies with results highly entertaining, engrossing and exciting."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 O 26 '35

"Background of the film is unquestionably authentic."

+ Motion Pict Herald p64 N 9 '35

N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

REST CURE. (Release date not determined)
70min Regal

Players: Reginald Denny. Esther Ralston.
Eleanor Hunt. Vince Barnett

Director: Crane Wilbur

This is filmed in color. "Saga is based on exploits of two gangster pals played by Reginald Denny and Vince Barnett, who, following repeal, are forced out of the racket of rum running and flee to France to get away from gunning mobsters of Chicago who are on their trail. They find shortly after their arrival that the gang leader arrives on the scene and to evade him they join up with Foreign Legion." (Variety [Hollywood])

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Curb p18 F 15 '36

"This is the first independent feature in color and, because it is something of an experiment both artistically and from a box office standpoint, its career will be watched with interest. . . . In the field where Westerns and outdoor dramas are standard fare this one should go strong by reason of the added exploitation value of its color and its different locale."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 4 '36

"Not only is color intelligently applied, but the story has an action adventure quality which, dominated by comedy and amplified by romance and drama, packs an entertainment punch that easily creates and holds interest. . . . Selling both the novelty of color in an outdoor feature, the worth of the story and the quality of the performances by all players should be sufficient to arouse patron attention."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 F 7 '36

"Done in color, this feature not only makes available the publicizing of that departure as a means of stimulating public interest, but also provides a substantial, well developed comedy to talk about."

+ Motion Pict Herald p48 F 15 '36

"Estimate: good independent; saleable anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p37 F 25 '36

"Producer used judgment to good advantage in not playing up to colors but taking advantage of the natural compositions as in real life. Story sags in a few spots, but as whole is highly entertaining. Packed full of comedy, action and thrills, should please all classes of audience."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 4 '36

RETURN OF JIMMY VALENTINE. F 14 '36
67min Republic

Players: Roger Pryor. Charlotte Henry.
Robert Warwick

Director: Lewis D. Collins

"A newspaperman sets out to find the original Jimmy Valentine whose exploits have by then become fictional. This formula allows for a story within a story. The reporter finds his man, now a respectable small-town banker. From this point on, the story is complicated by a gangster threat against Valentine and his daughter's search for the man she does not know is her own father." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Good of kind; Y: Good; C: Exciting."
Christian Century p446 Mr 18 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults and young people."
Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Although the idea to revive Jimmy Valentine may have seemed like a good one, the results, as pictured in 'The Return of Jimmy Valentine' are unsuccessful, and so the film must be added to the long list of recent screen disappointments. . . . Parts of it are by no means uninteresting, yet the film manages, because of its slow movement and commonplace dialogue, to be generally unexciting." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p25 Mr 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Action and mystery fans will find that this fast-moving, suspense-filled comedy furnishes fine entertainment. Family."

+ Box Office p25 F 29 '36

"Fairly pleasing light drama generally well handled in all departments."

+ Film Daily p7 F 1 '36

"A pretty good melodrama, with human appeal. The story is interesting and holds one in fair suspense throughout; but it would have been much more exciting had some of the comedy sequences been omitted. . . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports F 15 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

RETURN OF JIMMY VALENTINE—Continued

"The Return of Jimmy Valentine" has a ready-made audience awaiting it. With the early Valentine stories, countless performances on the stage and a few on the screen and the more recent popular radio series, the character is sure to draw on title alone. It is, however, essentially neighborhood fare but obviously the producers believed the greater audiences were in the smaller communities. . . . It is upon conventional mystery lines but boasting some new twists and a good build-up to climax. The many writers concerned with the original and screen play have however, allowed much ill-advised attempt at comedy to clutter the continuity of the tale. Even if it were funnier, the alleged humor would tend to slow tempo to a walk."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p2 Ja 28 '36

"This is a worthy sequel to the original Jimmy Valentine story, well produced as average entertainment. . . . [It] should please in all family and neighborhood houses."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 29 '36

Motion Pict Herald p42 F 15 '36

"Estimate: saleable for de luxers, okay for [neighborhood houses.]"

+ N Y Exhibitor p35 F 25 '36

"Absence of strong name players is only thing that will confine this to the [neighborhood houses] and dual spots. Film is filled with popular ingredients and intriguing crook story that holds attention throughout. Cast and director have done craftworthy job in projecting a too highly improbable plot."

+ — Variety p26 Mr 4 '36

"Return of Jimmy Valentine" is earmarked for good business in the family houses. . . . With perhaps a little cutting here and there piece can be made exemplary."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 28 '36

RETURN OF PETER GRIMM. S 13 '35 82min RKO

Players: Lionel Barrymore. Helen Mack. Edward Ellis. George Breakston

Director: George Nicholls, Jr.

Based on the play of the same title by David Belasco. "Although he dominated his household before his death, Peter Grimm returns from the Beyond and is, at first, unable to straighten out the tangled affairs of those he loved." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Fair; Y: Fairly good; C: Beyond them."

Christian Century p1390 O 30 '35

Mo Film Bul p176 N '35

"A and Y: Interesting and not gruesome; C: Too mature."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Peter Grimm alive is one of the most mending characters to inch about the screen and returning from the great beyond, he picks up his pace very little. The picture, from the familiar turn-of-the-century play, is a curious mixture of leisureliness and fatalism." M. E. P.

— + Boston Transcript p17 D 6 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '35

Reviewed by Andre Sennwald
N Y Times p5 O 13 '35

Reviewed by Louise Mace
Springf'd Republican p2 Ja 9 '36

"One of the most talked of plays of a decade ago has been adapted to the screen with the faithfulness of old Towser. It will not, in spite of RKO's fondest hopes, become the most talked of picture of this decade. But it will be seen by a great many people and enjoyed by them. It is one of the least spectacular offerings of the current output. It is fireside, homey, family stuff, with a lot of talk about books and flowers, and a minimum of story."

+ — Stage p10 N '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p34 N 23 '35

RHODES, THE DIAMOND MASTER. F 20 '36 95min Gaumont British

Players: Oscar Homolka. Peggy Ashcroft. Walter Huston. Basil Sydney

Director: Berthold Viertel

This picture was filmed in South Africa by a British company and is based on The Life of Rhodes, by Sarah Gertrude Millin. It was formerly called Rhodes, and also, Rhodes, The Empire Builder. "Painted on the broad canvas which was South Africa in the 1880's, this picture portrays the highlights in the life of one man, Cecil Rhodes. . . . He died before the Boer War, and the eventual complete fruition of his ambitious dream, a united South Africa under the English flag." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Excellently done, with the accent rather subtly against imperialism. . . . Suggested for schools and libraries. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays."

+ + Wkly Guide F 8 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a triumph for Walter Huston as Rhodes. It is an epic of British courage, endurance and business acumen, and in the great sweep of the story visualizes some of the bitterest and some of the most triumphant days of an Empire story." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p41 Mr '36

"Walter Huston, summoned from America to play the role of one of the Empire's great men (a fact that singled not a few English actors), makes a stunning Rhodes. The authenticity of the film chronicle is what upsets Leo Mishkin, in the New York Morning Telegraph. 'It is this authenticity, indeed,' he writes, 'that constitutes the photoplay's chief deficiency.'"

Lit Digest p21 Mr 7 '36

"Viewed quite generally 'Rhodes' is an inferior motion picture. It moves slowly when it moves at all; each separate episode is allowed to die before the next one is born, so that we miss the magic of elision, the sense of having stepped from one scene into another without knowing that our feet had left the ground; and the South African settings (veritable, I believe) too seldom appear to be taking part in the action, with the result that such figures as Rhodes (Walter Huston) and Jameson (Basil Sydney) are likely to loom up with the effect of accident. . . . The direction had not believed in Rhodes and empire. It had not believed the story it was presumably telling."

Mark Van Doren

— Nation p360 Mr 18 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"A timorous tracing of the growth to power and wealth of the obscure diamond miner. . . The picture lacks the fearlessness history attributes to Rhodes. Even Walter Huston, in the title rôle, can't make it a moving document of colonial growing pains."

— + News-Wk p32 Mr 7 '36

"The new English photoplay obviously is intended as a sympathetic picture of British imperialism in action and an admiring tribute to the great Rhodes, the Empire Builder. . . A fine objectivity has somehow or other got into 'Rhodes' and, although Walter Huston and the producers obviously sympathize with the grandeur and the righteousness of Britain's manifest destiny, the film turns out to be a curiously eloquent editorial against the hypocrisy and greed that lie behind the seizure of a continent on behalf of 'civilization.' . . Mr. Huston is excellent as the cool and ruthless Empire Builder, but it is the Dutch actor, Oscar Homolka, as the president of the Boers, who provides the most effective performance in the picture. In fact, I think that Mr. Homolka's portrayal of the grim and heroic old Dutchman is one of the finest historical characterizations I have ever seen on stage or screen." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 Mr 2 '36

"The film's most moving scene is that in which Lobengula, excellently portrayed by a real chief from Matabeleland, realizes his friendliness with Rhodes has betrayed his people. The battle scenes, made in South Africa, are exciting enough for any one. This excitement unfortunately fades as the picture proceeds, with the epic dwindling forlornly away to a prolonged funeral sequence. Perhaps the English are too fair to make their own self-glorifying pictures. Hollywood waved the British flag more energetically and certainly more effectively in 'The Lives of a Bengal Lancer' and 'Clive of India.'" Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p8 F 29 '36

"Perhaps the man who organized the Kimberley diamond mines, and the colonies of South Africa, is too recent, or too awesome a figure (in view of the scholarships) for the British to treat him with that fine disdain for history which has enabled Hollywood to make some very distinguished historical photoplays. . . Kruger himself (Oscar Homolka) is little better than a caricature, played with overdone make-up and ridiculously slow timing, the latter, apparently, a result of faulty direction. . . It is a sad duty to have to report that in Mr. Huston's present characterization there is hardly even a faint glow." B. R. C.

+ — N Y Times p11 F 29 '36

"Although I am willing to honor and respect its good intentions—it contains several valid reasons for suspecting that it is potentially an effective film—I shall, also straightway have to add that it does not work out well. I like parts of it heartily, but there are not enough of these parts to save it. The excitement comes too spasmodically to keep the film vitally alive. As I watched it I kept wishing for more frequent bursts of inspired writing, flaming incidents. But they simply are not there and so 'Rhodes, the Diamond Master,' remains an undramatic, monotonously over-zealous memorial to a famous figure of history. . . No matter how good the acting is it remains an interesting might-have-been." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p13 Mr 2 '36

"I suppose it's a worthy and respectable effort, but I wish it didn't plod along with quite so much the tone of an obituary notice. The life of the 'diamond master, empire builder, and jungle conqueror' is presented in a school-room style from the days of the first diamond rush to his deathbed." John Mosher

New Yorker p59 F 29 '36

"One prime asset of 'Rhodes' is its obvious sincerity and meticulous attention to fact. Another asset is its refusal to drag in that usual cinema qua non, a false romance. Yet these qualities, which make it good history, also make it a painfully pedestrian picture."

— + Time p44 Mr 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The fact that it is historical in theme in no way detracts from its tense drama, impressive South African backgrounds and fine casting. It remains a real audience picture."

+ Box Office p37 Mr 7 '36

"Exceedingly well made drama of empire building that should go over nicely anywhere. It is a tense, interesting story and boasts a grand performance by Huston with the balance of the cast coming through in fine style."

+ Film Curb p5 F 29 '36

"Walter Huston is superb in his performance that gets over the feel of a giant personality altogether human. A classic characterization that will stand with the finest in screen history. Oscar Homolka sweeps into the spotlight with an equally powerful characterization as Paul Kruger. Two brilliant and powerful performances that lift this production out of the class of an historical biography into the class of a great entertainment on sheer histrionic talent of these two."

+ Film Daily p13 F 21 '36

"That one man, Rhodes, whose entire picture this is, has been personified with all the power that is inherent in the rôle by Walter Huston, whose unquestioned ability in just such a characterization as this, is once again amply demonstrated. The fact that the picture was produced in England, with English performers, with the exception, of course, of Huston, should make no difference whatever for any audience in this country. The force of Huston's dramatic, wholly human portrayal may be expected to carry to any audience. The performances are uniformly excellent. . . A strong picture of a strong man, the picture should be sold without difficulty, and with the cooperation of groups interested in better pictures."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 F 20 '36

"The entire picture centers around one man, Walter Huston in the title rôle, and as has been the case in previous efforts of this star, his performance dominates to such an extent that showmen might do well to make this a strong point in their exploitation campaigns. . . This is a full picturization of the highlights of the career of one of the World's greatest figures, and showmen have available the full co-operation of those groups demanding better pictures."

Motion Pict Herald p50 Mr 7 '36

"Big in scope, in appeal, 'Rhodes, the Empire Builder' is an accomplishment from GB's studios that cannot help but win respect from all audiences. Topnotch, of course, is the characterization by Walter Huston, who acts as if he were made for the Rhodes rôle. With a performance that will rank with the year's best, he dominates the show, makes the on-looker believe he is the Cecil Rhodes whose South African dream finally becomes a reality. . . Made in such fashion that it will need strong selling on this side of the pond, it deserves such backing. Unless the backing is there, the returns will probably not be anything but fair. Estimate: fine job; depends on handling."

N Y Exhibitor p34 F 25 '36

"'Rhodes' is one of the better English-made pictures. It cost more than most to turn out and while it may not get the women, its potentialities as a money-getter on this side appear pretty good. . . Although it does not make itself always clear as to history, the adaptation of 'Rhodes' and the production given it deliver what the average film fan is looking for. There is considerable sweep to the production, it is historically interesting, the performances of the cast are excellent, and technically much is to be found that impresses."

+ Variety p26 Mr 4 '36

RIDDLE RANCH. (Release date not determined) 59min Beaumont

Players: David Worth. June Marlow. Julian Rivero

Director: Charles Hutchinson

A Western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: Uninteresting; C: Possible."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Typical Saturday afternoon picture for the youngsters with interest centering on a horse. . . Simple plot. Unconvincing story. Cannot hope to interest other than juvenile patronage. Title tells the story, as the whole thing is more or less of a riddle."

— Box Office p23 D 21 '35

"It is nicely produced and should serve as good entertainment in those houses that play pictures of this classification. There is a lot of action, the cast handle their roles well, the photography is clear and clean-cut, the fights are realistic and the horse is especially outstanding."

+ Film Daily p8 D 3 '35

"Estimate: fair Western."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p34 Ja 10 '36

RIFFRAFF. Ja 3 '36 89min MGM

Players: Una Merkel. Spencer Tracy. Jean Harlow. Joseph Calleia

Director: J. Walter Ruben

"[The] leader of a waterfront gang gets himself in plenty of jams with the fisherman's union. Marrying the most beautiful girl along the docks starts more trouble, but after some hair-raising experiences he re-establishes himself and heads for a more peaceful life." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Only slightly entertaining. Adults: fair; 14-18: no; 8-14: no." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Jean Harlow's most sincerely played role." DAR

"Adults and young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"There are some excellent bits of characterization in this picture with Spencer Tracy giving an outstanding performance. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Well acted but perhaps a bit too real to be enjoyable. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This picture is more exciting than entertaining. . . The general atmosphere is not wholesome as the situations necessary to develop the plot are not admirable. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Sordid melodramatic story. Adults." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ — Fox W Coast Bul Ja 4 '36

"Fair. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Drama with comedy; C: Mature."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Not for the squeamish."

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 4 '36

"The characters in 'Riffraff' howl at one another in scenes that would be more convincing if the dialogue were spoken softly. It is the intonation of voices, not their volume of sound, that makes them impressive. . . I do not intend to convey the impression that 'Riffraff' is entirely without merit. I would recommend it to you as screen entertainment you should see. Its fishing industry background is virile, picturesque relief from drawing rooms and boudoirs, and if you happen to be less susceptible to noise that I am, you may find the story more interesting than I did."

— + Hollywood Spec p17 Ja 4 '36

"Spencer Tracy, always able, is misspent in another of those conventional movie characterizations of the conceited blowhard who finally suffers enough humiliation to break his ego, but not until he has thoroughly lost the respect of the audience for his asinine conceit and obstinacy. 'Riffraff' is just one more cat-and-dog movie written out of other movies, not out of life." Don Herold

— Life p28 Mr '36

"Miss Harlow currently looks even lovelier than ever. As to the picture I cannot be so enthusiastic. . . It seems to me that Mr. Tracy, one of the finest actors on the screen, is cruelly treated by the scenario writers." Richard Watts, Jr.

N Y Herald Tribune p8 Ja 13 '36

"'Riffraff' has a synthetic story, one very evidently written to order. Taken as a whole, it is only fair. Some of the dialogue and individual scenes are better than that." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p8 Ja 11 '36

"When it is content to be robust comedy of bad manners, 'Riffraff' is a free-wheeling vehicle for the amusing talents of the illustrious Jean Harlow. . . But Miss Harlow the comedienne is one person. Miss Harlow the tragedienne is another. And when the new photoplay chooses to accent the less convincing personality and to cast a somber eye upon such weighty matters as labor in revolt, the Red menace, motherhood and life in a woman's prison, then, alas, a boisterous jest skids down the slopes of melodramatic routine. . . Miss Harlow's surprise at finding herself in such a picture must be echoed by her audiences. It hardly seems fair to subject one of the screen's best comediennes to the rigors of mother love and a husband with an acute social consciousness." F. S. Nugent

— + N Y Times p14 Ja 13 '36

"[It is] a childishly preposterous offering." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p19 Ja 15 '36

"It is certainly very much to Jean Harlow's credit that she manages to give so much life to 'Riffraff.' Never, I should say . . . did a lady have a more thankless task. . . In general, I'd say of the picture that there is too much tuna fish and not enough Harlow." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p60 Ja 18 '36

Spring'd Republican p4c Ja 19 '36

"Maudlinity is the keynote of 'Riffraff.' Its situations come out of a can that was stale long before the first tuna was tinned. And it makes no effort to turn to account the genuine picturesqueness of the San Pedro, California docks, where most of 'Riffraff' was shot."

— Time p58 Ja 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p25 Ja 4 '36

"A swell picture and no mistake. Right up to the high standard of M-G-M attractions."
+ Film Curb p8 Ja 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"This is a lusty picture, full of action and comedy. . . It also has its moments of pathos and is realistic. Director J. Walter Ruben has provided a fast tempo and has done an excellent job."

+ Film Daily p7 D 24 '35

"This is a good comedy-melodrama, which, because of its rough and somewhat vulgar nature, should prove more satisfying to men. . . It is a little too vulgar for children or Sunday showing. Good for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 18 '36

"With a lusty comedy beginning it opens with as much hectic excitement as a bunch of exploding fireworks. It slows down in the middle when turning tensely dramatic and winds up with real human interest. The action is vivid; dialogue sharp and pointed. Both qualities are exactly what would be expected from hardboiled waterfront fisher folk, the characters with which 'Riffraff' deals."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 D 20 '35

"Here's the kind of modern geared picture the like of which has not been seen on the screen for some time. In a way it's a daring adventure; not that its moral value should be subject to question by any but the most straightlaced, but nevertheless it has a definite vestige of daringness, more ribaldry than anything else, with which to set off unusual popular enthusiasm for the show. . . Any possibility of moral objection should be eliminated by telling audiences that the story, its situations, action and dialogue are handled with realism, sincerity, and truth."

Motion Pict Herald p64 D 28 '35

"Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p32 Ja 10 '36

"The villainy of Joseph Calleia is more likeable than not. As a Greek dialectician [he] obtains a generous share of laughs, and it's this factor that relieves the otherwise intense melodrama and saves the picture."

+ Variety p18 Ja 15 '36

"[The] picture lacks impressiveness, flounders considerably through story unevenness, forced situations and spotty performances."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 19 '35

RING AROUND THE MOON. Ja 1 '36 68min
Chesterfield

Players: Donald Cook, Erin O'Brien-Moore

Director: Charles Lamont

Based on a novel of the same title by Vere Hobart. The tale of a reporter who elopes with the boss's daughter and thereby starts a series of unlucky situations which in the end are vanquished.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."

N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y; Fair; C: Little appeal."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p27 Ja 4 '36

"Can be classed as above the average program [material]."

+ Film Curb p9 Ja 11 '36

"Suitable for all. [Family.]"

Harrison's Reports Ja 4 '36

"Ring Around the Moon" is a better than usual independent picture, set amidst a newspaper background. . . Because the settings and direction are a bit above Chesterfield average, because the cast has some capable players, this deserves more than passing attention. Family comedy drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

ROAD GANG. F 15 '36 61min Warner

Players: Donald Woods, Kay Linaker, Carlyle Moore, Jr. Joseph King

Director: Louis King

"A stark, vivid expose of life in a road camp and prison mine. A youthful news writer incurs the enmity of the political would-be dictator of his State and is railroaded to an unspeakable road camp for five years at hard labor." Sel Motion Pict

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Entertainment values fade in a series of brutally horrible incidents in which are sounded the depths of human depravity. Adults: distasteful; children: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Details of prison life are presented which are so brutal and harrowing that only a morbid mentality could witness them. Horrors are piled upon horrors and the film has little excuse for its existence." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A revolting and depressing picturization of the conditions that could exist in a prison controlled by ruthless politicians. Not suitable for children nor for sensitive adults. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

— Fox W Coast Bul Ja 25 '36

"Despite the cruelty and harrowing suspense, a well chosen cast and expert direction make this a most convincing picture. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ja 11 '36

"This film goes to such length in brutal reality that to most people it will be both horrifying and revolting. Adolescents, 12-16: by no means; children, 8-12: horrible."

Motion Pict R F '36

"Based partly on imagination and in a measure on real conditions this sadistic orgy showing the brutality in a Southern penal road gang to which a fearless young reporter is railroaded by his political enemies is not entertainment. It has some significance as an expose, and some social value as a warning against Dictatorships. This melodrama has virile power even though it offends the sensibilities and is an eye-opener and thought-provoker. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 15 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"This picture has power and sincerity, but it is sickeningly brutal. As an appeal for justice it deserves credit. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This is red meat, and only for those whose nerves are strong." Laura Elston

Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"A front-page social subject that is so compromised by presentation in a claptrap story that the cruel incidents seem little more than excuses for film sensationalism."

— Christian Science Monitor p13 F 29 '36

"It is too unpleasant to experience popularity as diversion. But no one, I feel, viewing it can fail to leave the theatre unimpressed by the stupid, brutal prison regulations and system of organized vengeance the production reveals." Allan Hersholt

Hollywood Spec p12 F 29 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ROAD GANG—Continued

"Although it lacks the expertness, the vitality and the honesty of [I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang] it still succeeds in being an effective indictment of the sentimental theory that convicts should be tortured for their own good. Perhaps the work is somewhat hindered by the fact that it is inclined to grow diffuse in its attacks. . . . But it seldom fails to be striking. . . . Even when some of its plot developments seem too slickly devised for the purposes of truth, the narrative seldom entirely loses its force." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p8 F 24 '36

"It is one of the winter's more distasteful pictures. 'Road Gang' is an illustrated essay on sadism, with little or no excuse for existence except as a shocker. Constant repetition dulls even the brutality of the beatings and fights. Even as a shocker this film is dull. . . . Newspaper advertisements have described the characters as 'torture-strikers.' This reviewer might right now be described as a striker against any more torture pictures."

— N Y Sun p16 F 24 '36

"Possessing neither the crusading strength of I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang nor the arresting vigor of Paul Muni's bitter performance, the new photoplay is a minor melodrama in all departments. . . . Mr. Woods performs with his customary sincerity and lack of conviction, and the [other members of the cast] do as well as they can with the little opportunity that they have." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p14 F 24 '36

"'Road Gang' is one of the most depressing and brutal films I have ever seen. . . . Its attempts to crusade in behalf of humanity look forced and fabricated. . . . It resorts too often to theatrical tricks. 'Road Gang' may occasionally arouse the emotions, but it seldom convinces the intellect of its integrity." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p10 F 24 '36

"In spite of its prison brutalities and its hint of municipal fraudulence, it's stogy and unreal. It's full of the tricks, but you never believe any of them." John Mosher

New Yorker p76 Mr 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Morbid melodrama of prison road gangs in the South. The sadistic note impairs its entertainment value. Adults."

Box Office p25 F 29 '36

"There is no let up in the stark realism and it is pretty much of a he-man picture. Doubtful if the women will like it."

+ — Film Curb p10 F 22 '36

"In concocting this drama, effort appears to have been made to emphasize the tortures of a southern prison camp to the sensational degree, and while the story is thereby given something of a horror punch, it also results in giving audiences an uncomfortable feeling that they are glad to shake off and this is not so good either from an entertainment or a box-office standpoint."

+ — Film Daily p9 F 25 '36

"It should appeal to men who enjoy virile, 'meaty' entertainment; women will find it too harrowing and depressing. Since most of the action takes place in the prison camps, showing the squalid surroundings, as well as the bestiality of the guards, it is not pleasant or elevating. Too strong for children. Adult entertainment."

+ — Harrison's Reports F 29 '36

"This picture emerges as active, occasionally exciting, melodrama, with, however, a bit too much of prison farm brutality for the youngsters. . . . On the whole the film is lively entertainment."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p10 Ja 29 '36

"Exceptional exploitation is called for in showmen's handling of this picture, for it is sheer drama, of the type that borders on brutality in spots. The action naturally is in the direction of the male element of audiences, so that campaign concentration necessarily is toward the women-folk."

Motion Pict Herald p40 F 25 '36

"With interest hot these days over attempted dictatorships, exploiters can shoot the works, but should bear in mind that too torrid exploitation might react. Estimate: results will depend on exploitation."

N Y Exhibitor p54 Mr 10 '36

"How the picture will be taken in the south is a matter that southern exhibitors and film bookers will need to answer for themselves. Idea of a northern newspaper editor hopping into an aeroplane and spending an afternoon putting a southern state's politics on a civilized plane is not precisely flattering. . . . Romantic footage is lean. Opening footage of the picture is distinctly awkward in direction and dialog. There is no suavity in delineation. Villains immediately are marked as such."

Variety p15 F 26 '36

"This is a grim, stark preachment against crime hung on a thin, commonplace plot. . . . Because of its barbaric treatment of human lives it will be hard for anyone to believe such conditions could exist in America. Added to this exaggeration, the some fifty or more minutes of morbid delineation of prison life will destroy for many an entertainment value."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 15 '36

ROBIN HOOD OF EL DORADO. Ap 10 '36
86min MGM

Players: Warner Baxter. Ann Loring. Bruce Cabot. Eric Linden

Director: William Wellman

Based on biography of same title by Walter Noble Burns. "Herein is recounted the almost legendary story of Joaquin Murrieta, a Mexican peon of the California of the golden days of 1848, when Americans swept into the territory, and the Mexicans virtually were swept out. [Warner Baxter] in the title role portrays the farmer who turned bandit and sought an entirely justified revenge for wrongs done him and his family." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults. (Racial hatred might incite children.) Am Legion Auxiliary

"Wholesale slaughter might prohibit this film to sensitive audiences, though it has dash and color. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature." DAR

"Adults and young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Of necessity there is much brutality and shedding of blood. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"There is superb horsemanship projected against a background of finely photographed scenery. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Photography is exceptional and the life of the early days is vividly reproduced. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This picture is anything but complimentary to the spirit of the old settlers of early California as it shows only two men out of the large group (who struck out for gold in the Sutter settlement) with a sign of human kindness. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ — Fox W Coast Bul Mr 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"We are, the screen tells us sensibly, not the people without sin who should cast the first stone. It is a valuable lesson, even though it is presented in terms that are not as powerful as they should have been. . . Much of the narrative is vivid, moving and exciting, but unfortunately it lacks the vitality, the ruggedness and the savage power of 'Viva Villa.'" Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p8 Mr 14 '36

"This is an elaborate production, and a dull one, mixing blatant sentimentality with brutality of the shocker variety. The fist fights, the hangings, the floggings, even the separate killings of three beautiful girls, seem no more important and no more convincing than the tears of Joaquin Murrieta. . . Script and direction are confused, the story pointless. This type of blood-and-thunder drama used to be turned out by the dozen in the old days of silent movies. Children loved them; children will probably enjoy this one." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p10 Mr 14 '36

"Although 'The Robin Hood of El Dorado' is superficially a romantic and colorful saga of the famous Mexican outlaw, Joaquin Murrieta, it also happens to be a brutally frank indictment of American injustice, greed and cowardice in the years of the California gold rush. . . Perhaps the most satisfying part of the picture is the realization we bring from it that America, for all its charged suppression of free speech, is dispassionate enough to accept even so camouflaged a reflection on its morals as this. In a sense it is ironic, too, that Hollywood, unable to make films of 'It Can't Happen Here,' 'Paths of Glory' or the 'Forty Days of Musa Dagh' through fear of treading on foreign sensibilities, is not restrained at all when it comes to pointing an accusing finger at certain unpalatable phases of our national history. It would seem that the only toes we safely may tread upon are our own." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 14 '36

"It is a frequently vivid, exciting, colorful and thoroughly entertaining film—one of the few good photoplays that have arrived on Broadway in the last few weeks. Telling sympathetically and sincerely, but with no great dramatic appeal, the treatment to which Mexicans living in California were subjected by Americans after the Mexican War, 'Robin Hood of El Dorado' is more than just a hard-riding, quick-shooting melodrama, because it is deeper than a mere show. . . It must be put down as a good but slightly pompous and overwrought show." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p15 Mr 16 '36

"Result is the goriest picture of the year, well-acted, beautifully photographed, but prevented from being a second 'Viva Villa' by its sententious moralizing, its frequent digression into scenes suited only to light operetta."

+ — Time p49 Mr 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"We believe this picture will appeal strongly to all classes of film fans and that they will stamp it as most satisfactory entertainment."

+ Film Curb p6 Mr 14 '36

"This is a super-Western. . . At times the story of the injustice done to a harmless Mexican peon and his efforts to avenge the murder of his wife and brother is intensely dramatic and in other moments, goes sluggish when atmospheric shots are piled on."

+ — Film Daily p6 Mr 13 '36

"Although well produced, this action melodrama is too brutal for most picture-goers; its appeal will be directed mainly to men. . . The details are too harrowing for entertainment purposes. . . Unsuitable for children, adolescents, or Sundays. Adult entertainment."

+ — Harrison's Reports Mr 21 '36

"Exhibitors will have little trouble in selling 'Robin Hood of El Dorado.' . . Baxter has a large established following in such roles, and if the picture is not oversold as an epic, it will do satisfactory business. The foreign market is assured. . . Neither in direction nor in screen play does this tale of early California capture the color of its time. The material was there, but remains unrealized. Only in a few instances, all too few, does the camera become a fluid story teller. This lack is made all the more apparent by a preponderance of subtitles which set and re-set the scene."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 12 '36

"There is much in the picture to stir the sympathies of audiences, and much to stir their pulses in the rapid-fire action of a lawless era and hard-living area."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Mr 9 '36

"[An] uncommonly exciting, colorful and well-balanced job has been done in transcribing this tale. . . Essentially 'Robin Hood of El Dorado' stacks up as fare which bids to be a little too strong for the softer sensibilities. Men should go for it in a big way, while with children it will rate as a Western of extraordinarily high-powered dimensions. 'Robin Hood' can't escape from being compared with 'Viva Villa'. . . Thing that gave 'Villa' a sweeping dramatic canvas is missing in 'Robin Hood,' and that was Villa's love for his fellow peons which reeked with patriotic zeal. In the case of Murrieta it was hate that started him off on his rampage of gringo slaughter."

+ Variety p17 Mr 18 '36

"Warner Baxter in the title role is a marquee name to conjure with; subject matter falls within a favored phase of popular reading and picture theme, and merit of the film itself should give it substantial score at the pay window. Material help for business will be tieup of picture with story serialization, offering good exploitation. . . [The] picture has impressive magnitude, sweeping action and pageantry of mass riding and fighting against well-established atmosphere of gold diggings and bandit rendezvous."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 12 '36

ROLLING ALONG. See Music Goes 'Round

ROSE MARIE. Ja 31 '36 110min MGM

Players: Jeanette MacDonald. Nelson Eddy. Reginald Owen. Allan Jones. James Stewart

Director: W. S. Van Dyke

Music: Rudolf Friml. Herbert Stothart

Based on the operetta by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein, II. "Story has Miss MacDonald, an opera singer, in Canada searching for her brother wanted for murder. Eddy, a Mountie, on his way to get his man, the brother, meets Miss MacDonald when her guide deserts her. Knowing who she is, and her mission, Eddy, despite his love for her, is forced to arrest her brother." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Excellent. Mature. Family." DAR
++ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 25 '36

"Family and junior matinee. Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Highly recommended as one of the exceptional musical films. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"The entire production is one of extreme beauty and charm, sheer delight to eye and ear, [and will satisfy] even the most exacting in their demand for fine entertainment. Adults. Family and junior matinee." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A picture not to be missed." Nat Soc of New England Women

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ROSE MARIE—Continued

"A distinctly entertaining and constructive picture, which will prove a great joy to all beholders. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"All ages." Mrs T. G. Winter
++ Fox W Coast Bul F 8 '36

"Adults, Family and junior matinees. Outstanding."

+ Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: good."

Motion Pict R F '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Outstanding musical comedy."
Par M p56 Mr '36

"Adults, family and junior matinee."
Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Most musical shows when transferred to the screen retain the plot but change all the songs. 'Rose Marie' reverses that order and turns out to be one of the most diverting in some time. . . One of the most entertaining scenes is the backwoods cafe where Rose Marie, whose money has been stolen, tries vainly to recoup by singing to the motley array of guests. These go right on with their high-hearted conversation or quarreling, only ceasing when the manager puts a local entertainer whose rough and ready shouting and hip-wriggling enchants the company. Gilda Gray, too long absent from the screen, is excellent as the pinch hitter." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 8 '36

"Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy as opera star and Mountie, give a completely satisfactory account of themselves, and while there are enough of the old melodies to engender a gently nostalgic delight, there is enough of the new and spirited to make this wholly delightful entertainment." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p40 Mr '36

"Arthur Hammerstein's colorful operetta in its new form, slightly altered from the original to embrace the wider scope of the medium, is a production of merit in every respect." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p386 Ja 31 '36

"[It is] one of the most delightful bits of screen entertainment the public is going to find on this year's program. . . Neither Jeanette nor Eddy ever has appeared to better advantage. Their rich and appealing voices fairly revel in the opportunities the music provides, and their acting has ease and naturalness that make them an ideal couple to share a romance. . . The photography of William Daniels is outstanding. I am a strong believer in the part the camera can play in enhancing the box-office value of a motion picture. . . Daniels demonstrates here the extent to which visual appeal can strengthen the entertainment value of a screen offering. He has shots of water and clouds which are of surpassing beauty."

+ Hollywood Spec p9 Ja 18 '36

"If examined too closely, 'Rose Marie' is easily disclosed as an overtheatrical, somewhat preposterous display of what goes on beneath the pine boughs of the Northern woods. But taken broadly the film has its appealing moments—a great many of them. . . But even if 'Rose Marie,' as a tale, never becomes the heart-rending thing it sets out to be, it remains free-flowing entertainment. Crisply directed by W. S. Van Dyke and given majestic natural settings, the film lets Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald sing almost continuously. And that, it would seem, is quite enough for any picture."

Beverly Hills

+ Liberty p31 F 22 '36

"Too long by at least a half hour. One might easily forego the incredibly tasteless Indian Dance and a good deal of the 'When I hear you calling, yoo-hoo-hoo-hoo-hoo.'"

New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"Usually when the filmed operetta goes outdoors it grows uncomfortable and shows unhappy signs of embarrassment. 'Rose Marie' darts freely about the lakes and mountains of the Canadian Northwest and never loses its poise and its sense of wellbeing. It seems to me that it is a trifle long-winded upon occasion, but it is invariably an exceptionally successful example of its difficult cinema school. . . Not being an opera lover, I could have wished that Miss MacDonald had devoted less of her time in the film to singing choice arias from 'Romeo et Juliet' and 'La Tosca,' but I know that she manages them with characteristic expertness. . . Mr. Eddy, although his role is less difficult, is perhaps even more successful. He sings splendidly, and even rather thrillingly, and he handles his romantic role with engaging straightforwardness. Always he manages to seem a genuine human being, which, I suspect, is something of an achievement for a singing actor with pretensions to vocal excellence." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p4 F 1 '36

"A successor to 'Naughty Marietta' was long enough in coming along, but it was worth the waiting. The glorious singing team of Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald may be heard again in a picture at least as good as their first one. In fact, since the story was less typically an operetta book, I enjoyed 'Rose Marie' rather more than the Victor Herbert film. . . 'Rose Marie' is certainly the most charming of the film operettas, gay, romantic, sufficiently dramatic, and always melodious."

Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p8 F 1 '36

"The result is another screen operetta which has both charm and vigor and which is as pleasant as this form of cinema entertainment is ever likely to be. Handsome, lavishly staged, imaginative, 'Rose Marie' is a gayly romantic and rhapsodically tuneful piece of work. Containing one of the most melodious of all the scores that Rudolf Friml has ever written, the film has the further advantage of being sung to utter perfection by lovely Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy and to have a pace and vitality seldom found in screen operetta, because of Mr. Van Dyke's skilful direction." William Boehnel

++ N Y World-Telegram p21 F 1 '36

"As you can learn in your history books, a musical comedy called 'Rose Marie' ran for some two years in New York, perhaps a decade ago. That, you know, though not phenomenal, is still a respectable record. Now up pops the movie of this masterpiece, the worthy old tale repolished and serving as a framework for a series of duets from that notable couple, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. There are some tuneful items of the popular variety, a snack or two from grand opera ('Romeo and Juliet,' 'Tosca'), one or two musical renderings of Indian love calls, or mating calls, and a tendency to humor, a quality I am inclined to look for in musical shows and don't always find. . . The freak predicament of a prima donna in a wilderness is comedy, and done well here, and Madame MacDonald herself would appear not averse to humor. Mr. Eddy, I should say, is not so interested in the comic aspects of a situation." John Mosher

New Yorker p68 F 8 '36

"Goodness knows, there are flaws. It follows, rather shamelessly, the scheme of situation that proved so popular in 'Naughty Marietta.' . . Aside from a slight awkwardness in the out-of-door sequences, and a preposterous Indian festival (lo, the poor Indians are but prancing extras), the acting is merry and frolicsome, the scenery exhilarating, and the lines fetchingly humorous. . . [Miss MacDonald and Nelson Eddy's] lines, although a bit sophisticated for the North Woods, are given a most satisfactory reading, and their singing (you know this already) is delightful. What I mean is, it's all so much fun!"

+ Stage p9 Mr '36

"Acting with considerable charm, and bursting frequently into song in the midst of Canadian wilds, Miss MacDonald and Mr. Eddy should provoke an even greater box-office triumph than by their first effort, 'Naughty Marietta.'"

+ Time p26 F 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Rose Marie' is truly a magnificent production from every angle and a worthy successor to 'Naughty Marietta.' It will make the popular team of Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald more popular than ever. Will be a tremendous success and establish new box-office records everywhere. Family."

+ + Box Office p33 Ja 18 '36

"This screen version of the stage musical success spells box office and has been superbly done. . . It is high grade entertainment in every way with an appeal to all classes and there is no doubt that it will draw well and please wherever shown. . . One of those pictures that all exhibitors look for."

+ Film Curb p13 Ja 18 '36

"'The Indian Love Call' is still the outstanding number and is used in some well contrived situations. It is gloriously sung individually and in duet. Other songs from the original stage production are 'Rose Marie' and the 'Totem Pole' number. . . Hunt Stromberg has given this everything that should make it a showman's delight."

+ Film Daily p10 Ja 13 '36

"An outstanding production, for the masses as well as the cultured picture-goers. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ + Harrison's Reports F 8 '36

"The story is ideally suited to the talents of Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald and unfolds on the screen as a gripping romance with the musical interludes spotted for their maximum entertainment advantage. . . With definite appeal for all, the picture should draw even those who are not confirmed moviegoers."

+ Motion Pict Daily p16 Ja 10 '36

"Opportunity to present this picture may actually be considered a privilege. Patrons may be expected to consider its showing an event of importance, an occasion of unusual interest and satisfaction, as indicated by the spirited reaction on the part of the paying preview audience. . . Salvoes of applause, which greeted the title and several times interrupted the preview, may be accepted as the basis for [these] remarks."

+ + Motion Pict Herald p44 Ja 18 '36

"Theatres which grossed well with 'Naughty Marietta' should expect as much or more from this. . . Estimate: good box office everywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p26 F 10 '36

"Strong impression left by the Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy twain in 'Naughty Marietta' is surpassed in 'Rose Marie,' Metro's operatic Western. Like the Northwest Mounted Police this entry will get the money. . . The 'Rose Marie' music under cinematic presentation takes on additional values through the enhancement of the camera and the sound track. The classic 'Indian Love Call' as it reechoes through the 'Canadian' woodlands (actual location at Lake Tahoe on the Cal-Nev border, and very beautiful) means more than it ever did in its stage original."

+ Variety p12 F 5 '36

"A standard stage offering for the past two decades, it should repeat its success on the screen. The MacDonald-Eddy combination is perfect casting. . . [They] should increase their following considerably with this picture, should be definitely established as the screen's top vocal team. . . Picture is about 90% exteriors, all made in the Lake Tahoe country which is perfect. Scenery is eye-filling and Van Dyke has backed every scene with the grand country."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 9 '36

ROSE OF THE RANCHO. Ja 8 '36 85min Paramount

Players: Gladys Swarthout, John Boles, Charles Bickford, H. B. Warner, Willie Howard, Herb Williams

Director: Marion Gering

Based on the play of the same title by Richard Walton Tully and David Belasco. "The story is set in the days after the Mexican War when the Spanish landholders were the victims of American adventurers, who were stealing their lands because the proud Spaniards refused to register them." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fair. Y: Fairly good. C: Little interest." Christian Century p95 Ja 15 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Good musical romance." Par M p56 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Wkly Guide D 21 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is fortunate for 'Rose of the Rancho' that Gladys Swarthout is such an attractive young woman and such a capable singer. For the story of the film is a pretty leisurely and conventional affair even for operetta. . . Though the recording apparatus is not too kind to some of Miss Swarthout's high notes, it is clear that she has an admirable voice. . . The film is all largely an excuse to bring Miss Swarthout before the camera. It is a well meant effort, but Hollywood should do better by her than this." E. F. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ja 11 '36

"Miss Swarthout is undeniably lovely, and her voice records superbly, so 'Rose of the Rancho' is undoubtedly stand-out entertainment." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p38 F '36

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 11 '36

"[It] is a sad introduction to the moviegoer for Gladys Swarthout, young Metropolitan Opera star. The production at times reaches a deplorable state of high school theatricals, preventing the pretty Miss Swarthout at the outset from bridging the gap between arias in the Metropolitan to frankly 'popular' numbers in a 'horse opera.' Nor does the strong assemblage of talent aid her, handicapped as they are, too, by the treatment accorded the production on the whole." J. P. Cunningham

— Commonweal p330 Ja 17 '36

"'Rose of the Rancho,' even if it is a revival of an old livery stable opus, is a step in the right direction when it comes to opera-singer pictures. I mean, it brings in an opera singer (and a honey: Gladys Swarthout) without imposing upon us another biography of a musician. . . I like all these opera girls. They have something besides coiffures. You know it's talent—not direction." Don Herold

+ Life p29 Mr '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

happening. Might have been a great help had a director who understood Western technique been given the assignment. Direction of the outdoor stuff, particularly the chases, is very bad."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 8 '36

S

(s)SACRED CITY OF THE MAYAN INDIANS. F 22 '36 8min MGM

Director: James A. FitzPatrick

"Indian costumes copied from the early Spanish conquistadors, native buildings and customs with mountain backgrounds, close ups of natives at play and at work, music from a marimba made of gourds—these and other scenes make this a very interesting short." Motion Pict Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"Visiting an unfrequented Mayan city in Guatemala, James A. FitzPatrick obtained an unusually fine subject in Technicolor."

+ Film Daily p8 Ja 23 '36

"The photography in Technicolor is gorgeous."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 23 '36

"As a travelogue, particularly with the off-screen dialogue of James A. FitzPatrick describing everything, this should please."

+ Motion Pict Herald p49 F 1 '36

"It will please anywhere. Very good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p40 Ja25 '36

SAGEBRUSH TROUBADOUR. N 25 '35 68min Republic

Players: Barbara Pepper, Smiley Burnette, Gene Autry

Director: Joseph Kane

A Western mystery melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Junior matinee." Nat Bd of R

Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"A, Y and C: Western melodrama."

Par M p56 Mr '36

"Junior matinee."

Wkly Guide N 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Curb p12 D 1 '35

"First-rate Western with plenty of action and some pleasing musical numbers."

+ Film Daily p8 N 19 '35

"They seem to be putting everything into Gene Autry Westerns as time goes on. Not satisfied with songs between all of the chases, Autry turns detective and solves a murder mystery in the newest of his series."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 N 19 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

SCANDALS OF PARIS. D 14 '35 63min Regal

Players: Wendy Barrie, Zelma O'Neal, Gene Gerrard

Directors: John Stoddard, W. Victor Hanbury

The film was made in England. In this romantic musical comedy a rich soap manufacturer's daughter accidentally becomes an artist's model and keeps her identity a secret. When her father's company buys the picture for an advertisement of his soap, the way is smoothed for a happy ending to the young couple's romance.

Trade Paper Reviews

"At any rate it provides excellent material for a dual bill. Has been well produced and recorded and given a nice production."

+ Film Curb p15 Ja 11 '36

"Entertaining British-made production combining some musical numbers with romantic comedy. . . Miss Barrie is a very likeable heroine."

+ Film Daily p6 D 31 '35

"Here's a surprise attraction that ought to create favor. . . With a gay spirit, lilting music that runs throughout, some good numbers by Zelma O'Neal, this is worth more than passing interest. Family comedy with music."

+ N Y Exhibitor p40 D 25 '35

SCROOGE. D 20 '35 78min Paramount-Twickenham

Players: Seymour Hicks, Donald Calthrop, Barbara Everest, Philip Frost

Director: Henry Edwards

Based on A Christmas Carol, by Charles Dickens. The film was made in England. "The dreary, cruel tale of a miser contrasted with the joy and peace of true Christians, on a snow-covered Christmas Eve." (Endorsed Motion Pict)

A guide to the study of Scrooge, the screen version of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol, prepared by William F. Bauer, is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents per copy. In his Guide, Mr. Bauer has considered the book, photoplay, acting, photography and music.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A faithful reproduction of a delicate fantasy—splendid characterizations. Very good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Charles Dickens' Christmas classic is brought to the screen in a superb manner. Fidelity to the original story, to the costumes and appearance of the characters as he painted them, together with the faithful reproduction of the scenery, customs and manners of the period add to the general delightful effect. The whole production merits the highest praise. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Primarily a picture for the Christmas holidays. Suggested for schools and libraries. Family." Nat Bd of R

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"This production of 'A Christmas Carol' comes to the screen with a distinctly Dickensian flavor due in large measure to excellent casting and interesting photographic effects. . . Holiday audiences will revel in this picturization of the familiar story. Adults & 14-18: very good; 8-14: good. Family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

SCROOGE—Continued

"Unusual and artistic photography, interesting lighting effects, a fine maintenance of atmosphere and an appropriate musical background add much to the entire production. Notable are the characterizations of Sir Seymour Hicks as Scrooge and Donald Calthrop as Cratchit. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Unusual settings, quaint costumes and manners lend interest to this emotional Christmas picture. Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"An inspiring interpretation of Dickens' 'Christmas Carol,' beautifully acted and photographed. A particularly attractive film for holiday audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul D 28 '35

"This English production with its artistry of settings, fine camera work, exceptional portrayals of characters, understanding direction, is one that will give delight to all audiences. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) D 16 '35

"The direction has not made this picture a ghost story thriller but, with fine restraint, has kept the supernatural elements within the realms of fantasy. Family. Outstanding social drama."

+ + Jt Estimates D 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p176 N '35

"Fidelity to the original story, to the costumes and appearance of the characters as he painted them, together with the faithful reproduction of the scenery, customs and manners of the period add to the general delightful effect. The whole production merits the highest praise. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"A well produced and interesting picture for those who like Dickens. . . Suggested for schools and libraries. Family."

+ Wkly Guide N 30 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The appealing early Victorian costumes are worn with easy grace by all concerned, and the settings are delightful, particularly the glimpses of fine Georgian houses. Scrooge occupies a splendid Tudor bed with linenfold paneling that would make a collector moan with envy. . . The famous Christmas dinner is exactly as described on the printed page, with the goose and pudding, looking too small for such a large family, just as they should, but eaten so zestfully and with such pleasure." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '35

"A notable cast of all-English players has captured with fine artistry Dicken's rejuvenation of the squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old sinner. The performers and merry ol' England herself in the background give it that Dickensonian touch." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p272 Ja 3 '36

Manchester Guardian p13 D 21 '35

"A faithful, tender and mellow edition of [Dickens'] timeless Yuletide fable. . . Granting it is less than perfect technically—it suffers from underlighting and occasional recording lapses—'Scrooge' still deserves one's affectionate regard. It is superbly played, its lines are plucked straight from the source book, and, thanks to understanding adaptation and direction, it carries on at a pace which preserves the Dickensian flavor without denial of modern insistence upon more rapid story development. The danger of adapting so widely read an author as Dickens to the screen always has been that the mortals chosen to fill the rôles will prove so much less human than the characters he created out of pen, paper and genius. Happily, there is no such disappointment here. . . Sir Seymour's portrayal of Scrooge is, of course, the high light of the photoplay. . . Mr. Calthrop's Bob Cratchit could not be bettered." F. S. N.

+ N Y Times p11 D 14 '35

"Beautifully acted and faithful to the letter and spirit of the original story, it is a film that merits the highest praise. . . Although it is not lacking in invention and sentimentality, this little ghost story, which has warmed and uplifted millions by its message, must have been particularly difficult to screen. [It has been] directed in such an intelligent manner that it comes over with freshness and charm. The pace is just right—neither too slow nor too fast—the costumes and the characters are as Dickens painted them, and the customs, manners and scenery of the period are faithfully followed so that the entire production has a warming glow about it. . . It is, in short, a performance that brings Scrooge to life on the screen exactly as Dickens imagined him." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 D 17 '35

Springfd Republican p6 D 22 '35

"Projected with tenderness but without sentimentality are the sequences showing the rousing Christmas of the Cratchit family."

+ Time p36 D 23 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Curb p20 D 15 '35

"Catching the Dickens spirit with fine effect, this British production makes an excellent special offering for the Christmas season, though its entertainment values are not confined to that time of the year alone. . . Though the dialogue is a bit British-accented, the human interest nature of the story makes it easily assimilated and will evoke response from audiences generally."

+ Film Daily p4 N 30 '35

"Some of the poignant suffering of Scrooge in a dream sequence leading up to his reform is dragged out to a point that may prove depressing to holiday audiences, but the picture as a whole is extremely well done. . . It can be sold as a family picture, for the appeal is aimed at adults as well as children. Women's groups and high school and college English classes, and those who go in for the so-called 'better things' will take to it, too."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p15 N 27 '35

"All the charm of the Dickens story has been transferred from the printed page to the mobile screen and the characters are sketched with such artistry as to provide abundance of the elements for a favorable audience reaction to the production as a whole."

+ Motion Pict Herald p53 D 21 '35

N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

"Whoever selected the supporting cast possesses an uncanny knack for picking types to fit the story which, of course, is laid in England around 1840. They wear the clothes of the period as if accustomed to doing so. Photography is unique in that most of it is shadowy, and suggests a lot more than it reveals. With no effort at massive settings, both the interiors and exteriors provide an atmosphere that gives the impression one is seeing the genuine locations. . . Only criticism to be made is the amount of footage. With only one situation—a simple one—there is too much repetition of incidentals leading up to the change of heart of the old miser who sees the error of his mispent life and reforms on Christmas Day."

+ — Variety p34 D 11 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SECOND BUREAU. F 16 '36 100min Le Pelletier

Players: Jean Murat. Vera Korene. Jeanne Crispin

Director: Pierre Billon

Based on the novel of the same title by Charles Robert-Dumas. This film was made in France and has English sub-titles. Also known as Le Deuxième Bureau. "Erna Flieder, ace of the woman agents of the German Intelligence Service, is called into action to find out how the second bureau of its French counterpart has learned the secret of a new German gas. Against her is matched the handsome Benoit, sent from Paris to the town where the gas is being manufactured to get more details." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"An efficiently-handled melodrama of espionage in peacetime. . . The continuity at the beginning, however, is distinctly confused, and for a short while there is even some difficulty in determining which of the characters is which, particularly as we know that at any given moment they may be endeavouring to disguise their identities. In addition, although the backgrounds are often presented with authenticity, it is sometimes hard to know where particular sequences are located—whether in France, Germany, or the neutral country between. Suitability: adults."

+ — Mo Film Bul Ja '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Le Deuxième Bureau' has the speed of action of American films and the fertility of invention of the Gallic mind. In this picture you are halted abruptly, hung up as it were, by the sheer imagination of certain episodes. . . The opening scene . . . is a beautiful example of a restrained approach to terror. The heroine, by the way, is an actress. . . Perhaps this is but another example of the unexpected which, while it would not be tolerated in American films, is common enough in any French picture that rises above trash." D. W. Buchanan

+ Canadian Forum p15 Ja '36

"'Second Bureau' makes no pretensions to being anything else than a melodrama. It is, however, a good melodrama. The director has kept his characters plausible and his events realistic, while losing none of the ordinary opportunities for excitement in spy-films."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 10 '36

"The dialogue is in French, with English subtitles, and to this reviewer, the confusion of the piece was heightened by the fact that so many of the male characters look alike, or at least, give the impression of belonging to the same bureau. . . The picture has been badly edited and cut, apparently, or else it is confusingly and amateurishly directed." M. T.

— + N Y Herald Tribune p10 F 17 '36

"'Second Bureau' is a drama of espionage, and a livelier and more amusing tale than we are accustomed to expect from Continental studios. . . The cast is a good-looking one, with both Vera Korene and Jeanne Crispin up to Hollywood standards. It is a competent one too, keeping the highly conventional plot up to a quick pace." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p16 F 17 '36

"Followers of espionage films will not have much trouble in anticipating the ending of 'Second Bureau.' . . This picture is excellently photographed and contains many highly interesting scenes. The English titles are well placed and not too numerous." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p21 F 17 '36

"When the various French and German spies stop tripping over each other in 'Second Bureau,' and the debris is cleared up, you find that the film is just another spy story with very little in it to recommend, in spite of the fact that according to reports, it was selected as one of the ten best French films of the last year and is still doing capacity business at the Aubert Palace in Paris. . . Confused, fumbling, ponderous and pedestrian, 'Second Bureau,' has none of the dash and excitement you expect from a spy film, even one that takes itself seriously. There is a nice contrast between the stiff Prussian methods and casual manner in which the French go about their spy work and some of the acting especially by Jean Murat as Benoit and Vera Korene as Erna, is good, but on the whole the film is pretty feeble and unsatisfactory entertainment." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p13 F 17 '36

"'Second Bureau' is a rather dull film. . . It is a great pity, for what an amusing film of the secret service could be made if the intention was satiric and not romantic, the treatment realistic and not violent." Graham Greene

— + Spec p91 Ja 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"While the story lumbers along on heavily emphasized sequences which lead to the climax, this account of the activities of the French military intelligence bureau registers as another commonplace spy drama."

— + Motion Pict Daily p6 F 20 '36

"Estimate: fair, for restricted audiences."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p59 Mr 10 '36

"Despite its one hundred minutes' length, 'Second Bureau' is one of the most interesting and entertaining films to come across the Atlantic in some time. Credit should be split up between adapter, director and uniformly excellent cast. [It] looks like a sure bet for arty houses where they're accustomed to viewing superimposed titles. Otherwise it will have to obtain its grosses from foreign-language houses of which there is a limited number in the United States."

+ Variety p12 F 19 '36

(S)SEEING NELLIE HOME. D 20 '35 11min
Educational

Players: Carol Deis. Charles Henderson

Director: William Watson

"The skit gives opportunity for the harmonizing of the feminine and male voices on some of the old sentimental rural melodies, topping of course with 'I Was Seeing Nellie Home.'" Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Very good singing of old songs. Family."

+ Wkly Guide D 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Charles Henderson and His Master Singers put this one over nicely in the rustic atmosphere of an old-time barn festivity in winter time, featured by a basket auction. . . It has the old rustic flavor that makes it a timely number for winter showing with the snow atmosphere outside. Good singing and plenty of youth and movement."

+ Film Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"Played in a homey, rustic setting with some old fashioned choir singing by the Henderson Master Singers, this effort should be average short entertainment. . . The singing is good."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 8 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE. D 6 '35 80min
RKO

Players: Gene Raymond, Margaret Callahan, Eric Blore, Grant Mitchell

Directors: William Hamilton, Edward Killy

Based on a play of same title by George M. Cohan, which in turn was based upon a novel of same title by Earl Derr Biggers. "Author goes to abandoned inn to write, thinking he has the only key. Six other people also have keys with plenty of mystery and complications resulting." (Box Office)

A Photoplay Study Guide, prepared by Thomas R. Cook, is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, at fifteen cents per copy. The Guide stresses theatrical and dramatic procedures and techniques.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Disappointing, Y and C: Probably good." Christian Century p95 Ja 15 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Easy performances are given by every member of a well chosen cast. Adults and children: 8-18." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Mature." DAR

"A competent cast takes full advantage of the complicated situations and cleverly subordinates the acting to the plot. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Very amusing. Family." Nat Bd of R

"Some suspense and mystery are maintained by a well chosen cast and good direction, which has with it lightness and humor. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The picture is well cast and moves rapidly with good dialogue and many dramatic scenes. However, suspense in the picture seems carried too long, whereas in the play it did not seem so, and the dialogue is carried forward so rapidly that confusion results towards the climax. . . This is no doubt due to a theme overworked through the years, as it by this time has lost some of its freshness and vividness. It is nevertheless very good entertainment. Family and junior matinee." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
+ Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"The picturization of Earl Derr Biggers' mystery story provides light, amusing entertainment. . . Settings, music and lighting effects worthy of special mention. Family-mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
D 4 '35

"Family."

Jt Estimates D 15 '35

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Very amusing. Family."

+ Nat Bd of R M Ja '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Mystery without horror."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Very amusing. Family."

+ Wkly Guide D 7 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"While it contains more action than you normally will find in a dozen pictures, the film's chief handicap is that it ambles along at too leisurely a pace. Otherwise there should be no complaints." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p11 D 14 '35

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 16 '36

Time p44 D 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good offering for the family audience, packed with thrills, laughs and melodrama, without horror."

+ Box Office p17 D 14 '35

"Seven Keys to Baldpate' is an entertaining and exciting picture."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 D 21 '35

"Raymond does nicely in lead role, Blore handles part of detective neatly and balance of cast are excellent. Nice production and good direction. Above average program entertainment."

+ Film Curb p21 D 15 '35

"This mystery comedy makes good entertainment program fare. Everyone connected with the production has caught the spirit of the piece, and the result is enjoyable material."

+ Film Daily p4 N 30 '35

"This seemingly perpetual favorite holds its own on the screen with a pleasant intermingling of mild mystery and comedy."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 N 27 '35

"The picture, following the spirit of the story, moves fast and is well acted. It doesn't make any bones about acknowledging that audiences will not know what it is all about. Consequently it sticks closely to the original plot. Characterizations are convincing. Those that are supposed to be dramatic are dramatic in the vein of the story; so are those who are supposed to be comic and funny. The suspense that threaded the original still functions."

+ Motion Pict Herald p68 D 7 '35

"Most moviegoers around will probably think they have seen it somewhere sometimes. Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

"Too much conversation and too little action makes this mystery comedy, old stage success, only fairly amusing. Good enough as secondary program matter."

+ — Variety p12 D 18 '35

SHADOWS OF THE ORIENT. (Release date not determined) 65min Empire

Players: Regis Toomey, J. Farrell MacDonald, Esther Ralston, Oscar Apfel

Director: Burt Lynwood

"It is a story of Chinese smuggling. It tells of the activities of a new kind of G-man, a young immigration inspector, an in-the-rut veteran who was just smart enough to be on the job at the right moment, a suave behind-the-scenes racketeer and a girl who had a penchant for getting herself in all kinds of romantic and dramatic trouble." Motion Pict Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good action-thriller loaded with suspense and Oriental intrigue."

+ Box Office p17 F 22 '36

"It provides good entertainment of its kind with many thrilling sequences and should do well in most spots."

+ Film Curb p18 F 15 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Providing the maximum amount of thrill action, embellished by romance, drama, melodrama and comedy, this is geared to appease the appetites of the excitement-adventure fans as well as those who like a little freshness in their entertainment fare."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 F 8 '36

Motion Pict Herald p44 F 15 '36

"With such a title, with a yarn packed with action, 'Shadows of the Orient' looks like a swell melodrama for popular, blood and thunder houses."

+ N Y Exhibitor p37 F 25 '36

"All hands connected in the making of 'Shadows of the Orient,' dealing with smuggling of Chinese from Mexico, were generous in marshalling surefire elements of entertainment for market at which it is directed."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 5 '36

SHE COULDN'T TAKE IT. O 20 '35 86min
Columbia

Players: George Raft, Joan Bennett, Walter Connelly, Billie Burke

Director: Tay Garnett

An ex-gangster takes over the management of a pampered millionaire's family when the millionaire dies in prison where he shared a cell with the gangster.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 4 '35

"Fair. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Light amusing entertainment with its humorous situations, bright dialogue and good acting. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women N 1 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: New version of gangster film; C: Unsuitable."

Par M p56 Mr '36

"Under the handicap of such a plot, the well known actors of course add little to their laurels and there is little profit for any audience in their efforts."

— Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Family."

Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

"The sleek George Raft is given a role for which he is eminently suited."

+ Liberty p22 N 16 '35

"It gives the lovely Miss Bennett her chance to play what is coming to be the most popular current type of film heroine, the gently nitwit ingenue." Richard Watts, Jr.

N Y Herald Tribune p19 N 7 '35

"The story, which had tried laboriously for a madcap atmosphere, slides slowly into sentimental melodrama." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p23 N 7 '35

"It is commonplace both as humor and as melodrama." Andre Sennwald

— + N Y Times p27 N 7 '35

"First-rate entertainment, even if it is terrifying to find out that death and kidnaping can be made so diverting." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 N 7 '35

"There are occasional surprises and a fair amount of excitement." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p100 N 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"George Raft gives an ingratiating portrayal of a reformed racketeer in a fast-moving comedy which is fair enough to make one wish it had been a great deal better."

+ — Box Office p25 N 30 '35

"It has been well handled and while plot is somewhat old they have managed to insert some new angles that make it satisfactory film entertainment."

+ — Film Curb p8 O 1 '35

Motion Pict Daily p4 N 9 '35

"It is timeworn material that has been presented on the screen again and again."

— Motion Pict Herald p64 N 16 '35

N Y Exhibitor p34 O 10 '35

SHE MARRIED HER BOSS. S 19 '35 92min
Columbia

Players: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, Michael Bartlett, Edith Fellowes

Director: Gregory LaCava

"A bride craving affection gives impetus to Claudette Colbert's newest film. After her marriage to her employer, the battle rages. The secretary's disappointment when she discovers the romance she dreamed about was merely a dream, and how she eventually makes it a reality, is the gist of the plot." Springf'd Republican

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A and Y: Clever farce; C: Mature."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 16 '35

"The lines are fresh enough to make you forget the rather familiar framework." Don Herold

+ — Life p36 D '35

Springf'd Republican p4c S 22 '35

"Routine drama is brought to a finish without a general walkout by a series of polite antics at which Miss Colbert is expert."

— + Time p29 S 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p53 N 16 '35

SHE SHALL HAVE MUSIC. N 28 '35 75min
Twickenham-British

Players: June Clyde, Marjorie Brooks, Gwen Farrar, Jack Hylton

Director: Leslie Hiscott

The film is made in England. "Essentially it is a series of good musical and comedy numbers with a thin but sufficient story link in the fact that Hylton's Band, broadcasting as a stunt from a yacht in the South Seas, is up against the myrmidons of a rival shipping line who want to kill the broadcast. Ingeniously used here is the idea that a wrist-

SHE SHALL HAVE MUSIC—Continued

watch television set enables the disabled yacht to get into visible and audible touch with home, so that the stranded musicians get back in time for a theatre opening, while the yacht owner is enabled to give instructions defeating a market raid on his shares." (Motion Pict Herald)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p200 D '35

"A, Y and C: Bright musical comedy."
Par M p56 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It's a case of stringing a series of acts and musical numbers on a radio or stage celebrity and the thinnest thread of story and giving the public the variety it may be pining for, per film. Here the key attraction is Jack Hylton and his band, probably the best of its type in England. . . It isn't staged like an American musical, but it is definitely bright entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 D 9 '35

"('She Shall Have Music' is a production which should please in any community where a variety-starved public will welcome the same type of material by way of the screen.)"

+ Motion Pict Herald p53 D 21 '35

"There are no dull moments. The film even has a plot—a melodramatic one, not at all bad, and well brought out. . . There are snatches of the work of artists who are only given a couple of minutes and who could hold attention for much more. There are so many of these that it becomes a trifle bewildering."

+ Variety p12 D 18 '35

SHIP CAFE. N 1 '35 66min Paramount

Players: Carl Brisson, Arline Judge, Mady Christians, William Frawley

Director: Robert Florey

A ship's stoker is given a chance to sing in the ship's cafe where a countess admires him. She lures him away from his partner with whom he is in love. In the end he returns to the ship and his partner.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Several pleasant musical interludes fail to redeem the unattractive personal and disagreeable locale of this picture. Adults: fair; 8-18: doubtful." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre music. Cheap environment. Adults." DAR

"When one sees a cast of characters which is notable, it is very disappointing to find its members so exploited as in this inane, stupid picture which is poorly directed and with a story so hackneyed and uninteresting. The entire production is a waste of time on the part of the producers, actors, director and audience." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"The picture has a rather unwholesome atmosphere—somewhat relieved by the delightful music and lovely singing of Carl Brisson. Matter of taste, adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mediocre production which is hardly worthy of any one's time." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A sophisticated unconvincing picture. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Depicting a somewhat tawdry life, with its jealousies and loyalties, it maintains a low-pitched tempo which is only briefly lifted to other levels in moments of song and comedy. Adults." Mrs T. G. Winter

"The story of 'Ship Cafe' is neither novel nor well-told. . . Acting and direction are only fair. Even the night-club scenes are devoid of any real gaiety or amusement. The film is lifted from utter banality by the bright dialogue and rapid-fire comments which are admirably suited to the situations. 8-12: objectionable; 12-16: poor." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

— Fox W Coast Bul D 7 '35

"Carl Brisson has a pleasing voice and personality, and gives a convincing characterization of the Danish lad, as does Arline Judge of the cabaret dancer, but a cheap atmosphere pervades the picture, and it is intensified by an offensive dance sequence. Adults."

— Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 25 '35

Mo Film Bul p200 D '35

"Fair. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A: Mildly entertaining; Y: Poor; C: Objectionable."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p8 O 30 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c D 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

Film Curb p14 N 1 '35

"Brisson's role gives him a somewhat better chance than in his previous appearances, and he makes the most of it."

+ Film Daily p7 N 9 '35

"Family comedy drama."

N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

"('Ship Cafe' provides suitable but weak starring material for Carl Brisson. . . While a lot of stale and lifeless dialog is to be found in the adaptation, there is some good comedy to compensate for the lack of punch the story otherwise delivers."

— + Variety p14 N 27 '35

SHIPMATES FOREVER. O 12 '35 109min Warner

Players: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Lewis Stone, Ross Alexander

Director: Frank Borzage

Music and lyrics: Harry Warren, Al Dubin

"Four years at Annapolis, a girl and innate heroism make a loyal man out of a cynical crooner." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Fine of kind; Y: Excellent; C: Strong but good."

Christian Century O 30 '35

"A delightfully entertaining picture. . . There is a charming love story and the picture is further enhanced by stirring scenes and beautiful photography. The well chosen cast give most satisfying performances. . . Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p150 D '35

"Family and junior matinees."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A: Tunesful comedy; Y and C: Excellent."
Par M p56 Mr '36

"Splendidly photographed record of life at the Naval Academy, and many moving and amusing incidents, though the plot is familiar."
+ — Wkly Guide O 5 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '35

"The latest story of Annapolis, underscores all the traditional and by now faintly hackneyed symbols associated with the midshipman's progress in the cloistered beauty of the Academy's halls. The discipline is noted through several incidents; mess hall jollity is noted in one or two scenes; the Ring Dance is noted, and then, of course, there is the usual funeral rite, with bugles blowing, wet-eyed formations of midshipmen at attention, and the lowering of the flag. . . The music and lyrics by Harry Warren and Al Dubin are catchy and the authenticity of the settings is satisfactory. As a picture showing certain of the customs at Annapolis, 'Shipmates' is to be applauded; as a story, it is not fresh."
Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p19 O 18 '35

"Although its story is routine, its humorous moments are many, its romantic interest not too obtrusive and it manages to be entertaining most of the way. . . It is the best of the recent naval cycle. It moves rapidly despite its long running time." F. S. N.
+ — N Y Times p29 O 17 '35

"One ceremony, that is not only impressive, but beautifully staged, takes place at the naval academy. But it involves the cadets, principally the members of the new second year class. This is the famous ring dance, that celebrates the entrance into the second class."

+ Springf'd Republican p6c O 13 '35

Stage p10 N '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p54 N 16 '35

Film Curb p20 O 1 '35

"Not overly different in plot. Family."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p35 O 10 '35

SHOW THEM NO MERCY. D 6 '35 75min
20th century-Fox

Players: Rochelle Hudson. Bruce Cabot.
Cesar Romero. Edward Norris. Edward
Brophy. Warren Hymer

Director: George Marshall

"An innocent young couple, en route to California with their baby and a lovable terrier, are forced to find shelter in an abandoned house when their car becomes mired during a storm. Their predicament assumes proportions of brutally stark drama when they find that their refuge is the hideout of a quartette of kidnapers whose capture is sought by an outraged nation." Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Shows crime does not pay. Good cast. Adults." DAR

"Members of the cast give splendid performances—its general appeal is doubtful, however, as many adult audiences will resent the manner in which the gangster uses the churches to pass the 'hot money.' Novel, possibly, but a breach of taste that is hardly understandable. . . Splendid acting. Grim theme." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Many will find its stark realism and brutality so trying that its entertainment values are quite overshadowed. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Skillful direction is responsible for the naturalness of the characters. Cleverly interspersed comedy touches somewhat relieve the emotional tension which is sustained to the final scenes. 12-16: too much killing; 8-12: no, too exciting and brutal." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"This picture expertly directed and realistically acted is particularly interesting because of its sharp delineation of an event pertinent to the times. Adults and young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 4 '35

"Adults."

Jt Estimates N 1 '35

"Very good. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

Nat Bd of R M Ja '36

"A and Y: Well done melodrama; C: No."
Par M p56 Mr '36

"While not recommended as family entertainment, the law-abiding citizens will do well to consider this picture as a crushing indictment against crime in general and the kidnapper in particular. Adults."

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Mature."

Wkly Guide D 7 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is all pretty grim, and it involves a terrific amount of shooting. But it is tremendously exciting." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 22 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

"The G-Men make 'go-out-there-and-die' speeches, stick pins in maps, race their motor-cycles, and behave otherwise very G-Manly in 'Show Them No Mercy.' . . But the pattern of this picture is in many ways fresh and it will give you a good case of goose flesh unless your skin is a lot tougher than this guinea pig's." Don Herold

+ — Life p21 F '36

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub p198 D 25 '35

"There is suspense, but the picture does seem dragged out a little too much. . . 'Show Them No Mercy' is a G-man picture differing from the rest, and for that reason, if for no other, is worth seeing." M. J.

+ — N Y Sun p34 D 9 '35

"Originally the work was entitled 'Snatched,' which summed up the raw and ugly violence that informs this arresting topical melodrama. Inspired by the Weyerhaeuser kidnapping case, it turns the spotlight on four gunmen who have just completed a successful 'snatch,' and tells how they come to grief because of their private jealousies and the relentless man-hunt staged by the Department of Justice. As a modern morality tale, made out of cold brutality and macabre humor, it presents the screen in its

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SHOW THEM NO MERCY—Continued

raciest journalistic vein. Despite the witless change of title, [it] provides a frightening experience in the cinema." Andre Sennwald
+ N Y Times p25 D 9 '35

"To surpass, or even equal at this late date, some of the previous compactly written, sharply spoken, savage and snarling films dealing with the exploits of the government agents in their war on organized crime would seem almost impossible, so vigorous and vital have most of them been. But 'Show Them No Mercy' does just that. . . It is a taut, straightforward and murderous melodrama, which in addition to being excellent and nerve-wracking entertainment, is virtually a case history of the manner in which the Department of Justice agents cracked a recent famous Western kidnapping case. What makes this screen melodrama worthy of your attention in addition to its blazing and gripping story, is its fine display of superb acting." William Boehnel
+ N Y World-Telegram p18 D 9 '35

Reviewed by John Mosher
New Yorker p117 D 14 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 N 30 '35

"This one is not anywhere near as good as many that have preceded it. It strives to show that kidnapping does not pay but not in a very convincing way."

+ — Film Curb p22 D 15 '35

"Fans who like tense drama will get a good stretch of it in this kidnapping yarn. It carries suspense from start to finish. The kidnapping part of the story is not elaborated upon in the least, but merely sets the opening groundwork for the campaign of the government men in tracking down the bad men."

+ Film Daily p7 D 7 '35

Motion Pict Daily p2 O 26 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p37 N 25 '35

"Probably had the Hays office permitted this to go out under its original title of 'Snatched' this would have gotten over to bigger business than it will do under the clumsier title which supplanted it. Putting a moral slant into the title will not disguise the fact that it's a kidnap story. . . The casting is uniformly good. Well staged and directed with unusually good taste, the feature gives full satisfaction."

+ Variety p19 D 11 '35

SILLY BILLIES. Mr 20 '36 65min RKO

Players: Bert Wheeler. Robert Woolsey
Dorothy Lee. Harry Woods

Director: Fred Guiol

A western comedy of covered wagon days.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A witless comedy. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Children will enjoy the fast riding of the Indians in all their war paint. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Very well photographed, the film offers some good laughs, interspersed with fewer vulgarities of dialogue than usual and will please the average family audience." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A typical Wheeler and Woolsey farce with plenty of slap-stick comedy and impossible situations. . . Too bad that a drinking scene had to be introduced to add a few more ridiculous situations. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 7 '36

"If you are a Wheeler and Woolsey addict, this is just what the doctor ordered, a madder, merrier, sillier picture than their last. . . Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: excellent."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"This pair of comics clown their way through a mediocre and uninteresting vehicle in a vain attempt to be funny [and] their success is doubtful. Matter of taste for the family."

— Nat Council of Jewish Women F 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Silly Billies,' as I saw it, was slow in many places, a weakness that often is eliminated after a preview; consequently I presume it will move with more briskness when you see it. However, this picture never could be re-edited enough to receive a complimentary review from me. While the general reaction of the preview audience seemed favorable, I personally was not at all entertained by the film, due to my inability to find enjoyment in Wheeler and Woolsey. . . [Their] fans will like them as much as ever. They always bore me frightfully." Allan Hersholt
— — Hollywood Spec p11 Mr 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A Wheeler and Woolsey whimsy which won't get above the lower-bracket spots. There it will serve as a none-too-vigorous support number, though it will doubtless make money, as have its predecessors. . . The lads work hard but the laughs are none too frequent."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 F 22 '36

"The bright idea of putting Wheeler and Woolsey in a Western fails to work out according to hopes, resulting in the least funny offering of the comics to date, and giving exhibitors little to promise except the usual antics of the buffoons against a new background."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 F 25 '36

"Understood and marketed as a nonsensical, idiotic fun feature which burlesques the straight formula Western entertainment idea, it has ingredients to satisfy the Wheeler and Woolsey following and those who like to see standard patterns given a lot of changing around and alteration."

Motion Pict Herald p46 Mr 7 '36

"Wheeler and Woolsey fans may go for their favorite comics in this one but the general reception will be doubtful. Main trouble is a mediocre script containing few laughs. Production is okay but evidently lacked supervision. Direction, too, is off balance. Starring team work hard but the gags for the most part are meaningless, carried too far. . . Picture will do average Wheeler and Woolsey business but comics should get a better break in material."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 22 '36

SILVER SPURS. F 10 '36 60min Universal

Players: Buck Jones. Muriel Evans. Bruce Lane

Director: Ray Taylor

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family and junior matinee." Nat Bd of R
Fox W Coast Bul F 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p37 F 25 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — — Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SINGING KID. Ap 11 '36 85min Warner

Players: Al Jolson. Beverly Roberts. Sybil Jason. Edward Everett Horton. Allen Jenkins. Cab Calloway. Yacht Club Boys

Director: William Keighley

"Jolson plays himself, a big-hearted musical comedy star who loves to sing and give away money. But he is cleaned out by a crooked lawyer, his sweetheart walks out on him, and he loses his voice. A songless interlude in the country brings him a new and tender love affair and he returns to town and to new triumph." Hollywood Reporter

Trade Paper Reviews

"A typical Jolson songfest to which has been added the swellest kind of comedy and romance. . . Nothing more could be asked for in entertainment of this kind."

+ Film Curb p36 Mr 14 '36

"This is one of the best shows Al Jolson has ever done. It should hit at the box-office to some sweet returns. And it isn't all Al, there are the Yacht Club Boys who are terrific, Cab Calloway and his Band as an integral part of the show, Edward Everett Horton, Sybil Jason, Allen Jenkins and Beverly Roberts. The latter is a newcomer who should do well. From the moment the picture opens with Al singing songs from his Broadway shows and pictures to the very end, 'The Singing Kid' is a fast moving show loaded with swell musical entertainment."

+ Film Daily p6 Mr 18 '36

"An Al Jolson vehicle that ranks with his best for songs, pep and production values. . . The slight story is a harmless variant of the backstage formula and the only lack is a due allowance of real comedy. It's a good show, on the whole, with plenty to sell the Jolson following and it is in for big takes at the wicket all over the place."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 10 '36

"A gay combination of gags, musical comedy, drama and romance, flavored with a girl-decorated backstage theatre spectacle, it has those qualities which will surely please exhibitors and audiences. . . Jolson is the traditional Al Jolson that people like to see and hear. The comedy provided by the Yacht Club Boys, Horton and Jenkins is chock full of fun."

+ Motion Pict Daily p18 Mr 11 '36

"Good entertainment reflecting credit in all departments, 'The Singing Kid' should be a substantial money maker. . . Al Jolson works hard, finishes stronger than he has done in his past two pictures. Of the three numbers in the picture, he sings two. Third is handled in grand fashion by the Yacht Club Boys without whom the picture would have a tough struggle."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 10 '36

SINGING VAGABOND. D 16 '35 57min Republic

Players: Gene Autry. Ann Rutherford. Smiley Burnette. Barbara Pepper

Director: Carl Pierson

In the far west in frontier days a girl and other members of a theatrical troupe, who are traveling to California by overland trail, are rescued by a plainsman from a group of bandits and horse thieves. An enemy of the plainsman pins a treason charge on him and he is convicted and sentenced to face a firing squad. He escapes and after a thrilling fight with Indians, turns up the real culprit.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Harmless but mediocre Western."

Par M p56 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Below the Western standard; crudely produced, with its chief appeal directed to the habitual Western fans."

— Box Office p23 D 21 '35

"Another more than satisfactory Autry Western. The star sings nicely as usual and there is plenty of snappy fast-action stuff that lovers of this sort of film crave. Up to standard of the series."

+ Film Curb p21 D 15 '35

"Although the story is familiar material, the players handle their roles well and Carl Pierson's direction gives this number plenty of action."

+ Film Daily p4 D 11 '35

"A musical Western, this is an interesting entertainment. Although modernized in dialogue and made a bit different by the inclusion of Gene Autry's specialty singing, its action and technique are a clever capitalization of the old silent excitement thriller. Sophisticates may not enthuse about it, but the outdoor adventure loving fans and the youngsters should indicate their reactions with much whooping and shouting. . . Autry's vocalizing of plainsman ditties in solo and with Miss Rutherford is novel and effective."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 D 11 '35

"Basically the feature is a musical Western. Actually, with the production technique that made Westerns so popular in the silent days expertly regenerated, it's the U. S. cavalry to the rescue. The well contrived situations move with speedy continuity. . . The intent of the picture graphically is geared to arouse mass enthusiasm and to appeal strongly to the younger audience contingents."

+ Motion Pict Herald p62 D 14 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p40 D 25 '35

"This vehicle is crammed full of the action stuff that made boss oprys popular during the early periods of the cinema. It further serves to give Autry opportunity to sing several old-fashioned songs of the plains, with excellent choral and musical accompaniment. . . Story is trite, Oliver Drake having thrown in a mixture of pretty much everything that has gone before in Westerns of this type. . . Autry's forte is his warbling of typical Western tunes and he does this to excellent advantage. His characterization of the title role is satisfactory, but it's the voice that registers."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 7 '35

SKULL AND CROWN. D 12 '35 58min Reliable

Players: Regis Toomey. Jack Mulhall. Molly O'Day

Director: Elmer Clifton

A border patrolman swears vengeance on an outlaw who has killed his sister and hurt his prized dog. With the dog's help he is able to track down and arrest the outlaw who is the leader of a smuggling gang.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Action melodrama."
Par M p56 Mr '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SKULL AND CROWN—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"Family."

Box Office p33 D 28 '35

Film Curb p15 Ja 4 '36

"With Rin-Tin-Tin, Jr., doing some of the finest dog work yet seen, this picture should be bang up entertainment for dog lovers and action fans. . . The events follow one another well and one's interest is held throughout. The fights between the men are well handled, but those between the dog and the outlaws are great."

+ Film Daily p17 D 17 '35

"Estimate: good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 Ja 10 '36

"The intelligent dog, Rin-Tin-Tin, Junior, alone offers a remarkable performance, both in relationship to story and in behavior under direction. He fights with furious, savage earnestness when required to battle villainy, and manages with canny understanding to simulate emotions of affection and loyalty for delight of all who will see him."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 12 '35

SKYBOUND. S 25 '35 55min Puritan

Players: Lloyd Hughes. Lona Andre. Eddie Nugent. Grant Withers

Director: Raymond K. Johnson

A melodramatic Western of the government border air patrol.

Trade Paper Reviews

"With its principal strength resting in its aerial scenes, while romantic interest plays only a minor part, this drama revolving around the border patrol is fair entertainment. . . Scattered along the action is a good amount of fighting and aerial thrills, with the latter being enhanced by excellent camera work."

+ — Film Daily p7 N 12 '35

"Action lovers who like to see good flying, spectacular photography, and fights, will be pleased. Family action drama."

N Y Exhibitor p38 O 10 '35

SNOWED UNDER. (Release date not determined) 63min Warner

Players: George Brent. Genevieve Tobin. Glenda Farrell. Patricia Ellis. Frank McHugh

Director: Raymond Enright

Based on the novel of the same title by Lawrence Saunders. "Seeking solitude in his mountain cabin, a twice married playwright manages to finish his play satisfactorily despite complications caused by the unexpected arrival of his ex-wives, an infatuated young girl and a blizzard." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Possibly for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Though it is an artificial little comedy, treading on delicate ground at times, it is well done. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Light comedy with amusing situations very cleverly handled. Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Trashy and boring. Waste of time. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Mr 7 '36

"Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 24 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."
Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Some drinking. Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women F 25
'36*Newspaper and Magazine Reviews*

"Warner's Hollywood was filled to capacity when 'Snowed Under' was previewed. There were few quiet moments during the showing, the current of laughter being almost continuous. The picture, being a comedy made only to provoke laughs, achieves its purpose. . . I concede it was built on fundamental comedy situations, that it is well cast, well produced, and shot from a competently written screen play. But I did not enjoy it. . . Motion pictures are offered as entertainment. I cannot understand how a director expects an audience to be entertained by a group of players who howl at one another."

— Hollywood Spec p9 Mr 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"They'll get many a laugh out of this one. . . Should go over in most any theatre."

+ Film Curb p15 F 22 '36

"The fans who enjoy a lot of good laughs will like this number. The plot becomes somewhat involved, but it all irons itself out and the audiences that are not overly discriminating will be very well pleased."

+ — Film Daily p6 Mr 13 '36

"A forced and rather strident farcical comedy of social relations concocted for uncritical laughter. The original story, currently serialized, provides a battery of diverting lines. . . Nevertheless a Hollywood preview audience laughed and laughed till it drowned out the dialogue, and unsophisticated audiences everywhere will doubtless do the same. The box office will be aided also by a quartette of names—George Brent, Genevieve Tobin, Glenda Farrell and Patricia Ellis—an all-youth cast that lends verve to this rather racy affair."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 9 '36

"The picture has a nonsensical quality that should appeal to mass patronage. . . The production is smartly directed by Raymond Enright, and played in the same key by the entire company in a manner which keeps the laughs coming fast and furiously without regard to rhyme or reason. For those who like their fun in broad and copious quantities this should please mightily."

Motion Pict Daily p6 Mr 10 '36

"Estimate: pleasant programmer."

N Y Exhibitor p54 Mr 10 '36

"This is bang-up comedy packed with laughs that should click with all classes of audiences. It is rapid fire farce with a background of a stage producer's office and a playwright's country home in Connecticut."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 12 '36

SO RED THE ROSE. N 22 '35 82min Paramount

Players: Margaret Sullavan. Walter Connolly. Randolph Scott. Janet Beecher

Director: King Vidor

Based on novel of same title by Stark Young. "Randolph Scott, a pacifist, joins the Southern Army when his uncle and cousin are killed. The mother, aunt, daughter and small son are left to handle the plantation. The slaves revolt, the house is destroyed, everything seems to be going against her, but still the mother does not despair. With the end of the war, [Scott] returns to the girl who has been waiting." (Film Daily)

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class. A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A and Y: Fine of kind; C: Doubtful."
Christian Century p1665 D 25 '35

"Not as powerful as the book. Very good."
+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Adults: very good; 14-18: good; 8-14: mature. Possible for family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Despite changes, the essence of S. Young's enthralling novel of Confederate life and War's havoc has been retained in this moving tragic romance. Mature; 14-18." DAR

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Simply told, without undue elaboration of plot, the film attains a dignified and haunting beauty through restrained acting and a skilled director's unerring sense of human values. An unforgettable production. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 30 '35

Mo Film Bul p200 D '35

"Very good. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Splendid romance of Civil War; C: If interesting."
Par M p56 Mr '36

"Excellent for the family."
+ + Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"The story becomes over sentimentalized in parts. Family."
+ - Wkly Guide O 16 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 5 '35

N Y Herald Tribune p21 N 28 '35

"The picture has something of the grace of Mr. Young's book, something of its sensitive romanticism. It has much of its charm. From the wealth of characters Mr. Young depicted, King Vidor and his scenarists picked only a few. You may miss some of the McGehees, the Bedfords and the Ruffins. You won't find any of the four Celies. Surely there could have been one big family party with Vallette singing and the McGehees discussing Jefferson Davis's social background. In spite of the simplification, 'So Red the Rose' has kept the atmosphere of contentment, good will and luxury that ran through the novel." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p9 N 27 '35

"All during 'So Red the Rose,' one-half of my mind was being flooded with the sentimental warmths of this nostalgic drama of the Old South, while the other half was sorrowing to see a man like King Vidor fritter away his time on such glamorous taffy. Although this is a neat and often touching reworking of Stark Young's novel, there is a hint of pain in the reflection that, on the last occasion when Mr. Vidor collaborated with Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson, they produced 'The Big Parade.' 'Occasionally the high romantic polish wears through and then these well-bred aristocrats look pretty bogus." Andre Sennwald
N Y Times p7x D 8 '35

"Although it is beautifully photographed and well acted and directed, I must admit to mixed feelings about this new screen drama of the civil war. Parts of it are humorous and picturesque, touching and tender. But I must balk a bit about the thinness of this and that scene and the way the excitement seeps out of it. However, in spite of everything, I should say that it is better than average entertainment. . . It is frankly, a pretty one-sided picture, with the Northern forces being made out as so many uncouth killers, and the Southern, military and civilian alike, presented as the flower of self-sacrifice and good breeding. But that is the least of the film's faults. What really is wrong with it is that it lacks vitality." William Boehnel

+ - N Y World-Telegram p9 N 27 '35

"I can hardly imagine any material more full of slippery, ticklish spots for Hollywood handling than Stark Young's novel, but certainly no book like it, no chronicle, that is, of gentle people in a time of stress, has fared so well there. . . We may be thankful that the great Southern house shown is so well done, not with a parquet floor as big as Gettysburg, but with some reasonable resemblance to a house people live in, and so well furnished that some collectors and interior-decorators won't be able to stand the scene when the Yankees come and smash everything up." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p89 N 30 '35

"'So Red the Rose.' . . is a routine story of the Civil war as it effects one Southern family."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 13 '35

Time p40 D 2 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Beautifully produced, with each important role portrayed with sympathetic and convincing sincerity in this heart-moving narrative of the Confederacy. Outstanding is the fine work of Margaret Sullavan, who veritably lives the part of the petite Southern belle whose heart is torn by the harrowing experiences which the war between the states brings home to her. Not unusual in theme, the story wins distinction because of its underlying tenderness and understanding treatment."

+ Box Office p25 N 30 '35

"You cry, and laugh, and are deeply touched by the beautiful romance of the south, very timely just now, when there is war and talk of war. It proves what happens to a family—anybody's family in wartime. . . This [is] an outstanding credit to the producer."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 D 21 '35

"Above average entertainment."
+ Film Curb p9 N 15 '35

"The screenplay contains comedy, sentiment and a sequence of events that are always interesting."

+ Film Daily p7 N 9 '35

"The drama is poignant to the point of being tragic. Romantic and natural comedy contrasts are of a character that stir sympathetic heart interest. The impressively serious tone, accomplished acting and direction, plus inspiring background effects give the picture a powerful human character."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 N 5 '35

"The picture has the entertainment values for appeal to any type of audience."

+ Motion Pict Herald p63 N 16 '35

"Taking a dramatic romantic novel of the Old South during Civil War days, Paramount has created a production that should be a welcome change from current fast-moving, everyday fare. Family drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p37 N 25 '35

"'So Red the Rose,' is frequently a fine and distinctive cinematic transmutation, and almost as often draggy and uncertain."

+ - Variety p15 D 4 '35

SOAK THE RICH. Ja 17 '36 88min Paramount

Players: Walter Connolly. Mary Taylor. John Howard. Lionel Stander

Directors: Ben Hecht. Charles MacArthur

Connolly portrays a millionaire who complains of the carping attitude toward million-

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

SOAK THE RICH—Continued

aires and especially the "soak the rich" taxation and then finds that his daughter, a student in a college which he has built, has fallen in love with a radical college leader who is head of a faction sounding the call for the oppressed and poor. Eventually she turns against the young man and he finds that romance wins above his principles. In the end in true farce comedy manner, this satire ends with the erstwhile radical group enjoying the millionaire's champagne and singing his praises.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A well developed plot, filled with humor and pathos, clever dialogue and very well acted throughout. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 8 '36

"Adults: amusing; 14-18: good; 8-14: uninteresting." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"A practical lesson in common sense for alarmists who worry over student activities. Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 10 '36

"A diverting comedy, with a pleasant romance, sincerely and delicately developed, and a practical lesson in common sense for alarmists who worry over student activities. Audiences over fourteen."

+ Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"Good. Adults and young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"This is a film untainted with propaganda, although the title used is a popular political slogan. . . Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: too mature to interest."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women F 15 '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"The fine acting of Walter Connolly highlights a story of the conflicts between a rich man, his scatter-brained family and a group of young college students. . . Adults and young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is some excellent satire and much amusing dialogue, with Walter Connolly at his best, and his best is something for anyone to shoot at." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur are regular devils, cut-ups, mentally wild men of Broadway, whose caperings are convulsing. They admit all this. Therefore we must accept humbly and with appreciation anything they deign to give us in the way of motion picture entertainment. If it fails to entertain us, it is because we are of low mentality, because we lack an exquisite sense of humor to match theirs. Their latest offering . . . proves I am of low mentality, that I lack a sense of humor. I think it is one of the worst motion pictures I ever saw, but that, of course, is ridiculous because Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur made it, and they are clever fellows who'll just make you die laffin' at their jokes."

— — Hollywood Spec p8 F 15 '36

"All of this might conceivably have been good fun were it not for the unhappy fact that, after the first few minutes of the photoplay, the Hecht-MacArthur wit, humor and dexterity collapsed with devastating completeness. The first five minutes, it should be reported, are brilliant and hilarious with Walter Connolly, as the crotchety millionaire of the fable, devoting some of the wittiest lines of the season—the authors of 'First Lady' should envy them—to a sardonic contemplation of the complexities of the New Deal. Soon, though, the epigrams cease to flow and the story gets down to business, which consists of a routinely satirical story of the romance between the boy radical and the rich girl who would like to play with radicalism to prove her devotion to him." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p11 F 5 '36

"The Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur prove again, in their 'Soak the Rich,' that their gift for writing dialogue and situation is perhaps the most brilliant of all the movie scenarists. They prove, too, in this new film that they have little talent for directing or producing. Both in their choice of cast and in their handling of it they destroy their own handiwork. . . 'Soak the Rich' is still witty; but its authors would have been wise to have hired a reliable director and casting director. Amateurish acting can spoil the best of lines." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p27 F 6 '36

"Collegiate radicals come in for a rather cruel lampooning at the hands of those old die-hards, Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, in the antic pair's latest picture, 'Soak the Rich.' . . Their spoofing of youth in revolt is frequently amusing and the quality of the dialogue proves that the premier film-makers of Astoria have lost none of their wit. The same, alas, cannot be said of their sense of direction. On the surface, it would appear that Mr. Hecht wanted a satire while Mr. MacArthur preferred a farce. . . All told, 'Soak the Rich' salvages considerable entertainment from the wreckage of its authors' indecision. And we hope the real campus radicals won't take their lampooning too seriously." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p14 F 5 '36

"If Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht were not the authors and producers of 'Soak the Rich,' the new social satire, the film's mediocrity would have very little news value. But since the Messrs. Hecht and MacArthur recently demonstrated with 'The Scoundrel' how expertly they can produce films when they put their mind to their work, their latest offering cannot be dismissed so bluntly. . . Although 'Soak the Rich' has an excellent idea for a social satire, it is pretty badly bungled, and except for its first few minutes is an awkward, amateur and tedious exhibit." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p25 F 5 '36

"'Soak the Rich' is perhaps the drollest of the lot, but it somehow doesn't quite come off as the outrageous comedy it should have been." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p65 F 15 '36

"The worst of the Hecht-MacArthur pictures, illuminated by the single mad moment when Lionel Stander enters the scene as a one-man radical movement."

— Stage p8 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"General suitability of this Hecht-MacArthur original depends on how much your audience likes satire of the ultra-modern school."

Box Office p17 F 22 '36

"It is our duty to report that this latest Hecht-MacArthur effort at screen entertainment is poor stuff. There are very few laughs and the attempt to work up the comedy situations falls down badly. . . . The action drags and it would seem as if the best this one can hope for is on the dual bills. Walter Connolly strives mightily to make something of the picture but even a good actor can't work with dull material."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

— Film Curb p11 F 8 '36

"Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, who did triple duty as producers, authors and directors of this picture, have again turned out high-brow hokum that is 'different,' but despite much flashing wit and even broad comedy it is neither as provocative in an artistic sense nor as entertaining from a general standpoint as some of their previous efforts."

— + Film Daily p9 F 6 '36

"Just a moderately entertaining comedy. It lacks action, giving the spectator the feeling as if a stage play had been transplanted to the screen. . . . Not for children or adolescents. Adult entertainment."

— + Harrison's Reports F 1 '36

"As comedy, it has some mildly amusing moments, but, as in the case of other of the pair's pictures, it is pointed, but perhaps not very accurately, for the sophisticated screen audience. It is, in effect, considerably more of a stage play lifted bodily to the screen, and it is open to question whether the average film patron will find much in it to entertain. . . . It is, on the whole, a typical Hecht-MacArthur concoction, not, however, nearly so promising as certain of their earlier efforts. Some of their horse-play in this is not very funny and much of it is questionable in taste and judgment."

— + Motion Pict Daily p7 Ja 20 '36

"The first sequence and several others could be presented independently as very short shorts acceptable for drawing room or little theatre purposes. Strung together, they unfold an undergraduate romance that would rate as routine if the precocious adolescents performing it were not crammed full of Hecht-MacArthur wise-cracks and sophistry. As it is, the plain cash customer is quite likely to consider it a highly artificial and probably not at all necessary business."

— + Motion Pict Herald p48 F 15 '36

"Whether Hecht and MacArthur can make box office pictures is still a question. 'Soak the Rich' proves the pair can produce a different type picture but the box office may not particularly benefit."

N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

"In their current offering [Hecht and MacArthur] play with what might be a good idea, but fail to come through with it. They have tried for comedy this time and the result is interesting but unamusing. To be questioned whether the picture can stand alone in any location. Not going to be of any particular help in a double. And there's only Walter Connolly to play up on the marquee. . . . The photography is good, the direction keeps the actors moving around, even though they do not advance the story, and the settings are impeccable. But it all adds up to inadequate entertainment."

— Variety p18 F 12 '36

"In 'Soak the Rich' Hecht and MacArthur have produced a nice piece of satire, but satire is hard to sell to picture fans."

Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 6 '36

SOCIETY FEVER. O 1 '35 67min Invincible

Players: Lois Wilson, Lloyd Hughes, Hedda Hopper

Director: Frank Strayer

"This domestic comedy deals with the trials and tribulations of a large family experiencing new poverty after the death of a wealthy father. Expensive tastes and lack of business experience bring the family to the verge of eviction after nearly all the furniture has been sold from the mansion. The situation is complicated by the necessity for a formal dinner to [rich friends.]" Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Fair."
Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p54 N 16 '35

Film Curb p12 N 1 '35

"This plot has had so many treatments already that the present [result] comes as a routine affair best suited for the not too discriminating."

— Film Daily p10 O 20 '35

Motion Pict Daily p9 O 28 '35

"Family comedy."
N Y Exhibitor p34 O 10 '35

"[A] creditable story is marred by stilted and weak performances, with part of responsibility falling on director. . . . Several mawkish scenes result when actors are permitted to stand around and shout lines at each other."

— Variety p30 N 27 '35

SONG AND DANCE MAN. Mr 13 '36 70min
20th century-Fox

Players: Claire Trevor, Paul Kelly, Michael Whalen, Ruth Donnelly

Director: Allan Dwan

Based on the play of the same title by George M. Cohan. "The plot concerns a team of vaudeville 'artists,' perpetually between engagement. The man is a ten-twenty-third' hoover who fondly believes himself 'better than Astaire.' The girl remains faithful to the partnership because of loyalty to the man who taught her all she knows. Then comes the girl's break through the interest of a wealthy playboy." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A slow-moving, cheaply constructed comedy-drama in which the principals are afforded small opportunity to utilize such talents as they may possess. Mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature. Mediocre." DAR

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Considerable drinking throughout, having little bearing on the plot, makes this picture of no particular value; just light entertainment, easily forgotten. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

— + Fox W Coast Bul F 1 '36

"Family."
Gen Fed of Women's Club (W Coast)
Ja 22 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: possible."

Motion Pict R F '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

SONG AND DANCE MAN—Continued

"With its flavor of backstage, this dramatic film interpretation of a successful stage play is slow-moving but interesting. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"When George Cohan's 'Song and Dance Man' first was offered on Broadway, its theme may have been unfamiliar. Today, stage and screen spectators know it. . . Those who view this Twentieth Century-Fox presentation of it will be provided with genuine entertainment. Their acquaintance with it will not detract interest. I have been able to find no fault with the picture. From every angle, its treatment is intelligent." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p13 F 15 '36

"While the picture is slow in starting, once it begins to pick up it proves to be a colorful story with an emotional appeal as poignant as ever. Due, perhaps, to the excellent performance of Mr. Kelly, which, oddly enough, recalls that hauntingly eloquent one of the late Mr. Hal Skelly in 'Burlesque,' the piece is lifted above its rather commonplace film mold, offering entertainment that, especially in its later sequences, pulls at the heartstrings. . . The picture, while not record-shattering in any sense, is colorful and interesting." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p14 Mr 12 '36

"Nothing about the tale seems new, nor does much of it seem like the old 'Song and Dance Man' except of course, its Broadway sentimentality. It isn't a bad little picture, just a weak one. The cast, like script and direction, is amiable and unimpressive. This is the kind of picture which makes neither friends nor enemies." Eileen Creelman

— + N Y Sun p20 Mr 12 '36

"Instead of frankly consigning this story of an older Broadway to the period department (circa 1924) where it belongs, the screen adapters have packed up its ancient properties and settings, including even a perfectly preserved vaudeville rooming house, and have set them down bodily in the present decade. . . Wherever they have been keeping Mr. Cohan's play all these years, it seems to have been improperly camphorated and the moths of time have [gotten] into its trunks and backdrops." B. R. C.

— N Y Times p18 Mr 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good programmer based on the George M. Cohan play. It should please in the smaller situations."

+ Box Office p17 F 22 '36

"Unsatisfactory screen version of the well known stage play. It is a backstage story and the general idea has been done many times. There are a few musical numbers which are not such-a-much."

— Film Curb p17 F 15 '36

"Taking its title from the George M. Cohan stage vehicle, but adapted in somewhat different form due to the absence of Cohan as the central character, this is a generally pleasing story of backstage life, not much different from other yarns of the type."

+ — Film Daily p18 Mr 12 '36

"'Song and Dance Man' is solid entertainment, due for healthy grosses wherever it plays. It tells an unpretentious and familiar backstage story. But, in remaining true to its theme, it maintains a fine sincerity that will send its audiences away completely satisfied."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 8 '36

"This modernized version of George M. Cohan's stage success should please, although it lacks the fire of the original."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 F 10 '36

"Well acted and directed, the picture, making no pretensions other than being straight-away entertainment, moves speedily as it sticks continually to its basic plot. It is family type entertainment that provides many showmanship angles that can be easily adapted to arouse patron interest."

+ Motion Pict Herald p62 F 22 '36

"Satisfactory programmer of the back stage type which should fit in nicely on any double bill. Picture has a chance to stand by itself in less important spots."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 8 '36

SONG OF THE DAMNED. See Escape from Devil's Island

SONG OF THE SADDLE. F 22 '36 63min First national

Players: Charles Middleton, George Ernest. Bonita Granville, Alma Lloyd, Dick Foran

Director: Louis King

"A cowboy Robin Hood returns to the frontier village to avenge the death of his father, killed years before by the cruel and merciless boss of the town." Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Stirring horsemanship, lilting tunes of the open spaces and stage-coach hold-ups lend reality to the homesteading days of the '50's. Possible for family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Good direction, a well chosen cast, lovely scenery, fine photography and beautiful horses are combined to make this 'Western' melodrama good entertainment. Good for the family and junior matinees." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"A very beautifully photographed Western, filled with action and good singing. The fact that the hero takes the law into his own hands, even if it is with great provocation, will make this film doubtful for juvenile audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 28 '35

"This picture of the good old pioneer days has all the elements of a good Western, and is capably acted and directed. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Club (W Coast) D 16 '35

"There is a real plot, a romance, and better than usual acting in this Western, and, while ethically it is unwise and unlawful to take the law in one's own hands, the time and plot make such transgressions understandable. Interesting [example] of its type. Family. (University Women and New England Women consider it questionable for children.)"

+ Jt Estimates D 15 '35

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A. Y. and C: Good Western."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Couple of songs add to enjoyment of picture. . . Story is a bit better than the usual run. Direction has been well handled and it is a well done production."

+ Film Curb p6 Ja 4 '36

"Here is a Western to delight the fans who like villains thoroughly bad, heroes triumphantly good and plenty of thrilling riding. For good measure, there are two catchy melodies for Dick Foran to warble."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 D 24 '35

"Better than his first Western, new hero Dick Foran indicates in 'Song of the Saddle' that he must be considered soon in the front outdoor ranks. Estimate: good Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p32 Ja 10 '36

"Direction by Louis King is ably adapted to material. He romps the picture along with swift action, never relaxes suspense and [gives it] as fine an assortment of riding, chases, battles, hand-to-hand encounters, simple comedy and heroics as the simon-pure Western fan could demand. All these elements are lavishly provided and neatly assembled in William Jacobs' story, handled for average audience entertainment without ever becoming too heavy."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 20 '35

SPANISH CAPE MYSTERY. O 25 '35 73min Republic

Players: Donald Cook. Helen Twelvetrees

Director: Lewis D. Collins

Based on the novel of same title by Ellery Queen. It "shows up the stupidity of the local investigators in solving the strange murders that were perpetrated at Spanish Cape." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Mediocre; Y: Perhaps; C: No."
Christian Century p95 Ja 15 '36

"Good. Suitable for mature audiences." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Ellery Queen, famous detective of fiction is here depicted as a smart-aleck of the most offensive type. 12-16: passable; 8-12: little interest." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
+ — Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"Fair. Adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Good; C: Doubtful."
Par M p57 Mr '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide O 12 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Murder with flippancy appears to be the favorite movie formula of the season. 'The Spanish Cape Mystery' seems determined to apply the methods of knockabout farce to a succession of grisly homicides, but succeeds in being neither scary nor diverting." M. E. P.
— Boston Transcript p4 N 22 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

"Holds the attention from start to finish and has been given a high grade production."
+ Film Curb p8 O 15 '35

"Competent acting by competent cast, story which holds interest till very end, dialogue which sparkles with urban wit are features. Family mystery drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 O 25 '35

"Fairly intriguing detective mystery."
+ — Variety p39 N 20 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SPECIAL AGENT. S 14 '35 78min Warner

Players: Bette Davis. George Brent. Ricardo Cortez. Jack LaRue

Director: William Keighley

"Federal conviction of a powerful public enemy is presented from a new angle in a series of thrilling episodes. High moral standards and a hearty respect for Government methods are maintained throughout." Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Good of kind; Y: Unwholesome; C: No."
Christian Century p1358 O 23 '35

"A competent cast supports the fine acting of the principals. Mature."
+ Jt Estimates S 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p150 D '35

Nat Bd of R M S '35

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A: Tense G-man film; Y: Unsuitable; C: No."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Well acted and vigorously produced. It belongs to the expert tradition of its school and it should have proved to be admirable entertainment. It is passably good melodramatic fun, but it might have been something more than that had it not run into a curious ethical handicap." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p6 O 21 '35

"A fast, well-made story of another mobster biting the dust. . . 'Special Agent' although no 'G-Man,' is an exciting gangster tale." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p22 S 19 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c O 20 '35

"A workmanlike, journalistic melodrama, made by specialists in this type of entertainment."

+ Time p29 S 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

SPLENDOR. N 23 '35 77min Goldwyn-United artists

Players: Miriam Hopkins. Joel McCrea. Helen Westley. Katharine Alexander. Paul Cavanaugh

Director: Elliott Nugent

A proud but penniless old New York family hopes that the son will lift them out of poverty by marrying an heiress. When he brings home a poor little Miss Nobody, the family contrive for her to exert her charms on a wealthy cousin who helps her husband. People talk and the girl leaves. Eventually her husband finds a job and goes back to her.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Depends on taste; Y: Unsuitable; C: No."

Christian Century p63 Ja 8 '36

"Miss Crothers' witty dialogue and the exceptionally fine acting by the whole cast add

SPLENDOR—Continued

much enjoyment to a picture recommended for adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"This picture is beautifully produced, deft and purposeful in its direction, with each member of the cast giving a convincing and realistic characterization and is motivated by the highest ethical values. A thoroughly satisfying and enjoyable picture. Adults and young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"More talk than action, but the dialogue is good. Mature." Nat Bd of R

"Interesting but sophisticated entertainment. Rachel Crothers does not overcome her stage technique which brings with it more dialogue than action. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"This picture just misses being outstanding—a trite story is its chief weakness. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An interesting story well told. The settings are in good taste and the photography and scenic effects are excellent. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Adults and young people." Mrs T. G. Winter

"A sophisticated, social drama, very well done but rather unhappy in atmosphere. Adult." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

Mo Film Bul p200 D '35

"Very good. Family." Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A: Sophisticated drama; Y and C: No." Par M 57 Mr '36

"Mature." Wkly Guide N 23 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Where Miss Crothers shows her superiority over many of her Hollywood contemporaries is in making her characters human beings. . . The sense of characterization is further helped by the excellence of the acting. Miriam Hopkins has never given a better performance than she does in the present film." E. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 22 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 N 23 '35

"With her characteristic ladylike efficiency, Miss Crothers has written a sedate and leisurely account of poverty among the aristocrats. . . You should not, however, be led into any suspicion that, in dramatizing the downfall of a great Fifth Avenue family and the loss of their home, she is in any way attempting to write an American 'Cherry Orchard.'" Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 N 23 '35

"This new feature is a typical Crothers comedy drama, her wise and witty dialogue pointing up a story only her skill keeps from sordidness." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p8 N 23 '35

"It is my grim business to report that 'Splendor' is as flat and stereotyped as this report makes it out. True, some of it has a pleasant theatrical gloss over it, but for the most part it rings mournfully false in situation and contains dialogue that is mostly vaporish." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p22 N 23 '35

Reviewed by John Mosher
New Yorker p90 N 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Outstanding is the fine performance of Miriam Hopkins who is at all times convincing in a difficult role."

+ Box Office p25 N 30 '35

Film Daily p8 N 19 '35

"It is smart and sophisticated, and presented with all the attention to lavish production values that Goldwyn always gives. These assets may make up for the fact that all the drama is motivated by the selfish conspiracies of a group with no troubles at all from the point of view of the average moviegoer."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 N 19 '35

"Adult melodrama." N Y Exhibitor p55 D 10 '35

"The production will be a delight to those who can appreciate a perfect ensemble in a well written vehicle."

+ Variety p14 N 27 '35

SPY 77. Ja 15 '36 76min First division

Players: Greta Nissen. Don Alvarado. Carl Diehl. Lester Matthews. Esme Percy

Director: Arthur Woods

This film was made in England. "The romance of an Italian woman spy and an Austrian officer ends in tragedy, as the Austrian officer does his duty for his country." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for adults." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Esme Percy contributes an excellently drawn characterization in the comparatively minor rôle of Bluentzli, a very mysterious person indeed. Short and stocky, with a large moonlike face and amazingly expressive eyes and lips, he repeatedly steals scenes from the principals. But even Mr. Percy cannot compensate entirely for the familiarity of the story and its rather dull treatment." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p15 F 10 '36

"To come right out and say so, it isn't bad entertainment of its kind. But then, neither is it good. Indeed, if it were not for a really fine performance by Carl Diehl in the rôle of an Austrian officer who is unjustly accused of selling important war secrets to the Italians and who, instead of committing suicide according to army traditions, becomes a spy to exonerate himself, 'Spy 77' would pass completely unobserved. . . All of which is the testimony of one who found parts of 'Spy 77' exciting but not exciting enough to recommend the film wholeheartedly." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p33 F 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p23 Ja 4 '36

"A bit above the average English-made film." + — Film Curb p12 F 15 '36

"Fairly entertaining spy drama with familiar plot okay for the popular stands." + — Film Daily p7 F 11 '36

"This film has an occasional note of suspense, and a fair portion of action, against a background of secret service intrigue during the World War."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p5 F 12 '36

"The plot is stereotyped in its handling of World War espionage and differs from the usual only in its ending. . . The action is slow for the most part, with occasional sequences of activity. The acting is good but the cast is comparatively unknown and presents a selling problem."

Motion Pict Herald p44 F 25 '36

"Humor is strikingly missing from picture. While not overly dramatic, the business-like workings of the intelligence departments of two nations at war and the grimmer side of a big conflict are kept constantly in the foreground. As a moving tale of warfare, Arthur Woods, who concocted the story and also directed, has succeeded. . . In addition to a cohesive story that dovetails even on finer details, Director Woods has handled megaphone masterfully. Element of suspense is held from middle of story clear through to ultimate capture of Spy 77. Few obvious film heroics have been employed."

+ Variety p18 F 12 '36

STARS OVER BROADWAY. N 23 '35 89min
Warner

Players: James Melton. Jane Froman. Pat O'Brien. Jean Muir

Director: William Keighley

Music and lyrics: Harry Warren. Al Dubin

Dances: Busby Berkeley. Bobby Connolly

From a novelette, Thin Air, by Mildred Cram. It depicts the rise to operatic fame of an ex-baggage man. His career includes a period of singing in a night club and over the radio before he is finally successful.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Very good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Smooth direction, fast moving action, three destined-to-be-popular songs, and two stunning feminine personalities lend quality to this story. Adults and 8-18: very good. Possible for family and junior matinees." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Mature: 14-18." DAR

"An entertaining show, with fine singing. Good. Family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Family audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Constructive and wholesome. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"The whole thing is geared to a fast pace and should please anyone looking for a light entertainment. It provides a good deal of beautiful music but evidently Melton's singing and the rendition of classical arias are not supposed to be the chief attraction. 12-16: entertaining; 8-12: amusing but mature." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 12 '35

"Though the story is treated in a serious manner, delightful music, romance, and light comedy sequences make it entertaining for the average audience. James Melton's voice dominates the picture. Very good for mature family."

+ Jt Estimates N 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p200 D '35

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Entertaining; C: Mature but amusing."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Family."

Wkly Guide O 16 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p4 D 14 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '35

Reviewed by Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p18 N 15 '35

Reviewed by Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p19 N 14 '35

"This is Mr. Melton's first picture and there is no reason to feel it will be his last. Brought into the film fold chiefly because of his possession of a mellow tenor and a pleasant smile, he proves within the limited opportunities of his rôle that he can handle a comic scene and roll a romantic eye fully as well as he sings 'Celeste Aida' or 'Carry Me Back to the Lone Prairie.'" F. S. N.

+ N Y Times p17 N 14 '35

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p27 N 23 '35

"If the picture did nothing more than bring James Melton to film audiences it would have accomplished its purpose."

+ Film Curb p12 N 15 '35

"Good musical entertainment."

+ Film Daily p7 N 5 '35

"The range of musical numbers, including 'Celeste Aida' and 'Ave Maria,' as well as popular tunes, should make the picture satisfactory to most audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 O 29 '35

Motion Pict Herald p61 N 9 '35

"Family musical."

N Y Exhibitor p36 N 25 '35

Variety p16 N 20 '35

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND. S 6 '35
80min 20th century-Fox

Players: Will Rogers. Anne Shirley. John McGuire. Irvin S. Cobb. Stepin Fetchit

Director: John Ford

Adapted from the novel of same title by Ben Lucien Burman. "As captain of the 'Claremore Queen,' a ramshackle old tub, Will Rogers is involved in a romance in which Anne Shirley and John McGuire are the principals. Their happiness is threatened when McGuire kills a man in the girl's defense, gives himself up on Rogers' advice and is condemned. The spectacular event of the story shows a steamboat race down the Mississippi river." (Springf'd Republican)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Mo Film Bul p150 D '35

"A, Y and C: Excellent."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"In the rich comic tradition of Mark Twain and those great days on the Mississippi." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p17 S 20 '35

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND—Continued

"Some of the excitement and some of the comedy of life along the Mississippi in the old days."

+ New Yorker p4 O 12 '35

+ Springf'd Republican p6c O 20 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

(s) STEEL AND STONE. Ja 25 '36 11min Vitaphone

Players: Milton J. Cross

Director: E. M. Newman

"This number of the 'Our Own United States' series covers the construction of bridges and tunnels. . . There are excellent views of the Key West spans, the Pulaski Skyway, the Huey Long bridge in New Orleans and others." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Excellent educational short. Suggested for schools. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ja 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The idea is a novel one for the screen and should find general acceptance."

+ Box Office p26 F 1 '36

"Skillfully narrated by Milton J. Cross, this will find favor in all sections of the nation, for there is no territory that is not represented with some famous example of a bridge, tunnel or highway."

+ Film Daily p7 Ja 24 '36

"Aside from its educational angle the film is both interesting and entertaining. Should be well received."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ja 27 '36

"This subject should please, if only on the merits of its geographical and historical values."

+ Motion Pict Herald p8 Ja 28 '36

"Good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p41 Ja 25 '36

STORM OVER THE ANDES. S 16 '35 84min Universal

Players: Jack Holt. Mona Barrie. Antonio Moreno

Director: Christy Cabanne

"A soldier of fortune, an intrepid flyer, joins the Bolivian forces to defeat the ace flyer of the opposition. At a chance Fiesta meeting, he falls in love with the wife of his commanding officer. His mistake is rectified when, in a thrilling aerial encounter, he saves the officer's life, narrowly escaping with his own." Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Elementary; Y: Doubtful; C: No."

Christian Century p358 O 23 '35

"Interesting photography. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates S 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p151 D '35

"Fair. Adults & young adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M S '35

"A good cast prove insufficient to surmount the mediocrity of this rambling tale of aerial conflict and a triangle love affair. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is a good deal of color and adventurous bravery to the story. . . 'Storm Over the Andes' is really very satisfying."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

Film Curb p10 O 15 '35

STORMY. N 11 '35 68min Universal

Players: Noah Beery, Jr. Jean Rogers. J. Farrell MacDonald

Director: Louis Friedlander

From a novel of same title by Cherry Wilson. The "story of the struggle of a young homeless boy to keep and raise a wild colt, that he feels belongs to him." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Good of kind; Y: Good; C: Exciting but good."

Christian Century p1638 D 18 '35

"While there is bitter conflict and gun play as in all Westerns the fine understanding direction, the natural and realistic acting of the leads, and the intelligent work of the beautiful horse, Rex, makes this a delightfully interesting and entertaining picture for all ages. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 5 '35

Mo Film Bul p176 N '35

"Very good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Family and junior matinees."

Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Splendid Western."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"With a background of the Great Painted Desert of Arizona, attention is focused upon Rex, the wild horse, who usurps the lion's share of the action. Good photography and direction. Family."

Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

"A delightful and unusual picture, filmed in the beautiful Painted Desert. Family. Junior matinee."

+ Wkly Guide O 5 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The elusive qualities that make 'Stormy' the distinctive little picture it is cannot be recreated on paper. Full of photographic gems and set in a country that lends itself beautifully to the camera, the picture is best remembered for those bits that have nothing to do with the plot. The wild stampede scene alone makes 'Stormy' a worth-while risk."

+ Liberty p22 N 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p35 O 25 '35

"Except for an effective stampede of horses in the final reel, 'Stormy' has nothing to distinguish it from run-of-the-mill sagebrush sagas. Cast of minor importance."

— + Variety p19 D 11 '35

STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR. F 22 '36 85min
Warner

Players: Paul Muni. Josephine Hutchinson.
Anita Louise. Donald Woods

Director: William Dieterle

"The story is of Louis Pasteur, French chemist, whose researches revolutionized theory and practice of medicine and medical science. Moving in an aura of deep human interest, it merely tells of a man's ambitions and accomplishments, disappointments and fears of failure, devotion to purpose and the triumph that is his when the heretofore bitterly opposed world of science recognizes him and his works." Motion Pict Herald

Audience Suitability Ratings

"While this reviewer is not sufficiently acquainted with the life of Pasteur to pass judgment upon the historical accuracy of the picture, it is safe to say that the producers would not be at all likely to take advantage even of dramatic license in a picture of this kind. Paul Muni gives a highly satisfactory rendering of the title role."

+ Bks &amp; Films F '36

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Beautifully presented, this film contributes a new and significant phase of scenario development; significant in its conclusive evidence that the lives of great figures of the past may prove as glamorously thrilling film material as any concocted in the Hollywood fiction mills. . . . Excellently directed and expertly photographed. Adults; 8-18: excellent." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Abundant with charm, romantic appeal and the thrill of adventure this glimpse into the life of a great scientist makes outstanding and valuable entertainment. Perfection in detail, costumes of the day and clever, beautiful stage settings denote careful research." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Paul Muni does not act the part of Pasteur—he IS Pasteur;—no higher tribute can be paid an actor. The sympathy and understanding that he injects into this picture stimulate the others in the cast and the audience will feel that they are a part of the loyal household watching jealously that honor shall come to the beloved chemist rather than doubt and humiliation. This is the most outstanding production of the year because of its biographical and historical values, the careful research made that it be authentically perfect, the careful choice of actors, the beauty of the photography, and the deftness of the direction by William Dieterle. Family—mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Careful settings and photography enhance this rarely satisfying film which is notable for its human appeal and definite dramatic structure. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This picture should be seen so that the present generation can realize that the now common protective measures have only been attained by courage, hard work and a determination to benefit and relieve mankind. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"This film has beauty, significance and nobleness, and at the same time is absorbing in its story and in its atmosphere. In fact, the picture is one that should not be missed—one that glorifies the finer qualities in human life—as well as captures the imagination. Mature. Not understandable by children." Mrs T. G. Winter

"Paul Muni's interpretation of Pasteur is very genuine; the scientist seems to live again. The entire cast is well-chosen, and the direction shows unusual understanding and subtlety. It is a story which challenges the imagination and opens new vistas of endeavor for youth of today who may carry on his high standards in the name of humanity. Adolescents; splendid; children: good but mature." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ + Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"The story, sets, direction and acting are of the highest quality, making the seemingly difficult theme engrossing and full of dramatic situations. Paul Muni gives another of his marvelous performances and is given strong support by each member of the cast. The whole production is very thoughtfully, artistically and sympathetically presented with especially beautiful and interesting photography. Family-mature."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
D 4 '36

"A valuable chronicle of the indefatigable pioneer. . . . The romance between Pasteur's lovely daughter and his young assistant lends color. Excellently directed and expertly photographed. Family."

+ Jt Estimates D 15 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Extraordinarily fine film depicting drama of scientist's fight against disease and ignorance; Y: Thrilling and educational; C: Mature but educational."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"Intensely human and a genuinely uplifting picture. Recommended for school, library and church use. Worth being kept permanently available. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family-junior."

+ + Wkly Guide Ja 16 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The acting, not only of Mr. Muni as Pasteur, but of the rest of the cast holds to a high standard. . . . The merit of the story lies in Pasteur himself, his work and his struggles; and the most significant of the acting, quite properly is that of Mr. Muni." E. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 15 '36

"Paul Muni throughout this picture, actually seems to embody the spirit as well as the physical likeness of Louis Pasteur; he contributes what must be acclaimed as an unforgettable screen portrait. . . . No dry history or routine character sketch this—it is vivid romance and genuine drama." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p10 Mr '36

"The motion picture enters still another new field, and Catholics the world over will rejoice at the selection of Pasteur as the subject of the first biographical film depicting the life of a great man of science. . . . From the viewpoint of entertainment, 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' is substantial, gripping the interest at the outset and holding attention by its humaneness." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p356 Ja 24 '36

"It is to be placed among the honor films of the new year."

+ + Lit Digest p20 F 1 '36

"A series of triumphs is doubtless less dramatic than a single big one toward which everything has tended; but that is merely another way of saying that 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' is not quite so sustained a success-story as 'The Prisoner of Shark Island.' " Mark Van Doren

STORY OF LOUIS PASTEUR—Continued

Nation p293 Mr 4 '36

"The first criticism is that the story is undramatic, that Pasteur's conflict is either against intangible, non-screenable forces, or against the solemn beards of the academy, who are too overdrawn, dull and fatuous for a good fight. And the second criticism is one of overdrawing in general: Pasteur is too good and meek, his wife is too patient and sugary; and the decent sentiment of the family scenes is so invariable as to be tiresome. Most of the fault, that is, seems to lie in the story and dialogue, plus the way story and dialogue were in several instances invested in weak screen characters, plus the way William Dieterle as director did little to repair this." Otis Ferguson

— + New Repub p369 F 5 '36

"A dignified and at times thrilling biographical condensation. Paul Muni delivers his best performance to date. The film has its faults—its structure is occasionally not unlike the animated tableau—a specious historical background. Still vastly superior to the usual output."

+ New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"'The Story of Louis Pasteur,' written and directed with honesty and tenderness, and stirringly played by Paul Muni, is not only an exciting and beautiful screen drama, but possesses a quality of heroism and nobility that actually makes you proud of the petty, hapless and bewildered human race. If by any unfortunate chance the idea should get about that 'The Story of Louis Pasteur,' because it deals with adventure in science, rather than in romantic homicide, was a pedantic and laborious work that deserved merely a polite admiration and was to be applauded because it was a fine educational thing for the children to see, then a great error will be made by criticism and publicity. For the truth of the matter is that the picture is far more exciting and heart-warming than the run of films celebrating presumably less cerebral topics." Richard Watts, Jr.

++ N Y Herald Tribune p8 F 10 '36

"[It] is of course a picture that should be seen by every one, from disillusioned adults to children eager for adventure. . . 'The Story of Louis Pasteur,' a dramatic show as well as a noble tribute, is decidedly on the must list." Eileen Creelman

++ N Y Sun p24 F 10 '36

"'The Story of Louis Pasteur' is an excellent biography, just as it is a notable photoplay, dignified in subject, dramatic in treatment and brilliantly played by Paul Muni, Fritz Leiber, Josephine Hutchinson and many other members of the cast. . . Pasteur's life is warm and vital, of itself. It has lost none of that warmth through Mr. Muni's sensitive characterization, through the gifted direction of William Dieterle and the talents of a perfect cast. It may not be the province—and probably it was not the primary motive—of a Hollywood studio to create a film which is, at the same time, a monument to the life of a man. But 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' is truly that." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p15 F 10 '36

"Not only is 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' a gallant film adventure, it is also as exciting and thrilling in its own way as 'G-Men,' and I hope that it will be just as successful. [It] illustrates conscientiously the life of one of the world's greatest benefactors with great dignity and power." William Boehnel

++ N Y World-Telegram p15 F 10 '36

"High among the very great of history whom I should rank as the least likely subjects for screen material would be Louis Pasteur. It would not have occurred to me that a life dedicated to chemical research would supply those incidents one thinks essential to drama. Warner Brothers have apparently had no such hesitancy. . . Judging from 'The Story of Louis Pasteur,' the first in this new category to be given, I can well imagine that they can unearth enough excitement for a film in the existence of any saint or scholar that ever lived. . . Paul Muni gives a plausible picture of the great man, a far more human characterization than that recently shown on the screen by Sacha Guitry, in a negative French dissertation on the same subject." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p77 F 22 '36

"To date, the best Paul Muni has done on the screen. This film will undoubtedly start a 'trend' toward straightforward biographical stories, as indeed it should."

+ Stage p9 F '36

"So well has Paul Muni caught the spirit which immunized the great French scientist against despair that even cinemaudiences who know they are fanciful will not cavil at the introduction of a villain, Dr. Charbonnet (Fritz Leiber); at the 18-year postponement of Pasteur's paralytic attack; at other slight tinkering with truth. Josephine Hutchinson as Pasteur's unselfish and understanding wife is likewise without flaw, helps to make Muni's interpretation all the more complete."

+ Time p44 F 17 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A sincere offering, done with a fine touch of effective acting and a smashing climax. . . Paul Muni is superb in the title role."

+ Box Office p29 D 7 '35

"Undoubtedly one of the prize productions of the year. One forgets absolutely that this is a picture. It is such an impressive reminder of conditions, as they existed in 1860, in regard to human life. . . Paul Muni stands out in this masterly production, which is destined for something finer and grander than just box-office appeal. It will have that, as well as gratitude, because it proves that vital statistics can be made more than optically palatable, thereby educating and entertaining, at a profit to the producer, and exhibitor. Take it from me folks, it's grand."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 D 28 '35

"Here is a film that has just about everything a fine drama needs. [It] will appeal to all classes."

+ Film Curb p15 D 1 '35

"This blazes a new trail in pictures. Warners have made cold science dramatic, and, with Muni as the French scientist, have fashioned a story that grips from the start."

+ Film Daily p8 N 23 '35

"Excellent entertainment! Without resorting to the usual claptrap, they have produced a picture which, because of its simplicity, should be understood, appreciated, and enjoyed by everybody. . . Excellent for all. [Family.]"

++ Harrison's Reports F 15 '36

"So absorbing is this theme that the film is sure to win terrific word-of-mouth endorsement. . . Paul Muni lends intensity to the role of a man whose fight against careless doctors and unsterilized instruments brought first laughter, then hatred, and then persecution from orthodox medicos. . . The story and screen play by Sheridan Gibney and Pierre Collings rearranges the events of Pasteur's life for dramatic emphasis, but gives a faithful portrait of the man and the main events."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 N 21 '35

"In this picture the screen makes a great departure from prosaic formula. The story is simple biography in which there is not a single trace of theatrical artificiality. What is seen is drama, expertly acted, directed with feeling and understanding. Its power to create and hold interest immediately gripped the preview audience and kept it in hushed silence all the way through. Enthusiastic, appreciative applause broke out at the conclusion. . . Here is a picture the worth of which is almost certain to impress both class and mass alike."

+ Motion Pict Herald p58 N 30 '35

"Here is a production that will not only stand as a monumental achievement from Warner Brothers, but which will be added to that outstanding list which includes shows known as prestige pictures. . . In a season where good pictures have been many, this stands out with the best. Everyone—studio, performers, writers, directors—combined to produce an A-1 show from every angle. Family drama."

+ + N Y Exhibitor p53 D 10 '35

"Here is another splendid film, carefully and intelligently produced and a credit all around. Whether or not it will repay the energy and coin expended on its making by way of box office is a moot question. Chances are that it will be no record-breaker by way of grosses, but it should do a fair amount of business and will get good breaks from critics plus word of mouth to balance. Certainty of European heavy grosses is another favorable factor not to be overlooked in this case. Its appreciation will come from adults. Adolescents [will] be disinterested or without patience."

+ Variety p16 F 12 '36

STREAMLINE EXPRESS. O 29 '35 71min
Masqot

Players: Evelyn Venable. Victor Jory

Director: Leonard Fields

"The scene is laid on a new streamline train during its record transcontinental run and the plot concerns a producer, his runaway star, her fiancée, a crook and several others." Nat Bd of R M

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Although this picture starts slowly it picks up speed and interest and becomes quite an amusing comedy. Mature."

+ — Nat Bd of R M S '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p32 N 23 '35

Film Curb p6 O 15 '35

STRIKE ME PINK. Ja 17 '36 99min United artists

Players: Eddie Cantor. Ethel Merman.
Sally Eilers. William Frawley. Brian
Donlevy

Director: Norman Taurog

Based on the novel, Dreamland, by Clarence Budington Kelland. "Cantor is cast as a meek campus tailor who acquires courage from a correspondence school course and goes on to manage an amusement park. Complications are provided by the efforts of Brian Donlevy as head of a gambling ring, to install slot machines at the park. The story thread is used mostly to motivate an exciting chase which climaxes and ends the picture." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"This is a well-written farce, developed according to tried and true formulae, such as the 'chase' and the 'custard-pie throwing' of old silent films. The dance ensembles, beautifully staged, especially in the black and white chorus number, are subjects for unusual photographic effects. . . The comedy is sometimes strained, but Cantor fans will enjoy his farcical fun."

S. M. Mullen

+ Scholastic p30 Mr 7 '36

Wkly Guide Ja 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It all depends upon whether one is a rabid Cantor fan, or not, whether this latest picture of his will appeal. . . Calculated to draw audiences who want this easy-to-watch-without-straining-the-intelligence-type of entertainment, 'Strike Me Pink' probably spells box office." Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"For instance, if you enjoyed the pictures Harold Lloyd made ten years or so ago and wish to repeat the thrill his 'Safety Last' gave you, by all means see 'Strike Me Pink' for it does all the Lloyd stuff over again, with just enough change in the mechanics involved to give it a suggestion of newness. . . Ethel Merman could not get where she is with her singing if there were no demand for it. I concede that. It merely happens not to be the kind of singing I prefer. . . Another defect in my screen inclinations is that I demand some suggestion of logic in even riotously illogical comedy. Here we have a gang of extremely villainous villains parading through the picture without any reason being given why the authorities should not be appealed to. . . And another weakness in my equipment as a critic is my estimate of a picture's entertainment values for its whole audience and not for that part of it that is recruited on Broadway. 'Strike Me Pink' is a picture for Broadway, not for Main Street, where the bulk of its support should come from."

— Hollywood Spec p13 Ja 18 '36

"Mr. Cantor depends on action for his best pranks and in 'Strike Me Pink' there is no complaint because of inaction. He is never still and, therefore, the picture is the best he ever made, and the funniest."

+ Lit Digest p19 Ja 25 '36

"'Strike Me Pink' is at its best when it reaches its climax and goes in heroically and unashamedly for a splendid finale in the best tradition of the immortal Keystone comedies. There isn't a pie thrown and the police don't jump into the air before starting to run, but the glorious tradition of the chase, which is the finest flower of cinema farce, is celebrated with admirable pictorial abandon. Mr. Cantor and the police (who really are the racketeers in disguise) climb about the framework of the roller coaster and stage races with each other up and down its 'chutes' amid all the gusto of the palmy days of Mack Sennett, although with better photography. . . I must say that I found all of this rather more entertaining than the elaborate musical numbers, even though the incomparable Miss Ethel Merman, as a vague sort of villainess, appears gallantly in them." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p15 Ja 17 '36

"Eddie Cantor deliberates upon an important question, 'Man or Mouse, Which are You?' and, by the end of 'Strike Me Pink,' is able to answer joyfully that he is a man. This pleasant debate requires all the lavishness of a Goldwyn musical and the excitements of a melodrama. Directed by Norman Taurog as slapstick, [it] is for the most part, a mad and merry comedy. It takes a good while getting under way. . . Once it's really started, however, 'Strike Me Pink' goes into a whirlwind finish, a wild, gigantically funny, crazily exciting chase sequence, with the diminutive Eddie pursued by crooks, dressed like policemen and acting like Keystone cops, through a lunatic amusement park. . . The comedy is not always so happy. Mr. Cantor is at his merriest, but the dialogue writers were not always inspired. The gags as well as the wise cracks are sometimes both forced and obvious. . . Only the speed of the film and the skill of Mr. Cantor keep the film going smoothly through these sequences. . . 'Strike Me Pink' is grand fun, one of Mr. Cantor's best." Eileen Creelman

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

STRIKE ME PINK—Continued

+ — N Y Sun p19 Ja 17 '36

"[It has] considerably less hilarity than we have come to expect of the annual Goldwyn-Cantor shows. 'Strike Me Pink,' the latest gift from the Ziegfeld of the Pacific, appears to lack some of his customary expansiveness and much of the comic invention that has made the well-known father of five one of the screen's most likable funny men. Perhaps this is an ungrateful way of summing up a lavish cinema enterprise which does, after all, present several extended moments of low comedy, some handsomely executed dance spectacles and the always enjoyable singing of Ethel Merman and of Mr. Cantor himself." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p15 Ja 17 '36

"[It] begins in a leisurely fashion, picks up in its middle portions and ends in a riot of laughs. The houseful of guffaws is produced by one of the oldest, simplest and most successful of all cinema devices—the chase. . . Here, it serves to give animation and provide hilarity for an otherwise ambling, unimportant but luxuriously produced and sometimes funny musical comedy. . . Perhaps if Mr. Cantor had not done better with more amusing material in some of his previous films this column would not be so lukewarm in its praise of 'Strike Me Pink,' which, after all, is as good as most musicals and better than some of them." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p21 Ja 17 '36

"I must say at once, lest I misguide the world, that 'Strike Me Pink' is by no means as funny as [A Night at the Opera.] . . With its acrobatics, whether actual Cantor contortions or tricky camera stunts, and general activity, this new movie is a convulsion. . . The film is a wild and crazy comedy of the old school. Old school with new machinery. Science having advanced, so has the scope of the Sennett technique. The classic Sennett chase is here developed, one would think, to its final heights. It's on the grand scale, if anything ever was." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p63 Ja 25 '36

"What makes 'Strike Me Pink' slightly superior to its more recent predecessors in the series of pictures made by Cantor and Goldwyn is not so much the elaborate production numbers, in which the Goldwyn Girls function as decoratively as usual, but the activities of an animated young woman named Ethel Merman."

Time p47 Ja 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p33 Ja 18 '36

"It has everything that a high class musical should have. If it isn't the best picture Eddie Cantor has ever made we'd like to see the one that was better. The star in perfect form registers every moment he is on the screen and he's in evidence most of the time."

+ Film Curb p16 Ja 18 '36

"This is one of the best Eddie Cantor pictures. It has plenty of comedy, action, dance numbers and some catchy songs."

+ Film Daily p7 Ja 14 '36

"Good! Eddie Cantor romps through the picture in his usual comical fashion. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 25 '36

"Eddie Cantor's latest effort . . . provides smash entertainment. . . The musical numbers are well spotted and photographed with unusual beauty, making the dance routine seem new. Miss Merman's first number, 'High and Low,' is made particularly effective by unusual camera angles. . . The screen play . . . occasionally crossed the border of strict good taste in dialogue and situation, but is a capable job for the most part."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 11 '36

"There are lots of things to amuse and sell in this picture. . . There are instances in dialogue and action, particularly a torrid feature dance number and one trick chorus sequence, that may require delicate handling in spots. . . The mildly temped speed of the first half of the picture is more than equalized by the dizzy pace it takes in the concluding phases."

+ Motion Pict Herald p35 Ja 25 '36

"Many and varied gags, majority of which land, combine with a set of good songs and individual performances to make Eddie Cantor's latest good entertainment. Cantor is aces all the way. In some instances he's actually cute, but he isn't singing so much in 'Strike Me Pink,' having only two numbers."

+ Variety p14 Ja 22 '36

"'Strike Me Pink' comes near topping Eddie Cantor's previous picture efforts, due mainly to an excellent screen play and Norman Taurog's direction. . . Samuel Goldwyn has given the picture a class mounting, spared nothing to make it entertainment. Special work done on the finish, a chase sequence on a roller coaster, packed with thrills, looks like a heavy investment but was worth whatever it cost."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 10 '36

SUICIDE SQUAD. D 25 '35 60min Puritan

Players: Norman Foster. Joyce Compton

Director: Raymond K. Johnson

"An exciting story of the firemen who daily face death." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Worthless; Y: Poor; C: No."

Christian Century p207 Ja 29 '36

Nat Bd of R M Ja '36

"A, Y and C: Revealing drama."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Wkly Guide Ja 4 '36

SUNSET OF POWER. Ja 23 '36 60min Universal

Players: Buck Jones. Dorothy Dix. Charles Middleton

Director: Ray Taylor

"Buck Jones saves the granddaughter of a rancher from an unwilling marriage by exposing her fiancé as a rustler." Endorsed Motion Pict

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Expert rough riding, beautiful scenery and a well-knit plot combine to make particularly good entertainment. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 4 '36

"A story of the old lawless cow country, interesting, with many good types. Family."

+ Nat Bd of R M Ja '36

"A, Y and C: Western melodrama."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Family Western. Good."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 Ja 10 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SUPERSPEED. S 1 '35 57min Columbia

Players: Norman Foster. Florence Rice.
Mary Carlisle. Arthur Hohl

Director: Lambert Hillyer

A gang of crooks connive against a young college football hero who is the inventor of a superspeed device. They damage the test car which he is to drive. Two girls, one the daughter of a motor car company owner and the other a tom-boy motorboat enthusiast provide romantic interest.

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p176 N '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Just a fair program picture with main weakness being in story idea. With a story that is very much of routine construction, this production never rises to much of a grade as entertainment."

+ — Film Daily p10 D 2 '35

"Entertaining. Pleases despite acting and casting flaws. Excellent supporting cast goes far in making something of run-of-mill story."

+ — Variety p15 D 4 '35

SWEET SURRENDER. N 25 '35 77min Universal

Players: Frank Parker. Tamara

Director: Monte Brice

"Getting mixed up with blackmailers and suave crooks on [the] S. S. Normandie leads a noted tenor and famous dancer to well-paid engagements in Europe and also a wedding." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Waste of time; Y: Poor; C: No." Christian Century p159 Ja 25 '36

"The plot is ordinary and lacks cohesion and for no good reason some peace propaganda is inserted."

+ — Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Waste of time; very poor." DAR
— Fox W Coast Bul D 28 '35

Mo Film Bul p201 D '35

"A: Fair; Y: Doubtful; C: Unsuitable." Par M p57 Mr '36

"Supposedly a music show but with little music. Frank Parker is good when he sings and Tamara dances beautifully but not enough. Most of the action takes place aboard the Normandie. Family."

— Wkly Guide O 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Mediocre story with plenty of everything dragged in by the neck and choked to death before it amounts to anything."

— Box Office p29 D 7 '35

"A likeable story, specially interesting because of a new dancer, Tamara whose solo dance is second to none."

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 D 21 '35

Film Curb p23 D 15 '35

"[A] weak musical handicapped all the way from unconvincing story to poor casting."

— Film Daily p4 D 14 '35

"The story falters in spots and there is a sequence of war shots designed to build up an emotional effect for a peace song by Parker that fails to jell, but on the whole the picture is eye-filling and tuncful."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 D 17 '35

"[The] story is inconsequential. Family musical."

— N Y Exhibitor p53 D 10 '35

Variety p12 D 18 '35

SWIFTY. D 15 '35 59min First division

Players: Hoot Gibson. June Gale

Director: Alan James

Based on the novel, Tracks, by Stephen Payne. A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Fair. Suitable for Church halls, Catholic schools, or family night programs."

+ — Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"A, Y and C: Fair Western."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Hoot Gibson does a good job in making this an interesting and exciting Western. All those who go for outdoor films will appreciate this one."

+ Film Curb p7 F 1 '36

Film Daily p8 Ja 28 '36

"A routine Western, this rates as average or less compared with others of its kind."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 28 '36

"Estimate: it should please."

+ N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

"Hoot Gibson in a rollicking horse frolic against plenty of scenic background, which sagebrush eaters should find good fun."

+ Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

SYLVIA SCARLETT. D 27 '35 97min RKO

Players: Katharine Hepburn. Cary Grant. Brian Aherne. Edmund Gwenn. Natalie Paley

Director: George Cukor

Based on the novel of the same title by Compton MacKenzie. A ne'er-do-well and his daughter try various illegal schemes to make a living when they join forces with a lace smuggler. The daughter falls in love with a traveling artist who joins them but she finds a rival for his affections. After she reforms and induces the group to mend their ways, they tour the English countryside as a traveling minstrel show. When the rival runs away with the lace smuggler, the way is clear for the young girl's romance with the artist.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Picture Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Notable; Y: Good; C: Little interest." Christian Century p63 Ja 8 '36

"A fantastically rambling scenario makes 'Sylvia Scarlett' a picture unworthy of the talents of Miss Hepburn. Adults: entertaining; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: uninteresting." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Mature." DAR

"Mature." Nat Bd of R

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

SYLVIA SCARLETT—Continued

"Very beautiful and picturesque settings offset somewhat the rowdy comedy. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A far-fetched story very realistically told, with exceptionally good characterizations. One of Katharine Hepburn's best roles. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women
Fox W Coast Bul D 28 '35

"Swift moving, dramatic and somewhat unexpected in development, this continental drama with its farcical moments, is directed with skill. The acting of Katharine Hepburn is notably fine, with Cary Grant, and Brian Aherne, making worthy contribution."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
D 16 '35

"Good. Adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Objectionable in part."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A: Amusing farce; Y: Confused ethics; C: Mature."
Par M p57 Mr '36

"Hepburn's effective playing of a double part of boy and girl contributes far more than the story."

Wkly Guide D 21 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"In spite of a high admiration for Katharine Hepburn and a seasonal mood of 'good will toward men'—including Hollywood—it is impossible to be very enthusiastic about 'Sylvia Scarlett.' The readiest explanation is that the picture has been worked over and over so many times that it has lost its original identity without ever finding a new one. There are moments when it is entertaining." E. F. M.
— + Boston Transcript p10 D 26 '35

"Those movie goers who have exalted Katharine Hepburn into a little niche of her own will probably like this picture, for Miss Hepburn makes a personal triumph of what is rather obviously only a very average picture. The story is crammed with incidents of a rather confused and unaccented type and only Miss Hepburn's fine performance saves from actual boredom this story of a vagabond Odyssey." Laura Elston
— + Canadian M p37 F '36

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 28 '35

"'Sylvia Scarlett' [is] an amateur movie as embarrassing as the ideas indulged in by Uncle Charlie when he dons Aunt Martha's hat at Aunt Ida's birthday party. I finally had to walk out on 'Sylvia Scarlett' for a breath of Sixth Avenue monoxide. . . . The whole picture is a case of bad judgment on the part of everybody concerned, a bad job of kittenish whimsy which doesn't begin to come off." Don Herold
— — Life p29 Mr '36

"I am forced to say that her vehicle is a sprawling and ineffective essay in dramatic chaos, with characters and situations enmeshed in vague obscurities, but for Miss Hepburn's performance I have only admiration. The photoplay itself is a rather futile oddity, but the eerie suggestion of oddness that goes with the star's characteristic type of impersonation fits in far more successfully with this sort of tale than it ever did when she was attempting to be a small-town wallflower in 'Alice Adams.' I don't care for 'Sylvia Scarlett' a bit, but I do think that Miss Hepburn is much better in it than she was as the Booth Tarkington heroine." Richard Watts, Jr.
— N Y Herald Tribune p15 Ja 10 '36

"Katharine Hepburn, whose last talkie, 'Alice Adams' was also her best, is now present in a new film 'Sylvia Scarlett,' which is, by a wide margin, her worst. . . It seems difficult to imagine just why Mr. Berman selected such a rambling, unbelievable story in the first place, nor why, in the second, Miss Hepburn consented to play so graceless and trivial a role. Mr. Cukor's theatrical direction and the star's artificial performance are among other unpleasant problems of the day." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p29 Ja 10 '36

"Probably it is unkind to say of 'Sylvia Scarlett' that it begins at 12 sharp and ends at 1:40, and yet that is precisely its total effect. . . . As the awkward, imaginative, tremulously frustrated heroine of the tale, Miss Hepburn, is on her home grounds, and she plays the part with a richness of understanding that compares favorably with her performance in 'Alice Adams.' Individual scenes of laughter and heart-break come through cleanly, but the story and its people seem purposeless and possess the blurred outlines of shapes that are being projected through a veil." Andre Sennwald
— + N Y Times p16 Ja 10 '36

"Except for the excellent people in it, and especially the beautiful and talented Katharine Hepburn, who animates the title role with a vibrant and compelling performance, there is very little to recommend in the [film]." William Boehnel
— + N Y World-Telegram p23 Ja 10 '36

"'Sylvia Scarlett,' taken from Compton Mackenzie's novel of 1918, is a story of a set of people whom the main stream of life has pushed a little to one side, sharpening and coloring them unforgettably in the process. It is made memorable by a rôle that almost steals the show from Miss Hepburn's androgynous: Cary Grant's superb depiction of the cockney."

Time p42 Ja 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p36 D 7 '35

Film Curb p12 Ja 4 '36

"Although the cast is a good one, the material is hardly very important. Most of the way, the picture is a comedy, but the situations are hardly very funny. . . . The director, George Cukor, has done a technically good job all around, but he didn't have a lot to work with."

Film Daily p4 D 12 '35

N Y Exhibitor p33 Ja 10 '36

T

TALE OF TWO CITIES. D 27 '35 120min MGM

Players: Ronald Colman. Elizabeth Allan. Donald Woods. Blanche Yurka. Basil Rathbone. Henry B. Walthall

Director: Jack Conway

Based on the novel of same title by Charles Dickens. Set against the horror of the fall of the Bastille in the grim days of the French Revolution, this familiar tale tells of the imprisoned Dr Manette, his daughter Lucie, her condemned husband Darney and the sacrifice made by Sidney Carton who takes Darney's place on the guillotine so that Lucie whom he loves may find happiness with her husband.

Dr. Marion C. Sheridan has prepared a Photoplay Study Guide to A Tale of Two Cities, including the historical development of the story, photography, sound effects and a bibliography. The Guide is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents per copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Not for small children. Excellent."
+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Charles Dickens' immortal story of sacrifice comes to the screen with a faithfulness to spirit and letter which could but delight its author. [It] is beautifully photographed, with delightfully finished characterizations. The scenes of bloodshed, Revolution and La Guillotine are reproduced with breath-taking verity. . . The final dramatic scene when Carton speaks the unforgettable 'It is a far, far better thing that I do than I have ever done.' . . is given a new depth, a new color, through its transmission to the screen. Blanche Yurka, whose interpretation of Ibsen roles has maintained the highest standards of the theatre, depicts the role of Madame De Farge with fire and power. Ronald Colman, as Sydney Carton, plays the latter scenes with an effective fatalism, a quiet joy, in sharp contrast to the devil-may-care, bibulous barrister of earlier sequence. . . The research, feeling, and artistry which have gone into this production have resulted in a screen classic which will take its place with 'David Copperfield'; with 'Mutiny On The Bounty.' Adults & 14-18: excellent; 8-14: too much cruelty for nervous children. Possible for family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Colorful; skilfully enacted and produced. Schools should see this fine historical classic." DAR

"The musical and sound accompaniments are excellent and give the true feeling of the period. Outstanding. Family, mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"No list of superlatives can do justice to this tremendous panorama of humanity swayed by the emotional extremes of France during the Terror. . . A distinguished cast under exceptionally intelligent direction provides a vivid and stirring picture of one of the most dramatic periods of history. Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women
+ + Fox W Coast Bul D 7 '35

"A noteworthy production which will have wide appeal. Family, too tense for young children."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
N 25 '35

"Once again Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has transmitted to the screen a Dickens' classic retaining, with authenticity, the story and maintaining throughout the beauty and interest of the original. . . There is every evidence of deep research in the planning for the stage settings of early Paris and London as one is transported into the unhappy days of the French Revolution, with its starving people, cruel executions and savage revenge. Finished, expert, realistic direction, very fine photography, sustained suspense all add to the interest. . . Excellent for the family, but not for small children."
+ Jt Estimates N 15 '35

"Technically it is nearly flawless. It is mounted with lavish disregard for costs and careful consideration for realistic and dramatic effects. . . Ronald Colman makes the smiling, sardonic wastrel one of the saddest characters of the screen, whose nature is revealed more through his effect upon others than in his own speech and action, until his final sacrifice."
+ Motion Pict & Family p4 Ja 15 '36

"Excellent. Adults & young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

Nat Bd of R M Ja '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Superbly produced classic drama; C: Tense."
Par M p57 Mr '36

"Once again Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has transmitted to the screen a Dickens classic retaining, with authenticity, the story and maintaining throughout the beauty and interest of the original. A notable and capable cast serves as a fitting background for Ronald Colman's unforgettable portrayal of Sydney Carton."
+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Suggested for schools and libraries. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays."
+ + Wkly Guide D 21 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Hollywood to its great joy has found that its particular kind of artistry profits well from the immortal Charles Dickens. 'David Copperfield' in spite of excellences and deficiencies, was by and large worthy of its popular success. Now comes a photoplay version of a story which, as such, is not only among the better knit and sustained of all the full-blooded company of Dickens's novels, but is probably most widely remembered by adults and school-boys—'A Tale of Two Cities.' Scratch a character actor and you reveal a character from the pages of Dickens. This avowed fact, combined with the abundant fund of unforgettable episodes packed with incredible generosity and realism between the covers of a single volume, offers to the film producer endless opportunity. All advance information on the latest excursion into the field of Dickensian caricature and narration points to a commendable result."
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 24 '35

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 4 '36

"The story has been used before for films, notably in the silent days, but this M-G-M successor to its 'David Copperfield' is a stirring, faithful cinema calculated to stand well up among the best films of the year."
+ + Lit Digest p21 D 14 '35

"The tragic tale of Sydney Carton . . . has been brought to the screen brilliantly in the unusually faithful version of 'A Tale of Two Cities.'" Richard Watts, Jr.
+ N Y Herald Tribune p9 D 26 '35

"'A Tale of Two Cities' is a picture that makes you feel like shouting. . . [The] producer has shown that rarest of Hollywood qualities, good taste. With showmanship added, and a generous hand in supplying background and costumes, the result is a Christmas present that should keep audiences happy for several weeks. . . Real justice demands impartial applause for every one connected with the picture from photographer and costume designer to the script-writers who kept all the humor as well as the drama of the Dickens novel." Eileen Creelman
+ + N Y Sun p30 D 27 '35

"'A Tale of Two Cities' . . . for more than two hours crowds the screen with beauty and excitement, sparing nothing in its recital of the Englishmen who were caught up in the blood and terror of the French Revolution and of Sydney Carton, who gave his life for his friends. The drama achieves a crisis of extraordinary effectiveness at the guillotine, leaving the audience quivering under its emotional sledge-hammer blows. . . Produced in the studio's most lavish and careful mood, the film errs, if at all, on the side of plenty. It impresses me as rather too long for comfortable cinema-going. It has everything, which means that it leaves almost nothing to the imagination. But among much that is not strictly essential there are peaks of incident which set your heart pounding and fire your blood."
+ N Y Times p21 D 26 '35

"The most beribboned bundle of the lot, and probably the most disappointing, is 'A Tale of Two Cities.'" John Mosher
— New Yorker p57 D 28 '35

TALE OF TWO CITIES—Continued

"'Tale of Two Cities' is among the best pictures of this waning year, a document in which history and drama are awesomely blended." Louise Mace

+ + Spring'd Republican p2 D 26 '35

"The whole picture constitutes a record of one of history's most melodramatic moments told in an idiom equal to its subject, from a skeleton designed by a novelist of genius. Like all real art, it achieves the general by relating the particular with an emotional intensity that never lets down from the first shot of a coach wheel being pulled through the mud of an English road to the last shot, in which the camera swings up from the dying Carton and the bloodthirsty crowd in the Place de la Révolution, up the shaft of the guillotine and still up, into the sunny sky of a new France."

+ Time p16 D 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Embracing both art and entertainment, this is one of the finest pictures to reach the screen in many months. . . The offering moves forward with absorbing interest, gathering momentum as it builds to the outbreak around the Bastille, and the sacrifice of aristocratic heads to the hungry blade of the guillotine. The stark realism, however, or rabid revenge never once destroys the impressional love scenes or personal sacrifice, making the entire offering one of sweeping power and tragic beauty."

+ + Box Office p17 D 14 '35

Film Curb p18 D 15 '35

"Fine performances and excellent direction make this one of the outstanding pictures of the year."

+ + Film Daily p4 N 30 '35

"Excellent. It is an outstanding picture. The scenes that show the gathering of the mobs of the French Revolution are something that people will not soon forget, so thrilling are they. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

+ + Harrison's Reports D 28 '35

"With the great effort expended in its production reflected on the screen, this picture will long be recalled as an outstanding contribution to film entertainment. Dickens enthusiasts will have no quarrel with Producer David Selznick or Adaptors W. P. Lipscomb and S. N. Behrman for the screen play accurately follows the book, even at times using subtitles to keep the audience posted on transitions and historical backgrounds. . . It should rate as a credit to the industry."

+ + Motion Pict Daily p12 N 27 '35

"'A Tale of Two Cities' is one of those films in which every single element mingles to make a coherent whole. Audiences should be impressed with the fact that this film is of such exceptional historical interest and entertainment value that it must not be missed."

+ Motion Pict Herald p66 D 7 '35

N Y Exhibitor p38 D 25 '35

"Metro achieves in 'A Tale of Two Cities' a screen classic which for sheer dramatic force excels in thrills the various horror stories which the country has profitably absorbed. This being so, there seems to be little reason why the terrific grip of this tragic story of renunciation should not fare very well. Technically it is about as flawless as is possible."

+ Variety p44 Ja 1 '36

TANGO. Ja 1 '36 66min Invincible

Players: Marian Nixon. Chick Chandler. Warren Hymer. George Meeker

Director: Phil Rosen

Based on novel of same title by Vida Hurst. A model in an advertising agency falls in love with her employer's brother. When the employer learns of their marriage he tries to break it up because of her lack of social standing. In the end after she has had to support herself and baby, she is reconciled to her husband.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This tale of an advertising agency model offers good entertainment and it will be liked in the neighborhoods. . . This one should go its way doing nicely although it will, of course, never break any records."

+ Film Curb p10 Ja 18 '36

"A pretty entertaining human interest drama. It has been given a good production. . . But there is one situation that is in bad taste; it is where George Meeker, seeking means to bring about a separation between his young brother and the young man's wife, convinces his brother that she has been intimate with him. . . Because of this situation. . . it may prove unsuitable for children, adolescents, or for Sunday showing. But it is harmless for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports Ja 11 '36

"Estimate: good for subsequents, twin bills."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p42 Ja 25 '36

TEMPO MASSIMO. Mr 12 '36 78min World

Players: Milly. Vittorio de Sica. Anna Maggani. Nerio Bernard

Director: Mario Nattoli

Based on a novel of same title by Mario Nattoli. Italian dialogue film made in Rome but does not contain English sub-titles. "The story tells of the modernization of a young man, who has been raised by his wealthy aunt in a strictly old-fashioned manner. When he accidentally meets an attractive girl, and falls in love with her, he completely revolutionizes his mode of living in order to win her." (Motion Pict Daily)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"None of [it] is particularly new, nor is the direction brisk enough for farce. Vittorio de Sica and his leading woman, known only as Milly, are an unusually good-looking team who do well enough by their parts. The plot, because of its familiarity, is easy enough to follow; but the picture can be recommended only to those who really want to see and hear the Italian talkie." Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p30 Mr 13 '36

"At last a fast-moving, merry, romantic comedy has reached here from Rome. 'Tempo Massimo' (Full Speed), is well named. It is filled with action. . . There are some lovely views of rural Northern Italy." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 13 '36

"The one and only lively moment you're likely to have from 'Tempo Massimo,' the new Italian film is provided at the very end, when the shy Harold Lloyd-like hero suddenly asserts himself. . . The production is handsome and the players are attractive and capable, even if the story and the direction aren't anything to write home about. Yesterday afternoon's audience, which was nearly all Italian, liked it. This reporter thought it was nothing to pant about." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p31 Mr 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This Italian-produced picture probably will be found reasonably entertaining by those understanding the Italian language, and of little consequence to those lacking a knowledge of it. . . It appears obvious that the film will mean nothing to the average American audience, and that it may be sold most effectively in those theatres, probably in large metropolitan centers, which can rely upon an audience predominantly Italian."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Motion Pict Daily p9 Mr 16 '36

THANKS A MILLION. N 15 '35 87min 20th century-Fox

Players: Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak, Fred Allen, Patsy Kelly, Paul Whiteman

Director: Roy Del Ruth

"Fred Allen heads a troupe stranded in a small town, decides to ballyhoo for a gubernatorial candidate who likes to drink. When the candidate overdoes it, Singer Powell is substituted, wins the election after complications." N Y Exhibitor

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Depends on taste; Y and C: Amusing, but effect and value doubtful."
Christian Century p1574 D 4 '35

"Very good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"An amusing satire . . . with unusually good songs and snappy dialogue. Family, but mature for children." DAR

"Fred Allen's witty lines and Paul Whiteman's orchestra add much to the entertainment. Very good. Family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Because of many drinking sequences, it is unsuited to young audiences. Very good. Adults." Nat Fed of Business and Professional Women's Clubs

"This tuneful farce is filled with a spirit of youthful gaiety, and offers many sly digs at politics and politicians which will bring appreciative chuckles. Good fun for family audiences although of no interest to children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A rather untimely picture when thought should be toward building respect for the Government. Adults realizing this is farce, will not take it seriously, while children might have an idea that such situations could exist. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"One of the best of its kind. Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

"The picture has a delightful tongue-in-the-cheek attitude towards officialdom. 12-16; good; 8-12: yes." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
+ Fox W Coast Bul N 16 '35

"Refreshing music, romantic interest and clever comedy are the high-lights of this hilariously amusing satire. . . Interesting and pleasing is the introduction of Rubinoff and his violin, Paul Whiteman and his band, Fred Allen, radio comedian, the riotous singing of the Yacht Club Boys and Dick Powell with his catchy songs especially 'Thanks A Million.' Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) N 4 '35

"Family audiences, although of no interest to children."

Jt Estimates N 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p177 N '35

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Entertaining tuneful comedy; C: All right."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"This tuneful farce is filled with a spirit of youthful gaiety and offers many sly digs at politics and politicians, which will bring appreciative chuckles. Good for family audiences, although of no interest to children."

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Amusing musical satire. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 16 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Fred Allen in his first feature film role, is probably the production's biggest asset. Although his brand of humor will inevitably be compared to that of Ned Sparks, it is still sufficiently individual to command a wider variety of celluloid characterizations and of film followers. It is understood that Mr. Allen contributed a good many of the film's gags. And they're excellent gags no matter which player is assigned to them, but particularly when Mr. Allen himself draws them in his inutterably flat accents." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p17 D 6 '35

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '35

"The work is gay, tuneful and entertaining, but it is the idea of sneering at two popular species rather than any brilliance in the treatment of the theme that makes 'Thanks A Million' such vigorous entertainment. . . The merry quips and expert vaudeville that have been added to the story make it expert and likable entertainment. . . [It] is at its best when it forgets both its romantic interludes and its hints of satire and goes in for the sheer fun of its high spirits, its antic hilarity and its expert showmanship." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p13 N 14 '35

"This is a merry picture, a tuneful one, and, although neither distinguished nor outstanding, a pleasant piece of entertainment." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p19 N 14 '35

"The photoplay is particularly successful in its use of the songs, which pop into the story with gay irrelevance. Even with the difficulties imposed on it by the conventional amorous difficulties of the stars, it is superior fun." Andre Sennwald

+ N Y Times p17 N 14 '35

"Fred Allen is a blessed relief in 'Thanks a Million,' as are some very quick, nimble lyrics." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p96 N 23 '35

"'Thanks a Million' is a very amusing musical skit." Graham Greene

+ Spec p1028 D 20 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p27 N 23 '35

Film Curb p17 N 1 '35

"It has popular songs, comedy and satire and should please all types of audiences."

+ Film Daily p10 O 25 '35

N Y Exhibitor p31 N 10 '35

Variety p16 N 20 '35

THESE THREE. Mr 6 '36 93min United artists-Goldwyn

Players: Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea, Bonita Granville, Marcia Mae Jones

Director: William Wyler

Based on the play, Children's Hour, by Lillian Hellman. "The story concerns two college girl graduates who remodel an old farmhouse as a school for young girls. A doctor in the village lends a helping hand and a close friendship grows between these three.

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

THESE THREE—Continued

Beloved by both ladies, he proposes to one. He is seen in the room of the other by a recalcitrant student." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It is not a happy theme, but it is a dynamic one, and so well done that few adults will care to miss it. . . Adolescents, 12-16: mature; but carrying its tragic lesson; children, 8-12: no; too emotional."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Memory fails to bring to my mental screen another Sam Goldwyn picture which for sheer brilliancy of production matches 'These Three,' . . .

To those interested in the screen as a medium, 'These Three' will appeal principally by virtue of its excellence as an example of screen craftsmanship. Students of motion picture appreciation will find it a profitable subject for study. It is a talkie, of course, but it leans heavily on the camera as a story-telling aid. The dialogue is business-like; it confines itself to telling the story in the fewest possible words, and is delivered without the distracting element of stage declamation." Allan Hersholt

+ + Hollywood Spec p6 F 29 '36

"The most difficult screen-adaptation job of the year has been accomplished superbly. . . Mr Goldwyn did an astute thing. He engaged Miss Hellman to do the screen version, believing that if anyone would be precisely aware of the changes essential for cinema production, the original author would. She was. And the result is 'These Three,' a stalwart, deeply affecting, and stunningly told motion-picture."

+ Lit Digest p22 Mr 14 '36

"Out of the difficult cinema material of her brilliant stage play, 'The Children's Hour,' Miss Lillian Hellman has wrought a stirring, mature and powerful motion picture that is in every way worthy of its celebrated original, and perhaps, in one or two ways, surpasses it. . . In addition, the change in the ending, which does away with the suicide of one of its heroines, does not soften the film or make it appear the result of a cowardly refusal to face tragedy. In fact, it is a more reasonable, if not a more poignant conclusion and it serves to bring to a close a genuinely distinguished photoplay that is a vast tribute to all concerned in its production." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p16 Mr 19 '36

"From a magnificent play Samuel Goldwyn has produced, as he sometimes does, a magnificent picture. . . The screen play is not so harrowing [as the play.] Perhaps in that sense, it is not so strong. Its punch, in spite of this quite logical happy ending, is still double that of any film since 'The Informer,' which it resembles not in the slightest. 'These Three,' although a play to bring bitter tears to your eyes, has its share of real gayety. . . It's not likely any one will miss this." Eileen Creelman

+ + N Y Sun p30 Mr 19 '36

"Miss Hellman's job of literary carpentry is little short of brilliant. Upon the framework of her stage success she has constructed an absorbing, tautly written and dramatically vital screen play. To it, in turn, a gifted cast has contributed lavishly of its talents, aided by superb direction and exceptionally fine photography. In its totality the picture emerges as one of the finest screen dramas in recent years. . . You can be reasonably certain that it will find its way into the ranks of the year's 'best ten.'" F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p22 Mr 19 '36

"'These Three' is an honest, sensitive, beautifully acted film that deserves the admiration and respect of all moviegoers. . . [It] is, in many ways, finer than the play that suggests it. . . See 'These Three,' and in doing so see a film of real distinction." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p23 Mr 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Grand entertainment for mass and class, destined to create a word-of-mouth campaign that will fill seats everywhere."

+ Box Office p35 Mr 7 '36

"In this screen version of 'The Children's Hour' all objectionable material has been eliminated. It is an excellent drama that should have general appeal and will do well in both the big cities and small towns. . . As a matter of record it may be said that there have been but few better dramas that have found their way to the screen. This should be a box office clean up."

+ + Film Curb p19 F 29 '36

"Tense, dramatic, this is one of the most powerful pictures that has come to the talking screen. . . It will create much word-of-mouth comment, which will mean excellent business at the box-office."

+ Film Daily p9 F 25 '36

"Sensitive, tasteful and moving, 'These Three' is a beautiful production in the best Samuel Goldwyn tradition. . . By all standards, this is a great woman's picture. It may annoy some of the male members of its audience who will not trouble themselves to understand it. But the women will come in droves, impelled by word of mouth."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 22 '36

"While four adults are directly concerned as the objectives of the plot, it is created, carried on and brought to completion by two children. In those roles excellent performances are contributed by Bonita Granville, who played the part of Mary on the stage, and Marcia Mae Jones. Nevertheless the picture is not a children's attraction. . . Previewed in Pantages Theatre, Hollywood. The gripping manner in which the story is told held the audience in tense suspense."

+ Motion Pict Herald p41 F 25 '36

"Achievement of adapting substance of Lillian Hellman's stage play, 'The Children's Hour' to avoid taboo angles and at same time to prevent screen version from becoming merely another conventional, and even innocuous social drama, has been remarkably done in Samuel Goldwyn's 'These Three.' . . The picture is an extraordinary offering for women especially. In the key spots it will do smash business, and in many of the subsequents as well, while from dramatic and artistic standpoint it will compare favorably with the best of the screen's mature product. Offering is for adults, but has been done with discretion and restraint which will not offend older children."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 22 '36

THINGS TO COME. Mr 13 '36 110min London films-United artists

Players: Margaretta Scott, Raymond Massey, Ralph Richardson

Director: William C. Menzies

Based on the novel, The Shape of Things to Come, by H. G. Wells. The film was made in England. "[The story] outlines the collapse of civilization after another Great War, initiated without notice by thousands of planes bombing defenseless cities. The whole world is impoverished, machines rust and collapse and cannot be replaced; a primitive society evolves in which men live in the ruins of once splendid towns and petty dictators exercise tribal authority. Plague stalks the earth. Order is restored by a band of aviators who, in giant planes, bomb the dictators into submission by a 'gas of peace' which causes unconsciousness and no worse. Peace is established on the basis of world rule and mankind sets out on an age of progress founded on science." (Motion Pict Daily)

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The magnitude of the theme and the vast compass of the story are apparent even in a brief outline; and it is perhaps inevitable that such a film should be vulnerable on scores of details: 'Things to Come' could not bear close examination from a scientific, political, or sociological point of view. . . . The potentialities of the cinema as a medium for the presentation of such problems are recognised and demonstrated. It is for this reason all the more unfortunate that 'Things to Come' should possess a number of faults which might have been avoided: at times the film is slow; . . . the speeches . . . are pompous and poorly constructed. The characterisation is romantic and the acting, as a whole, is only competent: none of the cast, with the exception of Raymond Massey, are able to make real men and women out of the parts they are given. . . . Adults & adolescents, 16-21."

+ — Mo Film Bul p25 Ja 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is no dispute that the picture is a photographic masterpiece, technically a supreme achievement of the cinema. No author or producer could ask for more than the gasp of wonder and astonishment that goes up when the great new peace aeroplanes of the future arrive through the clouds to put the broken world to rights. Models have never before been used with such success; nor has the film ever given us anything so magical as this brave new world which Mr. Wells and Mr. Korda and Mr. Mann have created for us. . . . The film is a public event and the question is what Mr. Wells's message amounts to and whether he has succeeded in getting it over."

New Statesman & Nation p298 F 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The picturization of H. G. Wells's vision of the future is the most staggering piece of sheer screencraft I have ever witnessed. . . . For not only is this 'Things to Come' an astounding triumph of intelligent film spectacles, and of technical imaginative resources, hitherto unequalled by anything the cinema has produced, but categorically speaking it represents a gigantic milestone in the history of the moving picture. It will be remembered and talked about in years to come just as the previous landmarks, 'Birth of a Nation' and 'The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse' are remembered and discussed today." Dennison Thornton

+ + Canadian Moving Pict Digest p9 Mr 7 '36

"It renders forever obsolete the hallowed phrase 'Up to Hollywood standard' as the highest tribute to British production. Decisively, and by a wide margin, it sets new standards of technique far exceeding the most striking of past achievements, from America or from anywhere else. . . . Wells and Korda have not been afraid to make not a man but mankind their theme. Daring usually brings its reward, and it may be the box-office will return an answer surprising to the believers in formula. . . . About the box-office there is this to be said: no American exhibitor can afford to take second-hand opinion about a picture which may easily set up records at either end of the scale. It has to be seen to be appreciated—or, for that matter, believed."

Motion Pict Daily p4 Mr 4 '36

"When America sees this film it probably will regard it as the most important ever to come out of a British studio. From such dispassionate viewpoint as a British reviewer may claim, it seems that America will be right. . . . Previewed at Leicester Square Theatre, London. . . . The audience found the glimpses of the future breath-taking and applause was prolonged for individual sets and effects. Women and some men criticised the lack of 'story.' Objection to the arid Wellsian world was common; but its picturization was thought 'marvellous.'"

+ Motion Pict Herald p46 Mr 7 '36

"No other production in months has been so eagerly awaited by the British trade, press and public. Negative cost is said to exceed $1,000,000; picture required a year for making, and leading English players have the principal roles. . . . Not an inch of 'Things to Come' is believable. Only illusion is in the main titles, which precede an hour and fifty minutes of screen spectacle, unsurpassed in design and imagery. Dialog is intolerably bad. Characters make long, meaningless speeches. At the final fade-out one of the characters, who already has had far too much to say, is still speech-making about 'humanity and the future of invention.' . . . The cast does admirably against the handicaps of the script. It's too bad present day film distribution isn't on a Wells [year] 2040 basis when the negative cost could be retrieved by button-pushing. It's going to be harder than that. It's going to be almost impossible."

Variety p26 Mr 4 '36

THIRTY-NINE STEPS. Ag 1 '35 85min Gaumont British-20th century-Fox

Players: Robert Donat. Madeleine Carroll. Lucie Mannheim. Godfrey Tearle

Director: Alfred Hitchcock

From the novel of same title by John Buchan. "An exciting well told mystery story wherein the quick thinking and acting of a young man, not only saves his own life but prevents an international spy ring from selling information valuable to the British Government." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Interesting; Y: Very good; C: Mature." Christian Century p1390 O 30 '35

"A picture of unusual merit, surpassingly well acted, expertly directed with clever dialogue, tense dramatic action and beautiful outdoor Scottish scenery. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 5 '35

"The use of appropriate music and moments of absolute silence are most effective while the photography is of the best. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A brilliantly stylized spy melodrama, in the vein of the earlier Hitchcock film."

+ N Y Times px5 N 3 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

THIS IS THE LIFE. O 18 '35 65min 20th century-Fox

Players: Jane Withers. John McGuire. Sally Blane. Sidney Toler

Director: Marshall Neilan

A wounded fugitive, escaping pursuing police, enters the dressing room of a child actress. She runs off with him because she has been exploited and mistreated by her foster-parents. Her protector is declared innocent, marries and offers a home to the little orphan.

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

THIS IS THE LIFE—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Perhaps; Y: Good; C: Probably good."
Christian Century p1439 N 6 '35

"A delightful, wholesome picture. Family."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 18 '35

"A well-blended mixture of pathos and comedy."
+ Jt Estimates S 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p201 D '35

"Fair. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A light, entertaining comedy. Family and junior matinees."
Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A, Y and C: Delightful."
Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p15 O 19 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

Film Curb p10 O 15 '35

THREE GODFATHERS. Mr 6 '36 85min MGM

Players: Chester Morris, Lewis Stone, Walter Brennan

Director: Richard Boleslawski

Made previously in several silent versions. Based on the novel of the same title by Peter B. Kyne. A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: good; 14-18: heavy; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

Adults & young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Skillfully and carefully directed, clear-cut portrayals by the three leading characters, and fine photography characterize this somewhat unusual film. The director has been careful not to sentimentalize the desperadoes. . . Family-mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Despite excellent acting and good comedy relief, the film is far too long and for the average audience, very harrowing. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The picture has no ethical value and nothing to recommend it but the acting of the principals. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul F 29 '36

"Adults."
Jt Estimates F 15 '36

"It is a sombre but well-sustained theme with good acting, especially on the part of Lewis Stone, who gives a sincere, finished performance as the bad man who has once known a life of culture and ease. . . Adolescents, 12-16: possible; children, 8-12: no."
Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Basically a psychological study this picture will prove thoughtful entertainment for adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women F 19 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Little of the usual hullabaloo and fast action, which makes it slower than customary, but interesting for unusual qualities. Family."
+ Wkly Guide F 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is all quite edifying and, upon occasions, the drama of men lost without water in the desert is effectively portrayed, but on the whole the sentiment is laid on too thick for comfort.

The atmosphere of "The Three Godfathers" is effective and believable, but unfortunately that is more than can be said for the reform wave." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p6 Mr 7 '36

"By its disregard of that modern cinema imperative, the happy ending, 'The Three Godfathers,' a buskined horse-opera succeeds in catching the spirit of the Westerns of two decades back, when bad men could be heroes too." J. T. M.

N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '36

"Sentiment is drawn out to the point of pain in 'Three Godfathers' the new Western, thereby destroying whatever effect some of its more rugged and believable moments may have.

. . . It must be said, however, that Chester Morris, Lewis Stone and Walter Brennan play the roles of the three bad men so well that at times you forget to laugh at the film's lachrymose situations. . . My instinct tells me that 'Three Godfathers' is pretty minor entertainment." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p15 Mr 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Merits good program rating."

Box Office p35 Mr 7 '36

"Very good drama of Western type with exceptional cast and production values."

+ Film Daily p4 Mr 7 '36

"'Three Godfathers' is good family fare. It will make a neat profit in the hinterlands, where they will eat up the story of the regeneration of three badmen by the tiny babe they find on the desert. . . On the whole, 'Three Godfathers' will please the less critical and with further editing will look even better. It proves the familiar adage that direction and scripting by men from the Class A ranks make even a Class B picture look like money."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 F 12 '36

"This tale of three outlaws develops as an interesting character study motivated by a heart-gripping theme after starting as an average action feature."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 F 13 '36

"The picture has an impressive quality not ordinarily associated with outdoor Western entertainment. . . Brought to the attention of patrons as something entirely new and different, it is legitimate to anticipate that it will prove a popular attraction with just as much, if not more, interest for women than men."

+ Motion Pict Herald p59 F 22 '36

"Programmer that will probably not get more than that attention, 'Three Godfathers' is, nevertheless, the type material that neighborhood audiences like."

N Y Exhibitor p54 Mr 10 '36

"Despite minor flaws in direction and story adaptation of Peter B. Kyne outdoor yarn, 'Three Godfathers' seems destined to get its share of the grosses in neighborhood houses. It constitutes a strong film for double billing but should prove big enough to stand alone if only because of the presence of Lewis Stone and Chester Morris. . . This is a case of the cast surmounting uneven direction and meandering plot development."

+ Variety p15 Mr 11 '36

"There's plenty of entertainment value in this production, running overlength at preview. It seems jerky and disjointed in spots but Richard Boleslawski evidently had a difficult time in preventing a repetition of former [versions] of the yarn."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 12 '36

THREE KIDS AND A QUEEN. O 28 '35 90min
Universal

Players: May Robson. Henry Armetta.
Charlotte Henry. Frankie Darro

Director: Edward Ludwig

"The outlook on life of an eccentric, wealthy elderly spinster is entirely changed for the better when she is, by accident, thrown into the home of a poor Italian with three little sons. Through the ministrations of these kindly people, she finds true happiness, much to the chagrin of her relatives who are using every means to control her vast wealth." Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Humor, pathos, excitement and near tragedy combine to make this picture highly entertaining. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 12 '35

"A sequence with gangsters, guns and G-men is unnecessarily prolonged. Family."
— + Jt Estimates O 15 '35

Mo Film Bul p177 N '35

"Good. Adults & young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Family."
Nat Bd of R M N '35

"Wholesome, uplifting entertainment for the family and junior matinees."
+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A: Diverting; Y and C: Entertaining."
Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p8 O 30 '35

Reviewed by Beverly Hills
Liberty p29 N 23 '35

"It belongs with 'Anne of Green Gables' and 'Way Down East' in its homespun appeal and emotional quality, but is raised a bit above that level by the excellence of Miss Robson's performance and of Mr. Armetta's character-acting." Marguerite Tazelaar
+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 N 7 '35

"A simple, homely, sentimental comedy drama . . . made for just this kind of audience, the parents-and-children group." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p13 N 11 '35

"It is patterned along familiar lines and contains all the popular ingredients of sentimental farce-melodrama, but these materials are so well managed by the authors, director and players that, in spite of its obviousness and deliberate appeal to the heart-strings, the film is grand fun." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p11 N 11 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p60 N 16 '35

Film Curb p17 N 1 '35

"Ideal family picture."

+ N Y Exhibitor p31 N 10 '35

THREE LIVE GHOSTS. Ja 10 '36 70min MGM

Players: Richard Arlen. Beryl Mercer.
Claude Allister. Charles McNaughton.
Cecilia Parker. Dudley Digges

Director: H. Bruce Humberstone

Based on a play of the same title by Fredrick S. Isham and Max Marcin. "The picture is located in London, timed to the Armistice. Jones, Spoofy and Gubbins arrived home to find they are listed as dead. Though Mrs. Gubbins welcomes her son Jimmy Gubbins home, her happiness is tinged with tragedy as the money-mad old lady realizes that his insurance payments will be cut off. Her grief is further tempered when she recognizes in Jones an American whom an investigator has told her is a wanted man for whom there is a big reward posted. She makes good for the loss of Jimmy's insurance money by turning him in." (Motion Pict Herald)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"An interesting story, whimsically treated, in which effective direction and excellent characterizations by all members of the cast, provide light, refreshing entertainment for the family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ja 6 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Lively comedy."
Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 11 '36

"The Isham play pays its third visit to the screen. . . Those who remember the values developed in the same story when it reached the screen before, will find the new version much less satisfactory. On its first screen visit it sparkled jocosely and was very funny. . . [A] member of the cast who scores a success in the part she formerly made outstanding, is Beryl Mercer. Again she is addicted to gin drinking with greater frequency than seems necessary. I do not agree with directors who feel there is comedy value in constant imbibing. I like my characters to be normal in their reaction to situations. When they are inspired by the contents of a gin bottle they lack impressiveness and suggest the assumption that if they were sober they would behave differently."

+ — Hollywood Spec p15 Ja 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Picture starts slow, but gathers momentum and should prove entertaining."
Box Office p57 Ja 11 '36

"Very entertaining comedy-drama considerably above average program grade. . . The sort of picture that will satisfy most any audience."

+ Film Curb p11 Ja 11 '36

"Three Live Ghosts' is a very enjoyable comedy-drama that should make good program entertainment. The dialogue and situations bring forth a lot of laughs. The drama is of the lighter type and there is enough story to make things interesting. The piece is well produced with H. Bruce Humberstone doing an expert job of direction. He gets everything from the laugh situations, his work with the players brings forth some fine characterizations and he handles the dramatic along with the comedy in a very effective manner."

THREE LIVE GHOSTS—Continued

+ Film Daily p6 D 31 '35

"Several of the situations are extremely comical, owing to the antics of Beryl Mercer, a gin-drinking old woman, always on the lookout for an 'easy' dollar. . . Suitable for all. [Family.]"

Harrison's Reports Ja 25 '36

"Excellent acting of a cleverly modernized story plus intelligent directing combine to make this hilarious comedy of misadventures acceptable entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 D 28 '35

"The picture is actually an hilarious delineation of many misadventures involving every character listed. Starting in a way that cleverly conceals what is to happen, providing much amusing entertainment as it runs its course, it preserves and conceals its real smash until the climax sequences."

+ Motion Pict Herald p49 Ja 4 '36

"Estimate: best for neighborhoods, subsequents."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p42 Ja 25 '36

"Picture has distinction in its excellent character performances, topped by Beryl Mercer who does finest work of her career, due largely to intelligent and skillful direction by H. Bruce Humberstone. . . [She] projects a sharp Dickens-like character of the London lower fringe, the callous, cunning mother who grasps every opportunity to snatch money and a bottle of gin from harsh fate. This characterization is far from the usually sweet mother parts handed to Miss Mercer, and she plays it stoutly, in some passages brilliantly, especially the impressive comedy scene where she is caught with jewels given her by the irresponsible 'Spooky.'"

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 27 '35

THREE MUSKETEERS. N 1 '35 93min RKO

Players: Walter Abel. Paul Lukas. Margot Grahame. Heather Angel

Director: Rowland V. Lee

From the novel of same title by Alexandre Dumas. "Amid tumult and flame and saber stroke D'Artagnan again saves the honor of the Queen of France by defeating the conspiracies of the subtle Richelieu, the sinister De Rochefort and that most fascinating of all villainesses, the fatal Milady de Winter, while Porthos, Athos and Aramis cheer him on to victory." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A and Y: Excellent; C: Mature but good." Christian Century p1574 D 4 '35

"An artistic and lavishly spectacular production. It is directed and acted with rare understanding and skill, and beautifully costumed. . . In all a most stimulating and entertaining picture. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 5 '35

Mo Film Bul p201 D '35

"Very good. Family." Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"This spectacular drama, with its fine musical background, lovely photography and beautiful costumes, is most capably directed and expertly cast. Family and junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: Excellent costume adventure drama."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"Suggested for schools and libraries. Family. Junior matinee."

+ Wkly Guide O 12 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Only sporadic in the display of liveliness and verve that one would naturally expect from the ever popular story."

— + Liberty p23 N 16 '35

"Being a hokum, romantic picture, it needs more of a romantic actor, more of a ham, if you will, than Walter Abel as d'Artagnan. Mr. Abel is an able and intelligent stage person, but lacks the swish and swash and Cellophane for a picture-book chore like this." Don Herold

Life p34 Ja '36

"The 'Three Musketeers' is definitely above the cinema average in production and interest."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p15 N 1 '35

"It is, in spite of its murders, suicide and court intrigues, a handsome, placid resurrection of a well known tale. As for the players, they do well enough but not more than well enough." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p33 N 1 '35

"In its 1935 edition [it] is a reasonably entertaining picture, but it is not in the same league with the athletic Fairbanks' version of fourteen years ago." Andre Sennwald

+ — N Y Times p25 N 1 '35

"The settings are carefully done to simulate France of the seventeenth century, the photography is really beautiful." Gerald Breitigam

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 N 1 '35

"There's some fair swordplay and good riding, and that's all." John Mosher

— New Yorker p98 N 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

Film Curb p9 O 15 '35

N Y Exhibitor p34 O 25 '35

(*)THREE ORPHAN KITTENS. N 21 '35 10min United artists

Director: Walt Disney

A Silly Symphony cartoon. "[Three little kittens] are lost on a snowy night and left out in the cold, till they find their way into a cellar of a fine house and sneak upstairs. . . When the colored mammy discovers them and is about to throw them out in the cold again, the little miss of the mansion adopts them." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict N '35

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"Family. Junior."

Wkly Guide O 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] looks as if Walt Disney has hit on something as entrancing as his three little pigs in these three little kittens."

+ Film Daily p14 O 31 '35

"Excellent color and appealing characterization."

+ N Y Exhibitor p27 N 10 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

THREE WOMEN. F 11 '36 Amkino

Players: Yanina Zheimo. Z. Fedorova. I. Zarubina. Boris Babochkin. Boris Poslavsky. Boris Tchirkof

Director: L. Arnshtam

Dialogue film in Russian with English subtitles. It was called 'Friends' during its Russian showing. "The film dramatizes the friendship of three women from their childhood days in the St. Petersburg slums, through the war and the early days of the Revolution until one of them is killed by a White soldier." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It will be worth your while to view it. You will see one of the largest collections of superlative performances ever assembled in one production. Nothing seems too small for a Russian director to do perfectly. . . . We see the three women first as children and later as members of the famed Battalion of Death. One of the three, an actress of superlative ability, is seen as both child and woman, succeeding without make-up in looking like each in turn. Her performance alone is worth making the trip downtown to see."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 Mr 14 '36

"Film should be seen as an interesting development in Soviet film making. Not a completely successful attempt to evolve a popular style."

New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"As a study of those hectic years in that vast empire, the piece is interesting. It strikes a deep and passionate note in its emotional appeal, but annoys one by its sketchy, incomplete, even juvenile, representations at times. Accompanied by a beautiful and often stirring musical score, the film probably seems much smoother to persons understanding the Russian dialogue, because the numerous, shimmering sub-titles interfere with the flow of the story. . . . The story is far more dramatized and theatrical than earlier Soviet productions and proves how genuinely talented Russians are as actors. . . . 'Three Women' is an artistic and forward-looking screen effort." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p13 F 12 '36

"Boris Babochkin, who captured American audiences as Tchapyayev, is the beau ideal of a revolutionist, both as a plotter in 1914 and as an army chief in 1919. Tchirkof and Poslavsky also act up to their high reputations. In fact, it would be difficult to find a poor player in the entire cast. As usual, in Russian films, the photography is excellent." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p25 F 12 '36

"Displaying that rich gift of characterization and that superb sense of humanity which identify the best of the Soviet films and which by comparison frequently make our own Hollywood product seem anemic, 'Three Women' possesses such genuine dramatic and artistic distinction that it definitely belongs in the tradition of 'Chapayev,' 'Peasants' and 'The Youth of Maxim.' . . . 'Three Women' is a forceful, sincere and distinguished cinema drama." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p15 F 12 '36

"The Soviets have another hit. With Shostakovich's music ('Lady Macbeth of Mzensk') 'Three Women' even has its moments of charm. . . . I noticed, too, a love scene of Hollywood intensity. Comrade Fedorova would not find capitalist society unappreciative of her good looks, repugnant as such admiration might be to her." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p78 F 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The result is occasionally moving drama, but on the whole the film offers comparatively little to the average American patron, having its greatest appeal to those in sympathy with the Russian situation. . . . For the followers of Russian films the names of Boris Babochkin and Boris Chirkov, who played in 'Chapayev' and 'Maxim,' respectively, may be of selling value for those metropolitan houses which may have an audience receptive to the picture by reason of its origin. . . . The performances are uniformly good."

Motion Pict Daily p6 F 20 '36

"With fighting scenes, good photography, [and] music that is worth mention, this presents an interesting technical job. . . . Estimate: for art houses."

N Y Exhibitor p59 Mr 10 '36

THROWBACK. S 16 '35 60min Universal

Players: Buck Jones. Muriel Evans

Director: Ray Taylor

Western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Slightly different story for a Western, excellent photography and beautiful riding make this an entertaining picture. Family. Junior matinee."

+ Nat Bd of R M S '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 D 7 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

. Box Office p60 N 16 '35

"The usual heroic performance by Buck Jones, with Muriel Evans doing nicely as the love interest, and a generous amount of fighting, riding and chasing, as well as rodeo performance that is of interest in itself, combine for the entertainment values."

+ Film Daily p7 O 26 '35

Motion Pict Daily p6 N 5 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p37 O 10 '35

THUNDER IN THE NIGHT. S 20 '35 67min 20th century-Fox

Players: Edmund Lowe. Karen Morley.

Paul Cavanaugh. Una O'Connor

Director: George Archainbaud

"A detective of Budapest trying to solve a murder mystery and protect friends who, for excellent reason, insist on confessing. In the end the hero is shown more astute than his superior officer who wished to humiliate the detective and convict his friends." Springfield Republican

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A not-too-cleverly constructed murder mystery." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"A baffling mystery. Mature." DAR

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

THUNDER IN THE NIGHT—Continued

"Capable direction, vivid acting and well sustained suspense in an excellent film for mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Just a touch of intrigue and much suspense makes this gay and swift moving picture excellent entertainment for the family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Rather inconsequential piece of detective-murder mystery. Adults and young people." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ — Fox W Coast Bul S 13 '35

"A rather slow moving mystery drama. . . Well directed and acted. Family."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) S 3 '35

Mo Film Bul p151 D '35

Nat Bd of R M S '35

"This thrilling murder mystery with its very capable cast is directed with efficiency and finesse; suspense is maintained until the final denouement. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"A and Y: Thrilling mystery; C: Little interest."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Springf'd Republican p6c O 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

THUNDER MOUNTAIN. O 1 '35 64min 20th century-Fox

Players: George O'Brien. Barbara Fritchie

Director: David Howard

A western melodrama based on the novel of the same title by Zane Grey.

Audience Suitability Ratings .

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Mediocre; Y: Passable; C: Better not." Christian Century p1326 O 16 '35

"Fair. Family." Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A, Y and C: Passable." Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Louise Mace
Springf'd Republican p2 D 26 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Wherever Westerns are appreciated they'll class this as one of the best. [There is] plenty of hard-riding, gun-play and thrills."

+ Film Curb p19 O 1 '35

"With the Zane Grey story, with O'Brien at his best, the picture will please. Family Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 O 10 '35

TIMBER WAR. N 20 '35 55min Ambassador

Players: Kermit Maynard. Lucille Lund. Lawrence Gray

Director: Sam Newfield

Based on the novel of the same title by James Oliver Curwood. A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Kermit Maynard has the benefit of a better than average outdoor drama supporting cast in this production."

+ Film Daily p4 Mr 3 '36

"Adventure fare, suitable for children, this effort will amply fill in on a dual program. . . Interwoven in the narrative are some thrilling shots of falling timber, woodcutting and scenes of general lumberjacking activity which lend realism."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Mr 5 '36

"Estimate: satisfactory action drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p29 F 10 '36

"It has one good attribute, changes pace every so often by falling away from the common chatter of the characters and fist fights to show off scenery of the timberlands and lumberjack activity. Whether or not the shots are library [material] they're interesting just the same."

+ — Variety p31 Mr 4 '36

TIMOTHY'S QUEST. Ja 31 '36 70min Paramount

Players: Eleanore Whitney. Tom Keene. Dickie Moore. Virginia Weidler. Elizabeth Patterson

Director: Charles Barton

Based on the novel of the same title by Kate Douglas Wiggin. "The time is the late nineties. Under the charge of Dr. Cudd and his wife, Flossie, the lot of orphans Timothy and Gay is far from happy. Placed under the guardianship of manhating Vilda Cummins, who considers all children except her niece, Samantha, as necessary evils, life for the children doesn't seem to promise much improvement. The condoning of the impish tricks of Samantha, while they are held in strict discipline, is something they cannot fathom. Only in association with the young lovers, Martha and David, do the orphans find any happiness." (Motion Pict Herald)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It provides] delightful entertainment for all ages. Family and junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Family." DAR

"Family and junior matinee." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Excellent for family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Children will enjoy the adventures and adults will find enough to interest and amuse them. Family and junior matinees." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family and junior matinee." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 8 '36

"This [is a] delightful picture. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ja 20 '36

"Family and junior matinees." Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"This picture has the fundamental human interest and heart tugs that stir the generous motives of mankind. . . We all know how easy it is to be moved by a picture like this, and yet how few people so affected go out into life with any change of attitude in their daily human relationships."

+ Motion Pict & Family p6 Mr 15 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — — Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The book from which this picture was made is not one of Miss Wiggin's most popular novels probably because in it too much adult philosophy is ascribed to the child characters. The picture, however, presents many aspects that will be pleasing to children. Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: excellent."

Motion Pict R F '36

"The chivalry of the little boy, the setting among pious New England folk and the atmosphere of clean, old-fashioned living dominate the spirit of the production. Fine entertainment for the family and junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 29 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A well directed, charming story that is made deeply touching but without pathos. Family and junior matinee."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Timothy's Quest' is really a charming little film thanks to excellent acting by a well chosen cast and to restrained directing by Charles Barton. . . . Settings and costumes for 'Timothy's Quest' are kept beautifully in the spirit and period of Mrs. Wiggin's juvenile classic." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 21 '36

"A cast of unknowns can contribute a wealth of entertainment. . . . Hardly known, too, is Director Charles Barton, yet his is a skilful blend of real drama, comedy and contrasting love interest that further accentuates the competent work of the players. The grip that holds the imagination is considerably truer than many more extravagant screen exploitations." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p40 F 14 '36

"There is not enough lipstick and rouge on this one to give it a place on a Broadway screen; it has no 'comedy relief,' no dancing girls and no big names in its cast. So unless you keep your eye peeled for the appearance of 'Timothy's Quest' at your neighborhood house, you are going to miss one of the nicest, sweetest, most human motion pictures to come from a Hollywood studio in many moons."

+ Hollywood Spec p11 F 1 '36

"Kate Douglas Wiggin's rustic [novel] comes to the screen as a well-fashioned and sometimes comic bit of home-spinning. . . . For all its sad moments, 'Timothy's Quest' is more humorous than heart-rending and the film is not without a certain obvious charm. . . . It's a credit to the writers and players that the picture is seldom maudlin, and people dead bent on going to a movie could do much worse than see this one." Beverly Hills

+ Liberty p50 F 29 '36

"Credit Master Dickie Moore, Mistress Sally Martin, Elizabeth Patterson and J. M. Kerrigan with excellent performances." T. M. P.

N Y Times p11 F 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Excellent screen version of the Kate Douglas Wiggin story that brings out the full quota of tears and laughter."

+ Box Office p23 F 1 '36

"This adaptation of the well known novel has been well done and it offers good entertainment. Best fitted perhaps for the neighborhoods as the story is of the wholesome type. Unfortunately there are no 'names' although the cast is a good one right down the line."

+ Film Curb p12 Ja 25 '36

"A wholesome and ingratiating comedy-drama, with good human appeal, and ably handled in all departments despite absence of important cast names, this production ought to have no trouble pleasing the family trade."

+ Film Daily p5 F 28 '36

"Fair program entertainment, suitable for the family trade. . . . Suitable for all."

+ Harrison's Reports F 15 '36

"What this production lacks in the way of big names is more than compensated for in a wealth of heart-warming entertainment. . . . The rural locale plus an abundance of clean, wholesome drama and romance embellished by natural human comedy give the show an unusual appeal for small town and family audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ja 18 '36

"Here is one of those shows that provides a good story, intelligently acted, directed and produced, yet one handicapped at first glance by lack of [star] cast names."

+ Motion Pict Herald p35 Ja 25 '36

"Probably best for small towns, hinterlands, 'Timothy's Quest' will probably find itself relegated, in big cities, to double features, dish nights, Saturday matinees by exhibitors who refuse to get behind such attractions."

N Y Exhibitor p27 F 10 '36

"This will have to depend on personal appeal of Dickie Moore to draw. . . . [It] looks as though a weak job of transferring the Kate Douglas Wiggin story to the screen plus the wavering direction will limit this one to the double-program [theatres] and some [neighborhood houses]. Title will be no help either."

Variety p27 Mr 4 '36

"There's a lot of entertainment in this B feature which should make its mark mainly in the [neighborhood houses] but can hold its own in many a first run situation. . . . With each succeeding picture Barton's direction improves. He has handled this picture expertly, given the slim story an authentic feeling. Art direction and period of the 90's is very good, as is the photography."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 17 '36

TO BEAT THE BAND. N 8 '35 65min RKO

Players: Hugh Herbert. Helen Broderick

Director: Benjamin Stoloff

"Complications arise when a middle-aged man, engaged to a very young girl, learns that he will lose a fifty-nine million dollar inheritance unless he marries a widow within three days." Nat Council of Jewish Women

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Good of kind; Y: Amusing; C: If it interests."

Christian Century p1471 N 13 '35

"Family and junior matinee." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) O 12 '35

"This mildly entertaining musical farce with its lavish sets and excellent photography fails in its effort to be really amusing because, despite a good cast the direction is uneven and does not maintain the lively tempo necessary for this type of picture. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A: Diverting farce; Y: Passable; C: If interesting."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"Light entertainment with some good dancing and amusing dialogue. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict p 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The music and good dancing help to put over a silly story and the extravagant antics of the comedians."

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 16 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

TO BEAT THE BAND—Continued

"The film, as you may judge by the casting, is utter nonsense, and much of it is very funny nonsense." Beverly Hills

+ — Liberty p47 N 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p33 N 30 '35

Film Curb p16 N 1 '35

"This production had a basic comedy idea with possibilities that were not fully realized, apparently because too many side issues were injected into the story."

+ — Film Daily p8 N 23 '35

"Family farce."

N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

"What principally makes 'To Beat the Band' enjoyable entertainment is its book and the able handling of comedy material and situations. In the direction Ben Stolloff was careful not to overdo situations and comedy bits."

+ Variety p14 N 27 '35

TOLL OF THE DESERT. N 1 '35 57min Com- modore

Players: Fred Kohler, Jr. Betty Mack.
Roger Williams

Director: Lester Williams

A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Estimate: program Western."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p38 N 25 '35

"Considerably below standard is this latest sagebrush melodrama. 'Toll of the Desert,' handicapped further by absence of name draw and flaws galore, will have hard time pleasing even juvenile Saturday matinee patrons. . . . Nearly all the fundamental mistakes of old-time Westerns are incorporated in this prairie wildflower. Story rambles aimlessly most of time, actors stand around listlessly as if waiting for their cue, dialog is largely confined to one-syllable words and with few exceptions mangled by cast."

— — Variety p19 Ja 15 '36

TOO MANY PARENTS. Mr 20 '36 71min Para- mount

Players: Frances Farmer. Lester Matthews.
Porter Hall. George Ernest

Director: Robert F. McGowan

"[It is the story of] George Ernest, eleven, motherless son of a traveling father too busy to write him letters. In defense of his adored dad he writes the letters himself to himself and is punished in military fashion for the lie. He tries to commit suicide and his rescue by the suddenly awakened parent is the climax." Hollywood Reporter

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picture is a swell piece of entertainment and should be a natural at most any box-office. The family trade, and the women and [children] especially, should go for it in a big way. It may not be a special, and word-of-mouth advertising may have to put it over, but whoever sees it will certainly be a ticket seller."

+ Film Daily p8 Mr 10 '36

"Here's a boy story about real boys and all-too-real parents that neatly steers clear of the mawkish and artificial and comes in with a full cargo of good entertainment for all ages. It can be labeled 'Family' with a large F, but it won't stop there. What it may lack in name appeal it will make up by word-of-mouth in all sorts of neighborhoods and it will build up to substantial earnings all 'round."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 7 '36

"Played principally by children, this comedy drama has a different appeal as family entertainment. . . . The elements of humor and pathos are offered to indicate good, general audience reception."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Mr 9 '36

TOO TOUGH TO KILL. N 23 '35 58min
Columbia

Players: Victor Jory. Sally O'Neil

Director: D. Ross Lederman

"[An] engineer is forced to combat unknown forces hampering his tunnel project. Aided by a girl reporter, he captures the culprits who were working for a rival company." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"A rather commonplace picture with only good photography, a few tense moments and the good acting of Victor Jory to recommend it. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

— + Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

Mo Film Bul p202 D '35

"Fair. Adults & young adults."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Fair; C: No. Tense."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p29 N 23 '35

"Plot built around the construction of a tunnel offers many possibilities and author and director have taken advantage of this fact. While the picture is not above program class it will very likely please in most spots."

+ — Film Curb p12 D 15 '35

"A story that is pretty much of the make-shift variety . . . this production is relegated to the lesser spots."

— + Film Daily p7 D 20 '35

"This is an action love drama built around the construction of a great aqueduct from Parker Dam on the Colorado to Los Angeles and other coast cities. . . . There is perhaps sufficient suspense to intrigue the general run of audiences, although the love interest is meager."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p2 D 5 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p38 D 25 '35

"Highly fictional film material molded along lines that are all too familiar."

— Variety p15 D 25 '35

TOP HAT. S 6 '35 99min RKO

Players: Fred Astaire. Ginger Rogers. Edward Everett Horton

Director: Mark Sandrich

Music: Irving Berlin

Based on the play The Girl Who Dared, by Alexander Farago and Aladar Laszlo. "Dale Tremont, an American girl who wears and advertises clothes designed by an Italian couturier, falls in love with Jerry Travers, an American musical-comedy star, but believes him to be Horace Hardwick, producer of the show and husband of her friend, Madge. The mistaken identity theme runs through the film as the scene is shifted from modernistic apartment interiors in London to the carnival Lido in pursuit of love and explanations." (Lit Digest)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family and junior matinee."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 3 '35

"Very good. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A, Y and C: Fine musical comedy; Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire."
Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Dance-interludes of excellent song and score are furnished by Irving Berlin. . . It is a polished, expertly acted musical."
+ Lit Digest p30 S 7 '35

Springf'd Republican p4c S 22 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

"Probably the best of the Astaire-Rogers musicals."
+ Film Curb p18 O 1 '35

TOUGH GUY. Ja 24 '36 72min MGM

Players: Joseph Calleia. Jackie Cooper.
Harvey Stephens

Director: Chester Franklin

"A desperate gangster hiding out in the mountains succumbs to the charm of a runaway boy and his dog. An offer of a large reward for the return of the boy tempts the other members of the mob and they 'high-jack' the boy. The gangster rescues the boy and thus in a small measure repays his debt to society." Jt Estimates

Audience Suitability Ratings

"An interesting psychological study which will provide food for speculation to the thoughtful, while entertainment value is high throughout. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Impossible, exciting; tends to arouse sympathy for gangsters. Mature." DAR

"Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"While the film could serve as a warning to rebellious children, it nevertheless develops sympathy for criminals and pictures many brutal details. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Thrilling and well acted melodrama with a story based on the dangerously maudlin supposition that a boy's devotion for his dog could soften the heart of a desperate gangster. Adult." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles
Fox W Coast Bul F 1 '36

"While the picture is replete with acts of violence there is a human quality due to sympathetic direction and the logical development of the story that lifts it from the sordidness of ordinary gangster pictures, giving force to the production. Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Club (W Coast)
Ja 22 '36

"Very good. . . While the picture is absorbing on account of the natural acting of talented Jackie Cooper, dramatic characterization of Joseph Calleia, beautiful photographic views of California scenery, and above all the amazing performance of Rin Tin Tin, Jr., it is regrettable that it seems to sentimentalize the gangster. Mature."

+ Jt Estimates Ja 15 '36

"A film which will delight the young and unsophisticated. . . The treatment is naive and sentimental but the action is fast; the acting is competent and the film will undoubtedly please the majority of audiences. Although it has an adult certificate it seems actually to be especially suitable for those under sixteen, for it will remind them of many of their own favourite stories where the boy wins through after desperate adventures. Suitability: adults, adolescents and children."

+ Mo Film Bul p30 Ja 27 '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ja 22 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Exciting, with plenty of violent action, and some good characterizations. Family."
+ Wkly Guide Ja 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"While something of the fine dash and swift, lyrical movement that characterized those silent Westerns is missing in the current dialogue variety, there is good human interest in [the] picture, and it works up to a frenzied climax. You are asked, of course, to make certain reservations in the matter of credulity on various occasions, but the lusty male audience yesterday evidently came prepared, and when Calleia dies in spite of Rin Tin Tin Jr.'s brave attempt to save his life, sniffles were audible." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Mr 14 '36

"Even without the excellent Joseph Calleia, probably our favorite public enemy, 'Tough Guy' would have pleased this reviewer mightily, because he [can assure] success for any story about a boy and a dog." J. T. M.

N Y Times p10 Mr 14 '36

"You will find ['Tough Guy'] is a thoroughly warming film in which you can safely invest all your sympathy. . . Although it is another variation of the crook's regeneration theme, it is set forth so honestly and realistically that there is no semblance of hokum to it. This may be accounted for by the fact that the story is free from sloppy sentiment, that it is told briskly and straightforwardly and that it is superbly well acted." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p15 Mr 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p30 Ja 4 '36

"Here is a picture that is sure-fire for the popular appeal and it will be sincerely relished by the youngsters. It is the story of a dog, a boy and an outlaw and while it is not the most plausible tale ever written there is no denying that it has much human interest and offers dramatic entertainment."

+ Film Curb p10 F 1 '36

"Having no women in the cast and therefore being without a romantic angle, this production looks best for the male trade. But its story is appealing and strong enough to click with a lot of [women] as well."

+ Film Daily p7 Mr 14 '36

"A fast-moving and at times thrilling program melodrama, with an appeal mostly to male audiences and to youngsters. There are no women in the cast; therefore it lacks romance. . . Although this is a picture primarily for children, exhibitors will have to use their own judgment about showing it to them because a gangster is glorified. Suitable for adults."

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

TOUGH GUY—Continued

+ Harrison's Reports F 8 '36

"This one is a flareback of the famous Warner group of Rin Tin Tin pictures, but done in an excellent manner from a story, although not believable at any time, is nevertheless entertaining because of the production, direction and acting. It's a super B picture and one that will send the [children] into hysterics at every performance and please quite a few of the grownups whose desires run to this type of show."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 25 '36

"Designed for general audiences, this picture will fit nicely on most programs. . . The lack of love interest should not prove a handicap and the picture should be well received as good action entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ja 27 '36

"Essentially this is a boy's picture. . . The way in which it is written, directed and played, it concentrates exclusively on what modern boys, just before the teen age, apparently like to think. . . It's exciting, from a [child's] point of view, and naturally has an atmosphere of theatrical [heroism] that more mature spectators are quite apt to consider as pretty hokey."

Motion Pict Herald p58 F 8 '36

"'Tough Guy' has developed into rather exciting entertainment. . . It has a trio of compelling interest which with the tensify of action pushes the picture into a classification that looks like money. It won't get the women as much as the men and won't do a land-office business but everything points to over-average breaks."

+ Variety p29 Mr 18 '36

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE. Mr 13 '36
102min Paramount

Players: Sylvia Sidney. Fred MacMurray.
Henry Fonda. Fred Stone. Spanky McFarland

Director: Henry Hathaway

Based on the novel of the same title by John Fox, Jr. This is the third version of the novel as a film. Made in color. "It's the story of feuding Blue Ridge Mountaineers and the resistance they put up when efforts are made to build a railroad through their property. The construction crew is led by engineer Fred MacMurray, who gets romantically involved with a clan girl, Sylvia Sidney, who in turn is [loved] by Henry Fonda, a mountain boy." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: Interesting novelty; C: Too strong."

Christian Century p447 Mr 18 '36

"Lovers of color will rejoice in this first outdoor, all color feature. . . The question is whether the story is as good as the technique that brings it beauty on the screen, although the characterization is consistently good throughout."

Motion Pict & Family p5 Mr 15 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16; good; children, 8-12: very emotional for many."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Recommended to the Exceptional Photoplays Committee. Family."

+ + Wkly Guide F 22 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Holding in mind the mistake of the all-colored 'Becky Sharp' of last year when the drama served as an adjunct to the pigmentation rather than inversely, the producers astutely planned and effectively executed pictorial enchantment for the action, using color as an embellishment. The result is soothing and pleasant; neither color nor scenery distract from the plot. . . Technically, Technicolor in the form in which it now is presented comes pretty close to long-sought perfection, making of the Fox saga a far better motion picture than it would be without the exquisite shadings of the blues and greens and golden browns of the majestic mountains, forests and lakes in the hills. As entertainment the production is satisfying drama." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p524 Mr 6 '36

"The 'Lonesome Pine' story possesses elements to hold the attention of an audience and a background which would lend itself to beautiful treatment in black and white photography. . . I found the picture rather dull, which I attribute chiefly to the distraction of color. I am sure it was color photography which spoiled for me the performance of Sylvia Sidney. Never has she looked less attractive on the screen. . . If you are one of those who take an intelligent interest in the progress of the screen, you must see this picture. In it color was put on trial." Allan Hersholt

+ — Hollywood Spec p6 F 29 '36

"Though this picture would have been outstanding entertainment in black and white—for it is exceptionally moving and excellently played, to the smallest part—it is even better in color. . . But the distinctive flavor of this grand picture does not readily lend itself to reproduction on paper. You must see 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' for yourself." (4 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p28 Mr 7 '36

"The color is magnificent, if one likes color. 'Becky Sharp' and its jewel-like tiny predecessor, 'La Cucaracha' have won scores to approval of natural color in films. It is reasonable to think that the color in 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' will go still further toward erasing resentment toward tints on the screen. Fred Stone is superb in the earthy rôle of Judd Tolliver, the feuding mountaineer. . . It is Spanky McFarland, as tragic little Buddie Tolliver, who will emerge, when the picture is generally released, as a new child-actor idol."

+ Lit Digest p20 F 29 '36

"Unfortunately I cannot help retaining the suspicion that, although the mountains, the villages and the people of the new film look very pretty, the advantages of the color process cannot be demonstrated to any great effect when the accompanying story is so unexciting. It may be true that, so far as the cinema goes, color is progress, but I hardly think that a modern technical process is shown to its best advantage when used to tell an outmoded story. . . I was rather disappointed in Miss Sidney, as I was in the photoplay. It seemed to me that her hysterical screams were the sort of tricky emotional outbursts that pass for good acting only among the less judicious. Mr. MacMurray is, no doubt, just what the screen matinee girls call for, and Mr. Fonda actually makes an attempt to characterize one of the shootingest of the Tollivers."

— + N Y Herald Tribune p20 F 20 '36

"Maybe something could be done about that series of anticlimaxes or about those prolonged fist-fight scenes which roused yesterday's noontime spectators to loud giggles. 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' has not the gusto of the out-and-out action drama. . . The color, although still too often rather like a tinted postcard, is a great improvement over that in 'Becky Sharp.' This time they have been wise enough to use somber hues whenever possible, thus relieving the usual strain of color photography on the eyes. . . Technicolor is not yet perfect. This picture proves that it is at least improving. The color is never objectionable here, nor insistent. It doesn't do anything to bolster up an ordinary picture either. The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' is still just fair outdoor melodrama, with an expensive cast and striking scenery." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p25 F 20 '36

"Color has traveled far since first it exploded on the screen last June in 'Becky Sharp.' . . Paramount's new film is far from perfect, either as a photoplay or as an instrument for the use of the new three-component Technicolor process. . . For all its gun-play and fist-swinging, its plot—considered alone would be unimpressive and little more meaningful than the elemental fodder on which most Class B melodramas feed. But when, to that story, is added a cast of unusual merit and a richly beautiful color production, then it becomes a distinguished and worthwhile picture, commanding attention no less for its intrinsic entertainment value than as another significant mile-stone in the development of the cinema." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p23 F 20 '36

"In spite of its many lovely hues and nice performances 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' is more interesting as an antique piece than as drama. Although this reporter became twitichety in the presence of so much sentimental pap—especially during the funeral of little Buddy Tolliver, when it was laid on with a trowel—accurate reporting compels him to write that the audience loved it. . . But as screen entertainment 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' is just an innocent, ancient, twenty-year-old film, made partly bearable by some gifted players and some compelling Technicolor." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p25 F 20 '36

"The film won't help the Technicolor cause any. Picture-postcardish again." John Mosher
New Yorker p59 F 29 '36

"In the first full-length Technicolor feature, 'Becky Sharp' the method of color director Robert Edmond Jones was to compose the chromatic values of each sequence as if it were a museum piece rather than an episode in a story. In 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine,' Producer Walter Wanger and Director Henry Hathaway treat the medium with no such self-conscious awe. . . As a result, it can be viewed not merely as a milestone in the history of color in cinema but also as satisfactory entertainment. It might have been even more satisfactory entertainment if Producer Wanger had selected, for the embodiment of his sane notions about color production, some vehicle more appropriate to the latest wrinkle in Hollywood ingenuity than John Fox Jr.'s antiquated sermon about Kentucky hillbillies and their childish squabbles."

+ — Time p25 Mr 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Walter Wanger's all color production of this rugged drama is excellent entertainment. It should blaze a trail to the box office for new records. It is an outstanding triumph in the field of natural color, Family."

+ — Box Office p35 Mr 7 '36

"If you think an artistic picture can't be box office take a look at this one. An impressive, beautiful piece of entertainment that has universal appeal and will be appreciated anywhere. It has everything and then some. A grand story, perfect direction and fine acting."

+ + Film Curb p8 F 29 '36

"With or without color, this production has been so effectively done from screenplay and casting to direction and editing that it can't miss. As for the new Technicolor process in which the entire film is photographed, perhaps the best compliment it can be paid is to say it's so natural and unobtrusive that the audience is able to forget about the color and keep its mind on the story. . . This provides the groundwork for several kinds of conflict, action, suspense and heart interest, all dovetailed together and carried to a strong finish that will send the fans home with wet handkerchiefs but a satisfied feeling."

+ — Film Daily p3 F 20 '36

"As it is the first outdoor color picture made, it should draw many curious patrons to the box-office. The photography in the outdoor scenes is so beautiful that at times it takes one's breath away. But the color is detrimental to the actors rather than helpful; occasionally it is so dark that one finds it difficult to identify them; at other times they look either extremely flushed or peculiarly pale. . . Suitable for all. Family."

+ — Harrison's Reports F 29 '36

"It convinced the SRO preview audience that it is one of the most important pictures, not simply because it is a color picture in which the art of intelligently and expertly applying hues and tints approaches perfection, rather more because of the depth and power of its human interest story, the high quality of acting provided by principals and support, finesse of direction and worth of production features."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p45 F 25 '36

"This is gorgeous in spots. It will have audiences [talking.] In addition, there's action, fighting aplenty, tragedy, comedy well mixed. Nice for the family, it is a little too long, but the show grows on one, will be remembered after the fans leave the theatre."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p55 Mr 10 '36

"'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' is a good show saleable for big grosses. It's a flicker the ballyhoo boys can and will do tricks with; the first all-Technicolor feature produced 100% outdoors, three-pley stellar appeal in Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda and Fred MacMurray, and what's more important for box office pictures, in or out of color, the story is there."

+ — Variety p15 F 26 '36

"'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine' is a film of dramatic and artistic magnificence, a great piece of entertainment for all classes and a box office smash, by every sign. It is the best screen color exhibit to date and advances the apparently sure coming of the tint era by a great technical stride, demonstrating what scope the spectrum camera has in catching natural beauty and how it may be utilized to enhance pictorial delight without detracting from powerful drama and emotional concentration."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 19 '36

TRAILS OF THE WILD. N 27 '35 61min Ambassador

Players: Kermit Maynard, Monte Blue, Billie Seward, Fuzzy Knight

Director: Sam Newfield

Based on short story, Caryl of the Mountains, by James Oliver Curwood. "Royal Northwest Mounted policeman sent after kidnappers, also aims to find his pal's murderer. Before it is all over, not only has he completed the dual job but he has also won the kidnapped man's daughter." (N Y Exhibitor)

Trade Paper Reviews

"Efficiently produced, with a capable cast and nicely paced direction, this story of the Northwest Mounted Police will fill its purpose in entertaining the followers of outdoor melodrama."

+ — Film Daily p13 N 29 '35

"'Trails of the Wild' will satisfy action lovers. Family drama."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p37 O 10 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

TRAILS OF THE WILD—Continued

"Weak picture because of failure to realize story possibilities. . . Director has failed to weave story together and there are numerous draggy episodes."

— + Variety p15 D 4 '35

TRANSATLANTIC TUNNEL. O 27 '35 94min
Gaumont-British

Players: Richard Dix, Madge Evans, Leslie Banks, George Arliss

Director: Maurice Elvey

Based on the novel The Tunnel, by Bernhard Kellerman. "Story of an engineer's efforts to build a tunnel between England and America as a safe-guard to world peace." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 26 '35

"A splendid picture. Very exciting! Family."
+ Jt Estimates N 1 '35

"Good. Family. Mature."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Masterly direction, unusual, excellent photography and magnificent stage settings add to its reality. Sombre but fascinating entertainment for the family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A and Y: Interesting; C: Thrilling, mature."
Par M p57 Mr '36

"It is a splendid picture of the play of human emotions, of individual anguish against the dramatic background of a great achievement, and glorifies and makes credible supreme courage in the face of almost insuperable difficulty. Family. (Very exciting!)"

+ Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"The action is slow. Suggested for church use. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is too carelessly put together to be first-class entertainment." E. F. M.

— + Boston Transcript p4 N 15 '35

"A strong and picturesque entertainment with a Jules Verne tinge, larded with the amorous intrigue to be expected in this revival of Drury Lane spectacle in a new medium."

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 16 '35

"The trouble with this picture is not, of course, its pacifism, though that's as hollow as the tunnel itself, but just that it's nearly all tantrums and not enough tunnel. Scenarists, like cooks, mustn't be overcrowded."

— New Statesman & Nation p772 N 23 '35

"Is extremely well managed in its spectacle scenes and pretty dull in its more personal drama." Richard Watts, Jr.

— + N Y Herald Tribune p8 O 28 '35

N Y Sun p34 O 25 '35

Reviewed by Andre Sennwald

N Y Times p16 O 28 '35

"I was quite unable to sit this film through, though by leaving I missed the 'courtesy appearance' of Mr. George Arliss as the Prime Minister of Great Britain, an actor from whose Athenaeum manner I sometimes derive a rather horrible pleasure." Graham Greene

— Spec p863 N 22 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

Film Curb p2 N 1 '35

"Impressive spectacular production combines great dramatic punch with emotional human drama. . . [The] effect of realism has seldom been approached in any spectacular production we can recall, and certainly in no other imaginative conception."

+ Film Daily p8 O 29 '35

N Y Exhibitor p29 N 10 '35

TREACHERY RIDES THE RANGE. (Release date not determined) 58min Warner

Players: Paula Stone, Monte Blue

Director: Frank McDonald

A western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Camera has caught some fine backgrounds and all in all this is a praiseworthy Western."

+ Film Curb p19 Mr 7 '36

"It's the buffalo range this time, and this peppy Western quickie goes back sixty years for a kernel of history around which to build a routine saddle and six-shooter opus. . . The production is lavish for a Western."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 28 '36

"Offering a happy combination of good story, capable acting, excellent photography and skillful direction, this production ranks high among the current picture offerings. Dick Foran, as a scout with a cavalry regiment, gives a pleasing performance which should increase his following. His personality has definite appeal for men, women and children. . . The story angle of the abuse visited upon the Indians by the white man should gain favor with parent-teacher associations."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Mr 2 '36

"While there is only a little bit of love interest, that quality is so logically inserted that in addition to billing the attraction as an action adventure film, it also can be publicized as a western romance. . . Previewed in Warner's Forum Theatre, second-run neighborhood house. The audience showed its approval of the picture's well handled thrill and action by doing plenty of whooping and cheering."

+ Motion Pict Herald p50 Mr 7 '36

"Good action entertainment where Westerns are standard amusement. Will take care of its end of bill. Story has freshness of subject matter, and incident has been neatly shaped to hold suspense and keep physical action galloping toward clashing finish. . . Shortcomings, none serious from entertainment standpoint, are in atmosphere of period suggested, and in some annoying technical inconsistencies which, however, Western addicts will generally overlook."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 28 '36

TRIGGER TOM. (Release date not determined) 61min Reliable

Players: Tom Tyler, Bernadine Hayes, William Gould

Director: Henri Semells

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A Western with a different plot, and superb photography. Family; 12 yrs. up." Nat Bd of R

Fox W Coast Bul N 23 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"A, Y and C: Western."
Par M p57 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Up to the high Tyler standard, good stuff for the Western lovers, this has a little different plot, will satisfy. Family Western."
+ N Y Exhibitor p40 D 25 '35

TUMBLING TUMBLEWEEDS. S 9 '35 57min
Republic
Players: Gene Autry. Smiley Burnette.
Lucile Browne
Director: Joseph Kane
A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p177 N '35

"Fair. Family."
+ — Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A, Y and C: Entertaining Western."
Par M p57 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It's fitting supporting program material. . . Action is swift and sometimes alluringly confusing, as in the furious and persistent shooting frays of the film when it's not always clear whether the lads are firing away at themselves or rivals."
+ — Variety p33 F 5 '36

TWO FACES. See Another face

TWO FISTED. O 4 '35 65min Paramount
Players: Lee Tracy. Gail Patrick. Roscoe Karns
Director: James Cruze

From play Is Zat So? by James Gleason and Richard Taber. "Amusing comedy of a lazy prizefighter and his trainer and the part they [take] in helping a young mother keep her small boy." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Cheap; Y: No value; C: No."
Christian Century p1574 D 4 '35

"Fair. Adults & young adults."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Amusing; C: Possible."
Par M p57 Mr '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide O 15 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p63 N 9 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

"Stage play, 'Is Zat So,' retains all of its buxom humor on the screen and certainly will keep any audience in rare good spirits."
+ Film Curb p17 O 1 '35

"A laugh show that is slightly short on names, longer on entertainment."
+ — N Y Exhibitor p35 O 10 '35

TWO FOR TONIGHT. S 13 '35 61min Paramount

Players: Bing Crosby. Joan Bennett. Mary Boland. Thelma Todd

Director: Frank Tuttle

From unproduced play of same title by J. O., and Max Lief. "In this light comedy a weak plot is held together by Bing Crosby's singing and some clever characterizations. It is the story of a young song composer who is forced by necessity to write a play. The first act easily written, his efforts to have 'life' furnish the material for the second and third acts brings to him many complications and finally romance." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Feeble; Y: Probably good; C: If it interests."

Christian Century p1638 D 18 '35

"A good start ends in inconsistent slapstick. Mature." DAR

"A slight, somewhat confused and indefinite plot development, with amusing improbabilities that are strung together and held by Bing Crosby's voice and personality and Mary Boland's delightful comedy of which there is all too little. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Adolescents: possibly entertaining; children: no interest." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

— + Fox W Coast Bul S 13 '35

"Family and junior matinee."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 25 '35

"Fair. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Family."
Nat Council of Jewish Women S 1 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Comedy with Bing Crosby; C: If interested."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"[It is] an amusing but inconsequential film. Family."
Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a very amusing and well-written entertainment." Graham Greene
+ Spec p462 S 27 '35

Springf'd Republican p4c S 22 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

TWO HEARTS IN HARMONY. N 1 '35 55min Associated British Players: Bernice Claire. George Curzon. Enid Stamp-Taylor. Paul Hartley

Director: William Beaudine

Made in England. "A story of a cabaret singer who, more or less accidentally, becomes governess to a peer's son. Her double life is discovered by her employer, a widower, and the attempted mischief-making of his gold-digging fiancée insures that the wedding bells do not ring until after much amusing and tuneful incident." (Motion Pict Daily)

TWO HEARTS IN HARMONY—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p178 N '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"A neat blend of sentiment, humor and popular music with just the right light touch."
+ Motion Pict Daily p6 N 21 '35

"This is an excellent example of a type of film which British producers could make regularly with a very good chance of achieving a regular acceptance in the U. S. market, even if their entree were on the second feature basis. Most of the investment has been in brains, the production being modest in scope as well as in length, but bright story values, variety of incident and deft direction have produced really good light entertainment, with a dash of American characterization and a number of attractive song numbers as additional merits."
+ Motion Pict Herald p64 N 30 '35

"No attempt has been made to turn out an expensive production, but instead an intelligently-expended bankroll has resulted in the making of a film which will probably please here and neatly fit a niche in any American program."
+ Variety p39 N 20 '35

TWO IN REVOLT. (Release date not determined) 60min RKO

Players: John Arledge. Louise Latimer. Moroni Olsen

Director: Glenn Tryon

"The story deals with the colt of fine racers, and a dog, who grow up together, then are split apart, the dog roaming with wolves and the horse free on the desert, after escaping from horse-thieves. Their love for their young master brings them back from the desert [and the horse] wins a big race." Hollywood Reporter

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"From the moment it began, straight to the final fade-out, my interest was fastened to the screen. . . [It is] deserving, in my estimation, of a place among the year's notable films." Allan Hersholt

+ + Hollywood Spec p11 Mr 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Will go over big with all lovers of animals."
+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p8 Mr 14 '36

"One of the best 'animal' pictures ever made. . . It's a really delightful bit of entertainment that will be especially relished by the family trade. . . This one is novel, interesting and well worth seeing."
+ Film Curb p8 Mr 14 '36

"This is class entertainment for sixty happy minutes. It is minus marquee names, but is one of those few class B productions that every once in a while steps out to grab the upper rung of dual bills. The [neighborhood houses] should appreciate it particularly and ask for more like it."
+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Mr 7 '36

"[It] is an unusually interesting and appealing picture. The human element, with its romance and complication, is a necessary but not too prominent adjunct to the story. The beautiful scenic effects against which the film has been photographed add much to the effectiveness."
+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Mr 9 '36

"Patterned somewhat after 'Sequoia' insofar as animal life is concerned, this offering should be a natural box office attraction for those who love animals. . . While picture lacks box office names it will require smart showmanship to take advantage of the many exploitation possibilities afforded in this opus to draw customers in."
+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 7 '36

TWO IN THE DARK. Ja 10 '36 65min RKO

Players: Walter Abel, Margot Grahame, Leslie Fenton, Eric Blore, Erin O'Brien-Moore

Director: Ben Stoloff

Based on the novel, Two O'Clock Courage, by Gelett Burgess. "[The] story involves effort of a man to establish his true identity and his connection with the murder of a theatrical producer after [he] is picked up as an amnesia sufferer in a park by an unemployed actress." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Well acted, directed and photographed. Family mature." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"[This is] a clever, entertaining mystery drama. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"A mystery story that is really mysterious, with many unexpected and sometimes amusing twists and a surprising outcome. Family." Nat Bd of R

"The suspense is so well maintained that one does not suspect the solution of this very interesting murder mystery until the very end. Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"This cleverly contrived murder-mystery with its capable cast makes very acceptable entertainment. Family—mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Suspense is exceptionally well maintained and the entire production is in good taste. Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Entertaining for those who like a good detective story. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Here is a sprightly mystery story which is far from the stereotyped variety. Family." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul Ja 12 '36

"The palm must go to the director for his expert handling of material. An interesting story, wise use of suspense, pantomime, unexpected bits of comedy, all resulting in a vividly interesting picture. Family."
+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) D 30 '35

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Grim, gripping mystery; C: Tense."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"A mystery story that is really mysterious, with many unexpected and sometimes amusing twists and a surprising outcome. Well written and directed."
+ Wkly Guide Ja 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"If your taste matches mine, you may put 'Two in the Dark' on your list of things to see. Despite the colorless performance of Walter Abel, who plays the lead, it will hold your interest throughout. Abel is an agreeable young man, recently recruited from the stage and given preference over scores of other agreeable young men who have had long training in screen acting, the lack of such training being obvious in all of Abel's scenes."

+ Hollywood Spec p13 D 21 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"Exceptionally fine mystery thriller, packed with surprising situations and suspense. . . . Direction has been handled with a deft hand guiding plot development through a series of tense situations."

+ Box Office p59 Ja 11 '36

Film Curb p12 Ja 4 '36

"The clever unravelling of the mystery holds you tense to the final scene. The honors go to the author for a very unusual plot, ably seconded by smart direction and a very competent cast throughout."

+ Film Daily p7 Ja 18 '36

"A fairly good murder melodrama. . . . Because of the murder it is unsuitable for children or Sundays. Good for adults."

+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 11 '36

Motion Pict Daily p3 D 14 '35

"Deep, dyed-in-the-wool mystery drama uniquely contrived, involving a brand new situation and running through a whole series of expertly concealed crime incidents, the production provides enough action, suspense and thrill to puzzle and satisfy any kind of audience. . . . Its mystery character, expertly and undoubtedly purposely planned to be highly complicated, should tax the sleuthing proclivities of the most astute amateur criminologists. Similarly it should give the professionals plenty of opportunity to exercise their imaginations."

+ Motion Pict Herald p52 D 21 '35

"Programmer that is decidedly better than many star pictures now current but which is handicapped because the cast hasn't star excellence. Family mystery drama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p33 Ja 10 '36

"[The] picture is more genuinely puzzling than the run of mysteries, compelling closest sustained attention to prevent audience confusion and may therefore lose something for popular entertainment. Production's general merit, however, keeps it always on the interesting side, with competent playing and intelligent direction holding it up as satisfactory program complement."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 13 '35

TWO SINNERS. O 10 '35 72min Republic

Players: Otto Kruger. Martha Sleeper. Minna Gombell. Cora Sue Collins

Director: Arthur Lubin

Based on the novel, Two Black Sheep, by Warwick Deeping. "[A] released prisoner, keeping his past a secret, falls in love with a shy young governess. The girl turns from him when she learns his record but he comes to her aid after she is wrongfully arrested." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

Mo Film Bul p178 N '35

"Rather heavy but relieved by an imp of a child and Martha Sleeper's splendid acting. Family."

+ — Nat Bd of R M S '35

"A and Y: Excellent; C: Mature."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Miss Gombell, while having an unpleasant part, does fine work, portraying an unprincipled woman with unusual insight."

Springf'd Republican p2 N 15 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p59 N 16 '35

V

VALLEY OF WANTED MEN. O 20 '35 63min Conn

Players: Frankie Darro. Roy Mason. Drue Leyton

Director: Alan James

Based on the story, All for Love, by Peter B. Kyne. "The hero, wrongly convicted, escapes with two other convicts, eventually gets the real criminal, clears his name, wins the girl." (N Y Exhibitor)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"A, Y and C: Good old action drama."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Somewhat different from usual run of this type and seems certain to click with those fans who like the smashing, fighting, exciting outdoor tales."

+ Film Curb p19 N 1 '35

"Good action entertainment with fast-moving story and excellent cast."

+ Film Daily p8 O 22 '35

N Y Exhibitor p32 N 10 '35

VIRGINIA JUDGE. S 27 '35 50min Paramount

Players: Walter Kelly. Stepin Fetchit. Marsha Hunt

Director: Edward Sedgwick

"The kindly old judge has everything he wants in life except the love of his stepson and the story tells his efforts to gain that." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults: very good; 14-18 and 8-14: good; possible for family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"There are some very excellent bits of Negro characterization interpolated into the story, which follows a more or less hackneyed line and is made believable by the sincerity of the acting of the entire cast. Disappointing. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Entertaining and demonstrates the good results obtained from the wise handling of youth. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul N 23 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

VIRGINIA JUDGE—Continued

"A well acted social drama in which the director has given us a nice blend of humor and pathos through modern family problems. Family. (The Daughters of the American Revolution rate this picture 11B, well produced, but unwholesome. For adults only.)"
+ Jt Estimates N 1 '35

Mo Film Bul p151 D '35

"Good. Family. Mature."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Pleasing human and humorous story; C: Mature."
Par M p57 Mr '36

"Plenty of humor . . . many dramatic moments. Family."
Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

"For years Kelly toured the country with the laughable act on which this picture is based."
Film Curb p17 O 1 '35

"Family comedy."
N Y Exhibitor p35 O 10 '35

VOICE OF BUGLE ANN. F 7 '36 70min MGM
Players: Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan, Eric Linden, Dudley Digges
Director: Richard Thorpe

Based on the novel of the same title by MacKinley Kantor. In this folk tale of the Ozark Mountains of Missouri, Barrymore plays a mountaineer who calls one of his beloved fox hunting hounds Bugle Ann because of the beauty of her voice. A dog-hating neighbor, played by Dudley Digges threatens to shoot any dog found on his property. When Bugle Ann disappears, Barrymore, disconsolate, kills Digges and is sentenced to prison. Digges's daughter who is in love with Barrymore's son arranges for a parole for the old man.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"The plot becomes a bit confused, but the simplicity of the people with their backwoods philosophy, the scenic beauty of the Ozark Mountains and the fine work of Lionel Barrymore and the members of the cast make it a picture well worth seeing. Family. Mature."
Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Excellent. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
+ Fox W Coast Bul F 15 '36

"Family."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 8 '36

"Because of the ethics of the backwoods, the casual acceptance of murder makes the picture unacceptable for children. Mature."
Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"Unusual in setting, theme and acting, this picture is remindful of 'Sequoia' in sympathy for animal life. The musical score is effective without being once obtrusive."
+ Motion Pict & Family p6 F 15 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16; yes; children, 8-12: possible though too emotional."
Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Family."
Nat Council of Jewish Women F 5 '36

"Very good. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"Mature."
Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family. Junior."
+ + Wkly Guide F 8 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Commonweal p497 F 28 '36

"Let us hope this picture starts another of those 'cycles' in which the industry so weirdly believes. It is a picture for dog-lovers, a beautifully made picture, tender, sweet, appealing, and as dog-lovers outnumber by one hundred to one the non-lovers, it will be a great box-office success and the brilliantly endowed picture padrones will spread the word that the public suddenly has become conscious of the existence of dogs, and we will have another cycle."

+ Hollywood Spec p5 F 15 '36

"The Voice of Bugle Ann,' MacKinley Kantor's fine dog story, provides the films with a highly interesting bit of Americana. . . The beautifully photographed bit of folklore is given a mystic flavor. . . There are, in fact, such consistently fitting performances that the picture is given an air of authenticity and those tired of standard movie fare should give this one a try." (3 stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p29 Mr 21 '36

"The Voice of Bugle Ann' borrows several actors, including Lionel Barrymore, from 'Ah, Wilderness' without making the best use of them, managing, strangely enough, to be at the same time pedestrian and sentimental about the fox hounds of Missouri." Mark Van Doren
Nation p360 Mr 18 '36

"My suspicion is that, even if you have a reasonably calm admiration for Senator Vest's favorite animal, you may find a great part of 'The Voice of Bugle Ann' just a trifle cloying. If you happen to be one of those casual fellows who can take dogs or leave them alone then I fear you will discover that the villainous fellow who didn't like Man's Most Faithful Friend and planned to take a potshot at him may have had a slight touch of justice on his side. The complete canine-adorer should find the work more exhilarating." Richard Watts, Jr.
N Y Herald Tribune F 27 '36

"The new film, like most stories and dramas revolving about a dog, jumps way overboard in the matter of sentiment. . . The dog sentimentality, laid on with the heaviest of trowels, is the picture's biggest appeal. This is easier to accept in print than in drama. Spoken aloud, this excess of emotion is almost embarrassing, no matter how memorably effective it may be in a book." Eileen Creelman
N Y Sun p31 F 27 '36

"Metro has adapted this story into the tender, sentimental and richly human photoplay. . . Far removed from the usual grist from the Hollywood mills, the picture shines with a clear and beautiful simplicity and rings—if so gentle a piece can ring—with conviction." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p23 F 27 '36

"I have been wondering ever since I saw it how this tender, gently pathetic, curiously entertaining little drama of a man's great love for his dog will ever make itself heard above the uproar of some of the more strident cinema entertainments along Broadway. How, in short, word will ever get about that here is a deeply touching little film—one that will give even the most calloused and thick-skinned grownup several right and true emotional stabs. . . Frankly I don't know what the film's fortunes will be at the box office, and I don't care. It may succeed, as I certainly hope it will, or it may fail, as I sincerely hope it will not. But in any event the producers will have the satisfaction of knowing that they have made a film worth the doing and well worth seeing." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p19 F 27 '36

"The Voice of Bugle Ann' is [not very] exciting. . . The murderer gets twenty years for his crime, but, thanks to mysterious forces not made exactly clear, he's welcomed back home, an honored and beloved citizen, after only five years in jail. Actually, he shouldn't have suffered even that as his crime was thoroughly justified. That is made clear. His victim had killed, or was thought to have killed, his hound. You can gather the general approach to things, I imagine." John Mosher

New Yorker p76 Mr 7 '36

"Director Richard Thorpe has kept a news-reel vitality in his telling of the tale, much of which was made in Missouri, almost the whole of it out-of-doors. It is Lionel Barrymore's best part in years and a valid and vital contribution to current cinema."

+ Time p56 F 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Homespun story of man's love for a dog that should play upon the heartstrings of audiences everywhere. Family."

+ Box Office p27 F 15 '36

"You will want to see it again."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 F 22 '36

"Way above average film fare that has been made to order for the family trade."

+ Film Curb p11 F 8 '36

"For the family trade, and especially dog lovers, this should be tops and word of mouth publicity will help much in putting it over. Lionel Barrymore gives a fine characterization as the dog's new master. His work is filled with sentiment, and his speech to the judge when he is on trial for murder is one which brings a tear."

+ Film Daily p9 F 6 '36

"It will hold little appeal for the average picture-goer because of the subdued romantic interest and of the fact that the story is concentrated on Lionel Barrymore's love for a dog. . . Exhibitors will have to use their own judgment about showing it to children because of the murder. Good for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports F 15 '36

"A simple, heart-warming tale of folks and hound-dogs in the Ozarks of Missouri, sincere in all its parts, rich in the humanities and in true dramatic values, this is a swell offering for any audience. . . The direction of this folk-tale by Richard Thorpe is exceedingly good. He has captured the atmosphere of place and people and emphasized the heart-beats without sentimentality, balancing elements with a skill that puts him well into the limelight."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 1 '36

"This film is exceptional in many ways, not the least of which is the opportunity to bring to the theatre the large number who seldom patronize films, by playing up the remarkable shots of hunting dogs. . . The screenplay . . . has a number of thin spots, but is none the less interesting in its character drawing. The photography by Ernest Haller is exceptional."

+ Motion Pict Daily p5 F 3 '36

"Quite a bit different from usual entertainment material, this picture evidences definite possibilities for reaching audience popularity. At the same time it makes available an unusual brand of potentially effective selling showmanship. . . Not only is there much in the picture of more than ordinary interest to dog lovers, but for that segment of audiences that thrills to the worth of a well told dramatic story there is plenty to hold attention."

+ Motion Pict Herald p42 F 15 '36

"The Voice of Bugle Ann' may not prove a strong grosser in all spots, but it deserves to. . . Shows made on this order usually have to fight for returns, but they should be given every type backing. Metro has made an intensely interesting picture. Exhibitors should get behind it. Estimate: depends on selling; best for neighborhood houses, small towns."

+ N Y Exhibitor p31 F 25 '36

"Bugle Ann' will be appreciated chiefly by dog lovers, although it's not likely that even the most rabid pooch fancier would condone the murder of a man over a dog which is something attempted in this picture. Its appeal will be very limited. . . Until the action gets under way, and for a considerable period, it's mostly a technical pictorial on the Missouri farmers' favorite sport. . . Fox hunt sequences are well done and interesting, but it's the type that needs more and better [material] than has been provided. In this story the novel material fails to make a satisfactory feature. Without it, the chase stuff might have made a good short subject. . . Everybody, including Director Richard Thorpe, was up against the old, unbeatable literary handicap."

+ Variety p26 Mr 4 '36

"Hardfisted love of a dog by a man, mellowed by timeworn tediums of hard years in the fields and mountains, is the tale told in 'The Voice of Bugle Ann,' geared by Metro as a nominal cost picture, but which almost leaps out of its class. . . Dialog highlight of film is when Barrymore does a parody on Senator Best's immortal eulogy to a dog while testifying. It's a standout, and one that can be sold to every dog loving family in America."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 1 '36

W

WALKING DEAD. Mr 21 '36 65min Warner

Players: Boris Karloff, Ricardo Cortez, Edmund Gwenn, Marguerite Churchill

Director: Michael Curtiz

"When John Ellman, 'framed' by crooked politicians, is unjustly convicted of murder and electrocuted, a noted scientist succeeds in restoring him briefly to life hoping to gain new evidence about the murder and some information of the next world. Ellman exists just long enough to confound his enemies who have plotted against him." Nat Soc of New England Women

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults: good of its type; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Adults. Good." DAR

"Though one's interest is held, the picture is heavy and morbid. Adults." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Club

"Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This is a mature picture as the tension of the situations, too many deaths and scientific experiments are not suitable for children. Adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates F 15 '36

"It is technically a good job, but granting that there is a public which demands this sort of film, we still wonder why anyone should choose to see it. . . Adolescents, 12-16: un-wholesome; children, 8-12: certainly not."

WALKING DEAD—Continued

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is impossible for me to conceive of this production failing to intrigue a spectator, no matter how elevated his forehead may be. . . 'The Walking Dead' is recommended warmly to every motion picture exhibitor, who seeks to obtain and entertain customers." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p10 Mr 14 '36

"As an actor, in our opinion, [Karloff] is not very good; as a technician he is excellent, for he has created a figure like the Wizard of Oz, without flesh or bones, never as convincing as Lon Chaney was, but who, by his uncanny make-up and bizarre deportment, gives an illusion of acting. The story here is desperately tailored to fit the Karloff formula. . . The piece is never believable and its attempt at horror is so obvious and so strained that it defeats its own purpose, which seems to be to make the chills creep up and down the audience's back. Not a chill was observed at the Strand the afternoon this writer attended, nor was one experienced." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 Mr 2 '36

"The good Dr. Beaumont's experiments in reviving the dead might not impress a medical society. They are, however, sufficiently well presented to convince an easygoing movie audience for a brief hour. . . Because its theme falls in the category of the possible, if not the probable, 'The Walking Dead' is rather more successful than the run of horror dramas. . . The picture, instead of growing steadily more spookily exciting, becomes monotonous after Ellman has terrified his first victim into involuntary suicide. The last reels are melodramatic but repetitious—the supply of imagination seems to have run out." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p16 Mr 2 '36

"Karloff is something to haunt your sleep at nights. . . Horror pictures are a staple commodity, and this one was taken from one of the better shelves." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p13 Mr 2 '36

"In it there are some rather silly, pseudo-scientific high jinks." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p13 Mr 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fair programmer that will please the average thrill fans. The title promises more than the picture delivers, but it will hold its own if properly programmed. Family."

+ Box Office p35 Mr 7 '36

"It is all very well done and will certainly satisfy anyone who goes in for the supernatural. The suspense is well maintained and the thrills and chills are plentiful."

+ Film Curb p19 F 29 '36

"Melodrama [of] thrill and horror category has plenty to please [its] clientele."

+ Film Daily p6 Mr 2 '36

"Just a moderately engrossing horror melodrama. It certainly is not as horrifying as its title indicates, nor is it up to the standard of thrillers that audiences expect to see Karloff in. . . Unsuitable for children, adolescents, or Sundays. Adult entertainment."

+ Harrison's Reports Mr 7 '36

"Here's excellent spookery for those who can take their crime fare seasoned with the supernatural. It is a well-made picture; avoids the stock props of the chiller formula, and steers away on a fresh and less gruesome course. In consequence it will top double bills to good draw all the way up to some key city stands. . . Karloff is impressive as the strangely-possessed one, his distinctive diction and those eyes helping to build an unearthly portrait hard to forget."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 24 '36

"Karloff here delivers an interesting and sinister characterization though the weak story motivation holds the picture to fair entertainment classification."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 F 25 '36

"This, the latest effort of Boris Karloff in the field of the weird, offers showmen unique exploitation possibilities. . . Exhibitors might do well to see the picture for themselves before handling it, the better to understand the treatment necessary for the best results, but it can be said that although the picture is up to previous Karloff efforts, the desired result is obtained without outright shocking."

Motion Pict Herald p51 Mr 7 '36

"Those with a yen for shockers will get limited satisfaction from the story that has been wrapped around Boris Karloff's initial stalking piece under the Warner Bros. banner. The director and the supporting cast try hard to give some semblance of credibility to the trite and pseudo-scientific vaporings of the writers, but the best they can produce is something that moves swiftly enough but contains little of sustained interest. Karloff will have to be sold on past performances. 'The Walking Dead' lets him down badly on opportunities."

+ Variety p26 Mr 4 '36

"'The Walking Dead' is a weakling which will show small signs of life at the box office and will find its natural level in the program support position. Trouble is that it lacks excitement, suspense, the macabre thrill to justify its title, and that, while normally a horror-thriller it falls short of establishing true horror in the entertainment sense. The Karloff name, almost exclusively identified with pictorial dreadfuls and as such having value with the grisly picture addicts, will help considerably in the initial pull to the wicket, but will not be enough to overcome essential story and directorial mediocrity."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 24 '36

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. S 20

'35 66min Paramount

Players: Dean Jagger. Gail Patrick. Edward Ellis

Director: Otho Lovering

From novel of same title by Zane Grey. "This western tells of the flight to Death Valley of a fugitive who believes himself guilty of his brother's death. He endures many hardships but overcomes all obstacles, returns home and learns of his exoneration." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: Hardly; Y: Probably good; C: Too strong."

Christian Century p1358 O 23 '35

"Mature." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Rating: good. Classification: family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnæ

"Edward Ellis gives the picture some degree of verisimilitude. Otherwise it is feeble and unconvincing. Adolescents, 12 to 16: passable; children, 8 to 12: poor; too much violence." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 13 '35

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

"The scenery is beautiful but the picture is not up to the best standard of Westerns. Adults and young people."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 5 '35

Mo Film Bul p178 N '35

"Fair, Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A good cast and direction which was slow-moving and a story which was interesting but obvious. Family and junior matinees."

— + Nat Council of Jewish Women O 1 '35

"A and Y: Typical Western; C: Strong."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"The scenery is beautiful, but the picture is not up to the best standard of Westerns and is marred by excessive brutality and drinking. Mature."

Sel Motion Pict N 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

"This is an above the average Western and will most certainly please followers of the outdoor drama. Incidentally it boasts a cast with several well knowns."

+ Film Curb p20 D 15 '35

"Following the familiar pattern with the beautifully photographed Death Valley scenery featured, the picture deals with elements that have an understood entertainment value. . . . It is substantial fare for juvenile audiences and the picture also holds interest for adult Western fans."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 D 5 '35

Motion Pict Herald p66 N 16 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p35 O 10 '35

WATERFRONT LADY. O 5 '35 68min Mascot

Players: Ann Rutherford, J. Farrell MacDonald, Frank Albertson, Barbara Pepper

Director: Joseph Santley

"[A] gambling-ship employee, blamed for a murder committed by his boss, takes refuge in a waterfront village. There he meets a girl who shows him the pleasures of a simple life and when his boss confesses, young love triumphs." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class B. Pictures in this classification are adjudged to be unsatisfactory. Not recommended because of subject matter or treatment." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Poor; Y: No value; C: No."

Christian Century p1358 O 23 '35

Mo Film Bul p179 N '35

"A: Fair; Y and C: No value."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"Pleasant romance. Family."

+ Wkly Guide S 28 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Springf'd Republican p6c O 13 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p56 N 16 '35

"Unusually satisfactory film fare."

+ Film Curb p16 O 1 '35

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Not too important except as an initial picture for starlet Rutherford, it is suitable program melodrama, holds interest all the way. Family melodrama."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p36 O 10 '35

WAY DOWN EAST. O 25 '35 80min 20th century-Fox

Players: Rochelle Hudson, Henry Fonda, George J. (Slim) Summerville, Edward Trevor

Director: Henry King

From the old play of same title by Lottie Blair Parker. "Melodrama of the wronged girl and the Puritanical squire, humanized and made remarkably appealing with lovely New England scenery and unusually good period atmosphere." (Wkly Guide)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fine of kind; Y: Good; C: Mature."

Christian Century p1439 N 6 '35

"Excellent action, direction, and photography. Outstanding are the performances of Russell Simpson, as Squire Bartlett, and Henry Fonda, as David. Family." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Beautiful photography of New England farm life enhances this well known melodrama wherein mercy tempers the Puritanical justice of an austere squire. Adult." DAR

"Beautifully transcribed. The photography is very fine particularly of the change of seasons and the breaking ice-flows. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Life-like portraiture and atmosphere depicting standards of an earlier day. Well handled and universally appealing. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Admirable direction, and beautifully told. Family." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul S 13 '35

"An able cast gives a most realistic performance in this old time melodrama with its glamor, thrills and tenseness, and it appeals to one in just the same old heart-touching manner as of yore. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
S 3 '35

"Very good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Good; C: Mature but possible."

Par M p57 Mr '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide O 19 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 26 '35

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren

Nation p604 N 20 '35

"It doesn't emerge as stalwart drama and it never manages to be quite hilarious in its burlesque." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p11 O 31 '35

Reviewed by Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p32 O 31 '35

"The drama turns out to be surprisingly good fun. . . . An effectively staged, carefully produced and pleasantly acted version of the old road-show classic. . . . The film possesses

WAY DOWN EAST—Continued

genuine charm in its earlier pastoral scenes on the New England farm." Andre Sennwald
+ N Y Times p16 O 31 '35

Reviewed by John Mosher
New Yorker p98 N 16 '35

Springf'd Republican p6 D 22 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p55 N 16 '35

Film Daily p14 O 31 '35

WEDDING MARCH. F 27 '36 93min Franco-American

Players: Tullio Carminati, Cesare Bettarini, Kiki Palmer

Director: Mario Bonnard

Based on the play La Marcia Nuziale by Henry Bataille. An Italian dialogue film with English sub-titles, also known as La Marcia Nuziale. "Claudio Morillot, a poor young music teacher, marries a rich girl and the two go to Paris, where he tries to win recognition for his compositions. Failing, his wife secures him a position as bookkeeper through the kindness of a classmate, whose husband owns a flourishing business. The husband is attracted to the young woman and a flirtation ensues, which just escapes serious consequences." (N Y Herald Tribune)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The picture is heavy and stumbling in its treatment and the performances, with the exception of Carminati, rather clumsy and unskilled. The musical accompaniment is the best thing about the film." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 F 22 '36

"The 'Wedding March' is one of the few Italian films to be shown here. It is certainly the best of the lot, pointless though its final sequence may be. . . Technically, of course, the production is far below Hollywood standards. . . The picture, however, has a pleasant sense of humor, some nice bits of comedy to brighten up the heavy drama. . . This should not be compared with local product. As an Italian film, with the beautiful liquid voices a happy contrast to the flatness of so many Southern California accents, it is fair." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p31 F 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Henry Bataille's drama about a self-sacrificing woman gets such involved and lengthy treatment in this production that the edge is all the audience's when it comes to suffering. . . Though the direction, lighting and cutting compete for maladroitness, the stodginess of the proceedings is occasionally relieved by the interpolation of good outdoor scenic shots. The film is exceptionally well scored."

+ Variety p27 Mr 4 '36

WE'RE ONLY HUMAN. D 20 '35 80min RKO-Kaufman

Players: Jane Wyatt, Preston Foster, James Gleason

Director: James Flood

Based on the short story, Husk, by Thomas Walsh. "[A] detective loses his job when he lets a bandit, whom he had captured single-handed, escape. With the aid of a girl reporter he pulls himself together and is reinstated as a detective." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"An excellent cast gives full value to a carefully prepared script. Adults: very good; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: too exciting." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Mature. Good." DAR

"Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"[A] very interesting, but different story. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"A gangster plot with much shooting and drinking provide an average program filler for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

Fox W Coast Bul D 28 '35

"Well staged, capably acted and directed this picture provides exciting entertainment of its kind. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
D 16 '35

"In addition to having ideas, this picture has speed, suspense, humor and pathos, and a romance. Adults."

+ Jt Estimates D 15 '35

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Action melodrama; C: Exciting." Par M p57 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Although it belongs to that division of cinematic fiction dedicated to maximum excitement and minimum plausibility, 'We're Only Human,' has been endowed by RKO radio with a better-than-average physical production and with several interesting players." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p36 D 7 '35

"It is a high grade program fare and can be depended upon to give satisfaction. It's a melodrama of the kind that moves along swiftly, tells an exciting story and has plenty of thrilling episodes."

+ Film Curb p22 D 15 '35

"Action drama of police-crook war with incidental romance makes good general entertainment."

+ Film Daily p7 Ja 18 '36

"A good action melodrama. . . Since the activities of the gangsters are not stressed it is suitable for all. [Family]"

+ Harrison's Reports D 21 '35

"Fights between cops and robbers sprinkled liberally throughout this pleasing love story provide plenty of excitement in a nicely directed film. . . The screen play moves with plenty of action, nice dialogue and a few inconsistencies which do not offend."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 D 7 '35

"More than usual entertainment and showmanship significance is attached to this drama. . . Sticking closely, at all times, to dramatic and romantic elements that have definite screen value, it never succumbs to the temptation of being psychological. When it does give patrons something a little more serious to consider as it might pertain directly to themselves, it does so through the force of illusion and example rather than by advancing scientific or medical theories."

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

+ Motion Pict Herald p59 D 14 '35

"Family melodrama. Fast moving, well cast, this is gun stuff that ought to please even if its de luxe appeal is handicapped by cast star weakness. Playing up emotional values, the direction has concentrated on human interest, with a good programmer resulting."

+ N Y Exhibitor p39 D 25 '35

"Picture just barely manages to maintain some suspense and keep its head far enough above the danger mark that would make an audience give it up. Comedy injected into it is of superficial weight."

— + Variety p15 Ja 22 '36

"James Gleason gives one of his finest offerings as the policeman who knows fears but is not afraid to die. [The] final scene with Foster where the later scolds him to cover emotion as he's dying is superb in phatics. . . James Flood turns in excellent direction, keeping the character play intensely interesting, the pace fast and suspense high, and elevating the quality of the piece well above usual offering of the crook and cop nature. Seasoning of genuine comedy is well sprinkled amongst thrills."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 11 '35

WESTERN COURAGE. N 15 '35 58min Columbia

Players: Ken Maynard, Geneva Mitchell, Charles French

Director: Spencer G. Bennett

"[The] foreman of a dude ranch falls in love with one of the guests, who pretends to be very haughty until he beats another suitor in a fight and rescues the girl from a notorious bandit gang." Box Office

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict D '35

"Beautiful scenic effects, a splendidly trained horse, the excitement of a rescue from a burning building by the horse, add to the enjoyment of a picture which would otherwise have to be classified as 'just another Western.' Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family. Junior matinee." Nat Bd of R

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 14 '35

"Fair. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A, Y and C: Western melodrama."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p27 N 30 '35

"Family Western."

N Y Exhibitor p54 D 10 '35

falls heir to an ancient baronetage, a mediaeval castle, and a group of starchy relatives." (Manchester Guardian)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Mr. Buchanan as the new Sir Guy de Vere gave continuity to a loosely strung series of 'gags' and low-comedy episodes which without him would have fallen to dust. The result was much more the low life above stairs than the high life below stairs which one got in the play. . . Mr. Buchanan in this second part was plainly as hampered by his gags as he was by his armour. But he must be forgiven much for his solo dance in modern clothes and his delicious remarks to the tramp whom he has invited to dinner at the castle."

Manchester Guardian p6 F 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A tremendously successful stage farce, with an intermittent run in England extending over 20 years, 'When Knights Were Bold' has been filmed before. . . The story values are still as fresh as ever, and the transformation of the happy-go-lucky Sir Guy de Vere—bored with the obligations of his social station and with his stiff relatives—will get laughs wherever they can appreciate the broad humor of a modern pitchforked into a first class mediaeval brawl."

+ Motion Pict Daily p29 Mr 4 '36

"It is a roaring farce, with an intriguing story idea of obvious screen values. . . Fay Wray is a spirited Rowena and the rest of the cast, of good British screen and stage reputation, play up well in a film in which acting is of less importance than comedy situations. These are certainly good enough to provide showable material, where Buchanan is a draw, to any audience which can appreciate a dig at a form of snobbery which, as it happens, is more English than American."

+ Motion Pict Herald p51 Mr 7 '36

"That old British favorite, 'When Knights Were Bold,' which ranks with 'Charley's Aunt' as one of the perennials, has been filmed with considerable skill this time. . . It has all the attributes for popular success."

+ Variety p27 Mr 4 '36

WHIPSAW. D 6 '35 83min MGM

Players: Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy

Director: Sam Wood

When two gangs of international jewel thieves engage in a battle of wits, a G-man posing as a fugitive from justice joins one of the gangs and falls in love with a member who serves as a foil. How he reforms the girl and breaks up the gang concludes the story.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide

Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Fine of kind; Y: Fine thriller; C: Not for them."

Christian Century p95 Ja 15 '36

"Very good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"Adults: very good; 14-18: good; 8-14: no interest." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Adults." DAR

"A capable cast, good story, clever direction, sustained suspense, clever human touches, and pleasant humor are the highlights of this different type 'crook' picture. . . Intelligent direction and good photography. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD. (Release date not determined) 76min Capitol-British Players: Jack Buchanan, Fay Wray, Garry Marsh, Kate Cutler

Director: Jack Raymond

Based on a play of same title by Charles Marlowe. This is the second filmed version. Made in England. "The story [concerns a] young Indian army subaltern who unexpectedly

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

WHIPSAW—Continued

"Myrna Loy gives just the right tone to the picture—a bit of refinement among 'mugs', while Spencer Tracy with his combination of apt phrases and straight-shooting character gives it naturalness. Adult." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The story is well told by a carefully chosen cast with good continuity and dramatic effect." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 21 '35

"The action is carried forward with a minimum of dialogue, the work of the cast is commendable and the direction is most effective. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) D 16 '35

"Very good. Adults."

Motion Pict Guide F '36

"On reflection the false standards become more apparent. The feminine assistant of jewel thieves is beautiful and charming and gets precisely what she wants in the end after a life of crime, and the brave detective manages to achieve glory and keep the girl for himself instead of relinquishing her to the law. There is a certain amount of suggestion in the scenes in which they travel constantly together under fairly intimate circumstances, this being a situation which has been handled more successfully in previous pictures. Adolescents, 12-16: ethically poor; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R Ja '36

"A and Y: Light comedy; C: If interested." Par M p57 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

"An interesting tale . . . given values above the mere story by good acting and direction. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide D 14 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The whole affair is concocted and completed with consummate deference and regard for the pat formula which now gives Broadway nightly laughs—'Boy meets girl, boy and girl quarrel, and boy marries girl.' It's all there. No less and very little more." R. S.

Boston Transcript p7 D 20 '35

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ja 11 '36

"A fairly glossy combination of 'Glass Key,' 'It Happened One Night' and 'The Thin Man,' which serves to restore Myrna Loy to her admirers among [whom] I do not count myself."

— New Theatre p24 Mr '36

"The fascinating Miss Loy, who has been away from her enthusiasts far too long, returns to us in a pretty fair melodrama about jewel thieves, beautiful lady bandits and dashing G-men. Her vehicle, which bears the slightly enigmatic title of 'Whipsaw,' is certainly no wonderwork of the drama, but it is a good, sound, pulp-magazine story of the cops-and-robbers school, and although it sets no new records, it results in acceptable minor entertainment." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ja 25 '36

"For the most part, it is pretty well done. After a slow start, the picture finally ends up with a typical movie combination of sentimentality and bullets. The turns of plot are fairly obvious, with most of the surprises pointed out a minute or two before they happen. 'Whipsaw' is no masterpiece of suspense. It is pleasant rather than exciting. . . . It is when the melodrama gives way to comedy that 'Whipsaw' is at its best. The hard work of every one concerned then contrives to make it sparkle briefly. As for the title, that seems to be just something they thought up in Hollywood. It needn't worry you." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p8 Ja 25 '36

"You probably have heard the one about the detective who falls in love with the beautiful jewel thief he is supposed to bring to justice. That would be the briefest, and the most unkind way to synopsise the new picture, and it would be to ignore the most important part of narration—the manner of the telling. 'Whipsaw' is well told. Sam Wood has directed it at a brisk pace and with a rare knack of making the expected happen in the most unexpected way. . . . Under less capable direction and with less gifted performers, 'Whipsaw' probably would have been just another picture. Thanks to Mr. Wood, Miss Loy, Mr. Tracy and John Qualen—to mention its chief advantages—it's quite a bit more." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p18 Ja 25 '36

"Although 'Whipsaw,' is not 'The Thin Man' or even 'Star of Midnight,' it is moderately entertaining in its mildly melodramatic way. Chiefly, however, it is interesting because in it Miss Loy demonstrates once again that she is not only a completely delightful comedienne but also a really superb dramatic actress and that if she ever finds the right role again—a part like the one she had in 'The Thin Man' or 'Broadway Bill' she will be able to act it to perfection." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p22 Ja 25 '36

"Dialog wavers back and forth between flip-pant, Grade A exchanges between Miss Loy and Tracy, and sad C-minus stretches where the crooks make remarks like, 'We're hep to the whole layout.' . . . Myrna Loy's charm and Tracy's skillful under-playing are assets that no picture can have and be bad."

+ Time p36 D 23 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"It has suspense, action, thrills, diverting dialogue, and intriguing story, and is seasoned with just enough romance to make it an 'all-purpose' picture. Family."

+ Box Office p49 F 8 '36

"Here is a picture with universal appeal, and a romance that is delightful. The exciting efforts of two rival gangs to steal some highly valuable pearls make it more interesting. It has just about everything that it takes to make a decidedly entertaining film. There is suspense, love interest, a laugh now and then and plenty of thrill stuff. Seems certain to do well in practically any situation."

+ Film Curb p18 D 15 '35

"A fairly good melodrama."

+ Harrison's Reports D 28 '35

"This makes good, average entertainment. . . . Sam Wood's direction keeps the story moving one jump ahead of the audience, furnishing new twists just as the old become plain."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 D 4 '35

"While there are several incidents in it that carry a vestige of near intimacy these, in relation to the whole show, should not be the cause of any worry as to moral worth. . . . There is a continuous air of thrill and action."

+ Motion Pict Herald p59 D 14 '35

"Family melodrama."

N Y Exhibitor p38 D 25 '35

"'Whipsaw' is good entertainment. It should account for better than average takings. And it should strengthen the popularity of its two leads, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy. Both have been nicely treated by the story and the production and both repay the compliment by turning in strong performances."

+ Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

WHISPERING SMITH SPEAKS. D 20 '35
70min 20th century-Fox

Players: George O'Brien. Irene Ware. Kenneth Thomson

Director: David Howard

"[The] story is familiar, that of the railroad president's son who wants to make good on his own, goes to a small line, falls in love with the girl who is running the one-train

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

railroad, manages to get a good deal for the girl through besting his father who wants to buy the jerkwater railroad." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Suitable for church halls, Catholic schools, or family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"A rather obvious plot, with some new angles, and a pleasant romance. Family." Nat Bd of R
Fox W Coast Bul Ja 12 '36

"Good. Family."
Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

"A and Y: Light comedy; C: Little interest."
Par M p57 Mr '36

Wkly Guide D 21 '37

Trade Paper Reviews

"Exceptional scenic background and production value and some excellent comedy situations. It moves at a fast pace and should entertain in any spot."

+ Box Office p33 D 28 '35

"A run-of-the-mill program railroad comedy-drama. There's almost too much action and the comedy is only fair. Frank Spearman is a past master at writing railroad stories but the producers didn't do him justice in this one."

+ Film Curb p13 Ja 4 '36

"This time George O'Brien is in an interesting and amusing railroad story. It has a lot of action and played on the comedy drama lines, should prove good entertainment. . . There is plenty of railroad footage and some nice outdoor scenery. The story has suspense and holds one's attention throughout."

+ Film Daily p10 D 17 '35

"Although the plot is not particularly novel, it moves at a fast pace, holding one's attention well throughout."

+ — Harrison's Reports Ja 4 '36

"Whether George O'Brien rides trains or horses he shows equal proficiency. In this one he rides trains and the film is sprinkled with smoothly blended, homely humor, romance and action which will please O'Brien followers."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 D 14 '35

"As O'Brien discards his bucking broncho for a thrill chase stimulator, he mounts the careening cabin of a locomotive as the incident contributing to the excitement of the anticlimax. Moving in a tempo that makes for easy understanding, the show is presented in a distinctive light comedy vein."

+ Motion Pict Herald p52 D 21 '35

"Estimate: good family stuff."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 Ja 10 '36

"The story, which is telegraphed to the audience during the first few feet of the picture, takes on a refreshing atmosphere. George O'Brien plays the whole thing in a comedy vein. Away from the usual hard riding assignment, he does credit to the [part.]"

+ Variety (Hollywood) D 13 '35

WIDOW FROM MONTE CARLO. F 1 '36 63min
Warner

Players: Warren William. Dolores Del Rio. Louise Fazenda. Colin Clive. Warren Hymer

Director: Arthur G. Collins

Based on play, A Present from Margate, by Ian Hay and A. E. W. Mason. A lonely and romantically starved young widow on vacation in Monte Carlo meets a dashing young English army officer on leave. Following a fantastic masquerade party she promises to marry him after freeing herself from a conventional prosaic diplomat to whom she is engaged.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. Approved for adult audiences."
N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Tiresome; Y: Stupid; C: No interest."
Christian Century p447 Mr 18 '36

"Attractive settings, excellently photographed, with capable acting by a well-groomed cast. Adults; 14-18: fair; 8-14: uninteresting." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"Trite story. Mature." DAR

"A fairly entertaining, light, farcical comedy, ably cast with pleasing settings, music, photography and some clever dialogue. Family—mature." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Here we have a concrete example of the results of 'double billing' in a picture which is an insult to the ability of a very fine cast and the intelligence of the audience who sees it. A ridiculous story, uninteresting, slow-moving direction does not give the actors the slightest possibility of making anything of the production other than mediocre entertainment." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Slapstick comedy . . . obviously used to cover up deficiencies in dialogue and ideas. The picture gives one the impression of being hastily and carelessly put together with exaggerated characters and unconvincing situations." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Light entertainment with clever dialogue and attractive photography. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Develops many amusing incidents. Mature." So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Intended as a farce, it is interpreted as such by the cast with the exception of the leading actors, who play their parts straight. This conflicting sense of dramatic values leaves it a bewildering study in inanity. To the actor's credit let it be said that they did try to make it amusing—they tried so hard that one became conscious of the drive without seeing the result. Adolescents: waste of time; children: too mature." Women's Univ Clubs, Los Angeles

+ Fox W Coast Bul D 7 '35

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Inconsequential farce; C: Mature."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict Ja 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"In 'The Widow from Monte Carlo' [the director] moves the audience into the scenes, but he holds it there and assails its ears by pouring into them at close quarters the rasping voice of Warren Hymer addressing characters standing within a foot of him, in tones loud enough to be heard by them if they were a hundred yards away. . . The picture has sufficient compensating qualities to make it worthwhile as entertainment. It is a light, well dressed comedy, dealing mainly with smart people who conduct themselves smartly."

+ — Hollywood Spec p14 Ja 4 '36

"Miss Del Rio, the alluring Aztec, has never looked more beautiful and has never been more cruelly bogged down in a feeble story than she is in [this] new film. . . I think it is safe to say that she deserves better

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

WIDOW FROM MONTE CARLO—Continued

things than 'The Widow from Monte Carlo.'"
Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p11 Ja 24 '36

Reviewed by Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p25 Ja 23 '36

"It is sad to have to report that the pleasure of looking at Dolores Del Rio, though great, is not sufficient anesthetic to deaden the pain of having to sit through her latest vehicle, 'The Widow From Monte Carlo.'" B. R. C.

— N Y Times p25 Ja 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Enjoyable comedy-drama that is a bit above average program grade. . . The picture has been so directed as to get all the meat out of the story and the result is a nice bit of entertainment."

+ Film Curb p14 Ja 4 '36

"Everyone connected with the production has caught the light spirit of the piece and it is played throughout in that vein. It is nice entertainment of its type, it moves quickly, the lines are clever, as are the situations."

+ Film Daily p4 D 19 '35

Motion Pict Daily p8 D 17 '35

"[It is] average in caliber."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p49 Ja 4 '36

"An inconsequential comedy that has an attractive title, some good comedy moments, but which shapes up as program that won't cause much comment. Family comedy."

— + N Y Exhibitor p34 Ja 10 '36

"Grim determination to be farcical at all costs spoils what more sensitively handled might have been made into a bright little society comedy. . . Plot is simple; too simple to carry much weight. . . William plays in the right note as the ardent suitor, and seems to be enjoying himself, but Miss Del Rio is less happy in what should have been a slightly reckless assignment. She takes herself and her character too seriously for best results."

— Variety p16 Ja 29 '36

"A thin tale of minor consequence [makes a] diverting programmer. . . Story is built for chuckles throughout and meets specifications, with a little forcing here and there. . . Yarn can't be examined too closely for plausibility, but fits along nimbly enough to avoid pitfalls."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 D 16 '35

WIFE VERSUS SECRETARY. F 21 '36 85min

MGM

Players: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy, May Robson

Director: Clarence Brown

Based on the novel of the same title by Faith Baldwin. The story concerns a determined but subtle battle between a wife and the office secretary of a successful publisher. He is in love with his wife and unable to understand her jealousy. In the end, when the wife is ready for a separation, the secretary makes her understand that there is nothing between them.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 1 '36

"The trite theme still has a wide appeal [because of] the problem with which it deals. Adults and young people."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 4
'36

"Unobjectionable for adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"The commonplace story by Faith Baldwin is the source of a cheaply artificial and expensively produced comedy. The trivial plot skirts the sensational, and even its well known, competent, but clearly miscast stars are unable to give it any semblance of verisimilitude or sincerity. . . Adults and young people."

— Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Mature. . . Handsome production, sometimes too long and talky."

Wkly Guide F 27 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"What amusing dialogue and adroit, light-handed direction (by Clarence Brown in this instance) can do for a plot as old as Egypt, is evidenced by this film which speeds along from one familiar situation to another, gaining diverting momentum all the time. The story . . . succeeds in being sprightly and honest." M. E. P.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 14 '36

"A nice dash of romantic comedy enlivens the drama, and a fine cast interprets the tale."

Laura Elston

+ Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"Situations are cleverly contrived, intimate at times, yet in good taste, and move to the pace of bright dialog." J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p552 Mr 13 '36

"The triangle theme has been worn thin as story material for the screen; there is not a gripping scene, not a tense moment in the picture; neither the story nor the film stresses a point to arrest the attention of the audience, yet 'Wife Versus Secretary' is one of the most completely satisfying pictures one could wish for, an achievement vastly to the credit of its director." Allan Hersholt

+ Hollywood Spec p8 F 29 '36

"The picture is no more of a disappointment than it is a surprise. It is, in fact, exactly what you might expect. . . 'Wife Versus Secretary' is told in such good dialogue that interest never lags." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p52 Mr 23 '36

"'Wife Versus Secretary' will unquestionably make a staggering amount of money for its sponsors. . . Yet I cannot help remembering that if, heaven forbid, I had been a producer I would have snarled pretty grimly at the ideas in the production. . . The role arranged for Miss Loy strikes me as being particularly unfortunate. . . Despite my great worship for the Legion of Decency I have the fear that my reforming friends rendered something less than a service to current entertainment when their influence took even the possible suggestions of dash and amorosness away from a film vastly in need of such dubious but potentially entertaining qualities."

Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 F 29 '36

"The new picture is one of those shiny, luxurious, empty and blatantly expensive productions which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer turns out occasionally, to the accompaniment of ohs and ahs from the spectators and a merry jingling of coin at the box office. . . The picture, treated as the lightest of cheap fiction, is constantly diverting. It is never stimulating, nor are even the trio of skilled adaptors able to sustain any suspense. . . 'Wife Vs Secretary,' on which the director of 'Ah Wilderness' has chosen to waste some months of endeavor, is a lavishly produced bit of trash, a shop-girl's delight." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p8 F 29 '36

"You may rail, critically, at the glossy stereotype and you may accuse Miss Baldwin of growing duller and duller in her treatment of her pet plot, but you will realize—with a sense of complete futility—that any Faith Baldwin 'Wife Vs Secretary' picture, with Gable, Harlow and Loy, is predestined for success. As Variety unquestionably will report, it is a box-office wow. . . Like most of these

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Metro super-specials, the film has been richly produced, directed competently by Clarence Brown and is well played—within the handicaps of their rôles—by Miss Harlow, Miss Loy and by Mr. Gable, who should be told, however, that being coy is not one of his strong points." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p11 F 29 '36

"'Wife Vs Secretary' is not very good. A formularized and somewhat shabby product of Faith Baldwin's shallow, but high-priced magazine deliberations upon the old, and apparently everlasting feud that goes on between a man's wife and his secretary for his love, it comes under the heading of hardship rather than pleasure in the cinema. . . . Some really competent players, including Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy and Clark Gable, strive earnestly as the principal characters involved in this giddy plot. They say their lines and go through their situations efficiently. But in spite of their industrious endeavors, all that they can make of 'Wife Vs Secretary' is a gaudy second-rater of little importance to the cinema except at the box office. And that, I suppose, is all that matters." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p9 F 29 '36

"It appears to be one of the darling convictions of American life that doctors always court hospital nurses and that businessmen are dizzy with desire for stenographers. . . . The films love the idea. They played with it competently and successfully in 'The Office Wife,' and they have no intention of letting it drop for a long time. It is tuned up again in 'Wife Versus Secretary,' but in such a generally tepid style that I can't expect it will disturb the reflections of many helpmates and severest critics." John Mosher

New Yorker p75 Mr 7 '36

"Good rollicking entertainment, with spanking dialogue and a cast of favorites. . . . A typical Faith Baldwin story, nimbly rewritten and luxuriously mounted."

+ News-Wk p32 Mr 7 '36

"'Wife Versus Secretary' is a grimly stereotyped investigation, without novel outcome, of the banal situation indicated by its title. . . . It is patently destined to be, for its producers, if not for their more civilized customers, one of the most profitable pictures of the year."

— + Time p47 Mr 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Smart entertainment with a load of box-office names that should bring out the SRO signs. Family."

+ Box Office p25 F 29 '36

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p10 F 22 '36

"With Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, [and] Myrna Loy in a story, which should appeal to the millions of office and shop girls who picture themselves as the Harlows and the wives who imagine themselves to be the Loy's, this picture should hit at the box-office in a big way."

+ Film Daily p4 F 19 '36

"An excellent box-office attraction. The three stars are probably enough to bring patrons to the theatre. And for the most part it will please spectators, particularly women, because of its romantic quality, its air of gaiety, and the lavish production given to it. . . . There is nothing immoral in the plot, but it is rather sophisticated for children. More suitable for adults."

+ Harrison's Reports Mr 7 '36

"Sure-fire box-office from every angle, 'Wife Versus Secretary' is headed for tremendous grosses. It has everything—a trio of top-line stars in Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Myrna Loy; a title that will draw women in droves and a story that will thoroughly satisfy both women and men in the audience. . . . Unquestionably the picture will mark a brand new career for Jean Harlow. With her darker hair, she proves beyond doubt that acting rather than typing is now her metier. Playing with repression and great charm, her secretary is to be numbered among the finest things she has ever given us."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 14 '36

"Tastefully produced and directed, with considerable to stimulate the imagination, the picture is characterized throughout by an atmosphere of romantic intimacy, although there is nothing in the slightest way objectionable in it."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 F 15 '36

Motion Pict Herald p64 F 22 '36

"'Wife Versus Secretary' again demonstrates that when a show can be packed with stars, scripted well, directed by a man who knows not only his business but his box office, produced at a studio where they know how to do things, it is bound to be in the heavy money. Estimate: money show anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p54 Mr 10 '36

"With a triple threat for the marquee, a smartly fashioned story and outstanding production, this picture seems to have what it takes to get them in. . . . In spots where there has been a reaction against the triangle of the wronged wife, the cheating husband and the guileful stenographer, the fact cannot be stressed too strongly in the advertising that this is not that sort of story at all. If this is done they'll come in and love it."

+ Variety p26 Mr 4 '36

"Loaded with magnetic names, in conjunction with a natural money title, and given heavy production splurge, 'Wife Versus Secretary' will take the box office by assault on sheer front, as well as on dramatic merit. . . . Story steers clear of the obvious elemental triangle pattern and avoids cheap claptrap at every turn. Picture is singularly free of vulgarity in incident, line and innuendo."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 14 '36

WILD MUSTANG. O 20 '35 61min Commodore

Players: Harry Carey. Barbara Fritchie. Del Gordon

Director: Harry Fraser

Western melodrama.

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Curb p19 N 1 '35

"Bolstered by plenty of the approved plot material, this western drama ought to prove generally satisfying to the outdoor action fans."

+ Film Daily p8 O 22 '35

"In his new series, western hero Harry Carey, illustrates that he can still rank with the best open air stars. Family Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p32 N 10 '35

(s)WILD WINGS. Ja 11 '36 11min Vitaphone

Players: Gayne Whitman

"Taken on the far-away isle of Laysan, in the Pacific Ocean, a bird sanctuary, it presents marvellous shots of thousands of birds in close-up, among them certain species that have never been screened before." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"An outstanding picture. Suggested for schools. Family. Junior."

+ + Wkly Guide Ja 18 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

WILD WINGS—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"Distinguished by exceptional photography and a splendid descriptive talk by Gayne Whitman, this is about the tops for anything on the screen depicting wild bird life. . . The birds in flight are simply beautiful in their graceful movements, and will arouse enthusiasm from all lovers of bird life."

+ Film Daily p7 Ja 24 '36

"Exceptional shots reveal mating habits and others in slow motion show the poetry of their effortless flight. Should please."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ja 27 '36

"Some of the scenes are truly remarkable."

+ Motion Pict Herald p62 F 8 '36

"Fair."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p40 Ja 25 '36

WINGS OVER ETHIOPIA. O 25 '35 52min
Swiss-Praesens Films-Paramount

Players: Natives

Director: L. Wechster

"As timely as today's headlines it shows the people of Ethiopia and their customs and takes one into the heart of that wild, savage country. It demonstrates something of what the Italians are up against in trying to conquer that land, what with dangerous mountain regions, the climate and other natural forces to repel invasion." N Y Sun

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A and Y: Good of kind; C: Perhaps."
Christian Century p1390 O 30 '35

"A: Excellent; Y and C: Instructive."
Par M p57 Mr '36

"Suggested for schools and libraries. Family."

+ Wkly Guide O 12 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Marguerite Tazelaar
N Y Herald Tribune p9 O 12 '35

"It is well worth seeing." M. J.
+ N Y Sun p9 O 12 '35

Springf'd Republican p6c O 20 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p58 N 16 '35

"Family travelogue. Vastly interesting while the headlines last."

+ N Y Exhibitor p35 O 25 '35

(*) WINTER MAGIC. D 27 '35 9min 20th century-Fox

Players: Edward Thorgersen

Director: Truman Talley

"With winter as its theme, this short in the Magic Carpet series takes the audience on a tour of places where winter cloaks the country to the camera's advantage." Motion Pict Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"The vignette-like qualities of some of the shots in this panorama of snow scenes will open up a new world of beauty to the sit-at-homes and cause nature lovers to rejoice. . . In every respect, it is a superior short."

+ Box Office p48 Ja 18 '36

"This is a masterpiece of photography in Winter Scenery in our own country. . . Some of the scenes are as gorgeous as paintings, and it is a feast of beauty for the nature lovers and the art-minded. A perfect winter number."

+ + Film Daily p11 Ja 7 '36

"There is at times some excellent photography and the mood is well handled."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 Ja 9 '36

"Interesting."

N Y Exhibitor p31 Ja 10 '36

WOLVES OF THE UNDERWORLD. D 8 '35
57min Regal

Players: Godfrey Tearle, Isla Bezan, Fred Groves, Michael Hogan

Director: George A. Cooper

The film was made in England. "A group of gangsters set out to 'get' a supposedly respectable doctor. . . The tables are turned and the doctor kills the gunman, planting his body beside an accidentally handy train wreck. At the same time the leader of another, related gang of counterfeiters escape from Dartmoor, witnesses the murder and forces the doctor to hide him. . . At the expected right moment, the police, break in and capture the gang." (Motion Pict Daily)

Trade Paper Reviews

"The cast, though British stamped, put their lines across in a readily understood manner, while the direction keeps things moving at a nice gait all along the line."

+ Film Daily p13 D 10 '35

"This adaptation of a stage play combines murder, a touch of romance and the not too subtle deductions of a detective story writer and amateur crime sleuth. The result is a fairly lively yarn."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p9 D 10 '35

"This holds interest all the way once it gets going. Family melodrama."

+ N Y Exhibitor p37 N 25 '35

WOMAN TRAP. F 14 '36 60min Paramount

Players: Gertrude Michael, George Murphy, Roscoe Karns, Akim Tamiroff

Director: Harold Young

"Dealing with a formula plot of the kidnapping of a senator's daughter by a band of jewel thieves who need quick money for a getaway, the film accentuates the most delightful Mexican bandit character since the memorable 'Bad Man.'" Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Possible for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Some good photography in a melodrama fairly entertaining for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"On account of the crime angle, this picture is not suitable for children. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 8 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Adults and young people."
Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"There are three items on the debit side to begin with: poor name, a cold-blooded gangster murder and a kidnapping. Adolescents, 12-16: not recommended; children, 8-12: no."
Motion Pict R Mr '36

"This is a rather amusing story . . . but alas [it has] great gaps both in continuity and credulity. Family."
+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women F 15 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"Adults and young people."
Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Family."
Wkly Guide F 8 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Boston Transcript p3 F 21 '36

"'Woman Trap' [is] to give [it the] trade designation, Class B. With that in mind, then, put down 'Woman Trap' as tolerable melodrama. Competently directed by Harold Young, it is a technically proficient film that suffers chiefly in its story department." T. M. P.
+ — N Y Times p11 Mr 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Entertaining gangster offering that rates well in the program class. Family."
+ — Box Office p27 F 15 '36

"A pretty good program action melodrama. There are a few exciting melodramatic situations in the second half, where the two different gangster forces vie with each other for supremacy in a kidnap plot. . . . Because of the murder and kidnapping it is unsuitable for children and Sundays. Good for adults."
+ — Harrison's Reports F 29 '36

"Were all program pictures as neat jobs as this little piece of entertainment, theater men would be happier. It will set no worlds on fire at the box offices. Neither will it send patrons home dissatisfied. 'Woman Trap' only proves again that class B releases can be made with intelligence and finesse. . . . [It] runs an hour and it is an hour filled with solid entertainment for the family trade for which it was made."
+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ja 28 '36

"An average attraction, this holds amusement for average audiences. The story, consolidated by a surprise climax, is pretty much of a hodge-podge of jewel thieves, gangsters, a stranded girl flyer and a newspaper reporter through which runs a mysteriously sinister character, highly reminiscent, of Holbrook Blinn's 'Bad Man.'"
+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 29 '36

"This is one of those pleasing minor pictures that audiences are quite apt to enjoy much more than they do some of the more pretentious features. Essentially the show is a comedy romance drama and not anything sophisticated, as the title might suggest."
+ — Motion Pict Herald p59 F 8 '36

"Estimate: best for neighborhoods, twin bills."
N Y Exhibitor p35 F 25 '36

"Nice little program picture that should garner plenty of dual bill business. Deserves consideration for solo bills, particularly if plugged as the latest variety of G-man yarn. . . . A little more care in writing, better direction and addition of strong name player probably would have made this a real grosser. Studio seemingly rated it as a secondary entry and as such its utmost possibilities were overlooked."
+ — Variety p15 Mr 11 '36

"Good program picture that should hold its own on any double bill. Due to lack of names it has little chance as a solo. Well produced by Harold Hurley, picture has sufficient twists to satisfy any audience. . . . Harold Young's direction is intelligent, somewhat slow in spots. Generally he has handled the picture nicely."
+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 28 '36

Y

YELLOW DUST. F 22 '36 62min RKO

Players: Richard Dix, Leila Hyams, Andy Clyde, Onslow Stevens, Moroni Olsen, Jessie Ralph

Director: Wallace Fox

Based on the play, Mother Lode, by George O'Neil and Dan Tothoroh. The film was previously known as Mother Lode. "Two prospectors, Old Solitaire and Culpepper, strike a rich vein of gold, but before they are able to file their claim they are 'railroaded' to jail. A beautiful girl comes to the rescue and there is the usual happy ending." (Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family and junior matinee." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"The bar and the beers are featured a little too prominently. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The drinking and gun play is a necessary part of the story, and has been treated with as much restraint as possible. A Western drama suitable for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"It is only mildly entertaining because in spite of violent action, one never doubts the outcome. Family." Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles

Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

"Family."
+ — Jt Estimates F 1 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A Western which will find favor with younger audiences. Family."
+ — Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Yellow Dust' the boss-and-buggy opera bears not the slightest resemblance to its alleged parent, 'Mother Lode,' the romance of old San Francisco with which Mr. Tothoroh and George O'Neil achieved some success on the Broadway stage in 1934. . . . In fairness to the directing staff, it must be said that no apparent effort was made to produce anything other than a burlesque on the prospecting period, and in accomplishing this they received no little assistance from Andy Clyde, as Solitaire, the 'lone-hander' who breaks a precedent of 'nigh onto thirty year' when he accepts our hero as a partner." J. T. M.
N Y Times p14 F 24 '36

"Frankly, I'm still not certain whether it is intended to be bona fide Western stuff or a burlesque on the prospecting period, but in either case it is pretty feeble entertainment. . . Some of the acting is good enough, but on the whole it is about on a par with the narrative, which isn't much." William Boehnel

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

YELLOW DUST—Continued

— N Y World-Telegram p27 F 26 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office Ja 4 '36

"Satisfactory program fare . . . in so-so vehicle."

+ — Film Curb p9 F 25 '36

"Just a moderately entertaining Western. It goes in for too much story detail and romantic interest for a picture of this type and for that reason the action lags. Suitable for all. Family."

+ — Harrison's Reports F 29 '36

"This minor effort stacks up as just ordinary dual feature fare and will get by soloing in the smaller spots. . . This is one of the few feature productions turned out by a major which eliminates a variety of exterior location shots and practically relies on one interior set to carry all the action. Whether this puts 'Yellow Dust' into the classification of a quickie or whether most of what is lacking is left on the cutting floor, is hard to conjecture. In any event, the film does not bring the studio or Dix any acclaim."

— + Hollywood Reporter p4 Mr 2 '36

"Any Western that can stir up scattered applause from a Times Square audience when the hero escapes from hanging has achieved something. 'Yellow Dust' did this at the opening show at the Rialto."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p12 F 24 '36

"Story value, while novel in some ways, differs but little from standard formula, which necessarily puts the selling job up to the value of names and that certain audience interest that always accrues to outdoor, romance and comedy contrasted, action entertainment."

Motion Pict Herald p50 N 16 '35

"Fair programmer, with some names, fair comedy to help, the plot follows such grooves as to make burlesque at times."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p55 Mr 10 '36

"Deficiencies in this Western are somewhat allayed by the Richard Dix [name.] It should do moderately well soloing in the lesser [film houses], and will hold up its end on the dualers. Though done seriously at times this picture takes on the cloak of satire because of the flimsiness of plot and dialog."

+ — Variety p15 F 26 '36

"It spells class in all departments for the typical Western, yet hardly strong enough to carry a single bill. . . Treatment, dialog, well defined action and direction are solely responsible for lifting this offering above the average every-day Western."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 6 '36

YOU MAY BE NEXT. F 6 '36 65min Columbia

Players: Ann Sothern, Lloyd Nolan, Douglass Dumbrille, John Arledge

Director: Albert S. Rogell

"A new angle to racketeering is attempted in this picture by the showing of the gangster method of terrorizing the radio industry. G-men successfully combat this hitherto unknown device and the young radio mechanic who is deeply implicated is saved from criminal prosecution." Sel Motion Pict

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This high-tension melodrama may give you the fidgets if you don't like 'em swift."

Christian Science Monitor p13 F 29 '36

"The cinema introduces a new and ingenious form of racketeering in 'You May Be Next' which makes for exciting entertainment." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p14 F 24 '36

"Although at first glance the idea of 'You May Be Next' seems fresh and novel, it soon becomes evident that the treatment and development are uninspired—and so it results in just another commonplace racketeer film. . . The cast tries hard enough but in spite of their industrious endeavors 'You May Be Next' must be set down as just another item in a long list of disappointments." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p15 F 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It isn't any world beater but a good, satisfactory film of its type."

+ — Film Curb p5 F 29 '36

"Fairly exciting racketeer melodrama with novel plot angle and generally fast action."

+ — Film Daily F 25 '36

"A fair program melodrama. The story is far-fetched but somewhat novel. . . Because of the activities of the gangsters it is unsuitable for children or adolescents. Suitable adult entertainment."

+ — Harrison's Reports F 22 '36

"Something new and decidedly different in plot, 'You May Be Next' is surefire entertainment hit for fans who crave 60 minutes of excitement."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 F 19 '36

"As an action and novelty picture it should please all general audiences."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p13 F 20 '36

"Estimate: fair melodrama; depends on selling."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p34 F 25 '36

"Highly proficient direction and well-balanced cast lift 'You May Be Next' out of routine G-man story class. Should go big on any double bill and hold its own in subsequents."

+ — Variety p27 Mr 4 '36

"Albert Rogell has directed sanely, has managed to stay away from most of the melodramatic situations and action peculiar to most pictures of this type."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 19 '36

YOUNG FOREST. Ja 1 '36 90min Libkow-film

Players: Marja Bogda, Adam Brodzisz

Director: Josef Lejtes

Distributed in Poland under title Młody Las. The film distributed here has English subtitles. "This importation from Warsaw is a [picturization] of the Anti-Russian agitation among the students, and even the school children, in the Polish capital at the time when the Russo-Japanese War and the revolutionary uprising of 1905 awakened hopes of throwing off the yoke of Russia." (N Y Times)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A film calculated to warm the hearts of Polish-Americans and to arouse a feeling of sympathy with the long struggle of the Polish nation against the Czarist régime in spectators of almost any kind." H. T. S.

N Y Times p32 D 3 '35

"Although 'Young Forest' is much too long and ambling to be as effective as it should be, it has moments of genuine interest. . . The film moves at a pretty lethargic pace and devotes a lot of footage to scenes that could be cut. If it were keyed up to a higher pitch and had a few vigorous scenes in it 'Young Forest' would be a better than average foreign film. The stuff is there, but the manner in which it has been assembled is amateurish." William Boehnel
— + N Y World-Telegram p33 D 4 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Film Daily p8 D 3 '35

"While the dialogue is in Polish there are sufficient superimposed English titles to make the production readily understandable. The picture has an excellent cast. . . Said to be produced on the exact locale of the 1905 revolution, its authenticity is of value. It is also good entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Herald p62 D 14 '35

"Tedious style of story development, as well as tendency to stress the unimportant, cramp its effectiveness. . . In addition to several pieces of rather unusual direction by suggestion rather than flamboyant obviousness, Albert Wywerka has collaborated with some striking camera work."

— + Variety p15 D 4 '35

YOUNG LOVE. Mr 9 '36 75min Elekta-films

Players: Vasa Jalovec, Jarmila Berankova.

Jar Vojta, Vojtova Mayerova

Director: Josef Rovensky

Dialogue film in Czechoslovakian with English sub-titles. It was first released and reviewed under title Ecstasy of Young Love. This is not the much publicized Czechoslovakian film, Ecstasy. "[It] is the study of a boy and a girl, the products of a small Bohemian village, and their innocent attachment for each other—a sympathetic study of these two pathetically poor youngsters and of the boy's consuming ambition to make enough money to buy the girl a pair of shoes." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Ecstasy of Young Love' . . . may entertain you, even if it failed to intrigue this observer. . . The piece carries simplicity too far, presenting its characters more often as nitwits than convincing peasants, and unwinding a plot reminiscent of our own early Westerns. . . Bad editing and poor cutting may be partly responsible for the slow pace and the jerky continuity, yet the director often seems as amateurish as his cast, even though the photography of the lovely country is commendable, and the camera work is excellent." Marguerite Tazelaar
— + N Y Herald Tribune p14 Mr 11 '36

"A slight little screen play, one which would not survive even a first reading in any American studio, the picture still does capture a certain mood, a beauty of countryside and youthful emotion. It has little to offer besides that, although both musical score and photography are excellent." Eileen Creelman
+ — N Y Sun p16 Mr 10 '36

"A wholesome little picture possessing a great deal of the natural charm that distinguished 'Man of Aran' and 'The Blue Light' has arrived from Prague. . . The players are the very embodiment of millions of similar couples the world over. It is averred that they never acted professionally before making 'Ecstasy of Young Love.' Perhaps that is why they are so good. The work of the rest of the cast is on a par with that of the principals." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 10 '36

"There are some lonely, jostled moments of beauty in the feeble, fumbling little drama of adolescent youth from the Czechoslovakian called 'Ecstasy of Young Love,'—moments that are full of warming satisfaction in their deep, tender charm. But there are others—all too many others—which jerk it out of reality and turn it into a sort of muddled psychological study. . . All of which is a long way of saying that this film, which won the Czechoslovakian State Gold Medal for the best film of the year; was awarded the Venice World Congress Gold Cup; and tied 'Man of Aran' for first place at the same congress, proves more or less a disappointment." William Boehnel
— + N Y World-Telegram p25 Mr 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Simple, emotionally powerful drama of the love of two young peasants, splendidly acted."

+ Film Daily p8 Mr 10 '36

"This Czechoslovakian-produced film . . . may be considered one of the more interesting importations to this country. Completely unsophisticated in every sense, the producers have told their story in terms of the people of which the picture treats."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Mr 12 '36

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY. D 13 '35 69min 20th century-Fox

Players: Edward Everett Horton, Lois Wilson, John McGuire

Director: Eugene Forde

From play of same title by Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson. Slyly satirizing the Babbitt theme, this film is the tale of a timid lamb, who when brow-beaten by his relatives, and victimized by business and civic interests, suddenly becomes a lion and turns the tables on his business rivals, rids himself of troublesome relatives and finds love.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Class A. General approval." N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide
Cath News p24 Ja 25 '36

"A: Good of kind; Y: Amusing; C: Fairly amusing."

Christian Century p63 Ja 8 '36

"Good."

+ Endorsed Motion Pict Ja '36

"A rambling scenario makes the most of several funny situations and provides wholesome family entertainment. Adults: fair; 14-18: good; 8-14: fair." Calif Congress of Par & Teachers

"A trite story. Family, but mature for children." DAR

"Good. Family." Internat Fed of Cath Alumnae

"Good, simple. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A light comedy, innocuous and undistinguished. Mature in appeal." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Wholesome and entertaining for the family."

So Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ — Fox W Coast Bul N 30 '35

"Amusing episodes enliven a trite story. Family. Mature."

— + Jt Estimates N 15 '35

"Fair. Family."

Motion Pict Guide Mr '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY—Continued

Nat Bd of R M Ja '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A and Y: Diverting comedy; C: Harmless."

Par M p57 Mr '36

Sel Motion Pict D 1 '35

"A pleasant comedy. Family."

+ Wkly Guide D 7 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Reviewed by Richard Watts, Jr.

N Y Herald Tribune p23 D 12 '35

N Y Sun p37 D 12 '35

"A meager and unassuming little comedy of small-town life. . . . We cinema reviewers, when films as unobtrusively dull as 'Your Uncle Dudley' happen along, make a minor virtue of anemia by applying such kindly adjectives as amiable to them. Although 'Your Uncle Dudley' is unpretentious, it is also aggressively commonplace. It seems to have been manufactured for the tail end of double bills and it barely possesses the laughs for a competent two-reeler. Consequently it scarcely impresses this column as an amiable motion picture. . . . The chances are that, like Cole Porter's first sniff of cocaine, it will bore you terrifically, too." Andre Sennwald

— N Y Times p33 D 12 '35

Reviewed by William Boehnel

N Y World-Telegram p33 D 12 '35

"The humor of Rotary Club life and domestic difficulties in a small town provide some moments for the exploitation of Edward Everett Horton, but 'Your Uncle Dudley' is hardly enough, I feel, to keep one all worked up.

Just a gentle little laugh now and then. I suppose that's all some of us can stand."
John Mosher

New Yorker p90 D 21 '35

Reviewed by Louise Mace

Springf'd Republican p2 Ja 2 '36

Time p44 D 16 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

Box Office p25 N 30 '35

"[It] is grand, for an evening of relaxation.

. . . Plenty of good laughs."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 D 28 '35

"A domestic comedy drama of the familiar type. Not strong enough to stand on its own in the big spots."

Film Curb p22 D 15 '35

"This Edward Everett Horton vehicle makes very pleasing domestic comedy-drama entertainment. Should do best with the family trade. Horton plays the timid soul who finally works himself up to the point of asserting himself, and in that type of role he has no peer."

+ Film Daily p12 N 14 '35

Motion Pict Daily p8 N 11 '35

"Fast moving, full of fun in action, dialogue and situations, even when these factors are supposed to be semi-dramatic, it concentrates on things which millions of people are familiar with, either because they have actually experienced them or know about them happening."

+ Motion Pict Herald p72 N 23 '35

"Family comedy."

N Y Exhibitor p55 D 10 '35

Variety p12 D 18 '35

INDEX

Under the names of the leading actors and actresses will be found the productions listed in this number in which they have taken part.

Under the director's name will be found a list of the films in this number which he directed.

Under the headings Books, Plays and Short Stories (Adapted) will be found the author, title of published work and the title of the film. When the title of the film differs from the title of the book, the film's title is given in parenthesis, thus:

Eberhart, M. G.

From this dark stairway (Murder of Dr Harrigan)

ACTORS & ACTRESSES

Abel, Walter
Lady consents
Three musketeers
Two in the dark
Abrikosof, A.
Grain
Acuff, Eddie
Boulder dam
Aherne, Brian
I live my life
Sylvia Scarlett
Albertson, Frank
East of Java
Waterfront lady
Albright, Hardie
Red salute
Alexander, Katharine
Splendor
Alexander, Ross
Boulder dam
Brides are like that
Captain Blood
Shipmates forever
Allan, Elizabeth
Tale of two cities
Allen, Adrienne
Morals of Marcus
Allen, Fred
Thanks a million
Allen, Gracie
Big broadcast of 1936
Here comes Cookie
Allen, Judith
Burning gold
Allen, Robert
Guard that girl
Allister, Claude
Three live ghosts
Alpar, Gitta
I give my heart
Alvarado, Don
Spy 77
Andre, Lona
Skybound
Angel, Heather
Perfect gentleman
Three musketeers
Apfel, Oscar
Fire trap
Shadows of the Orient
Arledge, John
Two in revolt
You may be next
Arlen, Richard
Calling of Dan Matthews
Three live ghosts
Ariss, George
Mister Hobo
Transatlantic tunnel
Armatta, Henry
Three kids and a queen
Armstrong, Robert
Dangerous waters
Arnold, Edward
Crime and punishment
Diamond Jim
Remember last night
Arthur, Jean
Diamond Jim
If you could only cook
Public menace

Ashcroft, Peggy
Rhodes, the diamond master
Astaire, Fred
Follow the fleet
Top hat
Astor, Mary
Man of iron
Murder of Dr Harrigan
Atwill, Lionel
Captain Blood
Lady of secrets
Aumont, Jean-Pierre
Lac Aux Dames
Autry, Gene
Melody trail
Sagebrush troubadour
Singing vagabond
Tumbling tumbleweeds
Ayres, Lew
Leathernecks have landed

Babochkin, Boris
Three women
Bacon, Irving
Drift fence
Bacque, André
Maria Chapdelaine
Baker, Benny
Drift fence
Millions in the air
Balfour, Betty
Born for glory
Bancroft, George
Hell Ship Morgan
Banks, Leslie
Transatlantic tunnel
Barbier, George
Here comes Cookie
Preview murder mystery
Barnes, Binnie
Diamond Jim
Rendezvous
Barnes, Jane
Frontier justice
Barnett, Vince
Dancing feet
Rest cure
Barrat, Robert
Dr Socrates
Barrett, Mary Jane
Ladies love hats
Barrie, Mona
Here comes trouble
Melody lingers on
Storm over the Andes
Barrie, Wendy
Love on a bet
Millions in the air
Scandals of Paris
Barrymore, Dolores Costello
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Barrymore, Lionel
Ah, wilderness
Return of Peter Grimm
Voice of Bugle Ann
Bartholomew, Freddie
Anna Karenina
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Professional soldier

Bartlett, Michael
Music goes 'round
She married her boss
Barton, James
His family tree
Baur, Harry
Crime et châtiment
Moscow nights
Baxter, Alan
Mary Burns, fugitive
Baxter, Warner
King of burlesque
Prisoner of Shark Island
Robin Hood of El Dorado
Beck, Thomas
Every Saturday night
Beecher, Janet
Love before breakfast
So red the rose
Beery, Noah
King of the damned
Beery, Noah, Jr.
Stormy
Beery, Wallace
Ah, wilderness
Message to Garcia
O'Shaughnessy's boy
Bellamy, Ralph
Dangerous intrigue
Hands across the table
Navy wife
Bennett, Joan
Man who broke the bank
at Monte Carlo
She couldn't take it
Two for tonight
Benny, Jack
Broadway melody of 1936
It's in the air
Benson, Elaine
Old curiosity shop
Berankova, Jarmila
Young love
Bernard, Nerio
Tempo massimo
Berri, Mady
La Maternelle
Berriau, Simone
Itto
Bettarini, Cesare
Wedding march
Bezan, Isla
Wolves of the underworld
Bickford, Charles
East of Java
Rose of the Rancho
Birell, Tala
Crime and punishment
Blackmer, Sidney
False pretenses
Fire trap
Forced landing
Blakeney, Olive
Come out of the pantry
Blanchard, Pierre
Crime et châtiment
Blane, Sally
This is the life
Blondell, Joan
Colleen
Miss Pacific Fleet

ACTORS &amp; ACTRESSES

—Continued

- Blore, Eric
   Diamond Jim
   I dream too much
   Seven keys to 'Baldpate'
   Two in the dark
 Blue, Monte
   Nevada
   Trails of the wild
   Treachery rides the range
 Bogart, Humphrey
   Petrified forest
 Bogda, Marja
   Young forest
 Bohnen, Michael
   Private life of Louis XIV
 Boland, Mary
   Two for tonight
 Boles, John
   Littlest rebel
   Message to Garcia
   Rose of the Rancho
 Bollman, Hans Heinz
   Frasquita
 Bond, Ford
   Hunters' paradise
 Bond, Ward
   Cattle thief
 Bosworth, Hobart
   Dark hour
 Bouchier, Chili
   Mr Cohen takes a walk
 Boyd, William
   Bar 20 rides again
   Burning gold
   Call of the prairie
   Eagle's brood
   Racing luck
 Boyer, Charles
   Le Bonheur
 Bradley, Grace
   Dangerous waters
   F-man
 Brady, Alice
   Metropolitan
 Brantford, Mickey
   Mr Cohen takes a walk
 Breakston, George
   Return of Peter Grimm
 Brennan, Walter
   Three godfathers
 Brent, George
   In person
   Snowed under
   Special agent
 Brice, Fanny
   Great Ziegfeld
 Brick, Ben
   Itto
 Bridge, Al
   Fast bullets
 Brisson, Carl
   Ship cafe
 Broderick, Helen
   Love on a bet
   To beat the band
 Brodzisz, Adam
   Young forest
 Brooks, Marjorie
   She shall have music
 Brooks, Phyllis
   Another face
 Brophy, Edward
   Show them no mercy
 Brown, Joe E.
   Midsummer night's dream
 Brown, Johnny Mack
   Between men
   Courageous avenger
 Brown, Tom
   Annapolis farewell
   Freckles
   Gentle Julia
 Browne, Lucile
   Tumbling tumbleweeds
 Bruce, Virginia
   Garden murder case
   Great Ziegfeld
   Here comes the band
   Metropolitan
   Pirate party on Catalina
   Island
- Buchanan, Jack
   Come out of the pantry
   When knights were bold
 Buck, Frank
   Fang and claw
 Burgess, Betty
   Coronado
 Burke, Billie
   Feather in her hat
   She couldn't take it
 Burke, James
   Leathernecks have landed
 Burke, Kathleen
   Last outpost
   Nevada
 Burnette, Smiley
   Melody trail
   Sagebrush troubadour
   Singing vagabond
   Tumbling tumbleweeds
 Burns, George
   Big broadcast of 1936
   Here comes Cookie
 Burton, Frederick
   Calling of Dan Matthews
 Busch, Mae
   Bohemian girl
 Butterworth, Charles
   Magnificent obsession
 Byington, Spring
   Every Saturday night
- Cabot, Bruce
   Don't gamble with love
   Robin Hood of El Dorado
   Show them no mercy
 Cagney, James
   Ceiling zero
   Frisco Kid
   Midsummer night's dream
 Callahan, Margaret
   His family tree
   Muss 'em up
   Seven keys to 'Baldpate'
 Calleia, Joseph
   Exclusive story
   Riffraff
   Tough guy
 Calthrop, Donald
   Scrooge
 Cantor, Eddie
   Strike me pink
 Carew, James
   Come out of the pantry
 Carey, Harry
   Last of the Clintons
   Powdersmoke range
   Wild mustang
 Carlisle, Kitty
   Night at the opera
 Carlisle, Mary
   Superspeed
 Carrillo, Leo
   If you could only cook
   It had to happen
 Carminati, Tullio
   Wedding march
 Carroll, John
   Hi Gaucho
 Carroll, Madeleine
   Thirty-nine steps
 Cassidy, Ed
   Courageous avenger
 Catlett, Walter
   Affair of Susan
 Cavanaugh, Paul
   Splendor
   Thunder in the night
 Cawthorn, Joseph
   Brides are like that
   Freshman love
   Harmony lane
 Chandler, Chick
   Tango
 Chaplin, Charles
   Modern times
 Chase, Ilka
   Lady consents
 Chatterton, Ruth
   Lady of secrets
 Christians, Mady
   Ship cafe
- Churchill, Berton
   Dark hour
 Churchill, Marguerite
   Man hunt
   Walking dead
 Claire, Bernice
   Two hearts in harmony
 Clarke, Mae
   Hitch hike lady
   House of a thousand candles
 Clausen, Claus
   Making of a king
 Clifford, Jack
   Gallant defender
 Clive, Colin
   Man who broke the bank
   at Monte Carlo
   Widow from Monte Carlo
 Clyde, Andy
   Hot Paprika
   Yellow dust
 Clyde, June
   Dance band
   She shall have music
 Cobb, Irvin S.
   Everybody's old man
   Steamboat round the bend
 Cody, Bill
   Blazing justice
   Lawless border
 Colbert, Claudette
   Bride comes home
   She married her boss
 Collier, Constance
   Professional soldier
 Collins, Cora Sue
   Two sinners
 Colman, Ronald
   Man who broke the bank
   at Monte Carlo
   Tale of two cities
 Compton, Joyce
   Suicide squad
 Conklin, Chester
   Call of the prairie
   Modern times
 Conklin, Peggy
   Her master's voice
   One-way ticket
 Connolly, Walter
   Music goes 'round
   One-way ticket
   She couldn't take it
   So red the rose
   Soak the rich
 Consino, Rita
   Paddy O'Day
 Cook, Donald
   Confidential
   Leavenworth case
   Ring around the moon
   Spanish Cape mystery
 Cooper, Gary
   Desire
   Peter Ibbetson
 Cooper, Jackie
   O'Shaughnessy's boy
   Tough guy
 Cortez, Ricardo
   Frisco Kid
   Man hunt
   Murder of Dr Harrigan
   Special agent
   Walking dead
 Courtneidge, Cicely
   Perfect gentleman
 Crabbe, Larry (Buster)
   Desert gold
   Drift fence
   Nevada
 Crawford, Joan
   I live my life
 Crispin, Jeanne
   Second bureau
 Cromwell, Richard
   Annapolis farewell
 Crosby, Bing
   Anything goes
   Two for tonight
 Crosman, Henrietta
   Charlie Chan's secret
   Hitch hike to heaven
 Cross, Milton J.
   Steel and stone

- Cummings, Constance
Remember last night
- Cummings, Robert
Desert gold
- Curzon, George
Two hearts in harmony
- Cutler, Kate
When knights were bold
- Dale, Esther
Farmer in the dell
- Damita, Lili
Frisco kid
- Daniels, Bebe
Music is magic
- Darro, Frankie
Three kids and a queen
Valley of wanted men
- Darwell, Jane
Navy wife
- Paddy O'Day
- Davies, Marion
Pirate party on Catalina Island
- Davis, Bette
Dangerous
Petrified forest
Special agent
- Debain, Henri
La Maternelle
- De Cordoba, Pedro
Condemned to live
- Dee, Frances
Gay deception
- De Haven, Carter
Modern times
- De Havilland, Olivia
Captain Blood
- Deis, Carol
Seeing Nellie home
- Dell, Claudia
Midnight phantom
- Del Rio, Dolores
I live for love
Widow from Monte Carlo
- De Mille, Katherine
Drift fence
- Denny, Reginald
Lady in scarlet
Midnight phantom
Preview murder mystery
Rest cure
- Derean, Rosine
Lac Aux Dames
- De Sica, Vittorio
Tempo massimo
- Despres, Suzanne
Maria Chapdelaine
- Devine, Andy
Coronado
Fighting youth
- Diehl, Carl
Spy 77
- Dietrich, Marlene
Desire
- Digges, Dudley
Three live ghosts
Voice of Bugle Ann
- Dinehart, Alan
It had to happen
- Dix, Dorothy
Sunset of power
- Dix, Richard
Transatlantic tunnel
Yellow dust
- Dodd, Claire
Pay-Off
- Donat, Robert
Ghost goes west
Thirty-nine steps
- Donlevy, Brian
Another face
Strike me pink
- Donnelly, Ruth
Personal maid's secret
Song and dance man
- Douglas, Melvyn
Lone wolf returns
Mary Burns, fugitive
She married her boss
- Downs, Johnny
Coronado
Everybody's old man
- Doyle, Maxine
Condemned to live
- Drake, Frances
Invisible ray
Preview murder mystery
- Draper, Paul
Colleen
- Duchin, Eddie
Coronado
- Dumbrille, Douglass
Public menace
You may be next
- Duna, Steffi
Hi Gaucho
I conquer the sea
- Dunbar, Dixie
King of burlesque
- Dunn, James
Bad boy
Don't get personal
Pay-Off
- Dunne, Irene
Magnificent obsession
- Durant, Jack
Music is magic
- Dvorak, Ann
Dr Socrates
Thanks a million
- Ebsen, Buddy
Captain January
- Eburne, Maude
Doughnuts and society
Happiness C.O.D.
Leavenworth case
- Eddy, Nelson
Rose Marie
- Edwards, Alan
If you could only cook
- Eggerth, Marta
Divine spark
- Eilers, Sally
Don't get personal
Remember last night
Strike me pink
- Elambert, Paulette
La Maternelle
- Eldredge, John
Man of iron
Murder of Dr Harrigan
- Elliott, John
Bulldog courage
- Ellis, Edward
Chatterbox
Lady consents
Return of Peter Grimm
Wanderer of the waste-land
- Ellis, Patricia
Boulder dam
Case of the lucky legs
Freshman love
Pay-Off
Snowed under
- Ellison, Jimmy
Bar 20 rides again
Call of the prairie
Eagle's brood
Hitch hike lady
Leathernecks have landed
- Engels, Wera
Great impersonation
Hong Kong nights
- Erickson, Glenn
Drift fence
- Erickson, Helen
Courageous avenger
- Ernest, George
Racing luck
Song of the saddle
Too many parents
- Errol, Leon
Coronado
- Erwin, Stuart
Ceiling zero
Exclusive story
- Esmond, Carl
Invitation to the waltz
- Evans, Madge
Exclusive story
Transatlantic tunnel
- Evans, Muriel
Call of the prairie
New frontier
Silver spurs
Throwback
- Everest, Barbara
Scrooge
- Fairbanks, Douglas, Jr.
Amateur gentleman
Mimi
- Farebrother, Violet
Mr Cohen takes a walk
- Farley, Dot
Gasolons
- Farley, Edward
Music goes 'round
- Farmer, Frances
Too many parents
- Farnum, Franklyn
Frontier justice
- Farnum, William
Between men
Fighting coward
- Farr, Patricia
Lady in scarlet
- Farrar, Gwen
She shall have music
- Farrell, Charles
Fighting youth
Forbidden heaven
- Farrell, Glenda
Miss Pacific Fleet
Snowed under
- Faye, Alice
King of burlesque
Music is magic
- Fazenda, Louise
Bad boy
Colleen
Doughnuts and society
Widow from Monte Carlo
- Fedorova, Z.
Three women
- Fellowes, Edith
She married her boss
- Fenton, Leslie
Two in the dark
- Fetchit, Stepin
Steamboat round the bend
Virginia judge
- Flynn, Errol
Captain Blood
- Fonda, Henry
I dream too much
Trail of the lonesome pine
Way Down East
- Foran, Dick
Moonlight on the prairie
Song of the saddle
Treachery rides the range
- Forbes, Ralph
I'll name the murderer
- Ford, Francis
Charlie Chan at the circus
- Ford, Wallace
Another face
- Foresta, Franco
For love of you
- Foster, Norman
Bishop misbehaves
Everybody's old man
Fire trap
Leavenworth case
Suicide squad
Superspeed
- Foster, Preston
Annie Oakley
Last days of Pompeii
Love before breakfast
Muss 'em up
We're only human
- Francis, Kay
I found Stella Parish
- Frawley, William
Desire
F-man
Harmony Lane
It's a great life
Ship cafe
Strike me pink
- Frazier, Robert
Never too late

ACTORS &amp; ACTRESSES—

Continued

- Frederick, Pauline
My marriage
French, Charles
Western courage
Fritchie, Barbara
Thunder mountain
Wild mustang
Froman, Jane
Stars over Broadway
Frost, Philip
Scrooge
Furness, Betty
Here comes Cookie
Magnificent obsession
- Gable, Clark
Mutiny on the Bounty
Wife versus secretary
Gale, June
Swiftly
Gale, Roberta
No man's range
Gambarelli, Maria
Here's to romance
Garbo, Greta
Anna Karenina
Gargan, William
Man hunt
Milky way
Garralaga, Martin
Lawless border
Geray, Steve
Dance band
Gerrard, Gene
Mister Hobo
Scandals of Paris
Gibson, Diana
Dangerous waters
Gibson, Hoot
Frontier justice
Powdersmoke range
Swiftly
Gilbert, John
Pirate party on Catalina Island
Gillingwater, Claude
Prisoner of Shark Island
Gleason, James
We're only human
Gleason, Russell
Condemned to live
Goddard, Paulette
Modern times
Gombell, Minna
Miss Pacific Fleet
Two sinners
Goodner, Carol
Music hath charms
Gordon, Del
Last of the Clintons
Wild mustang
Gould, William
Desert guns
Trigger Tom
Grable, Betty
Collegiate
Graetz, Paul
Mr Cohen takes a walk
Grahame, Margot
Three musketeers
Two in the dark
Grant, Cary
Last outpost
Pirate party on Catalina Island
Sylvia Scarlett
Granville, Bonita
Song of the saddle
These three
Gray, Gilda
Rose Marie
Gray, Lawrence
Timber war
Grey, Anne
Just my luck
Grev, Shirley
Mystery of the Marie
Celeste
Griffith, Gordon
Blazing justice
- Groves, Fred
Wolves of the underworld
Gruendgens, Gustaf
Liebele
Guitry, Sacha
Pasteur
Gwenn, Edmund
Bishop misbehaves
Sylvia Scarlett
Walking dead
- Haden, Sara
Magnificent obsession
O'Shaughnessy's boy
Hale, Alan
Message to Garcia
Hale, Sonnie
First a girl
Haley, Jack
Coronado
F-man
Hall, Henry
Music hath charms
Hall, Porter
Too many parents
Hall, Thurston
Case of the missing man
Lone wolf returns
Hall, Warren
Freshman love
Halliday, John
Desire
Melody lingers on
Peter Ibbetson
Hanley, Jimmy
Born for glory
Harding, Ann
Lady consents
Peter Ibbetson
Hardwicke, Sir Cedric
Peg of old Drury
Hardy, Oliver
Bohemian girl
Harker, Gordon
Amateur gentleman
Harlow, Jean
Riffraff
Wife versus secretary
Harrigan, William
His family tree
Harris, Mildred
Never too late
Hartley, Paul
Two hearts in harmony
Harvey, Lillian
Invitation to the waltz
Hawkins, Jack
Peg of old Drury
Hayes, Bernadine
Judgment book
Trigger Tom
Hayes, George
Call of the prairie
Hayward, Louis
Feather in her hat
Healy, Ted
It's in the air
Henderson, Charles
Seeing Nellie home
Henry, Charlotte
Forbidden heaven
Return of Jimmy Valentine
Three kids and a queen
Hepburn, Katharine
Sylvia Scarlett
Herbert, Hugh
Colleen
Miss Pacific Fleet
To beat the band
Hersholt, Jean
Country doctor
Hervey, Irene
Charlie Chan in Shanghai
His night out
Hicks, Seymour
Scrooge
Hilliard, Harriet
Follow the fleet
Hinz, Werner
Making of a king
Hobson, Valerie
Great impersonation
- Hoerbiger, Paul
Liebele
Hogan, Michael
Wolves of the underworld
Hohl, Arthur
Guard that girl
Lone wolf returns
Superspeed
Holmes, Phillips
Chatterbox
Divine spark
House of a thousand candles
Holt, Jack
Dangerous waters
Littlest rebel
Storm over the Andes
Homolka, Oscar
Rhodes, the diamond master
Hood, Darla
Bohemian girl
Hopkins, Miriam
Barbary Coast
Splendor
These three
Hopper, Hedda
Doughnuts and society
Society fever
Hopton, Russell
False pretenses
Horton, Edward Everett
Her master's voice
His night out
Singing kid
Top hat
Your Uncle Dudley
Houston, George
Melody lingers on
Houston, Norman
Hitch hike to heaven
Howard, John
Millions in the air
Soak the rich
Howard, Leslie
Petrified forest
Howard, Willie
Millions in the air
Rose of the Rancho
Hubbard, Lorna
Music hath charms
Huber, Harold
Klondike Annie
Hudson, Rochelle
Everybody's old man
Music goes 'round
Show them no mercy
Way Down East
Hughes, Lloyd
Midnight phantom
Night cargo
Skybound
Society fever
Hull, Warren
Personal maid's secret
Hume, Benita
Garden murder case
Hunt, Eleanor
Rest cure
Hunt, Marsha
Desert gold
Gentle Julia
Virginia judge
Hunter, Ian
I found Stella Parish
Morals of Marcus
Huston, Walter
Rhodes, the diamond master
Hutchinson, Josephine
Melody lingers on
Story of Louis Pasteur
Hyams, Leila
$1000 a minute
Yellow dust
Hylton, Jack
She shall have music
Hymer, Warren
Confidential
Hitch hike lady
Hong Kong nights
Leavenworth case
Show them no mercy
Tango
Widow from Monte Carlo

- Ibrahim, Moulay
 Ito
 Inescourt, Frieda
 If you could only cook
 Ingraham, Lloyd
 Burning gold
- Jagger, Dean
 Wanderer of the wasteland
 Jalovec, Vasa
 Young love
 Jannings, Emil
 Making of a king
 January, Lois
 Pace that kills
 Jason, Sybil
 I found Stella Parish
 Singing kid
 Jeffreys, Ellis
 Limelight
 Jenkins, Allen
 Case of the lucky legs
 Miss Pacific Fleet
 Singing kid
 Jewell, Isabel
 Ceiling zero
 Leathernecks have landed
 Jolson, Al
 Singing kid
 Jones, Allan
 Night at the opera
 Rose Marie
 Jones, Buck
 Ivory-handled gun
 Silver spurs
 Sunset of power
 Throwback
 Jones, Marcia Mae
 These three
 Jory, Victor
 Escape from Devil's Island
 Hell Ship Morgan
 Streamline express
 Too tough to kill
 Joyeux, Odette
 Lac Aux Dames
 Judge, Arline
 Here comes trouble
 It had to happen
 King of burlesque
 Ship cafe
- Karloff, Boris
 Invisible ray
 Walking dead
 Karns, Roscoe
 Two fisted
 Woman trap
 Keaton, Buster
 Grand slam opera
 Old Spanish custom
 Keeler, Ruby
 Colleen
 Shipmates forever
 Keene, Tom
 Desert gold
 Drift fence
 Hong Kong nights
 Timothy's quest
 Keith, Ian
 Crusades
 Don't gamble with love
 Keith, Rosalind
 Annapolis farewell
 It's a great life
 Kelly, Judy
 Four masked men
 Kelly, Patsy
 Thanks a million
 Kelly, Paul
 Here comes trouble
 It's a great life
 My marriage
 Song and dance man
 Kelly, Walter
 Laughing Irish eyes
 Virginia judge
 Kelton, Pert
 Mary Burns, fugitive
 Kennedy, Edgar
 Gasoloons
- Kent, Barbara
 Guard that girl
 Kibbee, Guy
 Captain Blood
 Captain January
 Little Lord Fauntleroy
 Kiepara, Jan
 Give us this night
 King, Joseph
 Road gang
 Klöpfer, Eugen
 Private life of Louis XIV
 Knapp, Evalyn
 Confidential
 Fire trap
 Laughing Irish eyes
 Knight, Fuzzy
 Trails of the wild
 Kohler, Fred
 Dangerous intrigue
 Kohler, Fred, Jr.
 Toll of the desert
 Konstantin, Leopoldine
 Making of a king
 Konstantinov, V.
 New Gulliver
 Korene, Vera
 Second bureau
 Kornman, Mary
 Calling of Dan Matthews
 Kruger, Otto
 Lady of secrets
 Two sinners
 Kun, Madga
 Dance band
- Lake, Florence
 Gasoloons
 Landi, Elissa
 Amateur gentleman
 Lane, Bruce
 Silver spurs
 Lane, Nora
 Outlaw deputy
 Lang, Howard
 Judgment book
 Lang, June
 Country doctor
 Every Saturday night
 Langford, Frances
 Collegiate
 La Rocque, Rod
 Frisco waterfront
 Hi Gaucho
 Preview murder mystery
 LaRue, Jack
 Special agent
 Latimer, Louise
 Two in revolt
 Laughton, Charles
 Mutiny on the Bounty
 Laurel, Stan
 Bohemian girl
 Lawford, Betty
 Love before breakfast
 Lawrence, Gertrude
 Mimi
 Lawrence, Rosina
 Charlie Chan's secret
 Lease, Rex
 Fast bullets
 Lederer, Francis
 Gay deception
 Lee, Anna
 First a girl
 Lee, Dorothy
 Silly Billies
 Lewis, Ted
 Here comes the band
 Leyton, Drue
 Valley of wanted men
 Linaker, Kay
 Murder of Dr Harrigan
 Road gang
 Linden, Eric
 Ah, wilderness
 Robin Hood of El Dorado
 Voice of Bugle Ann
 Lindsay, Margaret
 Dangerous
 Frisco kid
 Lady consents
 Personal maid's secret
- Lloyd, Alma
 Song of the saddle
 Lloyd, Doris
 Kind lady
 Lloyd, Harold
 Milky way
 Locher, Charles
 Charlie Chan in Shanghai
 Lockhart, Gene
 Brides are like that
 Broadway playboy
 Lockhart, Kathleen
 Brides are like that
 Broadway playboy
 Loder, John
 Daredevils of the earth
 Lombard, Carole
 Hands across the table
 Love before breakfast
 Long, Lotus
 Last of the pagans
 Lord, Pauline
 Feather in her hat
 Loring, Ann
 Robin Hood of El Dorado
 Lorre, Peter
 Crime and punishment
 Losch, Tilly
 Limelight
 Louise, Anita
 Brides are like that
 Midsummer night's dream
 Personal maid's secret
 Story of Louis Pasteur
 Lowe, Edmund
 Garden murder case
 Grand exit
 Great impersonation
 King Solomon of Broadway
 Thunder in the night
 Loy, Myrna
 Great Ziegfeld
 Petticoat fever
 Whipsaw
 Wife versus secretary
 Lugosi, Bela
 Invisible ray
 Mystery of the Marie
 Celeste
 Lukas, Paul
 I found Stella Parish
 Three musketeers
 Luke, Keye
 Charlie Chan at the circus
 Charlie Chan in Shanghai
 Lund, Lucille
 Timber war
 Lupino, Ida
 Anything goes
 Daredevils of the earth
 Lyon, Ben
 Dancing feet
 Frisco waterfront
 Navy wife
- McCoy, Tim
 Bulldog courage
 Outlaw deputy
 McCrea, Joel
 Barbary Coast
 Splendor
 These three
 MacDonald, J. Farrell
 Exclusive story
 Shadows of the Orient
 Stormy
 Waterfront lady
 MacDonald, Jeanette
 Rose Marie
 McFarland, Spanky
 Trail of the lonesome pine
 McGlynn, Frank
 Littlest rebel
 MacGregor, Malcolm
 I'll name the murderer
 McGuire, John
 Steamboat round the bend
 This is the life
 Your Uncle Dudley
 McHugh, Frank
 Freshman love
 Snowed under

ACTORS &amp; ACTRESSES

—Continued

- Mack, Betty
 Hair Trigger Casey
 Last of the Clintons
 Toll of the desert
 Mack, Helen
 Milky way
 Return of Peter Grimm
 MacKay, Barry
 Born for glory
 McKay, George
 Public menace
 McKinney, Florine
 Cappy Ricks returns
 McLaglen, Cliff
 Mystery of the Marie Celeste
 McLaglen, Cyril
 Daredevils of the earth
 McLaglen, Victor
 Klondike Annie
 Professional soldier
 MacLane, Barton
 Broadway playboy
 Dr Socrates
 Man of iron
 MacMahon, Aline
 Ah, wilderness
 Kind lady
 MacMurray, Fred
 Bride comes home
 Hands across the table
 Trail of the lonesome pine
 McNaughton, Charles
 Three live ghosts
 McWade, Robert
 Cappy Ricks returns
 Madison, Noel
 Morals of Marcus
 Pace that kills
 Maganni, Anna
 Tempo massimo
 Mallory, Boots
 Powdersmoke range
 Mander, Miles
 Four masked men
 Mannheim, Lucie
 Thirty-nine steps
 Mannors, Sheila
 Lawless range
 Moonlight on the prairie
 Pace that kills
 March, Fredric
 Anna Karenina
 Dark angel
 Margetson, Arthur
 Mystery of the Marie Celeste
 Marion, Beth
 Between men
 Marlow, June
 Riddle Ranch
 Marsh, Garry
 When knights were bold
 Marsh, Joan
 Dancing feet
 Marsh, Marian
 Crime and punishment
 Lady of secrets
 Marshall, Everett
 I live for love
 Marshall, Herbert
 Dark angel
 If you could only cook
 Lady consents
 Martel, June
 Fighting youth
 Martini, Nino
 Here's to romance
 Marx, Chico
 Night at the opera
 Marx, Groucho
 Night at the opera
 Marx, Harpo
 Night at the opera
 Mason, Roy
 Valley of wanted men
 Massey, Raymond
 Things to come
 Matthews, Jessie
 First a girl
 Matthews, Lester
 Spy 77
 Too many parents
- Maxwell, Edwin
 Happiness C. O. D.
 Mayerova, Vojtova
 Young love
 Maynard, Ken
 Cattle thief
 Heir to trouble
 Lawless riders
 Western courage
 Maynard, Kermit
 His fighting blood
 Timber war
 Trails of the wild
 Mayo, Frank
 Burning gold
 Meek, Donald
 Happiness C. O. D.
 Kind lady
 Meeker, George
 Tango
 Melton, James
 Stars over Broadway
 Mendaille, Daniel
 Maria Chappdelaine
 Menjou, Adolphe
 Milky way
 Mercer, Beryl
 Three live ghosts
 Merivale, Philip
 Give us this night
 Merkel, Una
 Broadway melody of 1936
 It's in the air
 Riffratt
 Merman, Ethel
 Anything goes
 Strike me pink
 Messinger, Gertrude
 Blazing justice
 Michael, Gertrude
 Last outpost
 Woman trap
 Middleton, Charles
 Song of the saddle
 Sunset of power
 Miljan, John
 Murder at Glen Athol
 Milland, Ray
 Next time we love
 Miller, Hugh
 I give my heart
 Miller, Walter
 Night cargo
 Mills, John
 Born for glory
 Milly
 Tempo massimo
 Milton, Billy
 Music hath charms
 Mitchell, Frank
 Music is magic
 Mitchell, Geneva
 Cattle thief
 Lawless riders
 Western courage
 Mitchell, Grant
 Next time we love
 Seven keys to Baldpate
 Mong, William V.
 Dark hour
 Montgomery, Douglas
 Harmony lane
 Montgomery, Robert
 Petticoat fever
 Moore, Carlyle, Jr.
 Road gang
 Moore, Dickie
 Timothy's quest
 Moreno, Antonio
 Bohemian girl
 Storm over the Andes
 Moreno, Rosita
 House of a thousand candles
 Morgan, Frank
 Great Ziegfeld
 I live my life
 Perfect gentleman
 Morgan, Ralph
 Condemned to live
 Morlay, Gaby
 Le Bonheur
 Morley, Karen
 Littlest rebel
 Thunder in the night
- Morner, Stanley
 I conquer the sea
 Morris, Chester
 Pirate party on Catalina Island
 Three godfathers
 Morris, Margaret
 Desert guns
 Morrison, Joe
 It's a great life
 Mowbray, Alan
 Muss 'em up
 Muir, Esther
 Racing luck
 Muir, Jean
 Midsummer night's dream
 Stars over Broadway
 Mulhall, Jack
 Skull and Crown
 Müller, Renate
 Private life of Louis XIV
 Muni, Paul
 Dr Socrates
 Story of Louis Pasteur
 Murat, Jean
 Second bureau
 Murphy, George
 Public menace
 Woman trap
 Murray, Charlie
 Dangerous waters
- Napier, Diana
 For love of you
 Nares, Owen
 I give my heart
 Narokof, N.
 Grain
 Neagle, Anna
 Limelight
 Peg of old Drury
 Nearing, Margaret
 Fast bullets
 Nissen, Greta
 Spy 77
 Nixon, Marian
 Tango
 Nolan, Lloyd
 One-way ticket
 You may be next
 Norris, Edward
 Show them no mercy
 Novotna, Jarmila
 Frasuquita
 Nugent, Eddie
 Dancing feet
 Doughnuts and society
 Just my luck
 Skybound
- Oakie, Jack
 Big broadcast of 1936
 Colleen
 Collegiate
 King of burlesque
 Oberon, Merle
 Dark angel
 These three
 O'Brien, George
 Thunder mountain
 Whispering Smith speaks
 O'Brien, Pat
 Ceiling zero
 Stars over Broadway
 O'Brien-Moore, Erin
 Leavenworth case
 Ring around the moon
 Two in the dark
 O'Connell, Hugh
 Affair of Susan
 O'Connor, Una
 Thunder in the night
 O'Day, Molly
 Lawless border
 Skull and Crown
 Offerman, George, Jr.
 Chatterbox
 Outlaw deputy
 Oland, Warner
 Charlie Chan at the circus
 Charlie Chan in Shanghai
 Charlie Chan's secret

- Olivier, Lawrence
Moscow nights
- Olsen, Moroni
Farmer in the dell
Two in revolt
Yellow dust
- Ondra, Anny
Knock-out
- O'Neal, Zelma
Scandals of Paris
- O'Neil, Sally
Too tough to kill
- Osborn, Bud
Outlaw deputy
- O'Sullivan, Maureen
Bishop misbehaves
Voice of Bugle Ann
- Overman, Lynne
Collegiate
- Owen, Reginald
Petticoat fever
Rose Marie
- Ozeray, Madeleine
Crime et châtiment
- Page, Anita
Hitch hike to heaven
- Page, Dorothy
King Solomon of Broadway
- Page, Lucille
Moonlight and melody
- Paley, Natalie
 Sylvia Scarlett
- Palette, Eugene
Ghost goes west
- Palmer, Kiki
Wedding march
- Parker, Cecilia
Ah, wilderness
Three live ghosts
- Parker, Frank
Sweet surrender
- Parker, Jean
Farmer in the dell
Ghost goes west
- Patrick, Gail
Lone wolf returns
Preview murder mystery
Two fisted
Wanderer of the wasteland
- Patricola, Tom
Moonlight and melody
- Patterson, Elizabeth
Timothy's quest
- Pawley, Edward
King Solomon of Broadway
- Pendleton, Nat
Garden murder case
Great Ziegfeld
Here comes the band
It's in the air
- Penner, Joe
Collegiate
- Pepper, Barbara
Sagebrush troubadour
Singing vagabond
Waterfront lady
- Percy, Esme
Old Spanish custom
Spy 77
- Perier, Jean
Pasteur
- Perkins, Osgood
I dream too much
- Perrin, Jack
Hair Trigger Casey
- Perry, Joan
Case of the missing man
Gallant defender
Hell to trouble
Mysterious avenger
- Peterson, Dorothy
Country doctor
Man of iron
- Petrie, Hay
Old curiosity shop
- Petrov, A.
Peasants
- Pettingell, Frank
Amateur gentleman
- Pichel, Irving
Don't gamble with love
House of a thousand candles
- Pitts, Zasu
Affair of Susan
- Pons, Lily
I dream too much
- Poslavy, Boris
Peasants
Three women
- Potel, Victor
Last of the Clintons
- Powell, Dick
Colleen
Midsummer night's dream
Shipmates forever
Thanks a million
- Powell, Eleanor
Broadway melody of 1936
Great Ziegfeld
- Powell, William
Rendezvous
- Pratt, Purnell
Dancing feet
- Prouty, Jed
Every Saturday night
- Pryor, Roger
Case of the missing man
$1000 a minute
Return of Jimmy Valentine
- Quigley, Charles
Charlie Chan's secret
King of burlesque
- Raft, George
It had to happen
She couldn't take it
- Rainer, Luise
Great Ziegfeld
- Rains, Claude
Last outpost
- Ralph, Jessie
Yellow dust
- Ralston, Esther
Forced landing
Rest cure
Shadows of the Orient
- Rathbone, Basil
Anna Karenina
Captain Blood
Feather in her hat
Kind lady
Last days of Pompeii
Tale of two cities
- Ratoff, Gregory
Here comes trouble
King of burlesque
- Rawlinson, Herbert
Hitch hike to heaven
- Ray, Charles
Just my luck
- Raymond, Gene
Love on a bet
Seven keys to Baldpate
- Reed, Philip
Klondike Annie
- Regan, Phil
Broadway hostess
Laughing Irish eyes
- Renaud, Madeleine
Maria Chapdelaine
La Maternelle
- Revier, Dorothy
Eagle's brood
Lady in scarlet
- Rice, Florence
Escape from Devil's Island
Guard that girl
Superspeed
- Rice, Frank
Ivory-handled gun
- Rice, Jack
Gasoloons
- Richardson, Ralph
Things to come
- Richman, Harry
Music goes 'round
- Richmond, Warner
Courageous avenger
- Riley, Michael
Music goes 'round
- Riscoe, Arthur
For love of you
Kiss me goodbye
- Rivero, Julian
Riddle Ranch
- Roberts, Beverly
Singing kid
- Robinson, Bill
In old Kentucky
Littlest rebel
- Robinson, Edward G.
Barbary Coast
- Robson, May
Three kids and a queen
Wife versus secretary
- Rodon, Francois
Pasteur
- Rogers, Buddy
Dance band
Pirate party on Catalina Island
- Rogers, Ginger
Follow the fleet
In person
Top hat
- Rogers, Jean
Stormy
- Rogers, Will
In old Kentucky
Steamboat round the bend
- Romero, Cesar
Love before breakfast
Show them no mercy
- Rooney, Mickey
Midsummer night's dream
- Rouveau, Jean
Bar 20 rides again
Leavenworth case
- Ruehmann, Heinz
Frasquita
- Ruggles, Charlie
Anything goes
- Rumann, Siegfried
East of Java
- Russell, Harriet
Crime of Dr Crespi
- Russell, Rosalind
It had to happen
Rendezvous
- Rutherford, Ann
Doughnuts and society
Lawless nineties
Melody trail
Oregon trail
Singing vagabond
Waterfront lady
- Sale, Charles (Chic)
It's a great life
Man hunt
- Schmeling, Max
Knock-out
- Schneider, Magda
Kiss me goodbye
Liebelei
- Schonrath, Hans
Knock-out
- Schumann-Heink, Mme.
Ernestine
Here's to romance
- Scott, Margaretta
Things to come
- Scott, Randolph
Follow the fleet
So red the rose
- Searl, Jackie
Gentle Julia
- Sellon, Charles
In old Kentucky
- Seward, Billie
Trails of the wild
Shagaida, S.
Frontier
- Shaw, Winifred
Broadway hostess
- Shea, Gloria
Dangerous intrigue
- Sheridan, Ann
Fighting youth
- Shilling, Marion
Gun play
I'll name the murderer
- Shirley, Anne
Chatterbox
Steamboat round the bend
- Shkurat, S.
Frontier

ACTORS &amp; ACTRESSES—

Continued

- Shotter, Winifred
 Petticoat fever
 Sidney, Sylvia
 Mary Burns, fugitive
 Trail of the lonesome pine
 Simon, Michel
 Lac Aux Dames
 Le Bonheur
 Simon, Simone
 Lac Aux Dames
 Skipworth, Alison
 Dangerous
 Hitch hike lady
 Sleeper, Martha
 Two sinners
 Smith, C. Aubrey
 Little Lord Fauntleroy
 Smith, Pete
 Audioscopiks
 Sothern, Ann
 Don't gamble with love
 Grand exit
 Hell Ship Morgan
 You may be next
 Sparks, Ned
 Collegiate
 Squinquel, Jose
 Pasteur
 Squire, Ronald
 Come out of the pantry
 Stamp-Taylor, Enid
 Two hearts in harmony
 Stander, Lionel
 If you could only cook
 Music goes 'round
 Soak the rich
 Standing, Sir Guy
 Annapolis farewell
 Stanwyck, Barbara
 Annie Oakley
 Message to Garcia
 Red salute
 Starrett, Charles
 Gallant defender
 Mysterious avenger
 Steele, Bob
 No man's range
 Powdersmoke range
 Stephens, Harvey
 Tough guy
 Stevens, Onslow
 Forced landing
 Yellow dust
 Stewart, James
 Next time we love
 Rose Marie
 Stockwell, Harry
 Here comes the band
 Stoliarov, S.
 Frontier
 Stone, Carol
 Freckles
 Stone, Fred
 Farmer in the dell
 Trail of the lonesome pine
 Stone, Lewis
 Shipmates forever
 Three godfathers
 Stone, Paula
 Treachery rides the range
 Stuart, Gloria
 Prisoner of Shark Island
 Professional soldier
 Stuart, John
 Four masked men
 Sullavan, Margaret
 Next time we love
 So red the rose
 Summerville, George J.
 (Slim)
 Captain January
 Country doctor
 Way Down East
 Swarthout, Gladys
 Give us this night
 Rose of the Rancho

 Talbot, Lyle
 Boulder dam
 Broadway hostess
 Talmadge, Richard
 Never too late

 Tamara
 Sweet surrender
 Tamiroff, Akim
 Woman trap
 Taylor, Kent
 My marriage
 Taylor, Mary
 Soak the rich
 Taylor, Robert
 Broadway melody of 1936
 Magnificent obsession
 Tchirkof, Boris
 Three women
 Tearle, Conway
 Desert guns
 Judgment book
 Tearle, Godfrey
 Thirty-nine steps
 Wolves of the underworld
 Teasdale, Verree
 Milky way
 Temple, Shirley
 Captain January
 Littlest rebel
 Tenin, Boris
 Grain
 Thomson, Beatrix
 Old curiosity shop
 Thomson, Kenneth
 Whispering Smith speaks
 Thorgersen, Edward
 Game of Jai-alai
 Winter magic Thunder Cloud, Chief
 Annie Oakley
 Tibbett, Lawrence
 Metropolitan
 Tobin, Genevieve
 Broadway hostess
 Case of the lucky legs
 Here's to romance
 Snowed under
 Todd, Thelma
 Bohemian girl
 Two for tonight
 Toler, Sidney
 This is the life
 Tomlin, Pinky
 Don't get personal
 King Solomon of Broadway
 Paddy O'Day
 Tone, Franchot
 Dangerous
 Exclusive story
 Mutiny on the Bounty
 Toomey, Regis
 Shadows of the Orient
 Skull and Crown
 Torrence, David
 Captain Blood
 Tovar, Lupita
 Old Spanish custom
 Toye, Wendy
 Invitation to the waltz
 Tracy, Arthur
 Limelight
 Tracy, Lee
 Two fisted
 Tracy, Spencer
 Riffraff
 Whipsaw
 Travis, June
 Broadway playboy
 Ceiling zero
 Treacher, Arthur
 Hitch hike lady
 Trevor, Claire
 My marriage
 Navy wife
 Song and dance man
 Trevor, Edward
 Way Down East
 Truex, Ernest
 Ladies love hats
 Tsessarskaya, Emma
 Grain
 Twelvetreets, Helen
 Frisco waterfront
 Spanish Cape mystery
 Tyler, Tom
 Fast bullets
 Powdersmoke range
 Trigger Tom

 Ullrich, Luise
 Liebelei

 Veidt, Conrad
 King of the damned
 Velez, Lupe
 Morals of Marcus
 Venable, Evelyn
 Harmony lane
 Streamline express
 Vinson, Helen
 King of the damned
 Vojta, Jar
 Young love
 Von Stroheim, Eric
 Crime of Dr Crespi

 Waddington, Patrick
 I give my heart
 Walker, Ray
 Cappy Ricks returns
 Dark hour
 Fighting coward
 Music is magic
 Walthall, Henry B.
 Tale of two cities
 Walton, Douglas
 Garden murder case
 I conquer the sea
 Ward, Penelope Dudley
 Moscow nights
 Ward, Polly
 Old curiosity shop
 Ware, Irene
 Dark hour
 False pretenses
 Happiness C. O. D.
 Murder at Glen Athol
 Whispering Smith speaks
 Warner, H. B.
 Rose of the Rancho
 Warrender, Harold
 Invitation to the waltz
 Warwick, Robert
 Return of Jimmy Valentine
 Watson, Lucille
 Bishop misbehaves
 Wayne, John
 Lawless nineties
 Lawless range
 New frontier
 Oregon trail
 Wayne, Nauntion
 Kiss me goodbye
 Webster, Ben
 Old curiosity shop
 Weidler, Virginia
 Freckles
 Timothy's quest
 Wells, Jacqueline
 Bohemian girl
 Night cargo
 West, Buster
 Moonlight and melody
 West, Mae
 Klondike Annie
 Westley, Helen
 Splendor
 Whalen, Michael
 Country doctor
 Song and dance man
 Wheeler, Bert
 Silly Billies
 White, Thelma
 Never too late
 Whiteman, Paul
 Thanks a million
 Whitman, Gayne
 Wild wings
 Whitney, Eleanor
 Timothy's quest
 Wieck, Dorothea
 Private life of Louis XIV
 Wilcoxon, Henry
 Crusades
 Willard, Edmund
 Mystery of the Marie
 Celeste
 William, Warren
 Broadway playboy
 Case of the lucky legs
 Widow from Monte Carlo

- Williams, Guinn
Gun play
Muss 'em up
Powdersmoke range
Williams, Herb
Rose of the Rancho
Williams, Roger
Cattle thief
Toll of the desert
Wilson, Dorothy
Bad boy
In old Kentucky
Last days of Pompeii
Wilson, Lois
Society fever
Your Uncle Dudley
Wing, Toby
Forced landing
Wise, Ray
Last of the pagans
Withers, Grant
Skybound
Withers, Jane
Gentle Julia
Paddy O'Day
This is the life
Witherspoon, Cora
Ladies love hats
Woodbury, Joan
Bulldog courage
Fighting coward
Woods, Donald
Road gang
Story of Louis Pasteur
Tale of two cities
Woods, Harry
Gallant defender
Heir to trouble
Lawless nineties
Silly Billies
Woolsey, Robert
Silly Billies
Worth, Barbara
Racing luck
Worth, David
Riddle Ranch
Wray, Fay
Come out of the pantry
When knights were bold
Wyatt, Jane
We're only human
Wynters, Charlotte
Calling of Dan Matthews
Ivory-handled gun
- Yacanelli, Frank
Gun play
Young, Elizabeth
East of Java
Young, Loretta
Crusades
Young, Polly Ann
His fighting blood
Young, Robert
Bride comes home
Red salute
Remember last night
Younger, E.
Peasants
Youssef, Mohaud
Itto
Yurka, Blanche
Tale of two cities
- Zarubina, I.
Three women
Zheimo, Yanina
Three women
- BOOKS (Adapted)
Adams, S. H.
In person
Asbury, H.
Barbary Coast
Austin, F. B.
Drums (Last outpost)
- Baldwin, F.
Spinster dinner (Love before breakfast)
Wife versus secretary
Biggers, E. D.
Seven keys to Baldpate
Brentano, L.
Melody lingers on
Brush, K.
Maid of honor (Lady of secrets)
Buchan, J.
Thirty-nine steps
Bulwer-Lytton, E. G. E. L.
Last days of Pompeii
Burgess, G.
Two o'clock courage (Two in the dark)
Burman, B. L.
Steamboat round the bend
Burnett, F. H.
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Burnett, W. R.
Dr Socrates
Burns, W. N.
Robin Hood of El Dorado
Cram, M.
Thin air (Stars over Broadway)
Curwood, J. O.
Timber war
Deeping, W.
Two black sheep (Two sinners)
Delmar, V.
Bracelets (Hands across the table)
Day never came (King of burlesque)
Dickens, C.
A Christmas carol (Scrooge)
Old curiosity shop
Tale of two cities
Dostoevskii, F. M.
Crime and punishment
Dostoevskii, F. M.
Crime and punishment (Crime et châtiment)
Douglas, L. C.
Magnificent obsession
Dumas, A.
Three musketeers
Du Maurier, G.
Peter Ibbetson
Eberhart, M. G.
From this dark stairway (Murder of Dr Harrigan)
Eden, R., pseud.
Dancing feet
Farnol, J.
Amateur gentleman
Forester, C. S.
Born for glory
Frapie, L.
La Maternelle
Gardner, E. S.
Case of the lucky legs
Grant, J. E.
Green shadow (Muss 'em Up)
Green, A. K.
Leavenworth case
Grey, Z.
Desert gold
Drift fence
Nevada
Thunder mountain
Wanderer of the wasteland
Hemon, L.
Maria Chapdelaine
Hobart, V.
Ring around the moon
Hobhouse, A., pseud.
Hangover murders (Remember last night)
Hubbard, A.
Message to Garcia
Hughes, R.
Canavan (It had to happen)
Hurst, V.
Tango
Johe-Slade, C.
Forbidden heaven
- Kantor, M.
Voice of Bugle Ann
Kelland, C. B.
Dreamland (Strike me pink)
Kellerman, B.
The tunnel (Transatlantic tunnel)
Kyne, P. B.
Cappy Ricks returns
Three godfathers
Lamb, H.
Crusades
Lippincott, N.
Murder at Glen Athol
MacDonald, W. C.
Powdersmoke range
MacKenzie, C.
Sybil Scarlett
Melville, H.
Typee (Last of the pagans)
Miller, A. D.
Come out of the pantry
Monroe, N. M.
Dr Samuel Mudd (Prisoner of Shark Island)
Morell, P.
Diamond Jim
Morris, G.
Tiger Island (East of Java)
Mulford, C.
Bar 20 rides again
Eagle's brood
Hop-a-long Cassidy's protegee (Call of the prairie)
Murger, H.
La vie de Bohème (Mimi)
Natoli, M.
Tempo massimo
Nordhoff, C. B., and Hall, J.
Men against the sea (Mutiny on the Bounty)
Mutiny on the Bounty
Pitcairn's Island (Mutiny on the Bounty)
Norris, K.
Beauty's daughter (Navy wife)
Oppenheim, E. P.
Great impersonation
Payne, S.
Tracks (Swiftly)
Parrott, U.
Next time we live, or Say goodbye again (Next time we love)
Porter, G. S.
Freckles
Powell, D.
Country boy (Man of iron)
Queen, E., pseud.
Spanish Cape mystery
Reeves, T.
Glory hole (Dangerous waters)
Richards, L. E.
Captain January
Robert-Dumas, C.
Second bureau
Rowan, A. S.
Message to Garcia
Sabatini, R.
Captain Blood
Saunders, L., pseud.
Snowed under
Shuhov, I.
Enemies' paths (Grain)
Swift, J.
Gulliver's travels (New Gulliver)
Tarkington, B.
Gentle Julia
Tolstoi, L. N.
Anna Karenina
Turner, E.
One-way ticket
Vance, L. J.
Lone wolf returns
Van Dine, S. S.
Garden murder case
Wells, H. G.
Shape of things to come (Things to come)
Wiggin, K. D.
Timothy's quest

BOOKS (Adapted)—Cont.

Way Down East
Wilson, C.
Stormy
Wright, H. B.
Calling of Dan Matthews
Wylie, I. A. R.
Feather in her hat
Yardley, H. O.
American black chamber
(Rendezvous)
Young, S.
So red the rose

DIRECTORS

Allegret, M.
Lac Aux Dames
Archainbaud, G.
My marriage
Thunder in the night
Arnshtam, L.
Three women
Asquith, A.
Moscow nights
Atkins, T.
Hi Gaucho
Auer, J. H.
Crime of Dr Crespi
Bacon, L.
Frisco Kid
Barton, C.
Last outpost
Nevada
Timothy's quest
Beaudine, W.
Mr Cohen takes a walk
Two hearts in harmony
Bennett, S. G.
Cattle thief
Heir to trouble
Western courage
Benoit-Levy, J.
Itto
La Maternelle
Bentley, T.
Music hath charms
Old curiosity shop
Berkeley, B.
I live for love
Biberman, H.
One-way ticket
Billon, P.
Second bureau
Black, P.
Hot Paprika
Blystone, J.
Bad boy
Gentle Julia
Boleslawski, R.
Metropolitan
O'Shaughnessy's boy
Three godfathers
Bond, R.
Forbidden heaven
Bonnard, M.
Wedding march
Borzage, F.
Desire
Shipmates forever
Bradbury, R. N.
Between men
Courageous avenger
Lawless range
No man's range
Bretherton, H.
Bar 20 rides again
Call of the prairie
Eagle's brood
Leathernecks have landed
Brice, M.
Sweet surrender
Brower, O.
Outlaw deputy
Brown, C.
Ah, wilderness
Anna Karenina
Wife versus secretary
Brown, M.
Forced landing
Brunel, A.
Old Spanish custom

Buck, F.
Fang and claw
Burton, D.
Melody lingers on
Butler, D.
Captain January
Littlest rebel
Cabanne, C.
Another face
Storm over the Andes
Cahn, E. L.
Confidential
Chaplin, C.
Modern times
Chenal, P.
Crime et châtiment
Christie, A.
Ladies love hats
Moonlight and melody
Clair, R.
Ghost goes west
Clemens, W.
Man hunt
Clift, D.
Mystery of the Marie
Celeste
Clifton, E.
Skull and Crown
Cline, E. F.
F-man
It's a great life
Collins, A. G.
Personal maid's secret
Widow from Monte Carlo
Collins, L. D.
Doughnuts and society
Leavenworth case
Return of Jimmy Valentine
Spanish Cape mystery
Conway, J.
Tale of two cities
Cooper, G. A.
Wolves of the underworld
Cromwell, J.
I dream too much
Little Lord Fauntleroy
Crosland, A.
Great impersonation
King Solomon of Broadway
Cruze, J.
Two fisted
Cukor, G.
 Sylvia Scarlett
Curtiz, M.
Captain Blood
Walking dead
De La Falaise, Marquis H.
Legong
Del Ruth, R.
Broadway melody of 1936
It had to happen
Thanks a million
De Mille, C.
Crusades
Dieterle, W.
Dr Socrates
Midsummer night's dream
Story of Louis Pasteur
Disney, W.
Broken toys
Cock o' the walk
On ice
Three orphan kittens
Dovjenko, A.
Frontier
Dupont, E. A.
Bishop misbehaves
Duvivier, J.
Maria Chapdelaine
Dwan, A.
Navy wife
Song and dance man
Edwards, H.
Scrooge
Elvey, M.
Transatlantic tunnel
English, J. W.
His fighting blood
Enright, R.
Miss Pacific Fleet
Snowed under
Epstein, M.
Itto
La Maternelle

Ermiler, F.
Peasants
Faralla, D.
Little America
Fields, L.
Streamline express
Fitzmaurice, G.
Petticoat fever
FitzPatrick, J. A.
Sacred city of the Mayan
Indians
Flood, J.
Everybody's old man
We're only human
Florey, R.
Pay-Off
Preview murder mystery
Ship cafe
Ford, J.
Prisoner of Shark Island
Steamboat round the bend
Forde, E.
Your Uncle Dudley
Forde, W.
Born for glory
King of the damned
Fox, W.
Powdersmoke range
Yellow dust
Franklin, C.
Tough guy
Franklin, S.
Dark angel
Fraser, H.
Hair Trigger Casey
Last of the Clintons
Wild mustang
Freeland, T.
Amateur gentleman
Friedlander, L.
Stormy
Froelich, C.
Private life of Louis XIV
Gallone, C.
Divine spark
For love of you
Kiss me goodbye
Garnett, T.
Professional soldier
She couldn't take it
Gasnier, L.
Last outpost
Gering, M.
Lady of secrets
Rose of the Rancho
Gordon, S.
Lawless riders
Green, A. E.
Colleen
Dangerous
Here's to romance
Griffith, E. H.
Next time we love
Guiol, F.
Silly Billies
Guitry, S.
Pasteur
Hall, A.
Annapolis farewell
Give us this night
Halperin, V.
I conquer the sea
Hamilton, W.
Freckles
Seven keys to Baldpate
Hanbury, W. V.
Scandals of Paris
Hathaway, H.
Peter Ibbetson
Trail of the lonesome pine
Hawks, H.
Barbary Coast
Ceiling zero
Hecht, B.
Soak the rich
Heinz, R. R.
Just my luck
L'Herbier, M.
Le Bonheur
Herman, A.
Blazing justice
Gun play

- Hillyer, L.
   Dangerous waters
   Guard that girl
   Invisible ray
   Superspeed
 Hiscott, L.
   She shall have music
 Hitchcock, A.
   Thirty-nine steps
 Hogan, J.
   Desert gold
 Holmes, B.
   Farmer in the dell
 Hopper, E. M.
   Hong Kong nights
 Horne, J.
   Bohemian girl
 Howard, D.
   Thunder mountain
   Whispering Smith speaks
 Howard, W. K.
   Mary Burns, fugitive
   Rendezvous
 Humberstone, H. B.
   Three live ghosts
 Hutchinson, C.
   Desert guns
   Judgment book
   Night cargo
   Riddle Ranch
 James, A.
   Swiftly
   Valley of wanted men
 Jason, L.
   Love on a bet
 Johnson, R. K.
   I'll name the murderer
   Skybound
   Suicide squad
 Kane, J.
   Lawless nineties
   Melody trail
   Sagebrush troubadour
   Tumbling tumbleweeds
 Keighley, W.
   Singing kid
   Special agent
   Stars over Broadway
 Kenton, E. C.
   Grand exit
   Public menace
 Kilby, E.
   Freckles
   Seven keys to Baldpate
 King, H.
   Country doctor
   Way Down East
 King, L.
   Road gang
   Song of the saddle
 Kirkwood, R.
   Lawless border
 LaCava, G.
   She married her boss
 Lachman, H.
   Charlie Chan at the circus
 Lamac, C.
   Frasquita
   Knock-out
 Lamont, C.
   Dark hour
   False pretenses
   Grand slam opera
   Happiness C. O. D.
   Hitch hike to heaven
   Lady in scarlet
   Ring around the moon
 Lanfield, S.
   King of burlesque
   Red salute
 Lang, A.
   Great Ziegfeld
 Lang, W.
   Love before breakfast
 Lederman, D. R.
   Case of the missing man
   Hell Ship Morgan
   Moonlight on the prairie
   Too tough to kill
 Lee, R. V.
   Three musketeers
 Leisen, M.
   Hands across the table
 Lejtes, J.
   Young forest
 Leman, J.
   Land of promise
 Leonard, R. Z.
   Great Ziegfeld
 LeRoy, M.
   I found Stella Parish
 Lewyn, L.
   Pirate party on Catalina Island
 Lloyd, F.
   Mutiny on the Bounty
 Lovering, O.
   Drift fence
   Wanderer of the wasteland
 Lubin, A.
   Frisco waterfront
   House of a thousand candles
   Two sinners
 Ludwig, E.
   Three kids and a queen
 Lynwood, B.
   Fire trap
   Shadows of the Orient
 MacArthur, C.
   Soak the rich
 McCarey, L.
   Milky way
 McCarey, R.
   Millions in the air
 McDonald, F.
   Boulder dam
   Broadway hostess
   Murder of Dr Harrigan
   Treachery rides the range
 MacFadden, H.
   Fighting youth
 McGann, W.
   Brides are like that
   Broadway playboy
   Freshman love
   Man of iron
 McGowan, R.
   Frontier justice
   Too many parents
 McLeod, N.
   Coronado
   Here comes Cookie
 Mander, M.
   Morals of Marcus
 Marin, E. L.
   Garden murder case
 Marshall, G.
   In old Kentucky
   Message to Garcia
   Music is magic
   Show them no mercy
 Mayo, A. L.
   Case of the lucky legs
   Petrified forest
 Melford, G.
   East of Java
 Menzies, W. C.
   Things to come
 Merzbach, P.
   Invitation to the waltz
 Milestone, L.
   Anything goes
 Milner, D.
   Fighting coward
 Mintz, C.
   Bon bon parade
   Kannibal kapers
 Moser, F.
   Mayflower
 Murphy, D.
   Don't gamble with love
 Murphy, R.
   Collegiate
 Nattoli, M.
   Tempo massimo
 Neilan, M.
   This is the life
 Neill, R. W.
   Lone wolf returns
 Neumann, K.
   Affair of Susan
 Newfield, S.
   Bulldog courage
   Racing luck
   Timber war
   Trails of the wild
 Newman, E. M.
   Steel and stone
 Nicholls, G., Jr.
   Chatterbox
   Return of Peter Grimm
 Nigh, W.
   Don't get personal
   His night out
 Nugent, E.
   Splendor
 O'Connor, W.
   Pace that kills
 Ophuels, M.
   Liebelei
 Pearson, G.
   Four masked men
 Pembroke, S.
   Oregon trail
 Pierson, C.
   New frontier
   Singing vagabond
 Preobrazhenskaya, O.
   Grain
 Ptushko, A.
   New Gulliver
 Ray, B. B.
   Midnight phantom
 Raymond, J.
   Come out of the pantry
   When knights were bold
 Reinhardt, M.
   Midsummer night's dream
 Reisner, C. F.
   It's in the air
 Roberts, S.
   Lady consents
   Man who broke the bank
   at Monte Carlo
 Rogell, A.
   Escape from Devil's Island
   You may be next
 Rogers, C.
   Bohemian girl
 Rosen, F.
   Calling of Dan Matthews
   Tango
 Rosmer, M.
   Mister Hobo
 Rovensky, J.
   Young love
 Ruben, J. W.
   Riffraff
 Ruggles, W.
   Bride comes home
 Samuels, H.
   Fast bullets
 Sandrich, M.
   Follow the fleet
   Top hat
 Santell, A.
   Feather in her hat
 Santley, J.
   Dancing feet
   Harmony lane
   Her master's voice
   Laughing Irish eyes
   Waterfront lady
 Saville, V.
   First a girl
 Schoedsack, E. B.
   Last days of Pompeii
 Scotto, A. H.
   Hitch hike lady
   $1000 a minute
 Sedgwick, E.
   Virginia judge
 Seiler, L.
   Here comes trouble
   Paddy O'Day
 Seiter, W. A.
   If you could only cook
   In person
 Seitz, G. B.
   Exclusive story
   Kind lady
 Selman, D.
   Dangerous intrigue
   Gallant defender
   Mysterious avenger
 Semells, H.
   Trigger Tom
 Shamroy, F.
   Never too late

DIRECTORS—Continued

Shertzinger, V.
 Music goes 'round
 Sloane, P.
 Here comes the band
 Stahl, J. M.
 Magnificent obsession
 Staub, R.
 Reg'lar kids
 Stein, P.
 Mimi
 Steinhoff, H.
 Making of a king
 Stevens, G.
 Annie Oakley
 Stoffard, J.
 Scandals of Paris
 Stoloff, B.
 To beat the band
 Two in the dark
 Strayer, F.
 Condemned to live
 Murder at Glen Athol
 Society fever
 Sutherland, E.
 Diamond Jim
 Talley, T.
 Filming the feminine headliners
 Winter magic
 Taurog, N.
 Big broadcast of 1936
 Strike me pink
 Taylor, R.
 Ivory-handled gun
 Silver spurs
 Sunset of power
 Throwback
 Terry, P.
 Mayflower
 Thorpe, P.
 Last of the pagans
 Voice of Bugle Ann
 Tinling, J.
 Charlie Chan in Shanghai
 Every Saturday night
 Tryon, G.
 Two in revolt
 Tuttle, F.
 Two for tonight
 Van Beuren, A. J.
 Molly Moo Cow and the Indians
 Van Dyke, W. S.
 I live my life
 Rose Marie
 Varnel, M.
 Dance band
 I give my heart
 Vidor, C.
 His family tree
 Muss 'em up
 Vidor, K.
 So red the rose
 Viertal, B.
 Rhodes, the diamond master
 Von Sternberg, J.
 Crime and punishment
 Vorhaus, B.
 Daredevils of the earth
 Walsh, R.
 Klondike Annie
 Watson, W.
 Seeing Nellie home
 Wechster, L.
 Wings over Ethiopia
 Wellman, W.
 Robin Hood of El Dorado
 Whale, J.
 Remember last night
 Whelan, T.
 Perfect gentleman
 Wilbur, C.
 Rest cure
 Wilcox, H.
 Limelight
 Peg of old Drury
 Wiles, G.
 Charlie Chan's secret
 Williams, L.
 Toll of the desert
 Wood, S.
 Night at the opera
 Whipsaw

Woods, A.
 Spy '77
 Wright, M.
 Cappy Ricks returns
 Wyler, W.
 Gay deception
 These three
 Young, H.
 Woman trap

PLAYS (Adapted)

Ade, G.
 College widow (Freshman love)
 Balfe, M. W.
 Bohemian girl
 Bataille, H.
 La Marcia nuziale (Wedding March
 Belasco, D.
 Return of Peter Grimm
 Benoit, P.
 Nuits de Muscovie (Moscow Nights)
 Bernstein, H.
 Le Bonheur
 Bolton, G.
 Dark angel
 Carb, D.
 Chatterbox
 Carpenter, E. C.
 Perfect gentleman
 Chancellor, J.
 King of the damned
 Chodorov, E.
 Kind lady
 Cohan, G. M.
 Home towners (Broadway
 playboy
 Seven keys to Baldpate
 Song and dance man
 Conners, B.
 Applesauce (Brides are like that)
 Crouse, R., and Lindsay, H.
 Anything goes
 Dazey, C. T.
 In old Kentucky
 Farago, A., and Laszlo, A.
 The girl who dared (Top hat)
 Gleason, J., and Taber, R.
 Is zat so? (Two-flsted)
 Hammerstein, O., and
 Harbach, O.
 Rose Marie
 Hay, I., and Mason, A. E. W.
 Present from Margate (Widow from Monte Carlo)
 Hellman, L.
 Children's hour (These three)
 Isham, F. S., and Marcin, M.
 Three live ghosts
 Jackson, F.
 Bishop 'misbehaves
 Jerome, J. K.
 Passing of the third floor back
 Kavanaugh, K.
 Every Saturday night
 Knepler, P., and Welleminski,
 J. M.
 DuBarry (I give my heart)
 Kummer, C.
 Her master's voice
 Lief, J. O., and Lief, M.
 Two for tonight
 Lindsay, H., and Robinson,
 B.
 Your Uncle Dudley
 Locke, W. J.
 Morals of Marcus
 Marlowe, C.
 When knights were bold
 Miller, A. D., and Milton, R.
 Charm school (Collegiate)
 O'Neil, G., and Tothoroh, D.
 Mother lode (Yellow dust)

O'Neill, E.
 Ah, wilderness
 Osborne, H.
 Shore leave (Follow the fleet)
 Parker, L. B.
 Way Down East
 Peple, E.
 Littlest rebel
 Raphael, J. N.
 Peter Ibbetson
 Reed, M.
 Petticoat fever
 Root, L., and Clark, H.
 Milky way
 Schnitzler, A.
 Liebele
 Shakespeare, W.
 Midsummer night's dream
 Sherwood, R. E.
 Petrified forest
 Szekely, H., and Stemmle, R.
 A.
 Pearl necklace (Desire)
 Thomas, A. E.
 Lord Richard in the pantry
 (Come out of the pantry)
 Tully, R. W., and Belasco,
 D.
 Rose of the Rancho
 Unger, G., and Lasky, J., Jr.
 Private beach (Music is magic)
 Wead, F.
 Ceiling zero

PUPPETEERS

Kransy, F.
 New Gulliver

SHORT STORIES (Adapted)

Brennan, F. H.
 Miss Pacific Fleet
 Curwood, J. O.
 Caryl of the mountains
 (Trails of the wild)
 Day, L.
 Living up to Lizzie (Personal maid's secret)
 Dodge, H. I.
 Skinner's dress suit (His night out)
 Freeman, E.
 $1000 a minute
 Goodloe, A. C.
 Claustrophobia (I live my life)
 Hamilton, C.
 The prodigal father (Perfect gentleman)
 Holding, E. S.
 Bride comes home
 Keown, Eric
 Glourie Castle (Ghost goes west)
 Kyne, P. B.
 All for love (Valley of wanted men)
 Last assignment (Fighting coward)
 McCardell, R. L.
 High hats (Ladies love hats)
 McCulley, J.
 King of Cactusville (Outlaw deputy)
 Poe, E. A.
 Premature burial (Crime of Dr Crespi)
 Rinehart, M. R.
 Mr Cohen takes a walk
 Runyon, D.
 Gentlemen, the King (Professional soldier)
 Walpole, H.
 Silver mask (Kind lady)
 Walsh, T.
 Husk (We're only human)

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(Continued from inside front cover)

Page	Page	Page
Mutiny On the Bounty ..... 132	Robin Hood of El Dorado ..... 164	This Is the Life ..... 197
My Marriage ..... 134	Rose Marie ..... 165	Three Godfathers ..... 198
Mysterious Avenger ..... 134	Rose of the Rancho ..... 167	Three Kids and a Queen ... 199
Mystery of the Marie Celeste 134	Sacred City of the Mayan	Three Live Ghosts ..... 199
Navy Wife ..... 135	Indians ..... 169	Three Musketeers ..... 200
Nevada ..... 135	Sagebrush Troubadour ..... 169	Three Orphan Kittens ..... 200
Never Too Late ..... 136	Scandals of Paris ..... 169	Three Women ..... 201
New Frontier ..... 136	Scrooge ..... 169	Throwback ..... 201
New Gulliver ..... 136	Second Bureau ..... 171	Thunder in the Night ..... 201
Next Time We Love ..... 137	Seeing Nellie Home ..... 171	Thunder Mountain ..... 202
Night at the Opera ..... 138	Seven Keys to Baldpate ... 172	Timber War ..... 202
Night Cargo ..... 140	Shadows of the Orient ..... 172	Timothy's Quest ..... 202
No Man's Range ..... 140	She Couldn't Take It ..... 173	To Beat the Band ..... 203
Old Curiosity Shop ..... 140	She Married Her Boss ..... 173	Toll of the Desert ..... 204
Old Spanish Custom ..... 141	She Shall Have Music ..... 173	Too Many Parents ..... 204
On Ice ..... 141	Ship Cafe ..... 174	Too Tough to Kill ..... 204
$1000 a Minute ..... 141	Shipmates Forever ..... 174	Top Hat ..... 204
One-Way Ticket ..... 142	Show Them No Mercy ..... 175	Tough Guy ..... 205
Oregon Trail ..... 142	Silly Billies ..... 176	Trail of the Lonesome Pine . 206
O'Shaughnessy's Boy ..... 143	Silver Spurs ..... 176	Trails of the Wild ..... 207
Outlaw Deputy ..... 143	Singing Kid ..... 177	Transatlantic Tunnel ..... 208
Pace That Kills ..... 143	Singing Vagabond ..... 177	Treachery Rides the Range . 208
Paddy O'Day ..... 143	Skull and Crown ..... 177	Trigger Tom ..... 208
Passing of the Third Floor	Skybound ..... 178	Tumbling Tumbleweeds .... 209
Back ..... 144	Snowed Under ..... 178	Two Fisted ..... 209
Pasteur ..... 144	So Red the Rose ..... 178	Two for Tonight ..... 209
Pay-Off ..... 145	Soak the Rich ..... 179	Two Hearts in Harmony .... 209
Peasants ..... 145	Society Fever ..... 181	Two in Revolt ..... 210
Peg of Old Drury ..... 146	Song and Dance Man ..... 181	Two in the Dark ..... 210
Perfect Gentleman ..... 146	Song of the Saddle ..... 182	Two Sinners ..... 211
Personal Maid's Secret ..... 147	Spanish Cape Mystery ..... 183	Valley of Wanted Men .... 211
Peter Ibbetson ..... 147	Special Agent ..... 183	Virginia Judge ..... 211
Petrified Forest ..... 148	Splendor ..... 183	Voice of Bugle Ann ..... 212
Petticoat Fever ..... 150	Spy 77 ..... 184	Walking Dead ..... 213
Pirate Party on Catalina	Stars Over Broadway ..... 185	Wanderer of the Wasteland 214
Island ..... 150	Steamboat Round the Bend . 185	Waterfront Lady ..... 215
Powdersmoke Range ..... 151	Steel and Stone ..... 186	Way Down East ..... 215
Preview Murder Mystery .. 151	Storm Over the Andes ..... 186	Wedding March ..... 216
Prisoner of Shark Island ... 152	Stormy ..... 186	We're Only Human ..... 216
Private Life of Louis XIV .. 154	Story of Louis Pasteur ..... 187	Western Courage ..... 217
Professional Soldier ..... 155	Streamline Express ..... 189	When Knights Were Bold .. 217
Public Menace ..... 156	Strike Me Pink ..... 189	Whipsaw ..... 217
Racing Luck ..... 156	Suicide Squad ..... 190	Whispering Smith Speaks .. 218
Rainmakers ..... 157	Sunset of Power ..... 190	Widow From Monte Carlo . 219
Red Salute ..... 157	Superspeed ..... 191	Wife Versus Secretary .... 220
Reg'lar Kids ..... 157	Sweet Surrender ..... 191	Wild Mustang ..... 221
Remember Last Night ..... 158	Swiftly ..... 191	Wild Wings ..... 221
Rendezvous ..... 158	Sylvia Scarlett ..... 191	Wings Over Ethiopia ..... 222
Rest Cure ..... 159	Tale of Two Cities ..... 192	Winter Magic ..... 222
Return of Jimmy Valentine . 159	Tango ..... 194	Wolves of the Underworld . 222
Return of Peter Grimm ..... 160	Tempo Massimo ..... 194	Woman Trap ..... 222
Rhodes, the Diamond Master 160	Thanks a Million ..... 195	Yellow Dust ..... 223
Riddle Ranch ..... 162	These Three ..... 195	You May Be Next ..... 224
Riffraff ..... 162	Things to Come ..... 196	Young Forest ..... 224
Ring Around the Moon ..... 163	Thirty-Nine Steps ..... 197	Young Love ..... 225
Road Gang ..... 163		Your Uncle Dudley ..... 225

How to Use the Motion Picture Review Digest

Sample Entry

NIGHT AT THE OPERA. N 15 '35 96min MGM

Players: Groucho Marx. Chico Marx. Harpo Marx. Kitty Carlisle

Director: Sam Wood

"A musical slapstick farce in which the Marx Bros succeed in placing their musical proteges in a Metropolitan Opera performance." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Mad clowning, clever dancing, pleasing vocal and instrumental music are entertaining features of this picture which will please the Marx Bros' fans. Family and junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
O 30 '35

"Very good for type. Family."

+ Jt Estimates N 1 '35

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A bolsterous, rowdy, and thoroughly delightful piece. A Night at the Opera hits a swift pace from the opening and never slackens under the barrage of puns, songs, dancing, and insane antics that come tumbling on top of each other. Following the same general lines of their earlier hits, the Marx Brothers' new film is imbued with an undeniable freshness and enthusiasm that sweeps crazily, but none the less triumphantly, through the whole affair." Beverly Hills

+ + Liberty p46 N 30 '35

Trade Paper Reviews

"[This] probably will go down in history as the best the brothers have contributed to the screen."

+ + Film Curb p14 N 1 '35

"Family farce."

N Y Exhibitor p30 N 10 '35

Starting at the beginning, the title of this picture is A Night at the Opera. It was released on November 15, 1935. It is 96 minutes in length. The producing company is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. (For key to abbreviations of producers and quoted sources, see first two pages.)

The list of principal players and the director will require no explanation.

Next comes a brief note describing the picture, its nature, and plot. Sometimes these notes are written by our staff. In other cases they are quoted from a published source. In such cases the source is given.

Following the descriptive note, the excerpts from reviews begin. Following each review the source is given, with date of issue and number of the page on which the review appears.

It will be noticed that plus and minus signs sometimes precede the sources. These indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the review as a whole (not just of the quoted excerpt). The meaning of the various combinations of these signs is as follows:

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

The signs are omitted when a review merely reports on a film without expressing a definite critical opinion.

In interpreting these signs, it will be well to remember that their precise significance will vary somewhat according to the source. In general there are three types of sources represented in the MOTION PICTURE REVIEW DIGEST: (1) audience suitability ratings by special reviewing organizations (women's clubs, religious groups, and the like); (2) general newspapers and magazines; and (3) trade papers. The purpose of the audience suitability ratings by the special reviewing organizations is chiefly to pass on questions of morality and propriety and to report on suitability for children of various ages. The purpose of the reviews in general magazines and newspapers is to inform the adult patron of artistic and entertainment qualities. The purpose of the trade paper reviews is to inform the exhibitor of probable commercial value.

MOTION PICTURE REVIEW DIGEST

Vol. 1

June 29, 1936

No. 28

(Superseding Nos. 16-27)

Published by THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY, 950-972 University Avenue, New York City

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(arranged alphabetically)

	Page		Page
Abdul the Damned .....	1	Criminal Within .....	27
Absolute Quiet .....	1	Crimson Circle .....	28
Alpine Love .....	2	Dancing Feet .....	28
Amateur Gentleman .....	3	Dancing Pirate .....	28
And So They Were Married .....	4	Desert Gold .....	30
And Sudden Death .....	5	Desert Justice .....	30
Annette in Paradise .....	5	Desert Phantom .....	30
Anthony Adverse .....	5	Desire .....	31
August Week-End .....	6	Devil's Squadron .....	32
Below the Deadline .....	6	Don Bosco .....	33
Big Brown Eyes .....	7	Don't Gamble With Love .....	33
Big Noise .....	8	Don't Get Personal .....	33
Border Caballero .....	9	Doughnuts and Society .....	34
Border Flight .....	9	Dracula's Daughter .....	34
Born for Glory .....	10	Dragnet .....	35
Born to Fight .....	10	Dubrovsky .....	36
Boulder Dam .....	10	Early to Bed .....	36
Brides Are Like That .....	11	Educating Father .....	37
Bridge of Sighs .....	12	Everybody's Old Man .....	37
Brilliant Marriage .....	13	Ex-Mrs. Bradford .....	39
Broken Blossoms .....	13	Farmer in the Dell .....	40
Bullets or Ballots .....	13	Fatal Lady .....	41
Bunker Bean .....	15	Federal Agent .....	42
La Canzone del Sole .....	15	Feud of the West .....	42
Captain Calamity .....	16	First Baby .....	42
Captain January .....	16	Florida Special .....	43
Cardinal .....	18	Follow the Fleet .....	44
Caryl of the Mountains .....	18	For the Service .....	45
Case Against Mrs. Ames .....	18	Forget Me Not .....	45
Case of the Velvet Claws .....	20	Forgotten Faces .....	45
Cattle Thief .....	20	Forgotten Women .....	46
Champagne Charlie .....	21	Frankie and Johnnie .....	47
Charlie Chan at the Circus .....	21	Frasquita .....	47
Children of the Revolution .....	22	Fury .....	47
Cloistered .....	23	Gentle Julia .....	49
Colleen .....	24	Girl from Mandalay .....	50
Comin' 'Round the Mountain .....	24	Girl of the Ozarks .....	50
Counterfeit .....	24	Give Us This Night .....	51
Country Beyond .....	25	Golden Arrow .....	52
Country Doctor .....	26	Great Ziegfeld .....	53
Cowboy and the Kid .....	27	Green Pastures .....	56
Crime of Dr. Forbes .....	27	Half Angel .....	57
Crime Patrol .....	27	Hard Luck Dame .....	58

(Continued on inside front cover)

Pictures Reviewed in This Issue

(Continued from front cover)

	Page		Page
Harvester .....	58	Princess Comes Across .....	108
Hearts Divided .....	59	Prisoner of Shark Island .....	109
Hearts in Bondage .....	60	Private Number .....	110
Hell Ship Morgan .....	61	Raggen, Det Aer Jag Det .....	111
L'Homme des Folies Bergere .....	61	Il Re Burlone .....	111
Hot Money .....	61	Red Wagon .....	112
House of a Thousand Candles .....	62	Revolt of the Zombies .....	112
How to Behave .....	62	Rhodes, the Diamond Master .....	113
Human Cargo .....	63	Rio Grande Romance .....	114
I Married a Doctor .....	64	Road to Glory .....	114
I Stand Condemned .....	65	Roamin' Wild .....	114
It's Love Again .....	65	Roaming Lady .....	115
Jack of All Trades .....	66	Robin Hood of El Dorado .....	115
Jailbreak .....	67	Rogue of the Range .....	116
Just Speeding .....	68	Royal Waltz .....	116
Kelly the Second .....	68	Scotland Yard Mystery .....	117
King of the Damned .....	68	Secret Agent .....	117
King of the Pecos .....	69	Secret Patrol .....	118
King Steps Out .....	69	Seven Brave Men .....	119
Lady Jane Grey .....	70	Showboat .....	119
Last Journey .....	71	Silly Billies .....	121
Last Outlaw .....	72	Singing Cowboy .....	121
Laughing Irish Eyes .....	73	Singing Kid .....	122
Law in Her Hands .....	73	Sins of Man .....	123
Leathernecks Have Landed .....	74	Skaergaards-Flirt .....	124
Let's Sing Again .....	75	Sky Parade .....	125
Lightnin' Bill Carson .....	76	Small Town Girl .....	126
Little Lord Fauntleroy .....	77	Snowed Under .....	127
Little Miss Nobody .....	78	Song of China .....	128
Little Red Schoolhouse .....	79	Song of the Saddle .....	129
Little Stranger .....	79	Song of the Trail .....	129
Living Dangerously .....	80	Sons O' Guns .....	129
Lorenzino de Medici .....	80	Soviet News .....	131
Love Before Breakfast .....	81	Special Investigator .....	131
Love Begins at Twenty .....	81	Speed .....	132
Luck of the Irish .....	82	Speed Reporter .....	133
Lucky Terror .....	82	Sundown Saunders .....	133
Message to Garcia .....	83	Sutter's Gold .....	133
Milizia Territoriale .....	84	These Three .....	135
Milky Way .....	84	Things to Come .....	136
Millionaire Kid .....	86	Thirteen Hours by Air .....	138
Mine With the Iron Door .....	86	Three Little Wolves .....	139
Mr. Deeds Goes to Town .....	87	Three of a Kind .....	140
Moonlight Murder .....	89	Three on the Trail .....	140
Moon's Our Home .....	90	Three Wise Guys .....	141
Moscow Moods .....	92	Thrills With Daredevils .....	142
Murder by an Aristocrat .....	92	Till We Meet Again .....	142
Murder on a Bridle Path .....	93	Times Square Playboy .....	143
Mysterious Avenger .....	94	Too Many Parents .....	144
Mystic Mountain .....	94	Too Much Beef .....	145
Navy Born .....	95	Trail of the Lonesome Pine .....	145
Neighborhood House .....	95	Treachery Rides the Range .....	146
Nobody's Fool .....	96	Trouble for Two .....	146
O'Malley of the Mounted .....	97	Two Against the World .....	148
Once in a Million .....	97	Two in Revolt .....	148
One Rainy Afternoon .....	98	Under Two Flags .....	149
Ourselves Alone .....	99	Unguarded Hour .....	151
Outlaws of the Range .....	100	We Are From Kronstadt .....	153
Palm Springs .....	100	Wellington Pike Goes West .....	154
Panic on the Air .....	101	White Angel .....	154
Parole .....	101	Wildcat Saunders .....	154
Passing of the Third Floor Back .....	102	Winged Champions .....	155
Peg of Old Drury .....	103	Witness Chair .....	155
Pension Mimosas .....	103	Woman Alone .....	156
Petticoat Fever .....	104	Women Are Trouble .....	156
Poor Little Rich Girl .....	105	Yellow Cargo .....	156
Poppy .....	106	Yellow Dust .....	157
Preview Murder Mystery .....	107	You May Be Next .....	157
Pride of the Marines .....	108

June 29, 1936. Vol. 1. No. 28

Motion Picture Review Digest, published weekly by The H. W. Wilson Company, 950-972 University Ave., New York, N.Y. Entered as second-class matter March 24, 1936, at the post office at New York, N.Y., under the Act of March 3, 1879. Subscription price, one year, $4.00. Subscriptions are accepted only from those who have subscribed for the cooperative indexing service. Full information will be supplied on request.

Printed in U. S. A.

Motion Picture Review Digest

Vol. 1

JUNE 29, 1936

No. 28

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY

950-972 University Avenue, New York City

Terms of Subscription and Advertising. Full information on request.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

Audience Evaluation Publications

Am Legion Auxiliary—American Legion Auxiliary. See Fox W Coast Bul
Bks & Films—Books and Films. $1. Mrs Ina Roberts, 11118 Clifton Blvd, Cleveland, Ohio
Bul on Current Films—Bulletin on Current Films. National Council for Prevention of War, 532 17th St. N. W., Washington, D. C.
Calif Cong of Par & Teachers—California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Christian Century—Christian Century. $4. Christian Century Press, 440 S Dearborn St, Chicago

DAR—National Society Daughters of the American Revolution

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Endorsed Motion Pict—Endorsed Motion Pictures. Publication discontinued

Fox W Coast Bul—Fox West Coast Theatres Corporation Bulletin. 1837 S Vermont Av, Los Angeles

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Am Legion Auxiliary; Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; E Coast Preview Committee; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Int Fed of Cath Alumnae; Nat Bd of R; Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)—General Federation of Women's Clubs (West Coast). Bulletin. Mrs Wm A. Burk, 359 N Bronson Av, Los Angeles

See also Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Int Fed of Cath Alumnae—International Federation of Catholic Alumnae

See Fox W Coast Bul; Nat Legion of Decency

Jt Estimates—Joint Estimates. Bulletin. General Federation of Women's Clubs (West Coast). Mrs Wm A. Burk, 359 N Bronson Av, Los Angeles

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Mo Film Bul—Monthly Film Bulletin. Issued to members only. British Film Inst, 4 Great Russell St, London W C 1

Motion Pict & Family—Motion Picture and the Family. Free. Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc, 28 W 44th St, New York

Motion Pict Guide—Motion Picture Guide. 50c. Mrs John Waldo, Am Assn of Univ Women Motion Pict Com, 330 E 47th St, Indianapolis

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Film Estimate Service; Nat Soc of New England Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

Motion Pict R—Motion Picture Reviews. $1. Motion Picture Reviews, Women's University Club, 943 S Hoover St, Los Angeles

Nat Bd of R M—National Board of Review Magazine. $2. National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, 70 Fifth Av, New York

See also Fox W Coast Bul; Wkly Guide

Nat Council of Jewish Women—Los Angeles Section, National Council of Jewish Women. Bulletin. Mrs Florine Wolfstein, Chairman, 617 S Lucerne Blvd, Los Angeles

See also Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs—National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs (Los Angeles District)

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Sel Motion Pict

Nat Film Estimate Service—National Film Estimate Service

See Motion Pict Guide

Nat Legion of Decency—National Legion of Decency. $2. National Legion of Decency, 485 Madison Av, New York

Nat Soc of New England Women—National Society of New England Women

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Sel Motion Pict

N Y Archdiocese Motion Pict Guide—New York Archdiocese Motion Picture Guide

See Nat Legion of Decency

Par M—Parents' Magazine. $2. The Parents' Institute, Inc, 9 E 40th St, New York

Scholastic—Scholastic. $1.50. Scholastic, Chamber of Commerce Bldg, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sel Motion Pict—Selected Motion Pictures. West & East Coast Preview Committees.

Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc, Will H. Hays, Pres, 28 W 44th St, New York

(This publication contains evaluations by the following organizations: Calif Cong of Par & Teachers; DAR; Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast); Nat Council of Jewish Women; Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs; Nat Soc of New England Women; S Calif Council of Fed Church Women; Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles)

S Calif Council of Fed Church Women—Southern California Council of Federated Church Women

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Sel Motion Pict

Wkly Guide—Weekly Guide to Selected Pictures. $2.50 yearly, with Magazine, $1. National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, 70 Fifth Av, New York

Women's Univ Club, Los Angeles—Women's University Club, Los Angeles

See Fox W Coast Bul; Jt Estimates; Motion Pict Guide; Motion Pict R; Sel Motion Pict

Newspapers and Magazines

Boston Transcript—Boston Evening Transcript. $5.50. (Wednesday and Saturday). Boston Transcript Co, Inc, Pub, 324 Washington St, Boston

Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. $2. J. M. Dent & Sons, Ltd, Aldine House, 224 Bloor St. W Toronto

Canadian M—Canadian Magazine. $1.50. Hugh C. MacLean Pub, Ltd, 347 Adelaide St. W Toronto

Christian Science Monitor—Christian Science Monitor. $9. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston
 Commonweal—Commonweal. $5. Calvert Publishing Corp, Grand Central Terminal, New York
 Hollywood Spec—Hollywood Spectator. $5. Hollywood Spectator, Inc, 6513 Hollywood Blvd, Hollywood
 Liberty—Liberty. $2. Liberty Publishing Corp, 1926 Broadway, Lincoln Sq, New York
 Life—Life. $1.50. Life Magazine, Inc, 60 E 42d St, New York
 Lit Digest—Literary Digest. $4. Funk and Wagnalls Co, 354-360 Fourth Av, New York
 Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. (Daily). Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester, 2. Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York
 Nation—Nation. $5. Nation Fund Inc, 20 Vesey St, New York
 New Repub—New Republic. $5. New Republic, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York
 New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 30s. New Statesman and Nation, 10 Great Turnstile, London, W C 1
 New Theatre—New Theatre. $1.50. New Theatre Magazine, 156 W 44th St, New York
 N Y Herald Tribune—New York Herald Tribune. $15. N Y Tribune, Inc, 230 W 41st St, New York
 N Y Sun—New York Sun. $10. Sun Printing and Publishing Assn, 280 Broadway, New York
 N Y Times—New York Times. $15. New York Times Co, 229 W 43d St, New York
 N Y World-Telegram—New York World-Telegram. $13. New York World-Telegram Pub, 125 Barclay St, New York
 New Yorker—New Yorker. $5. F-R Publishing Corp, 25 W 45th St, New York
 News-Wk—News-Week. $4. Rockefeller Center, 1270 6th Av, New York
 Sat R—Saturday Review. 30s. Chawton Pub Co, Ltd, 18-20 York Bldgs, Adelphi, London

Script—Script. $3. Wagner Publishing Co, 9492 Dayton Way, Beverly Hills, Calif.
 Sight & Sound—Sight and Sound. (Quarterly) 2s 6d. British Film Inst, 4 Great Russell St, London, W C 1
 Spec—Spectator. 30s. The Spectator, Ltd, 99 Gower St, London, W C 1
 Stage—Stage. $3. Stage Publishing Co, Inc, 50 E 42d St, New York
 Theatre Arts Mo—Theatre Arts Monthly. $5. Theatre Arts, Inc, 119 W 57th St, New York
 Time—Time. $5. Time, Inc, 350 E 22d St, Chicago

Trade Papers

Box Office—Box Office (Eastern sectional ed) $3. Associated Publications, Inc, 4704 E 9th St, Kansas City, Mo.
 Canadian Moving Pict Digest—Canadian Moving Picture Digest. $5. Canadian Moving Picture Digest Co, Ltd, 259 Spadina Av, Toronto, 2
 Film Curb—Film Curb. $3. Film Curb, Inc, 1270 6th Av, RKO Bldg, Radio City, Rockefeller Center, New York
 Film Daily—Film Daily. $10. The Film Daily, 1650 Broadway, New York
 Hollywood Reporter—Hollywood Reporter. $10. Wilkerson Daily Corp, Ltd, 6717 Sunset Blvd, Hollywood, Calif.
 Motion Pict Daily—Motion Picture Daily. $6. Motion Picture Daily, Inc, 1790 Broadway, New York
 Motion Pict Herald—Motion Picture Herald. $3. Quigley Publishing Co, Inc, 1790 Broadway, New York
 N Y Exhibitor—New York State Exhibitor. $2. Jay Emanuel Publications, Inc, 219 N Broad St, Philadelphia
 Phila Exhibitor—Philadelphia Exhibitor. $2. Jay Emanuel Publications, Inc, 219 N Broad St, Philadelphia
 Variety—Variety. $6. Variety, Inc, 154 W 46th St, New York
 Variety (Hollywood)—Variety. $10. (Daily). Daily Variety, Ltd, 1708-10 N Vine St, Hollywood, Calif.

Explanations

After the title of the film, the date of release is given, next the running time in minutes and then the producer.

Under Players, only leading members of the cast are listed.

For system of evaluating favor or disfavor of the reviews, see note at bottom of pages. The evaluating symbols indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of each review as a whole, not just of the quoted excerpt.

In the reference to the magazine, the number of the page is first given, followed by the month, day and year.

An index will be found at the end of the quarterly cumulated numbers which includes actors, actresses and directors for the productions indexed; also books, plays and short stories from which movies have been adapted.

Only those foreign films which are likely to be generally shown are listed.

In evaluating films, the women's organizations use "mature" or "adult" when films are unsuitable for children; "family" when suitable for all the members of a family; "young people" when suitable for adolescents from 15 to 20 years of age; "children" for those under 15.

Abbreviations of producers' names and their addresses will be found in the Directory of Producers at the end of the number.

(s) This symbol denotes a short feature.

When the date of release is omitted, it has not been determined by the producer.

Key to Abbreviations

a	adults	fed	federal	O	October
Ag	August	gen	general	p	page
Am	American	inc	incorporated	par	parent -s
Ap	April	inst	institute -ion	pict	picture
assn	association	int	international	pub	publisher -ication
av	avenue	Ja	January	r	review -s
bd	board	Je	June	S	September, south
bks	books	Jl	July		-ern
blvd	boulevard	jt	joint	Sat	Saturday
bul	bulletin	Lit	Literary	sel	selected
c	children (under 15 years)	ltd	limited	soc	society
Cath	Catholic	m	magazine	Spec	Spectator
co	company	min	minutes	sq	square
com	committee	mo	monthly	st	street
Cong	Congress	Mr	March	univ	university
D	December	My	May	vol	volume
e	east	N	November	w	west
ed	edition	nat	national	wkly	weekly
F	February	no	number	y	young people (15-20 years)
		NY	New York

Motion Picture Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Motion Pictures

June 29, 1936

ABDUL THE DAMNED. My 10 '36 79min
Alliance-Capital

Players: Nils Asther, Adrienne Ames, Fritz Kortner, John Stuart

Director: Karl Grune

Filmed in England. "[It is the tale of] an historical character, the Turkish tyrant Abdul Hamid II who laid waste his land, tortured his subjects and bloodied Armenia until his people, unable longer to withstand their suffering, revolted, ending his wretched reign in 1908." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"Too slowly paced, in an endeavor to show mental changes, the story is halting and somewhat tedious in its lavishness. . . Mr. Kortner's portrayal of the inhumanly cruel, fear-ridden monarch, justly called 'The Damned,' is an excellent piece of work. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A melodrama with cruel incidents that confine it to adult spectators who may or may not care for the silly romantic element that is worked into the story of the downfall of a Near East despot." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 6 '36

"Where the scenarists have been ill-advised is in embellishing their tale of bloody despotism and smouldering revolt with a fantastic romance. . . The chief distinction of the work is the adroit and balanced performance of Fritz Kortner as the sultan who massacred the Armenians, suppressed all civil liberties, lived in constant fear of assassination and brought pre-war Turkey to the very verge of dismemberment and destruction. . . The scenes of actual insurrection and reaction have been managed with vigor. . . When the film lapses into its unfortunate interludes of love interest, however, it has more than a trace of the bombastic." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p16 My 12 '36

"Although the film achieves a few moments of dramatic interest—chiefly through the performance of the Continental Fritz Kortner—it is in the main a tedious and uninspired biography, scarred by hypodermic injections of stale melodrama. . . Having no dramatic honesty, the film moves with the ridiculous solemnity of a processional at which mischievous small boys are tossing firecrackers. Mr. Kortner is its only asset." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p16 My 11 '36

"It makes vivid in a fast plot, courageous treatment and capable artistry one of history's most sanguinary chapters. . . It is a curious film. Here is a story slapping incident upon incident. Yet one's interest is largely in the figures rather than in the yarn itself. . . It is an interesting and a worthy job." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World-Telegram p15 My 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As a representation of Abdul Hamid, the 2d's oppressive rule it is powerful. Where it falters is the film's inability to strike a note of popular appeal or an even keel as interest sustainer. It is hampered too by being lengthy, and looking more so because of ponderous pace. 'Abdul' may get a modest share of average grosses in houses where they crave excitement, executions, killings and heavy plottings."

+ — Variety p14 My 13 '36

ABSOLUTE QUIET. Ap 24 '36 65min MGM

Players: Lionel Atwill, Irene Hervey, Raymond Walburn, Stuart Erwin, Bernadine Hayes

Director: George B. Seitz

Based on a short story of the same title by George F. Worts. "The story brings a large miscellany of ill-assorted people to an isolated ranch house and there they work out their varied destinies to the accompaniment of several violent deaths." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The bandits' death scene perverts sympathy to the crooks, making this picture for adults only." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The result is [a] melodramatic hodge-podge. Mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A cutting satire on small-time viciousness in crime and government. Adults. Good." DAR

"Family-mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The film is cynical in tone, sentimentalizes criminals and offers nothing constructive. Adults—with strong nerves." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Somewhat tense and unrestrained. Mediocre. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 25 '36

"Adults."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 15 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

ABSOLUTE QUIET—Continued

"The story moves to its logical conclusion, which is not evaded because of its unpleasantness. The acting is uniformly good, and the film is well directed especially in the matter of details which make the story entirely credible. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p85 My '36

"Excitement at any price' could well be the title of this mixture of farce, melodrama and tragedy. The 'price' is a complete abandonment of coherent plot and plausibility of character. In lieu of these the story provides a succession of exciting scenes accompanied by the inevitable patter of the underworld. . . . One would object to the cheap characterization of the Governor, who is both a fool and a villain, were the picture of sufficient importance to possess any' deleterious influence. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: unsuitable."

— Motion Pict R My '36

"This melodrama suffers, to the point of mediocrity, from bad cutting and poor continuity, beginning with fast tempo and clever repartee and falling very flat after its climax. Fair for family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 15 '36

"Unpleasant characters and remarks. Adults."

— Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

"A cross-section of life not altogether convincing. Adults."

+ — Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Absolute confusion is a more appropriate description of the results accruing from this mass of incoherencies. The inability of the producers to determine whether they should [make] a crime mystery melodrama or a comedy evidently influenced them to attempt to effect a combination of both." J. P. Cunningham

— Commonweal p20 My 1 '36

"For the fair amount of entertainment which 'Absolute Quiet' gave me, I thank George B. Seitz, director. . . . Had George F. Worts' story idea, which has good points, been constructed well, this review would have been a good deal more complimentary." Allan Hersholt

+ — Hollywood Spec p33 Ap 11 '36

"Staffed with competent screen players and edited with only the most ribald awareness of the social satire inherent in its situations, the picture moves along at a rapid pace to a dramatically as well as a scenically foggy conclusion. . . . Bernadene Hayes, as the tough 'moll' who dominates the weak gunman and is herself subtly dominated by the executive, Mr. Atwill, shows promise of becoming a good secondary investment for some producer of underworld opera. We strongly recommend her." B. R. C.

N Y Times p11 My 2 '36

"Although nothing to boast about, the film has moments of genuine thrills and action and manages to hold the interest of the observer from beginning to end." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p4 My 2 '36

"Unfortunately, the screen play and the cutting job are as confused as your Aunt Sophia after a single nip of sherry and what might have been a titillating film isn't very much of anything." Herb Stern

— Script p10 My 16 '36

"'Absolute Quiet' consists of half a dozen well-worn melodramas tossed together, given a quick scramble, and dished up for the hungry half of double bills."

Time p28 My 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An inconsistently bizarre story, which direction fails to bolster, definitely relegates this to the lower brackets. A capable cast strives valiantly, but without success, to overcome the many unacceptably grotesque situations with which the script abounds. Family."

— + Box Office p23 Ap 18 '36

"There's plenty of excitement in the melodrama. . . . Incidentally there are a good number of laughs. Unfortunately there is no real 'name' in the cast for a draw but if you get them in they'll like it."

Film Curb p9 Ap 11 '36

"Even though this show is a Metro program number, it is mighty good entertainment for those who want something lively. For a Grand Hotel-like affair which is loaded with talk, it is surprising what a great amount of action and suspense has been injected."

+ Film Daily p13 Ap 6 '36

"A rather lunatic comedy-melodrama that carries the Grand Hotel formula close to the point of absurdity. It seems to have been written more as a stunt than as a serious attempt at dramatic entertainment and, in spite of several individual character portrayals of lively interest, it will have hard sledding at the box office and cannot be counted on to give more than dual support."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 2 '36

"It seems that the producers, not being able to decide whether to make this a murder melodrama or a comedy, tried to make it both, and succeeded in making it neither. The audience, however, got quite a number of laughs."

— + Motion Pict Daily p2 Ap 3 '36

"This can be considered a crime mystery melodrama or a comedy. Both elements are mixed in such helter skelter fashion that it's up to the man who plays it to determine how to tab it. . . . Essentially a program picture, the picture really does not call for any kind of campaign."

Motion Pict Herald p57 Ap 11 '36

"Handicapped because the marquee won't have names to sell, 'Absolute Quiet' is program that probably will be relegated to double features, etc. In its own division, it emerges as a nice job, but inasmuch as the intent was only program that is probably all it will be."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p42 Ap 25 '36

"Several drawbacks cumulatively sap 'Absolute Quiet' of a real display of strength and nudge it toward the dual class. There is merit to the production from many angles, but it can't clear its own hurdles, one being a lack of marquee punch. Another is the nondescript title. Third is the odd psychological cross-graining of the plot in which sadism and pure hokem race it out to a dead heat."

— + Variety p19 My 6 '36

"Class B picture that would have hit A rating had a couple of draw names been in the cast, 'Absolute Quiet' is entertainment for any man's theatre. . . . Harry Clork has written a smart screen play with dialog that is packed with laughs. The George Worts original story is refreshing. Cast troupes the yarn to the limit without a weak performance in the lineup."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 2 '36

ALPINE LOVE. Je 7 '36 92min Nuova Mondo-La Capitini

Players: Camillo Pilotto, Nelly Corradi, Cesco Basseggio, Isa Pola

Director: Marco Etter

Italian dialogue film with English sub-titles. Based on the war diary of Captain Paolo Monelli. "Briefly, the story has to do with the strategic retreat of the Alpine troops after the enemy has broken through the lines at Caporette and their strenuous defense of Feltre and Valdebbia. As a result of their heroism the great body of Italian troops was later able to present a formidable resistance at the Piave." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The piece, while sometimes paced too slowly, is really thrilling in its detailed account of the strange warfare between the Italians and Austrians. . . The plot is of little consequence, but the natural scenic beauty and the expert shots of war operations make it a picture worth seeing." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 Je 8 '36

"Almost plotless, dealing with events rather than characters, the film is more interesting than stirring. . . The incidents are probably authentic; the setting is certainly real, and quite as certainly impressive." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p28 Je 9 '36

"Unfortunately for 'Alpine Love' . . . it has been preceded by similar productions in English, German, French and Russian. Consequently, although the scenes of village life and desperate combat in the mountains that formed an important sector of the Austro-Italian front are excellently done, the spectator's interest is likely to lag long before the final triumph of the Italian forces." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p22 Je 8 '36

"The film has been admirably produced. To be sure, it is somewhat pedestrian in its movement, but on the whole it is so well acted and it has been managed so skillfully that even if the exploits of the heroic Alpine troops are a bit uninteresting it must be put down as one of the best of the Italian films to be shown on Broadway." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p27 Je 10 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] has been well photographed in natural settings and is well acted."

+ Film Daily p10 Je 9 '36

"More impressive for its pictorial effects than by reason of its story, this latest Italian importation presents an interesting, and at times dramatically exciting picture."

+ Motion Pict Daily p15 Je 10 '36

"Obviously propaganda for the Italian war machine—even though its story dates back to the World War—this importation doesn't rate very much as entertainment. It's slow and, for a war film, doesn't hold much in the way of excitement."

— Variety p35 Je 10 '36

AMATEUR GENTLEMAN. Mr 20 '36 95min
Criterion-United artists

Players: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Elissa Landi, Gordon Harker, Frank Pettingell

Director: Thornton Freeland

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

"A: pretty good action drama with several rarely lovely shots of English lanes and especially well photographed prison and street scenes; Y: unethical situations; C: no." Par M p42 Je '36

"The picture, decorative though it is, lacks an expected snap and sparkle because of the slow tempo of the rambling story and its over long telling. Family."

+ Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"This British production is well paced combining action and a charming slowness, thus holding the interest and upholding the period of more than a century ago. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Recommended to those seeking a drowsy evening at the cinema."

Christian Science Monitor p15 My 2 '36

"The Farnol story still lacks the sparkle, suspense and excitement it has between book-covers, and the performance, while vigorous, more than once set yesterday's audience at the Roxy tittering for reasons unintended by the cast. . . It was made in England and may prove successful there because of its elaborate period costuming, its excellent atmospheric quality, its lethargic tempo and because the dialogue probably can be understood." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ap 24 '36

"The result is a competent, if uninspired production, beautifully costumed and boasting some magnificent settings. It is, as English films incline to be, somewhat too long; it needs a good job of editing. . . The picture is a promising start for Mr. Fairbanks's new enterprise, and, on its own merits, a pleasant piece of romantic, old-fashioned adventure." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p8 Ap 25 '36

"The department might as well confess its sentimental regard for that unblushing romanticist Jeffery Farnol. . . So it is inevitable that any film edition of a Farnol novel which does not follow the original faithfully must prove disappointing. . . Still, there probably are millions of non-Farnol readers at large, unfortunate souls, and, having no preconceived notions of the amateur gentleman and his invasion of London in 1810, they in all likelihood will accept the new photoplay as a properly romantic, adventurous and colorful tale. . . The photoplay is decorative, though, and, if it is a bit overlong in its telling, it is not too bad a beginning for Criterion Pictures." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 27 '36

"The junior Douglas Fairbanks' debut as an independent screen actor-producer is dampened somewhat, occurring as it does in a tastefully produced and well acted but ponderous and wearisome screen version of Jeffery Farnol's novel 'The Amateur Gentleman.' All of which is rather depressing to relate, since the film has more than several valid reasons for believing that it is a well-bred, agreeable and wholesome piece of work. Missing, however, is that spark which is needed to give a film vitality." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p4 Ap 25 '36

"The Amateur Gentleman,' which is about Regency London [has] dialogue so very English, especially on the part of Mr. Fairbanks, as to be largely unintelligible to provincial Americans." John Mosher

New Yorker p77 My 2 '36

"The Regency period pictured in Mr. Farnol's novel has been recaptured with imagination and efficiency, and Mr. Fairbanks' screen behavior is in the best costume drama tradition. . . There are movement and humor and glamour in this revival of stage-coach melodrama."

+ Stage p10 My '36

"Hollywood producers who let Douglas Fairbanks Jr., go off to England to seek better roles and show what he knew about picture-making might do well to take a look at this sample of his ideas. 'The Amateur Gentleman' set records in several London theatres. . . [It contains some] highly literate dramaturgy by Clemence Dane, some handsome snuff-taking by Fairbanks Jr., some capital period studies."

AMATEUR GENTLEMAN—Continued

+ Time p32 Ap 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Action there is a-plenty in this romantic tale of Old England, which has been adapted from Jeffery Farnol's novel, resulting in good entertainment for general audiences. Sets are lavish, costumes are authentic and colorful and the photography is excellent. Family."

+ Box Office p17 My 16 '36

"They just didn't seem to catch the spirit of Farnol's well known story. For one thing the pace is too slow. Not strong enough for big spots and unfortunately not the style of picture neighborhood audiences like. . . It's too bad the younger Fairbanks had to make his debut as a producer with this picture."

— Film Curb p14 My 2 '36

"[It has] too slow a pace to hold interest and suspense taut. . . Photography was good—in the fog scenes; the rest [of the scenes] were underlighted so that faces of the performers were often foggy."

+ Film Daily p8 Ap 27 '36

"Only the Fairbanks name gives it a chance for moderate grosses at best. Picture bogs down in all important elements, most essential of which are the screenplay, photography and direction. . . The costuming is there, but the dash is entirely lacking. Instead, there's a slow ninety-five minutes of footage, and, in the few spots that the film might have held interest, mediocre photography nipped its opportunities. The photography, in fact, distorts nearly all the players, Fairbanks and Elissa Landi especially."

— Variety p15 Ap 29 '36

AND SO THEY WERE MARRIED. My 10 '36
78min Columbia

Players: Melvyn Douglas, Mary Astor, Edith Fellows, Jackie Moran

Director: Elliott Nugent

Based on the short story, Bless Their Hearts, by Sarah Addington. "The story idea: A man-hating widow with a 12-year-old daughter, and a woman-hating widower with a boy of 12, encounter each other at a mountain lodge during the Christmas holidays. The children are imbued with their parents' sex antagonisms, so there are violent quarrels from the start. When the parental ice begins to thaw, the [children] decide that for their own comfort the parents must be kept from marriage." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: stupid; Y: hardly; C: no value."
Christian Century p887 Je 17 '36

"Capital entertainment for the family." S
Calif Council of Fed Church Women
+ Fox W Coast Bul My 30 '36

"Adults should thoroughly enjoy the complications and the underlying thought. It is all very well done. Adolescents, 12-16: mature; children, 8-12: hardly."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Family-junior."
Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Family & junior matinees."
Nat Council of Jewish Women My 20 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency My 28 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +— Fair; —+ Mediocre; — Poor; —— Exceptionally Poor

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"[It is] an amusing comedy. Family."

+ Wkly Guide My 23 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A story with a unique angle and the popular treatment, light, humorous and dashing, in the current Frank Capra manner, has turned up at the Center Theater for the not too-discriminating. . . A story treated seriously, with this set-up, would result in an interesting psychological study not to be dismissed lightly. This is simply a conventional comedy-drama, imitating in manner the vogue so highly prized by producers at this time." Marguerite Tazelaar

+— N Y Herald Tribune p18 My 14 '36

"'And So They Were Married' is a pleasant and unusual piece of very light entertainment." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p29 My 15 '36

"[It is] an undistinguished but passably entertaining film." B. R. C.

+ N Y Times p29 My 14 '36

"[It is a] celluloid trifle. . . The picture. . . is too unimportant for comment." Douglas Gilbert

— N Y World-Telegram p4b My 16 '36

"There's nothing for us to say, except to express our sympathy to Mary Astor, the conspicuous victim of [the] effort." John Mosher

— New Yorker p89 My 23 '36

"Part of the reason that 'And So They Were Married' is better-than-average entertainment is that its 10-year-olds are endowed with adult minds and motives, a situation producing an unusual potency in the pranks the children commit, such as making a major catastrophe of a hotel Christmas tree and the party going on around it."

+ Time p48 My 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As good a domestic comedy as has ever reached the silver sheet. This is the type of entertainment that makes them say 'Gee, that's swell' when they walk out of the theatre. Family."

+ Box Office p33 Ap 25 '36

"Given a swell story and a well rounded cast Elliott Nugent has turned out a high grade piece of entertainment. It is very amusing and there are several highly dramatic scenes."

+ Film Curb p5 Ap 18 '36

"There is so little real plot to this yarn that the burden of sustaining entertainment values rests chiefly on the shoulders of the cast. The production manages to supply fairly pleasing summer fare."

+— Film Daily p6 My 14 '36

"A farcical comedy of bad manners leading to matrimony. Starting with an amusing though artificial idea, it lacks the finesse to raise it above the neighborhood level. At times it descends to needless roughhouse and its several laughs are frequently on the same level of poor taste. . . It is all pretty wild and unbelievable and only a few standout performances from the cast save it from dullness and banality."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 Ap 10 '36

"Story character, plus the engaging performances of two youngsters, Edith Fellows and Jackie Moran, combine to elevate this show to the better than average entertainment classification."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Ap 11 '36

"The entertainment worth of domestic comedy romance is approached from a different angle in this picture. . . Previewed in California Theatre, Huntington Park, suburban neighborhood house. The audience, distinctly family type in character, reacted favorably to attraction and was particularly appreciative of the work contributed by Edith Fellows and Jackie Moran."

Motion Pict Herald p36 Ap 18 '36

"Pleasant comedy that lacks name strength to get top attention, 'And So They Were Married' shouldn't fail to please. . . It will probably be better for the neighborhoods than the ace de luxers because its name angles aren't strong."

+ N Y Exhibitor p22 My 10 '36

"This comedy is just good enough to put it into the borderline class. Lack of marquee magnetism classifies it for the fair category. From outside the box office, it has all the hall-marks of a program picture, though a glimpse from the other side of the cash till would largely obviate that impression. A hard promotional haul is in the cards, if much is to be made of it."

+ - Variety p23 My 20 '36

"[It] comes pretty close to being perfect entertainment for all classes, in the better program bracket, and with more marquee draft would have been a contender amongst the top-notchers. As it is, picture will do healthy business and may surprise beyond expectations on the bright side of the ledgers. . . Screen play . . . has depth, bright dialog, penetrating understanding of adolescent hearts under the remarkably sustained humor, both in incident and character play, and is altogether a superb piece of film writing."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 10 '36

AND SUDDEN DEATH. Je 19 '36 67min
Paramount

Players: Randolph Scott. Frances Drake.
Tom Brown. Billie Lee

Director: Charles Barton

Based on an article by J. C. Furnas. "Frances Drake, the spoiled daughter of the rich, through habitual traffic violations is brought before Randolph Scott, the officer in charge of the city's traffic. During her attendance at traffic schools, she not only changes her viewpoint on driving, but also falls for Randolph. On leaving a party at which Scott is a guest, Frances insists that she drive her brother's car since he is drunk. When she stops for cigarettes, the brother, Tom Brown, demands that he drive after they have been informed that their brakes were bad. In his recklessness, Tom crashes into a school bus, killing the son of a traffic officer." (Film Daily)

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is stark, compelling drama that will make many sit up and take notice. While it may be a preachment and not entertainment it certainly will hold the interest of most any audience. Possibly it will be a bit too gruesome for some but it packs the punch."

Film Curb p7 Je 13 '36

"Automobile accidents, gruesome deaths and injuries hardly make enjoyable entertainment and for that reason the picture may not attract every picturegoer. . . It is a picture every automobile driver should see and should be sponsored by every known safety group. Properly sold the picture might do better than expected. The auto crashes alone are enough to convey the message, some of the shots are spectacular. The picture might have been more horrifying, but there's enough as it is."

Film Daily p7 Je 6 '36

"Paramount jacked up a widely exploited title and ran under it a routine melodrama and a lot of motor crashes with the result that the exhibitor will have enthusiastic support from traffic departments, pulpits, schools and the press, but he may have difficulty getting audiences in to see what is after all only a glorified lecture against careless driving. . . Exhibitors should not fail to take advantage of the ready made tieups."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Je 8 '36

"Basically this is a cooperation exploitation feature. . . The picture is propaganda that lends itself readily to tie-ups with police departments, auto clubs, newspapers and insurance companies, units that can be expected to give it publicity support."

Motion Pict Herald p68 Je 13 '36

"Estimate: fair program, more where sold."

+ - Phila Exhibitor p24 Je 15 '36

"As box office venture it is dubious and will have to be carried as program supplement. . . This effort to combine humanitarian propaganda with conventional melodrama for general theatre consumption is its initial handicap as well as novelty. Dramatic problem is attacked with indifferent success. Story . . . is loose-jointed."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 3 '36

ANNETTE IN PARADISE. Mr 6 '36 87min
AAFA

Players: Ursula Grabley. Hans Soehner.
Ida Wuest

Director: Max Obal

A German dialogue film without English subtitles, filmed in Germany. It is also called Annette Im Paradies. "[This is a comedy] about a rich girl who disguises herself and takes a job in her own store, where romance and many amusing complications develop." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 8 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The picture is nicely photographed, smoothly directed and flavored with a couple of pleasing musical bits." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p11 Mr 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[A] pleasing romantic comedy."

+ Film Daily p8 Mr 10 '36

"This is a mediocre musical production, even by the standards foreign films are judged in America, with a second-rate book and a third-rate cast. None of the mediums match, with the fact that no English titles are used to [explain things at least partially] making it tougher to take by non-German speaking audiences on this side."

+ Variety p27 Mr 11 '36

ANTHONY ADVERSE. Ag 29 '36 136min Warner

Players: Fredric March. Olivia de Havilland. Anita Louise. Edmund Gwenn. Claude Rains. Gale Sondergaard. Billy Mauch

Director: Mervyn LeRoy

Based on the novel of the same title by Hervey Allen. "In four vivid chapters it tells the complete story. One is the tragedy of Anthony's birth and his childhood in a convent school. The second is his apprenticeship to Bonnyfeather, who knows the child is his daughter's son. [This scene] has for its dramatic contrast Anthony's great love for and marriage to Angela. Next is his life as a slave trader where the man of ambitions becomes a beast. The finale is his meeting with Angela again, the discovery that she is Napoleon's paramour and his happiness when he claims his child and sails to America for a new life with the boy." (Motion Pict Daily)

ANTHONY ADVERSE—Continued

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Although the theme is still clearly maintained, the final scenes lack conviction. It is not until these last ten minutes that the unusual length of the film becomes noticeable. The acting of a very large cast is on a uniformly high level. . . It is a pity that the characters who run right through the story do not age uniformly. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p85 My '36

"A rare treat for adults."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 3 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Anthony Adverse' is one of the finest things the screen has done, an undertaking to which only superlatives can do justice. Sheridan Gibney has done the impossible in writing a screen play that will satisfy those who have read the book. . . Certainly, no picture ever has been given better direction. It is a triumph for Mervyn LeRoy. It was a monumental undertaking, even with Gibney's worthy script, to keep the story moving forward with such precision and mounting interest, to hold the attention of the audience so long in incidents in the life of a purely fictitious individual. . . To Warner Brothers for the brilliant accomplishment of an enterprise so daring, salaams!"

+ + Hollywood Spec p7 My 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A screen masterpiece if there ever was one. Decidedly one of the finest motion pictures ever made. Has universal appeal. Bound to be a box-office smash anywhere. The widely read novel has been brought to the screen as a perfect piece of film entertainment."

+ Film Curb p13 My 16 '36

"[It is an] outstanding production on vast scale which should rank as one of leading talkies to date."

+ Film Daily p12 My 12 '36

"New interest is given talking pictures with the presentation of 'Anthony Adverse.' It establishes a standard of dramatic tragedy that easily may stand as a shining beacon for future production. The finest picture ever turned out by this producing organization, it is a thrilling triumph to the courage, intelligence and perseverance that went into its making. . . Certain to be a box-office sensation, it is all audience entertainment as it is a showmanship feature that makes available limitless opportunities for commercial exploitation."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 My 11 '36

"In the recent several months many fine pictures have come from Hollywood. 'Anthony Adverse' is one of those pictures, one that offers regular theatre-goers desirable entertainment, one that legitimately justifies issuance of invitations to irregulars to come and see an attraction worthy of their time and their attention."

+ Motion Pict Herald p41 My 23 '36

"Expectation that Warners would bring forth a tremendous production in 'Anthony Adverse' has been realized in every respect. 'Anthony Adverse,' in its screen version, is a credit to the company, an achievement in every department, a box office bet at all theatres."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 Je 1 '36

"[It is] truly a great entertainment achievement, an astonishing feat of fine screen storytelling and craftsmanship and a picture of unquestionable smash box office calibre. . . On sheer artistic merit and money-making promise, [it will] stand well up in the hit division of the season's picture output. . . Fredric March is the perfect selection for the mature Adverse. It is undoubtedly his best performance. He plays it with impressive simplicity, avoiding the theatric."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 9 '36

AUGUST WEEK-END. Ap 25 '36 64min Chesterfield

Players: Valerie Hobson, G. P. Huntley, Jr. Betty Compson

Director: Charles Lamont

"Plot is built around the attempt of an older man to induce a young girl to run away with him despite the fact that he is married." Film Curb

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It can only be classed as a bit below ordinary program fare and will just about do for the dual bills. . . Cast and director have done the best they could with material at hand which wasn't strong enough."

— Film Curb p5 My 9 '36

"While the players do well enough, the script, direction are against them. Estimate: for neighborhood houses, twin bills."

+ N Y Exhibitor p22 My 10 '36

B

BELOW THE DEADLINE. Je 8 '36 64min Chesterfield-Grand national

Players: Cecilia Parker, Russell Hopton, Theodore von Eltz

Director: Charles Lamont

When a policeman is unfairly accused of engineering a spectacular diamond robbery, he escapes on a train which is wrecked. His identity is masked by a necessary plastic operation. Later he returns to capture the crooks responsible for the robbery.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A below the average melodrama that cannot hope for anything better than the lower half of a dual bill. . . A good cast has been wasted on poor material."

— Film Curb p4 Je 13 '36

"While there's nothing particularly novel or ingenious in this yarn, it is the type of stuff that makes passable fare for the popular-priced grids."

+ — Film Daily p7 Je 6 '36

"Estimate: fair."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p24 Je 15 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Cops and robbers story is deficient on comedy but it has the necessary action and romance to satisfy the easy-going customers who don't take their acting seriously. Won't rate solo."

— + Variety p18 Je 10 '36

BIG BROWN EYES. Ap 3 '36 75min Wanger-Paramount

Players: Cary Grant. Joan Bennett. Walter Pidgeon

Director: Raoul Walsh

Based on the Liberty magazine stories, Hahsit, Babe, and Big Brown Eyes, by James Edward Grant. "The story concerns a wisecracking hotel barber shop manicurist, played by Joan Bennett, who has taken on the job of sob-sister reporter and who returns policeman Cary Grant's affectionate advances with satiric derision. The two are whirled into the reportorial vortex that results from a jewel robbery and a baby killing." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: mostly good; C: not the best."

Christian Century p646 Ap 29 '36

"Adults: very good; 14-18: strong; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Amusing dialogue; exciting. Mature. Good." DAR

"Too many characters and too many disjointed scenes mar the suspense and the ineffective acting does not carry conviction. The chief value of the production lies in its strong plea for law enforcement. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Hackneyed theme, spicy conversation, good direction. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 18 '36

"Family-mature."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ap 6 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"There are one or two passages of ineffectual dialogue, but on the whole it is a happily-made film. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p85 My '36

"Good. Adult & young adult."

+ Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"This is second rate entertainment, a complicated jumble of criminal events which bewilder rather than intrigue the audience. . . The lines of Joan Bennett and Cary Grant in the principal roles are artificial and devoid of real humor; the plot is based on chance instead of logical, cumulative evidence. Adolescents, 12-16: poor; children, 8-12: no."

— + Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 6 '36

"Sophisticated lines. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 29 '36

"A and Y: entertaining romance drama; C: if interested."

Par M p42 Je '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A wisecracking romance. Passable melodramatic pastime for adults. The gangster's brutal murders are certainly not for young eyes."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 25 '36

"It seems incredible to me, and I say it with the utmost sincerity, that ostensibly mature minds can consistently force inane and irrelevant attempts at humor into the life blood of a smoothly-running story. . . The production as a whole just doesn't quite make the grade as a compactly, well woven unit. It has everything but that one subtle, all-important quality: cohesive forward movement. If you are interested in cinematic study, see it, or go if you aren't unduly particular, and want an innocuous evening's entertainment." Paul Jacobs

+ — Hollywood Spec p31 Ap 11 '36

"The film scurries about in a chipper and pleasant fashion. . . For the most part, the picture skates adroitly along the thin edge of excitement. . . The picture becomes as racy as a roller-coaster ride. And just about as significant." (2½ stars)

Liberty p45 My 23 '36

"The mystery of 'The Thin Man' is greater than its author, Dashiell Hammett, ever suspected. The movie producers are still looking for him. 'Big Brown Eyes' is another false clue." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p36 Je 1 '36

"In this brittle if slightly stereotyped effort, [Walter Wanger] offers an amusing farce, if you have not seen it too often before. The new starring team is competent, bright and easy to look at, while the treatment is so expert its oiling gleams. The pat lines fall from the lips almost automatically while the situations march in orderly file to their final demise. . . [It] is a witty and unimportant little fable which will pass the time pleasantly." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p8 My 2 '36

"The story, familiar in situations as well as characterizations, whizzes past so fast that the film is over before its plot deficiencies are clearly apparent. . . 'Big Brown Eyes' doesn't always make sense; but it is lively, exciting and, occasionally, funny. None of it is very original." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p8 My 2 '36

"With diligent employment of the simple declarative sentence and the primer of plot-boiling, 'Big Brown Eyes' stands forlornly as an elementary essay in melodrama which stumbles over its own footage and produced in this observer, at least, an equally elementary pain in the neck. . . Miss Joan Bennett's portrayal of the Broadwayesque cuticle-groom suggests that she has not been around the White Light district for years, and Mr. Grant, whose chief crime-detecting asset would seem to be his knowledge of ventriloquism, should be restored promptly to the rank of patrolman." F. S. N.

— N Y Times p11 My 2 '36

"We'd say that 'Big Brown Eyes' is the swiftest and most exciting underworld melodrama that has come along in months. . . To be sure, the story is often confused and illogical and at times does tax the credulity of the observer, but it moves along at a fast clip, has plenty of suspense and excitement and some good wisecracks, too. . . In short, then, this underworld film is emphatically one of the good ones; sophisticated, intelligent, well-written, well-acted, interesting and really alive." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p4 My 2 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

BIB BROWN EYES—Continued

"This is rather livelier than the average underworld picture. Barbershop wit occupies a good deal of the dialogue when there is no actual shooting. A baby-killer with a fondness for costly flowers adds a pretty touch, and other scamps behave with slick slickness and persuasiveness." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p87 My 9 '36

"The picture is paced in a fashion that makes the sensational crook melodramas of last year seem as sedate as Whistler's Mother. Its talk is spoken so fast and cut so close that quoters will have a hard time remembering the good lines, an even harder time picking out the bad ones."

Time p32 Ap 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Smart dialogue and rapid action throughout combine to make this Walter Wanger production one which should cause the turnstiles to click merrily. It will prove particularly acceptable to sophisticated audiences. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ap 11 '36

"Fine entertainment. High grade production with universal appeal. . . It'll have to be a queer sort of audience that won't go for this one."

+ Film Curb p10 Ap 11 '36

"Fans at large will get a nice period of entertainment out of this combination of crook activity and romance. A neatly devised story, interesting players and the right touches in direction by Raoul Walsh join to make the production a palatable affair throughout."

+ Film Daily p3 My 2 '36

"[It] provides a rollicking comedy that is neither a society crook, detective nor newspaper yarn, but which has earmarks of them all. It is a swell audience picture."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 1 '36

"Here is a show fashioned from the stuff that clicks with audiences everywhere. . . The Walsh direction plays the tricky situations for all they are worth and in a manner sure to please audiences appreciative of well-handled comedy, drama and mystery action."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 Ap 2 '36

"There's a lot in this picture to interest audiences. Likewise there is much to occupy the attention of showmen. . . Previewed in Los Angeles Paramount Theatre. While enjoying picture's spitting love interest, audience also came under spell of show's suspense-packed drama. For a 'B' class regular picture, it was the recipient of more applause than is ordinarily given more pretentious features."

+ Motion Pict Herald p54 Ap 11 '36

"Audiences will find plentiful entertainment in the show: the dialogue is above average; the entire picture good. Although the title may convey little, it has exploitation possibilities."

+ N Y Exhibitor p43 Ap 25 '36

"Extra strong programmer, which should do nicely by itself on second runs, although it may have a bit of trouble running up any marks in the aces. It's a case of an extra good cast in a neat yarn with exceptionally strong dialog. Pace lets down a bit and the title will hurt some, but those are about all the faults mentionable."

+ Variety p13 My 6 '36

"Smartly played and directed, strong in story interest and plot novelty angles, 'Big Brown Eyes' offers excellent entertainment and will take ample care of itself as a program money-maker. . . [It is] a fast-stepping, exciting melodrama, well paced with wise-cracking and sardonic comedy. Entertainment elements are varied enough to appeal to all classes."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 1 '36

BIG NOISE. Je 27 '36 57min Warner

Players: Guy Kibbee, Warren Hull, Alma Lloyd, Dick Foran

Director: Frank McDonald

"Guy Kibbee, who has been shunted out of control in a woolen mill by younger men, uses the enforced leisure by making himself and his family utterly miserable until he finds release from the monotony of his existence by secretly purchasing a share in a cleaning business. Established in his new calling he finds that racketeers have muscled into the business and are exploiting the cleaners. After a bomb wrecks his shop he decides to fight. He tricks the rival mobs to this shop, where they oblige by shooting each other out of existence." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Family-mature." DAR

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Dramatically constructed and well acted, this is an entertaining and amusing film. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"High, tense moments, relieved by a vein of subtle humor and an interesting and slightly complicated romance, all combine to make an entertaining picture. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 2 '36

"A most acceptable vehicle for the admirable work of Guy Kibbee. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ap 23 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"A hastily thrown together story which has little, except the name of the leading male actor, to recommend it. . . The story, bare of any touch of characterization which might have humanized the stereotyped incidents, will afford little entertainment to any type of audience. The shooting affray used as a climax, in which the cleaning establishment is strewn with dying racketeers is too unreal and mechanically directed to shock the sensibilities of the modern spectator of any age. The best that can be said of the picture is that it affords harmless diversion for the uncritical and opportunity to slumber for the weary. Adolescents, 12-16: worthless; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 22 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Despite the familiarity of its plot and the illogical nature of some situations, this B-group offering manages to be a picture different and entirely believable." Allan Hersholt

+ — Hollywood Spec p14 Ap 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Laugh insuring dialogue and Guy Kibbee's usual adequate performance combine to raise this picture from mediocrity to the status of acceptable audience fare. Family."

+ — Box Office p33 Ap 25 '36

"This is a very amusing comedy that should be relished by most audiences that see it."

+ Film Curb p19 Ap 25 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The Big Noise" is one of those pictures [which isn't] so big, yet is very enjoyable and filled with entertainment. Plots much like this one have been shown before, but the handling alters it, making this light breezy number a pleasing affair."

+ Film Daily p8 Ap 20 '36

"This is that stock model comedy in which the retired business man refuses to stay retired and secretly takes on a small enterprise just to keep his hand in. . . It is fairly sprightly amusement of the B grade, but can only fill dual assignments and will not set any boxoffices on fire."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 16 '36

"There is genuine appeal in this comedy, especially to oldsters of the hard-working class who are now seeking leisure."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 Ap 17 '36

"Made up of familiar ingredients and having for its idea the theme that old folk are not so passe as youngsters sometimes like to think, this picture has more than a fair share of amusing entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Herald p36 Ap 25 '36

"Program fare made for double feature bills, neighborhoods, 'The Big Noise' has advantages in good casting, a not-too-serious tone."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p26 My 10 '36

"Guy Kibbee adds another to his gallery of interesting characters and Warners offers one for the chuckle side of the program. Not pretentious, but well-made, and carrying particular appeal for elderly audience elements seldom considered in picture schedules. Will earn its share on modest budget basis."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 16 '36

BORDER CABALLERO. Mr 1 '36 59min Puri-tan

Players: Tim McCoy, Lois January

Director: Sam Newfield

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Nat Bd of R
Fox W Coast Bul Ap 11 '36

"A good plot with lots of action. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Mr 15 '36

"A, Y and C: rather good melodrama of the great open spaces."

Par M p12 Je '36

"It's not dull, the people and dialogue are natural, the whole thing pretty good of its kind. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide Mr 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The star puts his stuff over in good form and the balance of the cast lend able support. Direction is more than satisfactory."

+ Film Curb p8 Je 6 '36

"This is a generally workmanlike job of Western entertainment that ought to give fair enough satisfaction to the perennial fans for this kind of stuff."

+ — Film Daily p6 My 26 '36

"Estimate: good."

+ Phila Exhibitor p27 Je '36

BORDER FLIGHT. My 15 '36 65min Paramount

Players: Frances Farmer, John Howard.

Roscoe Karns, Robert Cummings

Director: Otto Lovering

Based on the short story of the same title by Ewing Scott. A melodrama of the activities of the aerial branch of the Coast Guard Service.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: crude; Y and C: poor."

Christian Century p887 Je 17 '36

"Being especially interesting to boys of all ages, this film is suitable for family & junior matinees." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: exciting." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family & junior matinees." Nat Bd of R

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A stirring melodrama very well acted, dramatically constructed and filled with thrills which will appeal especially to air-minded men and boys. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Good entertainment [for] the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul My 16 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 9 '36

"Good photography, able direction and a stream of clever dialogue save the film from mediocrity. Anti-social qualities are shown to a great disadvantage in contrast to the courage, high sportsmanship and devotion to duty of aviators in the coast guard service. Adolescents, 12-16: fair; children, 8-12: no."

+ — Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 6 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"Family & junior matinee."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family-junior."

Wkly Guide My 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Average entertainment for the action fan, this works itself into several interesting situations with a smash climax that comes at the wrong time. Family."

+ — Box Office p63 My 2 '36

"A weak-sister. Considerably below the standard of Paramount offering even in the 'B' class. Doesn't seem to get started and is most boring for the first half. Picks up a bit later but is destined for the smaller neighborhoods and the dual bills."

— Film Curb p13 Ap 25 '36

"This picture produced in the A. M. Botsford low-budget group lacks draw box-office names and has but a slim story. These deficiencies, however, are offset by air thrills and a battling climax which should give it honors in the double bill field for which it is aimed."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p6 Ap 18 '36

"A run of the mill attraction in every phase, this feature provides merely formula thrill-action entertainment."

— + Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 21 '36

"The production contains much to interest younger audience contingents particularly and those preferring plenty of excitement on the screen. As it pictures the work of the Service, the training methods and the dangers and adventures which confront its members, it provides ample opportunity for exploitation."

Motion Pict Herald p37 Ap 25 '36

"Obviously program, it never attains any other ranking. Estimate: for neighborhood houses, twin bills."

— + N Y Exhibitor p22 My 10 '36

BORDER FLIGHT—Continued

"To the average audience this picture will present a problem for holding interest through the first half. . . The picture is class 'B' in every department, should be so regarded. Handicapped to start with, by lack of box-office names, production misses as fair programmer through careless direction, amateurish treatment and dialog. Working under these conditions cast from top to bottom struggled without much success."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 18 '36

BORN FOR GLORY. S 15 '35 70min Gaumont-British

Players: Betty Balfour. John Mills. Barry MacKay. Jimmy Hanley

Director: Walter Forde

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Because it is British made and lacks a cast bristling with names familiar to American audiences, 'Born For Glory' probably will be given short shift by our exhibitors. If shown at all it will be presented as the unimportant half of a dual bill, yet it is one of the most stirring bits of screen entertainment I have seen in a long, long time. It was produced on an ambitious scale by Gaumont-British and admirably directed by Walter Forde. It will not fail to hold the closest attention of the most discriminating audience that views it."

+ Hollywood Spec p23 Ap 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It will miss with the women, generally, because of its tragic concern with the behavior of men forswearing self for duty and for its almost complete lack of sex romance, but it is an excellent man's picture. Battle engagement between a German raider off the Chile coast with two successive British cruisers during beginning of the world war is as grimly authentic in feel and detail as if it were taken from the Admiralty film records."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 28 '36

BORN TO FIGHT. Ap 13 '36 69min Conn

Players: Frankie Darro. Kane Richmond. Jack LaRue. Frances Grant

Director: Charles Hutchinson

Based on the novel of the same title by Peter B. Kyne. A young prizefighter wins a few bouts and then decides to desert his manager. Later he discovers his folly, returns to his old boss and wins the championship fight.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"A fairly sane attitude toward the fighting game, and some pleasant human elements. Family."

+ Wkly Guide My 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Comparable to pictures costing more than five times its negative appropriation, this independent production is packed with action throughout. . . The fight scenes are thrilling-ly staged with photography and settings far above the average independent budget appearance. Family."

+ Box Office p63 My 2 '36

"An unusually good independent production. Much better than average. It's a fast action tale of the prize ring with romance, comedy and a couple of songs as well. Tops for the juvenile shows and the older folks ought to like its suspense, peppy playing and general interest."

+ Film Curb p8 My 2 '36

"Every house that shows action pictures can play this prize-fight show with the assurance that their patrons will get their money's worth. It ranks with the best of independent products, and can hold its own with some of the program major releases of this type. Loaded with the stuff that keeps the audience on their toes, it not only is a pip of a number for the children but the grown-ups who want suspense and thrills, and the fight fans especially should go for it in a big way."

+ Film Daily p8 Ap 27 '36

"This comedy-drama of the prize ring is well above the average of its limited-budget class in story appeal, acting and production. It will be liked by youthful fight fans, at whom it is especially aimed, and may even exert some box office pull in the less-exacting neighborhoods."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 22 '36

"Audiences which can believe that a professional prizefighter who knocks down a racketeer in a night club would leave town with all the speed and secrecy of a criminal who has committed a major crime will enjoy this picture thoroughly. Aside from this story weakness the picture is a swiftly-moving yarn of professional fighting from a backstage angle."

Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 27 '36

"Action loving audiences will like this. Estimate: good independent action film."

+ N Y Exhibitor p27 My 10 '36

"[It] should prove program asset almost anywhere except in the most exclusive districts. For general run of fans, and for men and youngsters especially, picture has absorbing entertainment in its colorful, valid and exciting training quarters and fight arena action."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 22 '36

BOULDER DAM. Mr 14 '36 70min Warner

Players: Ross Alexander. Patricia Ellis. Lyle Talbot. Eddie Acuff

Director: Frank McDonald

Based on the novel of the same title by Dan M. Templin. "Boulder Dam is the background for this story of the regeneration of an erratic, wisecracking, selfish young man to one who realizes the true values of life. . . The picture portrays the attitude of the men who daily risk their lives, not for bread alone, but pride in their contribution to the World's greatest engineering feat." (Gen Fed of Women's Clubs)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"It is decidedly a man's picture. . . Interesting and admirable is the loyalty of the workers on the Boulder Dam and their pride in this great construction project of their country. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Highly recommended for the family and especially interesting to men and boys. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 22 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Though the story is not particularly logical the background of the dam, with its intricate workings, is most thrilling and interesting."
+ — Gen. Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
F 10 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates F 15 '36

"The theme is well handled and escapes the didactic priggishness into which it could so easily have fallen. Suitability: family."
+ Mo Film Bul p44 F 24 '36

"The background becomes an integral part of the plot in this lively melodrama. The tremendous engineering undertaking . . . gives us a picture of almost limitless power. . . . It is not a great picture, but vividly realistic."
+ Motion Pict & Family p15 Mr 15 '36

"The plot taxes one's credulity at times but is refreshing in its simplicity. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: good."
Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Mr '36

"Beautiful photography of interesting scenes in the building of Boulder Dam somewhat redeems this trite story."
— + Nat Council of Jewish Women F 15 '36

"Of little interest to small children as it is a vehicle of words rather than actions. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 22 '36

"Adults and young people."

Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Brisk in action, racy in dialogue, and a sympathetic picture of certain types of laborers. Family."
+ Wkly Guide F 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The trouble with the cheapie-redeemed-by-a-brave-deed plot is that you have to gaze for half an hour at the hero's offensive antics and they may bore rather than entrance you. . . . There are thrilling views of the great dam under construction."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 25 '36

"Unqualifiedly do I recommend this to every adult seeking an intensely diverting hour at the cinema. . . . I have seen no finer example of how talk and action must be combined to make a splendid motion picture. For that alone, it is a notable production." Allan Hersholt
+ Hollywood Spec p13 F 29 '36

"For all its gusto, 'Boulder Dam' is weakened somewhat by the story, which is a strictly formula affair. . . . It is the dam itself that gives the film most of its interest and color." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p45 Ap 11 '36

"It seems that Boulder Dam is not only a great engineering feat but also a fine moral force. . . . It is all very edifying, but I fear that the film has the misfortune to be the dullest of the month." Richard Watts, Jr.
— — N Y Herald Tribune p12 Mr 31 '36

"With a wealth of footage on the monster project, a quite conceivable story, and a couple of young players who hadn't been used for a week or so, the Warner Stakhanoffs contrived to dash through the production so that the release would coincide roughly with the completion of the construction of the dam. The result is that Miss Patricia Ellis . . . rushes through her duties . . . and Ross Alexander . . . seems a bit tired of it all, too, in spite of the fact that 'Boulder Dam' is his first starring vehicle." J. T. M.
— N Y Times p17 Mr 30 '36

"Perhaps there is a good drama behind the building of the Boulder Dam, but if there is the authors of the film of that name have failed to discover it. . . . 'Boulder Dam' may not be the worst film of the current season, but at the moment it is a bit difficult to recall one that has had more claims to the distinction."

William Boehnel

— — N Y World-Telegram p13 Mr 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Gripping, vital drama of a man's regeneration under the influence of a woman's love, laid against the biggest construction project in the United States. Family."
+ Box Office p13 Mr 14 '36

"If you can get 'em in they'll enjoy this thrilling melodrama. Practically all of the action takes place about the dam location and there are any number of decidedly exciting sequences. It is not only exciting, [but also] interesting. There is a bit of comedy relief here and there that registers."
+ Film Curb p19 F 29 '36

"'Boulder Dam' may only be a program picture, but it has the stuff that should put it across nicely with the average audiences. Dealing with a subject concerning industrial working people, it should have wide appeal. . . . The Boulder Dam structure is used for all that it is worth and should serve as a good selling point."
+ Film Daily p9 F 25 '36

"It has many worthwhile elements of appeal to mass patronage; will be on the 'recommended' list of the uplift organizations, and will have a vigorous box-office pull in the neighborhood houses, especially where the population is industrial and names are not everything. Its chief exploitation point is that it gives a vivid picture of one of the great construction projects of history, vigorously dramatizing the hazards of that enterprise."
+ Hollywood Reporter p4 F 19 '36

"With the spectacular Boulder Dam project serving as a picturesque background, this picture is far from what may at first seem propaganda. Warners' have taken occasion to build a thrilling story around the dam in addition to making the big hole in the Nevada mountains play an important part in the romantic leanings of Ross Alexander and Patricia Ellis."
+ Motion Pict Daily p8 F 19 '36

"Exhibitors are presented ample exploitation material, particularly in the picture's background, and although the picture is certainly not a pretentious one by any means, it does contain enough of those ingredients that make entertainment values which appeal to the masses."
Motion Pict Herald p40 Ap 4 '36

"Loaded with spectacular thrills, but minus box-office names, this one will have to fight for money at the wicket. However, if sold properly through the title it should garner good money on dual bills."
Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 10 '36

BRIDES ARE LIKE THAT. Ap 18 '36 66min
Warner

Players: Ross Alexander. Anita Louise. Joseph Cawthorn. Kathleen Lockhart. Gene Lockhart

Director: William McGann

Based on the play, Applesauce, by Barry Connors. "[It portrays] the amusing tribulations of a young bridal pair beset by the harsh practicalities of a world represented by their elders and guardians." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y: fair; C: no interest."
Christian Century p751 My 20 '36

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

BRIDES ARE LIKE THAT—Continued

"Mediocre. Mature. Family." DAR

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"There is a delightful romance, sparkling humor, and convincing acting in this family picture." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A gay little comedy. Amusing for any audience." Nat Soc of New England Women
Fox W Coast Bul F 1 '36

"Good-family."
Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"The cast is so amusing and the situations so full of human interest that one gladly swallows any slight improbability as to story. Adolescents, 12-16; good; children, 8-12: yes."
Motion Pict R F '36

"Good. Family."
+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"An amusing trifle, well handled."
+ Canadian M p61 My '36

"When we tell you that 'Brides Are Like That' is just about as good as it can be, it doesn't mean that you should drop whatever you are doing and rush right out to see it. It's a little piece that moves easily as it peeks into the lives of a group of average citizens. . . . For if 'Brides Are Like That' has any claim to distinction at all, it is that the picture assiduously dodges all novel and surprising twists. It could tell this story in its sleep. . . . Moviegoers who don't expect too much should find this an amusing portrait of what the studios like to think is typical American home life." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p50 F 29 '36

"Ross Alexander is a boy Pollyanna, with overtones of Peter Pan, in [this] frail, amiable and commonplace little screen comedy. . . . Mr. Alexander, who is an engaging light comedian, plays the glib hero pleasantly, which is no small achievement, for the character is a bit trying upon occasion. . . . I didn't find the marital squabbles of the heroine's family, as impersonated by Gene and Kathleen Lockhart, exactly hilarious." Richard Watts, Jr.
+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Mr 23 '36

"[It] reaches some kind of a new high, or perhaps a low, as far as the number and noisiness of its bickering scenes. 'Brides Are Like That' must be the most quarrelsome picture on record. . . . The Warners' I'm afraid, didn't succeed in making this picture what they had hoped. Instead of a homely comedy of family life it is a frightful bore." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p24 Mr 23 '36

"Although it is one of the Warners' lesser efforts, a Class B picture designed for the double-bill houses, it still is a pleasant little domestic farce and it has been played with proper exuberance by its cast. . . . No little of the film's comedy stems from several scenes of domestic bickering played—and with suspicious naturalness—by Gene and Kathleen Lockhart, who have been married these many years." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '36

"'Brides Are Like That' is sometimes funny. But not, I must straightway add, funny enough. The play scatters its forces instead of gathering them and it is greatly to the credit of all the players that they manage to remain amusing and entertaining." William Boehnel
+ N Y World-Telegram p13 Mr 23 '36

"William McGann's well-paced direction and the amiable acting of young Ross Alexander, whose mannerisms have not yet had time to crystalize as irritatingly as Robert Montgomery's make 'Brides Are Like That' a satisfactory if not particularly exciting example of inexpensive program comedy."

+ — Time p34 Mr 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Hilarious comedy. Family."
+ Box Office p23 F 1 '36

"Unfortunately once again we find a picture with no big 'names' but the exhibitor that sells this film to his patrons will find that they like it. The players all turn in first class performances and the direction is most workman-like."

+ Film Curb p14 Ja 25 '36

"Homey comedy introduces the Lockharts in family trade comedy which should build them and [help] the box-office."

+ Film Daily p8 Mr 24 '36

"It is played with intelligence and zest and affords pleasing average entertainment. . . . The picture is good, wholesome family entertainment and should score well with general audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 17 '36

"The ingredients utilized have often proved their entertainment and commercial value. . . . Just plain amusement, the show moves to a lively pace in action, dialogue and situations. It's the kind of show that can be offered to family audiences with confidence."

+ Motion Pict Herald p38 Ja 25 '36

"Estimate: best for small towns, neighborhoods."

N Y Exhibitor p26 F 10 '36

"A family type of picture, with limited appeal and box office possibilities. [It will] probably miss majority of the single run houses, with its entertainment strength not enough to carry. The dual-bill [theatres] will be its market. . . . [It] is loquacious and tiresome at times despite its comparatively short running time of 66 minutes. Stretched into feature length, it has to eat up reams of celluloid that's just gab and not much more."

— Variety p15 Mr 25 '36

"It comes as near perfection in sprightly, heart-warming comedy as the average diversion-seeker will find."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 16 '36

BRIDGE OF SIGHS. F 15 '36 65min Invincible

Players: Onslow Stevens, Dorothy Tree, Mary Doran, Jack LaRue, Walter Byron
Director: Phil Rosen

"The tale of a girl who saves her brother from the electric chair by turning up the guilty gangsters who have clashed in a gambling war." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Mediocre—adults." Am Legion Auxiliary
+ Fox W Coast Bul My 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An interest-holding story, aided by a capable cast and intelligent direction, results in a program picture of above-average merit."

+ Box Office p31 My 23 '36

"Although direction and acting are hindered by inherent story weakness, this one gets away as fair program fare."

+ Film Daily p11 My 1 '36

"A serious-minded crime quickie that will do rather better than average duty on neighborhood double bills. . . . A good job of photography is furnished by M. A. Andersen, and the production, which calls for a number of quite pretentious sets, has been, well dressed by Lon Young, who supervised."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 18 '36

"For entertainment purposes this is a sober-toned crime drama carrying a formula love interest contrast. Commercially it provides the value of several better-than-ordinary names in the featured parts. The picture is acceptable as a second feature."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Mr 23 '36

"Had the producers shown the same attention in titling this picture as director Phil Rosen did in handling it, the net result would be more satisfactory at the box office. The show is a melodrama that rates with the best from Chesterfield this season. Estimate: for twin bills; neighborhood houses."

N Y Exhibitor p54 Mr 10 '36

"'Bridge of Sighs' is formula crime material, but it has enough suspense and action interest to pull through for the masses on double bills. . . Independently produced and palpably not favored by a generous budget, picture is still a bit above the average that's bought nowadays by the dual billers as the second feature."

+ — Variety p18 My 6 '36

"This is for the less discriminating neighborhoods, mild in entertainment, unable despite good cast, to transcend warmed-over story elements and lacking anything to lift it above lower dual levels."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 18 '36

BRILLIANT MARRIAGE. Mr 25 '36 65min In-vincible

Players: Joan Marsh. Ray Walker. Doris Lloyd. John Marlowe

Director: Phil Rosen

"It is the story of a girl whose life is almost ruined when it becomes known that the couple [whom] she believes [to be] her parents, are not so." Film Curb

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A dramatic story spoiled by a weak cast and poor directing. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a most worthy independent production. It is good, entertaining drama that should be well liked in most spots."

+ Film Curb p12 Ap 25 '36

"With no name draw of a nature that neighborhoods might find interesting, this falls into the usual program category."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p42 Ap 25 '36

"Fairish independent effort with sufficient recognizable names to be attractive for double bills. Picture is mounted better than the average independent of this class and smartly directed by Phil Rosen. Story, however, drags in many spots."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 10 '36

BROADWAY PLAYBOY. See Times Square playboy

BROKEN BLOSSOMS. 87min Twickenham

Players: Dolly Haas. Arthur Margetson. Emlyn Williams

Director: Hans Brahm

Based on the short story, The Chink and the Child, by Thomas Burke. This was previously made as a silent picture by D. W. Griffith. Filmed in England. This is the tragic tale of a Limehouse waif who is ill-treated by her drunken, brutal father. An idealistic young Chinese, entranced by her beauty, gives her shelter and the reverence due a princess. When the father hears of this he takes the girl home and beats her to death. The protector kills the father and carries the dead girl back to his flaming house to await his death.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This film will not appeal to those who dislike being harrowed. Suitability: adults."

Mo Film Bul p81 My '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With a close general resemblance in form to the original as one of its virtues, undoubtedly it gains in dramatic force and in pathos from the addition of dialogue. Well directed by Hans Brahm, as his first picture, it is also well cast and technical qualities are good. . . There is an atmosphere of sincerity throughout this film which makes it very appealing and intensely moving. It is tragedy without qualification."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Je 2 '36

"The original film of this title, directed by D. W. Griffith, is a trade classic, and comparisons inevitably will be made. . . In regard to the three major features of acting, direction and atmosphere, the British film does not suffer from one's recollection of the earlier masterpiece. It is very grim, a very moving, and a very unusual production, and its fate with audiences may be determined by the extent to which regard for artistry in these details overweighs the appetite for more conventional entertainment values."

+ Motion Pict Herald p60 Je 6 '36

"This one is all wrong. Even if it were perfectly made from every angle, the idea would still be old-fashioned. Maudlin bathos is not present-day entertainment for a full length film, especially when unrelieved by a single bit of comedy. . . Makeups alone are not characterization. Emlyn Williams never once gives the feeling that he is actually a Chinaman. . . Dolly Haas . . . throughout is more continental in demeanor than Limehouse."

— Variety p18 Je 10 '36

BULLETS OR BALLOTS. Je 6 '36 68min Warner-First national

Players: Edward G. Robinson. Joan Blondell. Barton MacLane. Humphrey Bogart. Frank McHugh

Director: William Keighley

Edward G. Robinson portrays a tough little cop who lone-handed cleans up a new reign of gangsterism involving various 'rackets.' In the climax he sacrifices his life.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: excellent of kind; C: doubtful." Christian Century p855 Je 10 '36

"Mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: good; 14-18: fair; 8-14: unsuitable." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Interesting melodrama, well produced. Mature audience, including 14-18 years." DAR

"An intelligent and maturely developed version of the 'racketeer' theme makes this production an outstanding one of its type. . . The theme necessitated stark revelations, but if the picture has put the spot-light where it will do some good, it deserves an honor stripe. An excellent cast, direction, timing, photography all contributed to the perfection of the picture. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

BULLETS OR BALLOTS—Continued

"This film is very real and convincing. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Courage of conviction is exemplified in a strong picture which however is unsuitable for the younger audience. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 30 '36

"This forcefully directed picture, dynamic in its import and replete with action and suspense, affords gripping entertainment in addition to its stirring message. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 18 '36

Motion Pict & Family Je 15 '36

"Although this is a gangster story, it is told from a constructive angle, exposing racketeers in all their dishonesty, depravity and utter brutality and proving that upright officials, supported by an aroused public opinion have the power to abolish the forces of crime. . . It is a slight shock to have bankers, who have come in for much condemnation during recent years, made the ringleaders of consolidated rackets. One doubts if they are responsible for all evil. However, the main trend of the picture is constructive and has definite social value. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: too harrowing."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family-outstanding."

+ + Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Perfectly cast, expertly directed, and excellently photographed this timely expose of modern racketeering proves grim but noteworthy [entertainment] for adult audiences."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 20 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

"This forcefully directed picture, dynamic in its import and replete with action and suspense, affords gripping entertainment in addition to its stirring message. Adults & young people. Outstanding."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 23 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The fast-paced direction and a casual humorous touch give a fairly fresh aspect to familiar devices for entertaining adult crook play audiences."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 6 '36

"The drama is not breath-taking, although it is punchy, nor is the play an especially inspiring theatrical performance. Its real significance is the undisputed, bare-faced relation of vicious mobs and their hidden overlords to community life of today." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p190 Je 12 '36

"'Bullets or Ballots' is invariably a dynamic motion picture, pictorially vivid, ingenious and properly exciting, always recognizing the importance of the camera and revealing thorough knowledge of its possibilities. Never have I known the screen to unfold a melodrama in which the mood of suspense was induced more adroitly. The exhibition of true cinematic technique which the picture possesses will provide all of those fortunate enough to view it with a treat, and in particular will it delight those who enjoy screen art as a study. It is with much enthusiasm that I recommend the production." Allan Hersholt

+ + Hollywood Spec p12 My 23 '36

"Its tale of corruption in high places and fabulous looting of a sucker public has been told before, but rarely with more convincing detail or more powerful dramatic suspense. . . Set against arresting backgrounds of what First National calls a $15,000,000,000 annual stickup, it makes an excellent gun-play entertainment. . . For all its virtues as a straightforward account of crooked doings, however, 'Bullets or Ballots' is far less educational than absorbingly diverting." Howard Barnes

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p18 My 27 '36

"This one is a thriller, a fast-paced talkie with all the suspense a melodrama can stand, some gangster murders judiciously spaced and a climax with all the excitement and sentiment that any Hollywood star could demand in an exit speech. . . It is an intelligent, experienced cast, and a corking good melodrama, much too timely for comfort. Mr. Robinson's performance is one of his best." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p33 My 27 '36

"The Brothers Warner . . . have turned out another crackling, underworld melodrama in 'Bullets or Ballots.' . . If this sounds like the old formula—and it is—still there is no disputing the picture's claim upon your attention, its graphic depiction of the scope of modern organized crime, its fidelity to known criminal facts and methods and its suspenseful handling of the familiar melodramatic materials that have gone into it." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p27 My 27 '36

"It packs a thrill in each footage of film and is quite the best of the cinema's sermons against crime. . . It is excellent propaganda, and I defy anyone of honest impulse to come away from its viewing without hate in his heart against organized terrorists and a brass-knuckle determination to exterminate them." Douglas Gilbert

+ + N Y World-Telegram p29 My 27 '36

"There is a little too much pouring of kerosene on the vegetables in the markets, familiar now to all moviegoers; and too much stress put on the numbers game, another old standby; and a general overworking of hackneyed stunts, but Mr. Robinson manages to make a pretty good showing, as also does Humphrey Bogart, who will probably never play an honest citizen again. . . I am afraid that all these qualities, good and bad, are but loosely thrown together and of only moderate value in the end." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p70 My 27 '36

"Not a narrative about gangsters but the 'inside' on how they work. It's interesting. Robinson, certain of himself through every foot of celluloid, has conviction. His death scene is every bit as terse and legitimate as though he were playing it on the stage for the New York Theatre Guild. Here's one actor who is never slipshod."

+ Script p11 My 30 '36

"What makes it a good picture, despite its solemn interest in the obvious, is that it brings Edward G. Robinson (Little Caesar) back into the crime fold."

+ Time p26 Je 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A new twist to the formula crime expose yarn plus the usual hard-boiled and convincing performance by Edward G. Robinson makes this a welcome and winning addition to the 'crime does not pay' cycle."

+ Box Office p31 My 23 '36

"If this isn't the best gangster picture to date we'd like to see the one that tops it. . . In a typical Robinson role the star puts over one of his finest performances."

+ Film Curb p11 My 23 '36

"This is easily one of the most important crime pictures that has come to the screen. It has many authentic touches and is a credit to Martin Mooney, who has exposed many rackets, and Seton I. Miller, its authors."

+ Film Daily p10 My 18 '36

"It is about the best crime picture of the year and will make the grade for deluxe houses, garnering solid returns at all wickets if, as seems likely, crime, on the screen, still pays. The picture has the added exploitation value of being an unsparing expose of the typical big city racketeer ring and it is also a forthright and vigorous propaganda appeal for municipal clean-ups by way of electing honest officials and giving them real support."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 14 '36

"Something new in suspense-laden, melodramatic, racketeer-gangster-cop entertainment is unfolded here. Different, vivid and punchy, it holds much to engage attention while providing numerous fresh angles in personnel, story and production values for commercial exploitation. . . . Worthy of a spot on any program, the picture is gripping audience entertainment that places in the hands of exhibitors countless formula and novel exploitation leads with which to sell it to far above average business."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 My 15 '36

"Here's something vigorous and meaty that promises much worthy of audience and exhibitor attention. . . . Previewed in Warner's Beverly Theatre. The audience watched the picture with undivided attention, creating the impression that they were familiar with all the topical material with which the picture deals and wondering what they were going to do about it."

+ Motion Pict Herald p44 My 23 '36

"Back in the type role that made him box office, Edward G. Robinson turns in a tip-top performance in a show that again proves that Warner Brothers hold the upper hand when gang melodramas are concerned."

+ Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

"The Warner Bros.-Keighley-Robinson combination clicks again in a fast, smooth-working action picture which is earmarked for healthy box office returns. . . . It's a gangster story, but one that doesn't irritate in the slightest despite following the formula."

+ Variety p15 Je 3 '36

"It is a smooth and convincing story which commands interest of the audience from opening scene to conclusion of 68 minutes of virile down-to-earth screen narrative. . . . In building up to the climax, enough incidents are brought into play, with such defined clarity, that the film becomes a liberal education for any juvenile or adult."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 14 '36

BUNKER BEAN. Je 26 '36 65min RKO

Players: Owen Davis, Jr. Louise Latimer, Robert McWade, Jessie Ralph

Directors: William Hamilton, Edward Killy

Based on the novel of the same title by Harry Leon Wilson and a play of the same title by Lee Wilson Dodd. This is the third film version made. "It is a story of a youth suffering from [an] inferiority complex who seeks advice of a crystal gazer to find from whom he has been incarnated. The crystal gazer tells him he was Napoleon. The fun starts when Bean returns to the office where he is employed as a stenographer and sets about to reclaim himself with the Napoleonic complex." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 6 '36

"It is light diversion, but good psychology. The acting, save that of the leading man, is somewhat overdone and the direction not notable, but the play is a good average performance of its type. Adolescents, 12-16: entertaining; children, 8-12: little interest."

+ — Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 3
'36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

"There are many good comedy situations, although the production drags in spots. Owen Davis, Jr., gives an excellent performance; the rest of the cast is adequate. Family."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Je 13 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Wilson's narrative is artificial trifle, its plot brittle and unsubstantial, yet not infrequently the possessor of coruscating qualities. Presented by Radio with dignity and intelligence, it affords satisfaction both as entertainment and from the standpoint of cinema, lacking, however, importance in both respects. Undeniably there are moments of dullness in the photoplay, but on the whole it is arresting, best described, perhaps, as an enjoyable bit of triviality." Allan Hersholt

+ — Hollywood Spec p12 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a bang-up comedy from start to finish. Family."

+ Box Office p69 My 30 '36

"This one should do unusually well in the smaller spots and the neighborhoods."

+ Film Curb p13 My 30 '36

"This is a merry comedy, full of laughs, that will please all types of audiences. Although this is the third time the Harry Leon Wilson story has been pictured, it has been given fresh treatment and is full of entertainment."

+ Film Daily p9 My 25 '36

"The picture should please as a comedy offering."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 My 22 '36

"As a programmer, it ought to please double feature, neighborhood audiences. Elsewhere, it is handicapped. The cast is studded with feature players, all of whom help contribute to the piece with nice characterizations. Net result however, is fair."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p23 Je 1 '36

"Despite lack of box office names, this should have no trouble in keeping right up in front with money-making films. It is smart, sparkling, down-to-earth comedy that should elicit a continuous flow of laughter from any type of audience."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 21 '36

C

LA CANZONE DEL SOLE. My 5 '36 85min
Capitani

Players: Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, Vittorio de Sica, Lilliane Dietz

Director: Mario Besozzi

Based on an operetta of the same title by Pietro Mascagni. Italian dialogue film with English sub-titles. "[It] concerns itself with one Bardelli, who wants to become Lauri-Volpi's manager. A fiery little man, he gets into a row with the police and lands in jail for three weeks. A young musical friend, Frida, tries to take his place in the negotiations with the tenor. She mistakes his lawyer for Lauri-Volpi himself; and the usual romantic entanglements follow." (N Y Sun)

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LA CANZONE DEL SOLE—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] has some really grand singing by Lauri-Volpi. The tenor, so well known here by his performances at the Metropolitan Opera, is luckier than most operatic stars when they enter pictures. . . . Signor Lauri-Volpi has only to play himself, to stroll occasionally across the screen and to appear in two or three theatrical sequences. . . . It is merrily told, although the picture contains nothing particularly original. No experienced movie-goer expects Hollywood technical standards of an imported film. This Italian film has the uninspired photography of most European productions. It has also, to counterbalance this, some interesting views of the Italian countryside." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p32 My 6 '36

"Here is a delightful romantic comedy, built around a former Metropolitan Opera tenor, but with a handsome lawyer as the hero and the singer kept well in the background and not required to do anything outside his vocal métier. . . . There is hardly a dull moment in this gay tale of mistaken identity." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p27 My 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Entertaining comedy with music overcomes language restrictions. Acting, singing and photography of superior calibre."

+ Film Daily p9 My 7 '36

"[It] offers something for lovers of good music everywhere since the singer is in fine voice in the several numbers he renders. . . . For Italian audiences anywhere the film should be easily sold and thoroughly enjoyed. Outside of the music and the appearance of Lauri-Volpi, there is comparatively little in the story itself to draw the patronage of the average American lacking a knowledge of the language."

+ Motion Pict Daily p15 My 6 '36

"This is a nicely made, though tedious operetta. . . . Like most foreign titles, this is too slow for American consumption, though the Italian contingent in the audience, at this viewing, enjoyed it highly."

+ — Variety p14 My 13 '36

CAPTAIN CALAMITY. (Release date not determined) 65min Regal

Players: George Houston. Marian Nixon. Vince Barnett

Director: John Reinhardt

Photographed in color. "Houston, adventurous skipper of a South Sea schooner, creates the impression [that] he is the possessor of a secret as to where vast Spanish treasure is buried. . . . A gang of bad men . . . plan to kill Houston and get his secret." (Motion Pict Daily)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Though color heightens the reality and gives an added visual pleasure to a film, it can hardly, any more than dialogue alone, single-handedly carry a picture. . . . So lovely are the seascapes, the warm hues of the islands, and the natives that this pedestrian item is not nearly so uninteresting as it would be in black and white." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p29 My 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Interesting melodrama produced in color with plenty of good old hoken and several amusing comedy sequences to help it along. Family."

+ Box Office p33 Ap 25 '36

"George Hirliman's new color process is used for the first time in this film. Let it be said that it is very effective and lends much to this independent feature."

+ Film Curb p18 Ap 25 '36

"The second of George Hirliman's [independent productions] in color is gaudy fare anyway you look at it. The Hirlacolor processing is an improvement over the Magnacolor used in 'The Rest Cure,' which was the first of the series, but the color is the chief merit of this one and it will take plenty of pushing to make it a box-office asset, even in the neighborhoods."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 14 '36

"Most of the shots, particularly the land and seascapes and some in which personalities are featured are of creditable character. Second to color use as a novelty in a thrill action film is the idea of giving it a musical contrast by having the hero, George Houston, sing several songs. . . . Selling the combined values of color and melodramatic thrill action seem to be the most acceptable way to excite popular attention."

Motion Pict Daily p8 Ap 20 '36

"Backed by color, 'Captain Calamity' should easily overcome handicap of little cast lustre [and become] a good enthrall for the neighborhood trade."

+ N Y Exhibitor p26 My 10 '36

"Initiative of the producer, first to turn out independent all-tinters—and doing a neat job of it—will probably be rewarded with good returns from the neighborhood and outlying program zones for which it is intended. . . . Color job generally will prove satisfactory, even astonishing in spots, where tint is still a novelty. From critical standpoint it may be regarded as somewhat crude and chromesque in some of its lurid contrasts. Sea-scapes are intense and cameras play for too much ocean expanse of monotonous blue."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 14 '36

CAPTAIN JANUARY. Ap 17 '36 75min 20th century-Fox

Players: Shirley Temple. Guy Kibbee. George (Slim) Summerville. Buddy Ebsen

Director: David Butler

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"As a filmed version of a popular and loved book the picture is not a success. While the plot of the story is followed more or less well and the deviations are in the interests of film requirements, the spirit of the beautiful story is lost in the filming. . . . If producers do not aim to capture the spirit of a book in the film they make from it, why use the book? . . . There is one incident in the nursery scene that seemed to the writer inexpressibly vulgar."

— Bks & Films My '36

"A: entertaining; Y: very good; C: excellent."

Christian Century p646 Ap 29 '36

"Fine entertainment for the entire family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Family." DAR

"The story though unlike the original is well adapted to Shirley's versatile talents. Family & junior matinee." Nat Bd of R

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family & junior matinee." Nat Soc of New England Women

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"A refreshing worthwhile picture with an undercurrent of love and sacrifice. David Butler has given it splendid direction. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Mr 14 '36

"Family & junior, matinee. Best of the month. Outstanding."
++ Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"This slight and rather naïve story depends for its entertainment values almost entirely upon the personality of Shirley Temple. This extraordinary child gives an astonishing performance. . . . The film offers pleasant light entertainment to all except those to whom a child actor is anathema. Suitability: family; especially suitable for children under 16."
Mo Film Bul p86 My '36

"This delightful story centers around Shirley Temple. One sees beneath the rough and rather unattractive exterior of the men who have adopted her after a shipwreck had cast her into their midst, a love and devotion which might not be expected."
+ Motion Pict & Family p6 Ap 15 '36

"Very good-family & children."
++ Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"Shirley Temple is never more adorable than when she is graciously sharing honors with others of the cast, and in this picture she is unusually piquant as a contrast to the rough and ready associates with whom she [plays]. . . . It is a human interest tale with many amusing anecdotes, to be enjoyed by all ages. Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: excellent."
++ Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family-junior."
Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 8 '36

"A. Y. and C: delightful picturization."
Par M p44 My '36

"The chief feature of entertainment is Shirley's dancing, especially with Buddy Ebsen. 'The Codfish Ball,' describing in five languages the way of a sailor in every port, is clever, as is also the 'Multiplication Table' dance. Good comedy relief and believable situations keep the picture from becoming too sentimental."
+ Scholastic p26 Ap 4 '36

"Family & junior matinee. Best of the month."
++ Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"So far as quality goes, it is neither much better nor worse than its predecessors. There is no questioning the fact that Miss Shirley is a gifted child and that to her throng of admirers she can do no wrong. But she is beginning to show signs of conscious striving for effect. It almost always happens with children who are showered with attention. It has not gone too far yet. . . . But she is no longer the completely naïve and natural youngster that she was in her first movie appearances." E. F. Melvin
+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 4 '36

"Conventional Shirley Temple entertainment, abounding in garden-variety sentiment climaxed by a typical melodramatic happy ending that comes after the customary Shirley Temple songs, dances, tricks. . . . It has a sparkling quality of romping merriment." J. P. Cunningham
+ Commonweal p636 Ap 3 '36

"Whatever your interest in motion pictures, whether you seek them out as passing entertainment or view them as an interesting study, and particularly if you are working in them or preparing yourself for a career in them, take advantage of the first opportunity to view 'Captain January.' In it you will see the world's greatest actress, the screen's greatest player, in a performance surpassing any other I have seen in a motion picture. . . . Can one get too enthusiastic about Shirley Temple? Can anyone challenge the statement that she is the screen's greatest individual gift to the public? . . . The picture is one you cannot afford to miss."

++ Hollywood Spec p6 Mr 28 '36

"The most consistently effective team in Hollywood—Director David Butler and his tiny star Shirley Temple—score another hit in their latest enterprise. . . . No matter how the praise is passed around, however, 'Captain January' is guided by Captain Temple alone. And she skips it with the same bouncing slyness that has made her the most popular actress in America today." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills
Liberty p43 My 2 '36

"The redoubtable Miss Temple displays her profusion of talents with exuberant artifice in 'Captain January.' . . . The result is a motion picture strikingly lacking in dramatic unity or compulsion, although obviously an excellent entertainment for the Temple fans. . . . David Butler has directed the film with an eye for Miss Temple and little else. She gives an extraordinary exhibition of versatile precocity, although her straight acting is still several notches above her variety turns and the latter play hob with the dramatic quality of 'Captain January.'" Howard Barnes
N Y Herald Tribune p6 Ap 24 '36

"Miss Temple's new picture should have all her fans heading for the Capitol Theater this week. Shirley seldom gets a story equal to her remarkable gift for expressing emotion. 'Captain January' is no exception. . . . As a picture, [it] is slight entertainment; as a Shirley Temple vehicle it should please her juvenile audiences and give her other admirers a new reason to wonder at her precociousness." Eileen Creelman
+ N Y Sun p24 Ap 27 '36

"The novel was written, as you probably do not recall, forty-six years ago and, although it has been modernized ever so slightly by [the] trio of adapters, it still indulges in the melodramatic excesses of the Gay (but Sentimental) Nineties. . . . Anyway, Miss Temple is as clever and talented as ever and . . . Guy Kibbee as the Cap'n and Slim Summerville as his cribbage-playing crony are invaluable in providing some comic relief." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p21 Ap 25 '36

"[The story] is, frankly, almost unbearably archaic, with sweetness drawn out to the point of pain. But it is acted with such complete ease and simplicity by the screen's Wonder Child . . . that its pat plot and deliberate tuggings at the heartstrings are easily forgotten and forgiven. . . . If it were acted with less enthusiasm and skill by its star and her excellent supporting cast the film might result in pretty mawkish entertainment of a kind that calls for snorts of contempt and scorn. As it is, it emerges as pleasant and amiable screen fare that should be a delight to the countless admirers of the extraordinarily versatile and talented Mistress Temple." William Boehnel
+ N Y World-Telegram p17 Ap 27 '36

"Like all of Shirley Temple's previous films this stresses sentiment trimmed with comedy, song and dances, the young actress meeting all the requirements each demands."
News-Wk p26 My 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"First rate entertainment with little Shirley Temple surpassing her previous efforts. Family."
+ Box Office p27 Mr 28 '36

"When Shirley Temple is featured, the picture's entertainment appeal and exploitation quality is pretty much fore-acknowledged. In this light drama of down east fisherfolk, there's all the Shirley that anyone could desire. . . . Previewed in Westwood Village Theatre to a laughing, smiling, sometimes sobbing audience.

CAPTAIN JANUARY—Continued

The enthusiastic favorable reaction is just a sample of what to expect wherever the picture is played."

+ + Motion Pict Herald p38 Mr 21 '36

"Okay film fare for the family trade and generally. Wholesome, Cinderella stuff fortified by the winsome moppet, this Shirley Temple starrer ranks with her most potent box office entries. It runs the gamut of emotions with the usual song and dance trimmings."

+ Variety p15 Ap 29 '36

CARDINAL. (Release date not determined)
70min Grosvenor

Players: Matheson Lang, Eric Portman,
Robert Atkins, Jane Duprez

Director: Sinclair Hill

Based on a play of the same title by Louis N. Parker. This film was made in England. "Matheson Lang plays Cardinal Giovanni, obsessed with the building of St. Peter's. General Belmonte, a prize bully, is his mortal enemy who wants all the available cash to be devoted to his profiteering wars and is in love with the cardinal's ward." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."
Mo Film Bul p61 Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Neither the acting of Matheson Lang nor the direction of Sinclair Hill could save the story of the Louis N. Parker play from being a museum piece, best left on its dusty shelf. D. B. Wyndham Lewis adapted the play and has introduced a goodly sprinkling of modern slang, which ill contrasts with the clerical atmosphere of 14th century Rome."

+ + Hollywood Reporter p4 Ap 9 '36

"Most noticeable defect of this filmization of an old costume drama is the lack of atmosphere of the bulk of the players and the dialog. Voices, expressions and actions hint too much of modernity ever to transport the audience to the lazy glamor of Rome in the 15th century. . . Lighting and direction barely passable, film being too erratic to be convincing. With the vogue for period subjects still flourishing, this one may get more than its due locally [London]."

+ + Variety p16 Ap 8 '36

CARYL OF THE MOUNTAINS. (Release date not determined) 68min Reliable

Players: Francis X. Bushman, Jr. Lois Wilde, Joseph Swickart

Director: Bernard B. Ray

A melodrama of the Northwest Mounted Police.

Trade Paper Reviews

"The dog, Rin Tin Tin, Jr., does excellent work and it is only because of this that the picture is of any interest."

+ — Film Curb p12 Ap 11 '36

"While Rin Tin Tin, Jr. is on the screen, the picture is interesting. Except for the finish, there isn't as much of the dog as there might have been, and on that score the picture drags. Too much time is spent with the humans, and what they do is not overly exciting."

+ + Film Daily p10 Ap 9 '36

"The picture is graced by the presence of Rin Tin Tin, Jr., whose good looks and acumen never fail to please, and by several personable players and it will do its modest part in filling out dual bills of the under stratum."

Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 6 '36

"Once again Rin-Tin-Tin, Jr., saves the day in an action drama that will prove interesting to neighborhood fans while the dog is on the screen."

N Y Exhibitor p26 My 10 '36

"Falling in line with cycle of animal pictures, this offering will lend little in sustaining or increasing their popularity. . . Story moves at a slow tempo in order to bring out the acting of the dog. Dog does well, lends much to carrying interest in exceedingly weak story and awkward treatment in direction and story narrative."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 6 '36

CASE AGAINST MRS. AMES. My 8 '36 85min
Paramount

Players: Madeleine Carroll, George Brent,
Arthur Treacher, Alan Baxter, Beulah Bondi

Director: William A. Seiter

Based on a novel of the same title by Arthur Somers Roche. "Unsuccessful in prosecuting Miss Carroll for the murder of her husband, the district attorney castigates the jury as moronic, sympathy-influenced sycophants. He is jailed for contempt of court. Miss Carroll, whose objective is to clear her name and regain the custody of her son from her hateful mother-in-law, obtains his release and engages him to investigate the case." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: unwholesome; C: no."
Christian Century p823 Je 3 '36

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Good. Mature audiences, including 14-18 years." DAR

"Adults: very good; 14-18: entertaining; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"While sensational in theme and not wholly convincing, the picture is so cleverly done, the story so dramatically developed and the suspense so well sustained, it cannot help but hold the interest. . . Drinking sequences could have been toned down. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A good story made rather unconvincing by over-dramatization. . . An interesting hour's diversion, but a poor vehicle for so fine a cast. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul My 30 '36

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 18 '36

"While the story of this murder trial and legal fight for the custody of a child is distinctly distasteful subject matter, it is acted and directed well enough to hold undivided attention throughout. . . Audience taste alone can dictate the success of such a picture. Adolescents, 12-16: by no means; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R My '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Definitely and expertly directed, capably acted, with fast moving repartee and a surprise denouement, we have a murder mystery which is gripping as well as very amusing. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 20 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 14 '36

"[It] sets a new high in scenario building. . . Ultra-sophisticated. Adults."

+ Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide My 9 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"As for 'The Case Against Mrs. Ames,' it might be termed admirable warm weather entertainment were it not for a story that ties itself into hopeless knots in the process of protecting Miss Carroll against the world. . . Having embroiled itself in such a welter of complexities it would seem impossible for 'The Case Against Mrs. Ames' to emerge logically, and, true to form, it doesn't." W. F.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Je 6 '36

"Mediocre stuff from any viewpoint. Distinctly not for children with its unsavory murder trial. . . Meaningless drunk scene and ridiculous court procedure are of a piece with the trashy emotionalism." E. C. S.

— Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 6 '36

"Bad case of screen writing by Gene Towne and Graham Baker doomed this one to mediocrity from the outset. It has nothing to recommend it, being one of those cinematic accidents which can't help happening every so often. The story contains everything to give the picture powerful emotional appeal, but it is presented in a manner to make it a cold, drab, unconvincing and unpleasant screen offering."

+ — Hollywood Spec p11 My 9 '36

"An articulate, frequently absorbing courtroom drama, 'The Case Against Mrs. Ames' is built around an unusual and interesting situation. . . Played for its emotional rather than vigorous aspects, the film is somewhat leisurely paced and limited, for the most part, to a courtroom setting. Despite these handicaps, however, 'The Case Against Mrs. Ames' is a provocative and often moving study of a woman's fight against shadowy enemies." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p49 Je 13 '36

"The scenarists have adroitly worked in several aspects of the Vanderbilt-Whitney custody hearings, and at least the ground-work of one real murder recently on the front pages. This news treatment serves to give an otherwise normal program film a feature interest."

Lit Digest p20 My 16 '36

"As you may suspect, the story is not of vast importance nor is its plot always as clear as it might be. But the film has been turned out by Mr. Wanger much as a superior store turns out merchandise guaranteed to contain amusement and sophistication. And a pat package, it proves to be, with bright lines and handsome settings." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p18 My 28 '36

"'The Case Against Mrs. Ames' tends occasionally to lapse into a routine workmanlike movie. The cast, the lovely Miss Carroll, the vigorous George Brent and the monosyllabic Treacher keep it unusually fresh and lively." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p15 My 28 '36

"[It is] a thoroughly pleasing, if sometimes gossamer thin, offering. . . Miss Madeleine Carroll, whose fair British charm has appeared far too infrequently on screens hereabout, is the entrancing, jury-swaying Hope Ames. Just what rules of court procedure permit even such a defendant as Mrs. Ames to make a personal plea to a jury in a murder case are not revealed." J. T. M.

+ — N Y Times p19 My 28 '36

"It begins with a trial scene so frightful in its inept bungling that it gets the hoot from metropolitan audiences. . . After all people do read the newspapers and anyone over six knows that no witness is permitted to sum up her own case before a jury. If this doesn't get you too down, what happens may interest you, for in all justice to Paramount's director William Seiter it ought to be said that he redeems the early claptrap with some swell burlesque court scenes." Douglas Gilbert

+ — N Y World-Telegram p25 My 28 '36

"I seem favorably disposed toward 'Mrs. Ames,' rather because of a certain tartness and briskness of language than because of any startling novelty in plot or situation." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p82 Je 6 '36

"[It is] well-plotted, well-paced entertainment."

+ — Time p62 My 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A class background, amply relieved by fast action, clever dialogue and intelligent direction, establishes this Walter Wanger production among the entertainment elite. Adults."

+ — Box Office p17 My 16 '36

"Carries universal appeal and can be played in any theatre anywhere. It is fine dramatic stuff with many delightful comedy sequences."

+ — Film Curb p7 My 9 '36

"Although at the outset it appears to be another one of those grim, dramatic court-room affairs, this turns out to be a very enjoyable comedy-drama. . . At the box-office it should meet with popular approval and good returns."

+ — Film Daily p9 My 5 '36

"Beginning where other court-room dramas usually end, 'The Case Against Mrs. Ames' is intelligent, absorbing entertainment highlighted by frequent interludes of uproarious comedy. It is a great audience picture for women—which does not preclude its strong interest for men. It is assured of making a lot of money for Walter Wanger, for Paramount and for every theater that plays it."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 My 1 '36

"This newest Walter Wanger production looms as absorbing entertainment for class and mass audiences. . . Sold from the angle of a woman at bay with emphasis on the finished quality of the production and the work of Miss Carroll and Brent, the film should prove an audience-pleaser."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p3 My 2 '36

"Well produced and directed, the story soundly logical in all phases, the picture is a worthy vehicle to reintroduce its star, Madeleine Carroll, to film followers. It also gives George Brent an opportunity to turn in one of the most accomplished performances of his screen career. . . While realistic, the picture is not grim or solemn. The quantity and quality of comedy contrast provides plenty of laughs and its value is intensified by the intelligent manner in which it has been woven into the picture's dramatic sequences."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p42 My 9 '36

"Very spotty, with poor motivation, disjointed action, this, none the less, has sufficient comedy and mystery to make a good program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p47 My 15 '36

"Mrs. Ames sets an all-time screen record for court house occupancy. And so does the picture. Looks so-so for business. George Brent will have to hold up the drawing end, but the atmosphere won't make it too easy. Odds are against both Brent and the total returns."

+ — Variety p15 Je 3 '36

CASE AGAINST MRS. AMES—Continued

"Smart combination of comedy and dramatic tension, gauged for widest appeal, distinguishes this murder trial-mystery offering and heads it for healthy grosses from the ace houses all the way down the line."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 1 '36

CASE OF THE VELVET CLAWS. Ag 1 '36
62min Warner

Players: Warren William, Claire Dodd, Winifred Shaw, Gordon Elliott

Director: William Clemens

Based on the mystery story of the same title by Erle Stanley Gardner, Warren William, criminal lawyer, is dragged away from his honeymoon to unravel a murder mystery and is himself accused of the murder.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Warren William as its star, is superior to a disjointed picture which will serve only as mediocre program fare. A murder mystery, unwholesome and uninteresting. Adults: dull; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"An involved, unconvincing mystery. Mature." DAR

"There is the usual breezy dialogue, elaborate settings, and drinking sequences to make up in smartness what it lacks in coherence and substance. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A melodramatic story which offers nothing constructive and deals with people who are in no sense worthwhile. . . The film is merely a 'filler' for a 'bank night' program. Adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A murder melodrama, well constructed but trite; interesting enough in treatment but without the virtue of being a 'thriller.' . . Irrelevant farce elements are introduced for their own sake; they get a laugh but are so incredible they add nothing to the picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
— Fox W Coast Bul My 23 '36

"The plot is handled in a humorous manner and is mildly entertaining. A large cast is fairly well directed. Adults & young people."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 9 '36

"If one is entertained by rapid action alone this mystery film may provide diversion. It is an incoherent jumble of events told in a would-be humorous manner. . . Even Warren William has a hard time living up to his reputation as an actor under the handicap of such a poor scenario. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R Je '36

"[It is] a fairly interesting comedy. . . The story is an interesting one, the direction fast-moving and capable but the entire production lacked spontaneity. Adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women My 13 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

"The plot is handled in a humorous manner and is mildly entertaining. Adults."

+ — Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is nothing more pathetic than a gay nonchalance that is neither gay nor nonchalant. This, in essence, is both the criticism and summary of 'Case of the Velvet Claws.' A bright and comic detective story, frayed on the edges and considerably worn in the middle is preserved in form, but the substance is lacking. . . The 'Case of the Velvet Claws' presents a continuously exasperating example of how mystery pictures should not be made." Paul Jacobs

— Hollywood Spec p13 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Although the plot doesn't carry the punch of previous Gardner stories that were filmed, good production saves it."

+ — Box Office p31 My 23 '36

"Nobody is going to rave about it but most who see it will be entertained."

+ — Film Curb p11 My 23 '36

"Although it sustains the debonair and irresponsible spirit of its four or five predecessors it makes pretty mild entertainment and cannot be counted on to add box office strength to the series."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 My 13 '36

"This latest in the Perry Mason series is weaker in story than its predecessors, relying on comedy to sustain the interest."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 My 14 '36

"The show balances its suspense tightened drama with rare comedy. . . Popularity of the Perry Mason series, now approaching the number of Charles Chans, is being looked upon by the producers as a ready-made exploitation asset."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p45 Ap 18 '36

"Made for the program division, it holds to the general stock mystery average."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p26 Je 1 '36

"Contrived to provide an hour's amusement for the mild murder mystery addict, 'The Case of the Velvet Claws' fills the bill. . . Mystery narrative is shallow and sketchily developed, with little at stake for William and Claire Dodd as newlyweds. . . Suspense is never built very high, nor is audience whipped up to much concern over what happens to characters because none elicits much sympathy."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 13 '36

CATTLE THIEF. F 28 '36 58min Columbia

Players: Ken Maynard, Geneva Mitchell, Ward Bond, Roger Williams

Director: Spencer Gordon Bennett

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"An average Western story. . . Ken Maynard does a clever bit of acting, the outdoor panorama effects and cloud photography are excellent and the horseback riding is superb. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Above the average western melodrama. Bound to please all lovers of outdoor dramas."

+ — Film Curb p5 Je 6 '36

"Amid striking scenic settings, Ken Maynard and his white steed Tarzan provide nearly a solid hour of daredevil riding and galloping. Unlike most Westerns, this one has a strong, well-woven story to which the many essentials of good production have been added."

+ — Film Daily p6 My 26 '36

"A Western with enough novel twists to provide suitable diversion for outdoor fans. The plot limps along at times, but finishes coherently."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p16 My 26 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"More of Maynard and his nag are visible here than in his last few pictures. This time he's an undercover man for a cattle association who masquerades as an itinerant peddler by day and a 'masked rider' by night. It's a slant that should appeal to the juveniles. Rest of the film is stock stuff. Maynard handles his dual role with enough tricks to get by, and enough of the obvious to make confusion impossible for patrons from the kindergarten."

+ — Variety p14 My 27 '36

CHAMPAGNE CHARLIE. My 8 '36 58min 20th century-Fox

Players: Paul Cavanagh, Helen Wood

Director: James Tinling

"A present-day murder brings to the fore the story of a man who gambled with life as well as [with] money." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Social melodrama of small distinction. Adults: fair; 14-18: uninteresting; 8-14: unsuitable." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excessive drinking. Adults. Unwholesome-mediocre." DAR

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"This conventional and hackneyed theme will find its place among the program fillers." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A story of people with obviously low I. Q.'s, living worthless lives in a worthless manner, this film is smartly paced, well acted and entertaining, but aside from an hour's entertainment for mature audiences, has little uplift." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul My 16 '36

"Though given interesting settings, this picture told in retrospective fashion, lacks distinction. A rather tawdry story and too much drinking. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 5 '36

"The members of the cast tried hard to inject a spark of plausibility into their parts—that they failed was due more to the story and dialogue than their acting. Herbert Mundin made his part stand out in spite of its artificiality. Mature."

+ Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"It is not a pleasant tale and it is not told with sufficient artistry nor drama to hold one's undivided attention. After it is over one feels the futility of the hour spent in its unfoldment. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

— Motion Pict R Je '36

"The direction is melodramatic and there is excessive drinking. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 6 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] machine-made melodrama of gambling swells and marathon drinkers."

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 16 '36

"It is enlivened by death on the high seas, blackmail, some sinister knife-throwing and an exciting automobile chase and crash, but these are fragmentary interludes of power in a random and slipshod screen drama. . . It is slightly ridiculous and generally tedious in its unfolding when it should be moving." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p16 My 7 '36

"We never have been fond of grave-yard exploration and we must lament the exhuming of a story skeleton that De Maupassant, and others, buried with full literary honors many years ago. . . Better served by its cast than the story warrants, the picture still is out of place in a first-run house and merely reminds us that the screen can be pretty infantile at times." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p21 My 7 '36

"[It] is one of those flash-back things, but for all of its dated kokum the picture manages to supply seventy minutes of fairish entertainment. The action is fast, if not always pointed, and the build-ups of the featured players, Paul Cavanagh and Helen Wood, are not too phony but within the logic of the story. . . The yarn is a bit spotty and lacks the occasional comic touch that often livens up these potboilers." Douglas Gilbert

+ — N Y World-Telegram p21 My 7 '36

"The American heiress (twenty millions at least) and her blackmailing beau are studied gravely in 'Champagne Charlie.' I can see that this may be a picture to divert heiresses, but for those disinherited it will seem mild melodrama." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p79 My 16 '36

"Badly directed and appallingly acted, it is [a] scrambled saga, told in flash backs."

— Time p62 My 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Just a picture that won't set anyone talking. A flash of drama here and there but not enough to keep a fan interested to any degree. Below ordinary program fare and will not be able to make the grade in any of the big spots."

+ Film Curb p14 My 2 '36

"[This] satisfying program drama has suspense, smooth playing, interesting locales."

+ Film Daily p9 My 7 '36

"There is entertainment of an unpretentious sort in this picture."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 28 '36

"Program, that's all."

+ Phila Exhibitor p49 My 15 '36

"'Champagne Charlie' is not grade-A product, although it has been meritoriously acted, mounted, directed and sheared. Feminine matinee trade appears to be its best bet, and pairing on duals would seem to be in the cards, if for no others reason than the film's extraordinary short running time of 58 minutes."

+ Variety p14 My 13 '36

"Injection of a bit of novelty through series of flashes in which dialog spoken in one sequence is answered in another through expert splicing and the inclusion of some real action puts this 20th-Fox class B feature in ranks of diverting entertainment. Lack of draw names will undoubtedly be reflected at box office, but once the patron has been attracted, 'Champagne Charlie' will provide an hour's amusement."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 21 '36

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE CIRCUS. Mr 27 '36 70min 20th century-Fox

Players: Warner Oland, Keye Luke, Francis Ford

Director: Harry Lachman

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE CIRCUS—Cont.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: good; C: perhaps." Christian Century p751 My 20 '36

"An exceptionally good Charlie Chan murder mystery story. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The story is hackneyed, with little distinction of cast, direction or story. Adults: fair; 14-18: entertaining; 8-14: exciting." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature-family. Good." DAR

"Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Detective story fans over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"[Because] of the circus angle, this picture will interest the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 14 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"Altogether a pleasing excursion if not taken too strenuously, though certain animal scenes are likely to upset youngsters. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p63 Ap '36

"Good-adult & young adult."

+ Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"Perhaps there are a few irrelevant situations and a few loose ends; it may not be as good as the best Chan films, but it is entertaining for all who like the Chinese detective-philosopher who has time for profound observations on life while his nimble mind follows the devious by-ways of crime. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: too tense."

Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 15 '36

"A and Y: three-ringed murder mystery within a three-ringed circus; C: bedroom scene in which snake visits Charlie makes the picture pretty tense."

Par M p42 Je '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict p7 Ap '36

"Better than the more recent Chan pictures, brighter and livelier, with a circus background to give it colorful variety."

Wkly Guide Mr 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"As for Charlie Chan's latest—yes and no. It depends upon your cinematic taste. . . In this picture, forty minutes of intricately tangled developments are unraveled and explained in an approximate two minutes of dialogue. I'm not sure yet about the answer. . . 'Charlie Chan at the Circus' is family entertainment. The [children] will go for it." Paul Jacobs

+ — Hollywood Spec p12 Mr 28 '36

"Although in its motivation the film does not play quite fair with the audience, it has enough suspense to hold the interest. 'Charlie Chan at the Circus' follows the set pattern of all his earlier pictures. Except for the genial Mr. Oland, there are no first-rate performances. . . Humble reviewer would like to state to magnificent readers that 'Charlie Chan at Circus' only so-so." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p59 Ap 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Plausible story of circus life and one of the top offerings of the Chan series that will appeal to all classes. Family."

+ Box Office p27 Mr 21 '36

"No cause to worry over the take-in of this picture." L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 Mr 28 '36

"The same old murder mystery stuff in a new setting. Fans who like these pictures will probably stamp this one as okay. To our way of thinking this series has run plenty long enough. . . Perhaps circus stuff will prove interesting to some, especially the [children.]"

Film Curb p14 Mr 21 '36

"Exploitation may include the whole range of vigorous and colorful stunts always on tap for use with circus pictures, because the circus setting in which this story is placed is big-time in every respect and there is ample ring, tent and train stuff to back up advertising predicated on this phase of the attraction. Of course Warner Oland's characterization, which has become a screen standard, takes spot emphasis in all promotion."

+ Motion Pict Herald p41 Mr 28 '36

"There have been better 'Charlie Chan' [mystery stories.] And worse. This one may qualify as satisfactory companionship for another feature in need of a melodramatic running mate."

Variety p15 Mr 25 '36

CHILDREN OF THE REVOLUTION. Ap 5 '36
75min Ukrainfilm

Players: Guli Koroleva. Igor Romantsev. S. Khorosh. G. Batobrina

Director: A. Maslyukof

A Russian dialogue film with English subtitles. "It tells of the plight of young Stepan, who is snubbed by the other children of the village in which he lives because his father is suspected of being a horse thief. Although Stepan knows the truth about his father, he is so cowed by his parent that at first he is afraid to take any action against him. Eventually, after Stepan's cruel parent sets fire to a stable full of horses and tries to drown the favorite mare of the heroine, he gets his just deserts, and Stepan is made welcome by the other children, all of whom are young pioneers." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Children of the Revolution' is interesting because its Pioneers have not been over-directed—even, perhaps, because they have been at times so poorly directed. Their very awkwardness is stamped with truth, as on another level the unconscious antics of infants necessarily are." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p860 Ap 29 '36

"We are at a loss to explain how so inept and unsuitable an export ever found its way to the screen."

— New Theatre p35 My '36

"'Children of the Revolution' will not require your attention unless you are fanatically addicted to the Russian product, for it is a careless and unconvincing production, done without the artistry one has come to expect from the Soviet studios." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune p14 Ap 7 '36

"While 'Children of the Revolution' is not as well photographed as some other Russian films, it is notable for the excellent work of two of its child actors, and for the parts played by a fine police dog and a handsome gray horse. . . Master Romantsev is practically perfect in the rôle of the 12-year-old son of the kulak, at first apparently as mean as his evil sire, but finally repentant and on his way to becoming a real Young Pioneer." H. T. S.

N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '36

"Nothing of vital importance to the welfare of the cinema has been accomplished by the showing of 'Children of the Revolution.' . . Although it possesses several superb characterizations—a virtue, incidentally, that is usually to be found in even the poorest of the Russian films—'Children of the Revolution' definitely belongs among the minor offerings that have come to us from the Soviet Union." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p29 Ap 8 '36

CLOISTERED. My 19 '36 65min Pathe cinema

Players: Nuns in convent

Director: Robert Alexandre

Narrator: Rev Matthew Kelly

Filed in French with dialogue in English. "It purports to show for the first time intimate scenes of life in the convent of the Good Shepherd in Angers, France, for which permission was obtained from the highest ecclesiastical authorities." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"With dignity and serenity the layman is shown for the first time in history the life of the cloistered nuns. . . Although 'Cloistered' perhaps will have the greatest appeal to Catholic audiences it will nevertheless answer a good many questions that continually arise among non-Catholics." P. H.

+ Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"An excellent picture of secluded cloistered life. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

"An unusual and beautifully made picture, particularly appealing to Roman Catholics but impressive and moving to any unprejudiced person. Suggested for school, library and church use. Worth being kept permanently available."

+ + Wkly Guide My 23 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Both the subject-matter and the manner in which it is treated are reverent and revealing, obviously presenting a rare application of the motion picture to contemporary interpretation. . . It is valuable not alone for its inspiring religious significance but because it visualizes in such stark sincerity the simple life of a hitherto hidden world. Schools, churches, libraries, study groups and such non-commercial institutions, among others, will find the production especially interesting, possibly deeming it advisable to make the document permanently available." J. P. Cunningham

+ + Commonweal p218 Je 19 '36

"It is entirely serious and terribly impressive. . . From the Mother Superior down to the newest novice, from the planters of trees and the breakers of coal down to those who sit in their robes at typewriters, they are oblivious to any conceivable intrusion, to any audience which may be staring at them as audiences stare in theaters. The effect is both stern and beautiful." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p754 Je 10 '36

"The picture, from a layman's point of view, is a melancholy portrayal, because it fails to catch the esthetic religious fervor, which must dominate the decision of a young girl to take vows renouncing the world for a marriage to the Church. . . The picture will be of particular interest to Catholics. To others it will be enlightening because of the powerful link between the medieval past and the materialistic present. It is acted anonymously by a group of novices, nuns and priests, and is set in lovely, sunny country in France. As an educational document, it is well worth seeing; as entertainment, it will depend on the observer." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p16 My 20 '36

"A screen foreword insists that all scenes are authentic, filmed during actual ceremonies, and unchanged in any way. This authenticity makes 'Cloistered' an unusual document, a pictorial record of a world unknown to the millions outside its high walls. . . The cameraman has not overlooked the pictorial values of the full white robes, the black veils and the serene faces they half conceal." Eileen Creelman

N Y Sun p33 My 20 '36

"Although it may safely be described as one of the most unusual pictures of the year, 'Cloistered' must—by the very nature of its material—have a limited appeal. . . Most of it, even to the casual spectator, is remarkably interesting, but 'Cloistered' is not meant for the run-of-the-mill flinggoer." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p25 My 20 '36

"'Cloistered' is an unusual picture, reverent and revealing, but it is only fair to suggest that those not of the Catholic faith may find much of its footage dreary and repetitious. . . The producers have done a thorough job. Indeed, if the film seems a trifle labored, as it did to this observer, it is probably only because its director has brought a zealous and devoted approach to his work, as well as a high degree of technical skill." Douglas Gilbert

N Y World-Telegram p27 My 20 '36

"'Cloistered' is unique, and is not intended for many people. Indeed, I should recommend it to only two groups, those interested in convent life for itself, and those especially gratified by excellent photography." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p11 My 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"For academic purposes, the picture serves well . . . but its appeal is exclusively in the direction of small houses catering to the intelligentsia. In those instances where the nuns are shown at work, farming, printing, making shoes, etc., a good amount of novelty arises for mass entertainment."

Film Daily p9 My 20 '36

"The value of the film from the standpoint of exhibition is necessarily problematical. For Catholic audiences it should be of unquestioned interest, as well as for all enlightened and intelligent patrons, who herein are given an opportunity to see behind the walls of a form of religious fervor and faith which seems hardly possible in the light of modern civilized activity. The general average theatre use of the film is still another question."

Motion Pict Daily p4 My 20 '36

"Reviewed at the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse, where a matinee audience preponderantly feminine accorded the picture respectful and manifestly appreciative attention."

Motion Pict Herald p40 My 30 '36

"For the average fan this is too parochial, dull; for the Catholic laity, clergy, this will be an inspiring, artistically photographed document of ceremonies."

Phila Exhibitor p27 Je 1 '36

"The religiously inclined, particularly [women] will derive from the film not only a sense of awe, but succor for their faith, and it is upon this element that 'Cloistered' will solely have to depend for patronage. . . The cameraman has captured much outdoor beauty in his wandering about the cloister's grounds, but his interior results, principally because of the almost constant parade of white, is fatiguing to the eyes. The sound pickups of the chanting are not good."

Variety p14 My 27 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

COLLEEN. Mr 7 '36 105min Warner
 Players: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan
 Blondell, Jack Oakie, Hugh Herbert,
 Louise Fazenda, Paul Draper
 Director: Alfred E. Green

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."
 Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36
 "Suitability: adults & adolescents."
 Mo Film Bul p64 Ap '36
 "Family."
 Nat Bd of R M Ap '36
 "Objectable in part."
 Nat Legion of Decency Mr 8 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Paul Draper's dancing serves to prop up the routine story of 'Colleen.' . . Ruby Keeler is an adept partner. Unfortunately, they are teamed only at the beginning and the end of the picture, which has many sagging stretches between." M. E. P.

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 28 '36

"Worth seeing, if only for Hugh Herbert's magnificent drollery. Mr. Herbert's remarkable creation, the demented millionaire Cedric Ames, is an exemplification of comedy at its most consummate. . . The remainder of the film consists of the fatuous whimperings of Ruby Keeler and the inescapable Dick Powell. Still, I wouldn't stay away." Robert Stebbins

+ — New Theatre p34 Ap '36

COMIN' 'ROUND THE MOUNTAIN. Ap 13 '36 55min Republic

Players: Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford,
 Smiley Burnette
 Director: Mack Wright

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family—juvenile."
 Nat Bd of R M My '36
 "General patronage."
 Nat Legion of Decency Ap 6 '36
 "A, Y and C: interesting Western that carries one to California in the days of the Pony Express."
 Par M p42 Je '36
 "Unusually good outdoor action. Family-juvenile."
 + Wkly Guide Ap 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Some grand horses and hills in this film will give the patrons of Westerns something to be interested in while waiting, miles ahead, for the plot to come round the mountain."

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Crammed full of fast-riding, bronco-busting, and with a story that holds interest, this impresses as being above-the-average Western in general appeal. Family."

+ Box Office p23 Ap 18 '36

"This yarn of a pony express rider is good, average Western stuff. It will please the youngsters and fully satisfy where this brand of entertainment is popular."

+ Film Curb p17 Ap 4 '36

"An abundance of hard riding scenes, fair-to-middling singing by Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette and an absence of superfluous fighting makes this one a Class-A outdoor production."

+ Film Daily p7 Mr 31 '36

"Falling into the classification of routine Western material, this has Gene Autry, who seems equally adept with horse and voice, and an exciting moment or two in a race, Western style, to make it satisfactory entertainment as the second half of a double bill program. Its best playing position is probably the week-end, when the youngsters will be looking for action."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p4 Mr 27 '36

"Harking back to the era of the Pony Express with California as a background, this outdoor romance production combines the requisite component parts for well balanced fare for the inveterate as well as the casual Western audience. . . The plot is typically Western with nothing new to distinguish it from numerous others, yet this doesn't detract from the presentation. . . Exploitation might be best directed toward children, but the production has material to interest adult patronage."

+ Motion Pict Herald p57 Ap 11 '36

"This is a pleasant Western. . . Included are pleasant songs against gorgeous outdoor scenes, some fine action shots of horse flesh."

+ N Y Exhibitor p43 Ap 25 '36

"Comedy and music have been added to this Western but the extra trimmings fail to save an implausible story. Director and most of cast have not helped it over the air pockets either. Its most profitable feeding ground will be on dualers, and then secondary. Also lacks name draw."

+ — Variety p15 Ap 29 '36

COUNTERFEIT. Je 12 '36 72min Columbia

Players: Chester Morris, Margot Grahame,
 Marian Marsh, Lloyd Nolan
 Director: Erle C. Kenton

A treasury department operative worms his way into a gang of counterfeiters in order to capture them. While doing so he falls in love with the sister of one of the gang members.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is an interesting drama with plenty of box-office appeal, a good marquee name and a timely plot. The dialogue and direction are excellent, as are the performances. Family."

+ Box Office p33 Je 13 '36

"Seems as if it would go over nicely in most any spot although perhaps not exactly fitted to the bigger situations. . . Satisfactory program feature in every way."

+ Film Curb p4 Je 13 '36

"This fast moving opus will have no trouble pleasing audiences. William Rankin's story and the screenplay he did with Bruce Manning, dealing with counterfeiters who try to outwit treasury department operators, are good pieces of writing. Interest is created at the outset and held until the end."

+ Film Daily p5 Je 5 '36

"Here is a neat piece of entertainment guaranteed to please the cash customers. It will fill its spot anywhere as much-better-than-average B product."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 2 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Tapping a subject which has had but little picture attention, this unreels as an interesting melodrama with authentic flavor. . . . The story . . . is an education in the working of government departments and seems accurately drawn."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 Je 4 '36

"Estimate: fair program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p24 Je 15 '36

"Exciting, suspenseful, convincingly presented, 'Counterfeit' will entertain generally and take care of itself satisfactorily as dual program entry anywhere below the more exclusive sectors."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 2 '36

COUNTRY BEYOND. Ap 24 '36 73min 20th century-Fox

Players: Rochelle Hudson. Paul Kelly. Robert Kent

Director: Eugene Forde

Based on the novel of the same title by James Oliver Curwood. A melodrama of the Northwest Mounted Police.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: fairly good; C: perhaps."
Christian Century p718 My 13 '36

"An entertaining and gripping drama of the great North Woods. Family & junior matinee."
Am Legion Auxiliary

"Remarkable for beauty of photography—that of the snow-covered Canadian Northwest and for the sustained action which develops an interest-holding story, 'The Country Beyond' is a picture which justifies high praise indeed. Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Mature." DAR

"James Oliver Curwood's story of the great north woods becomes better-than-average entertainment because of clever direction and scenic beauty of the country." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Clever dog actors add greatly to this picture which will please family audiences. Exciting for young children and those who do not thrill at a good fight." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 11 '36

"Family & junior matinee."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 30 '36

"Excellent for family & junior matinees."
+ Jt Estimates Ap 1 '36

"Suitability: family; especially suitable for children under 16."

Mo Film Bul p86 My '36

"Very good-family."

+ + Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"It is a pity this picture, with its excellent opening scenes and its superb photography, should not have had a stronger plot to develop. . . . The running to cover of the band of fur smugglers which promised high suspense in the beginning is more or less submerged beneath the love-making of two very plainly trademarked Hollywood actors. . . . Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: possible."

+ — Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Excellent for family & junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 1 '36

"A well-trained St. Bernard dog steals the picture. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

"A, Y and C: good melodrama of the Northwest with splendid outdoor photography."

Par M p42 Je '36

"Excellent for family & junior matinees."

+ Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"It is well above the average of such tales. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] a simple action film of the sort that used to hold audiences enthralled back in the cinema's early silent days. . . . Buck really stalks off with acting honors." B. L.

Boston Transcript p3 My 29 '36

"Entertainment in the grand old manner. . . . The story embodies nothing that has not been done a thousand times in every studio. But Eugene Forde uses his material understandingly with deft application of man-to-man appeal." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p29 Ap 11 '36

"The surprising thing about 'The Country Beyond' is that it's such an entertaining little picture. Certainly there are no surprises tucked away in the plot or characterizations. . . . Though a not too bright child of seven could predict every story development, 'The Country Beyond,' due to its strikingly beautiful background and amiable performances, comes as satisfying outdoor film fare." (2 stars)

Liberty p46 My 23 '36

"If you ask for a smattering of adult thought in your picture fare and a mature performance, possibly another choice will be better. . . . Paul Kelly, a fine young actor, is wasted in the part of Sergeant Cassidy, and Rochelle Hudson, in this opinion, could be used to greater advantage. The production is careful, however, and the natural scenery is appealing." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ap 30 '36

"'The Country Beyond' is a straight action melodrama, told simply and with no great attempt to modernize it. The characters after all are like the plot, uncomplicated and following fairly true to type. The effect is that of a Western in Canadian settings; of its kind, the picture is well enough. It is certainly restful, which may be just another word for dull."

N Y Sun p28 Ap 30 '36

"If our conclusions about the film have not been clear up to this point, they may be simply restated. It seems to be mush ado about nothing." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 30 '36

"The film has its lively and exciting moments, but there are not enough of them to lift it out of the so-so class. . . . The real hero of the occasion is a St. Bernard dog named Buck, who easily steals all the acting honors." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 Ap 30 '36

Reviewed by John Mosher

New Yorker p87 My 9 '36

"There's snow in them thar hills and whiskers on this here plot. Just about the time I had aptly decided that 'The Country Beyond' was fodder for the sticks, the preview audience at the Uptown began to storm, stomp and otherwise voice its approval when Virtue soundly belaboured Vice and the Mountie got his man." H. S.

Script p11 Je 6 '36

Time p58 My 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Powerful for those who like good, strong, he-man, outdoor drama. Fast direction, plus a good script and startling photography against a swell action background make this the best screen rendition of a James Oliver Curwood story to date. Family."

+ Box Office p23 Ap 18 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

COUNTRY BEYOND—Continued

"Just an ordinary, and familiar tale of the Northwest Mounties. It contains nothing that hasn't been done time and again. . . If you have to play it book it in for the [juvenile] shows."

+ Film Curb p13 Ap 11 '36

"[It] should make nice program entertainment. . . The lack of big names keeps it in the program class. The dog stuff is great. [Children], especially, should go for this show."

+ Film Daily p7 Ap 7 '36

"This extremely well-made story of the Mounties in the great north woods has all that it takes for virtually universal entertainment. Probably a greater proportion of theatergoers would vote this a swell little movie, or words to that effect, than would vote a preference for any other type. Only lack of box-office name strength will keep it from going high and it will cash in on word-of-mouth wherever it is played."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 4 '36

"More or less run-of-the-mill action material, this should be found entertaining for those who like their film fare in a lively vein and should be especially the kind of material the youngsters will go for in a big way."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Ap 3 '36

"It's pretty much formula Northwest Mounted Police romance and drama stuff. Though the various players give convincing performances, two dogs—one a hero, the other a menace—are the real stars of the show. Mainly an action picture, although abounding with expected substantiating effects, the picture is one that probably will appeal more to specialized action lovers and youngsters than to any other class of audience."

+ Motion Pict Herald p56 Ap 11 '36

"The 'Country Beyond' will be relegated to the program division by most houses because it lacks star lustre. Neither heroine Hudson nor hero Kent are strong enough to attract. . . Generally well made, better for neighborhoods than de luxers, the show falls into program category."

+ N Y Exhibitor p43 Ap 25 '36

"Apparently this is an experiment to see how the 'Thin Man' formula works on a mountie story. Answer is that it doesn't. The heavy, often laborious play for comedy serves no other purpose than that of slowing down the development of the story. There is very little to warm the pulse in this feature and the dialog is poorly written."

+ Variety p18 My 6 '36

"The 'Country Beyond,' with little of the James Oliver Curwood flavor left, is a routine B class picture, obviously developed as adolescent melodrama, suitable for neighborhood bills and juvenile patronage. Performances are prefatory, with exception of Paul Kelly."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 4 '36

COUNTRY DOCTOR. Mr 6 '36 110min 20th century-Fox

Players: Jean Hersholt. June Lang. George (Slim) Summerville. Michael Whalen. Dorothy Peterson

Director: Henry King

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This film is not at all what many of us may have expected. There is not a sensational thing about the picture. It is a beautiful, moving plea for better hospital service in small communities."

+ Bks & Films Ap '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

"A: good; Y: very good; C: doubtful."
Christian Century p518 Ap 1 '36

"Family-mature."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"The story, if not entirely convincing, is at least ingenious, and the climax, introducing the Dionne Quintuplets, is cleverly brought about. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p64 Ap '36

"Very good. Family-mature."

Motion Pict Guide Ap '36

"Family. Outstanding."

+ + Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"A and Y: moving human drama; C: they'll love Yvonne, Cecile, Marie, Annette, Emilie."

Par M p44 My '36

"Family-mature. Best of the month."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Quite apart from the climactic introduction of the Dionne quintuplets, Producer Darryl Zanuck's story, written for the occasion, is distinguished entertainment. . . Commercialization by the motion picture of a human event has rarely been done in such virtuous simplicity, such sensitiveness, such warming human spirit. But, then, all of the elements existed for the required inspiration." J. P. Cunningham

+ + Commonweal p609 Mr 27 '36

"[It is] destined to be one of the greatest commercial successes of all time. . . As for the quintuplets themselves, they cavort with the unstudied appeal of a litter of puppies. . . And they do it all with a baby charm that will set audiences to aching and ohing as they have never ached and ohed before. 'The Country Doctor' finds the always capable Jean Hersholt giving the finest performance of his career." (4 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p45 Ap 11 '36

"I don't see anything funny in childbirth and have always been sickened by barber shop jests in regard to it. So I was given pretty deep nausea by the slapstick Keystone comedy which the manufacturers of 'The Country Doctor' put into the birth of the quintuplets. . . Whoever is responsible for the vulgar comedy of the birth episode ought to be taken out behind the 20th Century Fox barn and spanked, with sound effects. . . There is a great deal of diphtheria and similar tragedy in the early footage of this story, a little too strong for your wee ones, in my opinion, and that's why I [ask] you not to take them, as you might naturally suppose you ought."

Life p24 My '36

"Homespun humor and sentiment, well mounted and acted; and since the Dionne Quints, showing only in the last static two reels, are really stunning babies, you can take this part as a sort of news feature, walking out when necessary."

Otis Ferguson

New Repub p222 Ap 1 '36

"We never suspected we would be recommending this one. By all portents 'The Country Doctor' promised such a welter of bathos and deluge of platitudes as would leave the theatres soggy for months afterward. We can only report a well-devised tale about a country company doctor."

Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p33 Ap '36

"[It is] an ordinary picture. . . The story of [the quintuplets'] birth forms the basis of a picture which has few, if any merits, beyond their appearance."

Mark Forrest

+ Sat R p736 Je 6 '36

"Pin another medal on Mr. Zanuck, and hand out a few to the ingenious script writers who managed to mix the Dionnes with a standby plot and made the whole thing as sensible as it is sentimental."

+ Stage p10 Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Unquestionably the first thing an exhibitor should do toward selling this picture to his public is to see it. . . . Nothing quite like it has come from the camera in a decade, if ever, and possibly no subject in the annals of showmanship has possessed such a wealth of plain, wholesome human appeal. All of the honest, homespun, powerful adjectives and advertising assurances abused and abandoned in a generation of exploitation best described as high-powered may be taken down from the top shelf, dusted off and applied without reservation by as many means and media as are or can be made available."

+ + Motion Pict Herald p38 Mr 21 '36

COWBOY AND THE KID. My 22 '36 58min
Universal

Players: Buck Jones. Billy Burrud. Dorothy Revier

Director: Ray Taylor

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Comedy in the form of pranks played by Buck Jones and his cowboy friends provides the highlight of this outdoor yarn, which ought to have no trouble pleasing the Western fans, especially the juvenile element."

+ Film Daily p29 Je 2 '36

"Though Jones stays off the horse more than usual, though the story gets more dramatic than in the usual Western, this ought to please Western advocates."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 Je 1 '36

CRIME OF DR. FORBES. Jl 17 '36 75min 20th century-Fox

Players: Gloria Stuart. Robert Kent. J. Edward Bromberg. Sara Haden

Director: George Marshall

A young physician, befriended by an older specialist, falls in love with the specialist's young wife. When the older man is seriously injured and pleads for an overdose of opiates to end his misery, the young doctor and two other doctors refuse him. After his sudden death, the young man is accused of a mercy murder but is freed when it is shown that the physicians had left the opiates which the specialist himself had taken. A verdict of suicide is then rendered.

Trade Paper Reviews

"Based on mercy killings, but with an ending that comes as a great surprise, this picture should be well received by all audiences as first-rate program fare."

+ Film Daily p24 Je 18 '36

"The pros and cons of mercy killing threshed out dramatically in a diverse but continuously entertaining narrative that becomes a real play about half-way through. . . . It is a well-made picture and, despite a lack of marquee magnetism and its dramaturgic flaws, it can be exploited into a good box-office drawing card on the strength of its much-discussed subject. Chiefly it is a neighborhood asset and there it will shine."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 8 '36

"A sound, logical story, combining romantic love interest, comedy, a topical news headline and thrill-drama, it is intelligently produced and acted with realistic conviction. Basically an exploitation feature, the story content opens new paths to novel, interest-quickenng publicity which, when approached from a controversial angle, place in the showman's hands a mass of unique advertising material."

+ Motion Pict Daily p14 Je 10 '36

"Picture of sound program merit and more than ordinary interest because of its mercy killing theme. . . . Problem has been stated for gripping emotional entertainment in story, direction, playing and fine craftsmanship. Exploitation angles are many and tie in with one of the headline controversies frequently in the news, helping to compensate for comparative lack of names. Should take care of itself nicely in almost any company on its own worth."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 9 '36

CRIME PATROL. Ap 7 '36 58min Empire

Players: Ray Walker. Geneva Mitchell. Virginia True Boardman

Director: Eugene Cummings

A tale of a prizefighter who joins the police force and winds up by capturing a gang of thieves and saving his sweetheart's life.

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] a satisfactory film for the smaller situations. Where out and out melodramas are liked it should please fairly well."

+ — Film Curb p5 My 23 '36

"Fair crook melodrama [with] plenty of action. . . . The plot is thin and the sequences are somewhat disjointed."

+ — Film Daily p11 My 13 '36

"Made for twin bills, action-loving neighborhoods, this should please in those sectors."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p29 F 10 '36

"Crudely fashioned in all departments but withal occasionally exciting, 'Crime Patrol' shapes up as passable filler fare for neighborhood houses. . . . Mechanics of the plot make for anything but plausibility, but this same sort of weakness runs all the way through the picture, in the acting, direction and whatnot."

— + Variety p15 My 13 '36

CRIMINAL WITHIN. O 1 '36 69min Invincible-Chesterfield

Players: John Miljan. Irene Ware. Iris Adrien

Director: Frank Strayer

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film under title of Murder at Glen Athol

Trade Paper Reviews

"A murder story with plenty of clews strewn about and many trails to follow, this melodrama is average entertainment for a double bill. The action and comedy are well mixed and there is enough excitement to satisfy."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p22 My 4 '36

"There are touches of comedy in the picture but interest is focused chiefly on the mystery. Circumstantial background is intricate and many-sided. Suspicion is directed in turn at nearly every member of the large cast but the solution is logically supported."

Motion Pict Herald p43 My 9 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

CRIMSON CIRCLE. (Release date not determined) 80min Universal

Players: Hugh Wakefield, Alfred Drayton, Noah Beery, June Duprez

Director: Reginald Denham

Based on a mystery story of the same title by Edgar Wallace. "The story . . . details the unraveling of the mysterious machinations of a criminal organization. The unmasking of the bandit chief forms the pivot of the story." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suitability: adults."

Mo Film Bul p61 Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Rather a verbose picturization of the Edgar Wallace thriller that speeds up, however, to a good finish and qualifies for moderately good entertainment."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 Ap 9 '36

"Despite the fact that Edgar Wallace thrillers were outmoded even in their day, Wallace always gave his plots a distinct atmosphere of plausibility. Present production of one of his best mysteries lacks this. Another point that calls for unfavorable attention is the over-acting of practically every member of the cast."

— + Variety p17 Ap 8 '36

D

DANCING FEET. F 5 '36 69min Republic

Players: Ben Lyon, Joan Marsh, Eddie Nugent, Purnell Pratt, Vince Barnett

Director: Joseph Santley

Based on the novel of the same title by Robert Eden. When her stern grandfather forbids her to marry a play boy, a wilful girl goes to a dance hall where she meets a young dancing instructor. Together they work out a plan for teaching dancing by mail order. When it becomes successful they overcome the grandfather's objections and marry.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The story is well put over. . . Joan Marsh and Eddie Nugent have pleasant personalities. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p64 Ap '36

"Unobjectionable for adults."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"This lively little screen play has some very good situations and clever dialogue."

+ Scholastic p30 Mr 7 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Generally speaking, 'Dancing Feet' leans toward the insipid, we fear, rather than dizzy intellectual heights. Which may be the reason a large audience at the theater yesterday afternoon appeared to enjoy it. . . Only the vivacity of some of the performances, particularly those of Miss Marsh and Miss Isabel Jewell, saves the piece from complete boredom." Marguerite Tazelaar

— + N Y Herald Tribune p8 Mr 28 '36

"'Dancing Feet' is a film to raise neither great enthusiasm nor resentment. It is just a picture to amuse the family audiences attracted in such crowds by the Roxy Theater. They seemed to like it yesterday. It would be interesting to know how much of it they could remember today." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p10 Mr 28 '36

"'Dancing Feet' owes whatever slight effectiveness it may possess to the fact that, with strictly nothing to say, it never stops shouting at the top of its collective and microphonic voice. This method makes for louder but hardly funnier farce comedy, which is precisely the classification into which 'Dancing Feet' must be dropped." B. R. C.

— + N Y Times p11 Mr 28 '36

"Among the least entertaining of the spring-time cinema attractions is 'Dancing Feet,' a generally preposterous little romance about a tap dancer and an heiress, which is made all the more so by some rather inefficient direction and less than satisfactory acting. . . Except for a good performance by Isabel Jewell as a wisecracking dance hall hostess, the acting is about as bedraggled as the film." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p17 Mr 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Clever dialogue helps this yarn of a society girl and a bell-hop with dancing feet over the hurdles. Family."

+ Box Office p23 F 1 '36

"A good cast has been well handled by Director Santley and the result is a very entertaining picture. . . 'Dancing Feet' should prove a satisfactory film of its kind and undoubtedly will please the majority who see it."

+ Film Curb p12 Ja 25 '36

"The screenplay writers have incorporated some good situations and dialogue which in spots is very clever. Along with a number of specialty dances for high spots, plus catchy tunes, it all adds up to good program entertainment."

+ Film Daily p9 Ja 20 '36

"This music and dance-tinged romantic comedy stacks up as average entertainment. . . It is played in a spirit of lightness and gayety. There is sufficient dramatic contrast to maintain interest."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Ja 16 '36

"Although there appears to have been so much emphasis placed on the dancing as to cause the plot to become slightly bogged down in itself, on the whole things move right along at a merry clip. . . Interspersed throughout the picture are musical numbers that should aid materially in exploitation."

Motion Pict Herald p37 Ap 4 '36

"Adequate independent production which owes its entertainment to Joseph Santley's direction, in that he has injected sufficient novelty to submerge a poor story. . . Staleness of the yarn is overlooked at times through some excellent dialog."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 15 '36

DANCING PIRATE. My 22 '36 85min RKO

Players: Charles Collins, Frank Morgan, Steffi Duna, Luis Alberni

Director: Lloyd Corrigan

Music: Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart

Filmed in color. Based on a short story Glorious Buccaneer by Emma-Lindsay Squier. "The plot deals with a dancing master shanghaied by pirates. The time is in the early 1800's. The dancer escapes when the pirate ship puts in for water off the coast of California. Spanish settlers mistake him for a member of the pirate band and he is captured in a comic defense of the town." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: enjoyable; Y: very good; C: good."

+ Christian Century p855 Je 10 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Director Corrigan has fulfilled a desire to give the sophisticated world something new and sweet for its jaded palate. Entire family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Pleasant entertainment for the family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature-good." DAR

"[It is a] pleasantly entertaining story. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A delectable opera bouffe made in color throughout, with particularly good dancing and comedy and authoritative details of Latin American customs. Excellent for any audience." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An especially appropriate cast and whimsical direction have created a real novelty among music and dance films. Outstanding technicolor production. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 23 '36

"Adults; family; children. Fascinating entertainment for all ages."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 9 '36

"I would add 'Dancing Pirate' to the list [of children's films] primarily because I think color films particularly interest young people. Our East Coast reviewers have called it a 'gay, romantic fantasy with unusual dances, vivid scenes and some good opera bouffe comedy.'"

+ Motion Pict & Family My 15 '36

"As full of chuckles as a Gilbert and Sullivan opera, as light and fanciful as the tinkling music box which accompanies the agile steps of the dancing master, this is a delightful film from beginning to end. . . Some of the scenes are so lovely it would be a joy to see them over and over again. Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: excellent."

+ + Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family-juvenile. Lively and pleasant, and the color the best, being the least intrusive, that a long film has had."

+ Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Technicolor, well directed and artistically executed dance numbers, and infectious music save the day for what might otherwise have proved mediocre entertainment. . . Family & junior matinees."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 13 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 14 '36

"Excellent for any audience."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Lively and pleasant, and the color the best that a long film has had. Family-junior."

Wkly Guide My 2 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is color that is the predominant element in 'Dancing Pirate.' . . The result is most completely satisfying to this observer, in the scenes that are supposed to take place at night. It is less admirable in such an episode as that of a ship at sea." E. F. Melvin

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 16 '36

"Robert Edmond Jones, probably the foremost scenic creator of the theatre, gives full expression to his genius in designing the color on this occasion, daubing deftly around the main characters, all capable." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p104 My 22 '36

"As a thing of beauty, the picture is a success. As a motion picture it is not. No color picture of equal length ever will be a success. The whole story of 'Dancing Pirate' could have been compressed within two reels. . . From a cinematic standpoint it is a dreary offering which will reduce color's box-office value even when it is applied to the short subjects which form its legitimate place on the screen. . . In defense of the story it must be admitted that it would take one of outstanding dramatic power to stand up against the competition of the impressive spectacles adorning it."

Hollywood Spec p9 My 23 '36

"Critics who keep one eye on their typewriters and the other on the box-office are going to back away from it. Critics not lassoed by any cares for the financial success of a picture, will like it. It goes back to the charm and sprightly gaiety of 'La Cucaracha.' . . It is to be admitted that the plot is slender as window-glass, and that no irresistible star names are in the cast."

Lit Digest p20 My 23 '36

"[It] appears to be more of an experiment in color values than anything else. . . The piece is relatively unimportant as original or outstanding entertainment. It is skillful, nevertheless, and professional in every aspect, from its score by Rodgers and Hart to its excellent performances, but, like so many Broadway's musical comedies of the last few seasons, it is in substance empty." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p16 Je 18 '36

"[It] seems like nothing but a Vitaphone short stretched out to feature length. This is perhaps due to the confused elaborateness of the score and dances, the lack of outstanding personalities in the cast and a certain lack of assurance in the production itself. . . As a Pioneer feature, all dressed up in picture postcard color, it is usually pretty dull." Eileen Creelman

+ + N Y Sun p28 Je 18 '36

"Nothing of vital importance to the welfare of the cinema has been accomplished by the production of 'Dancing Pirate.' . . [It] is a rather monotonous mixture of romance, melodrama and music." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p19 Je 18 '36

"The picture is shot entirely in technicolor, by far the best yet. Robert Edmond Jones hit high in 'Cucaracha,' in this one he has excelled his first success. . . Do I rave? Well, that's the way the picture got me. And there were a lot of me's at the preview." Rob Wagner

+ + Script p10 Je 6 '36

"We regret to announce that 'Dancing Pirate' is still fundamentally involved in creating absorbing screen composition in tender and/or lush hues; and, as usual, the story goes 'plonk,' and it's very hard to remember what it's all about. Some lovely effects are created, but we still can't understand why that should be sufficient reason for throwing every other dramatic quotient out of the window."

+ + Stage p10 Je 1 '36

"'Dancing Pirate' emerges as a lively and colorful nine-reeler. . . [The] color is still bright and raw but far better suited to songs and dances than the less showmanly shades of nature."

+ Time p24 Je 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"First full-length musical feature in Technicolor, this Pioneer production, for utter beauty and artistry, stands head and shoulders above anything previously done in tints. And, withal, it is a splendid picture, brightly written, ably directed and deftly enacted—with top cast honors going to Frank Morgan—all of which will guarantee it a niche among the season's best."

+ Box Office p17 My 16 '36

"Taken all in all this is top grade entertainment all the way. Any theatre owner can book it, plug it and be sure he won't disappoint his patrons."

+ Film Curb p11 My 16 '36

"If for no other reason than to see the Technicolor as here presented, this picture shouldn't be missed. The beauty and brilliance of some of the color is astounding. Everyone connected with the color job deserves every praise possible."

DANCING PIRATE—Continued

+ Film Daily p7 My 8 '36

"It has gorgeous color, intelligently and sparingly used by Robert Edmond Jones, but little else to recommend it as a potentially great box-office attraction. It will have to be sold almost entirely upon the novelty of color. . . The screen future of Charles Collins, debuting here in the title role, remains somewhat questionable. He is a dancer of no mean ability, but he is limited as an actor. . . Lloyd Corrigan's direction is open to criticism mainly in the matter of tempo. Yet his was a difficult assignment to cover lapses of interest in story."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 My 6 '36

"Demonstrating conclusively that great strides have been made in the understanding of color application, especially in its relation to rapid movement, this production devotes a goodly portion of itself to exploiting the efficiency of that technical feature."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 My 7 '36

"Demonstration is made in this picture that much progress has been made both in theory and practice of color as an embellishing adjunct to feature productions. . . Previewed in the Pantages Theatre, Hollywood. The improved color technique made a visible impression on the audience. It seemed to enjoy the comedy content of the story and was enthusiastic about the work of Frank Morgan. Nevertheless, it seemed to feel that some of the sequences in which the efficiency of color was being exploited were too long drawn out."

+ Motion Pict Herald p33 My 16 '36

"In technicolor, this needs that angle to help sell because the cast lacks star lustre. Hero Charles Collins may be a good dancer but he is a newcomer unknown to movie-goers. So is heroine Steffi Duna. . . Once the patrons are in, they may find it generally enjoyable, but the show needs intensive selling. Placing the technicolor show under such a disadvantage merely added more handicaps for showmen."

Phila Exhibitor p47 My 15 '36

"Result is gorgeous and in some respects far the best color offering thus far projected. . . Charles Collins, screen newcomer, gives a sparkling performance. . . [He] dances with verve and fine repertory skill through half a dozen original creations, and seems headed for places. . . Picture, if properly sold, should reap healthy harvest at tills on strength of its jovial entertainment and pictorial splendor almost everywhere."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 6 '36

DESERT GOLD. Mr 27 '36 55min Paramount

Players: Larry (Buster) Crabbe, Robert Cummings, Marsha Hunt, Tom Keene
Director: James Hogan

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It is perhaps a little complicated for children under twelve to follow. Suitability: family; especially suitable for children under 16."

Mo Film Bul p86 My '36

"This one in a double bill will hold its place because of a direct simplicity of plot, suitability in casting, and stirring scenes of excellent horsemanship. . . It is exciting but not too murderous for enjoyment. Adolescents, 12-16; probably enjoyable; children, 8-12: exciting."

Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Here is a fast-action outdoor melodrama that is far above the average. . . There are plenty of fights, gun-play and all that goes into the making of an exciting Western."

+ Film Curb p10 My 16 '36

"Outdoor melodrama of the 'A' type. Not only is it a painstaking job from a production standpoint, but story and cast are well above the usual rut, while James Hogan's direction keeps the action moving at a lively clip throughout."

+ Film Daily p7 My 8 '36

"A juvenile comedian doing a sissy tenderfoot from the east, brings a few laughs and some novelty to 'Desert Gold' but otherwise this is just another Western made up of the usual ingredients. Being pretty well made and including numerous good exteriors, it will serve satisfactorily for duals using equine operas as No. 2 features."

+ Variety p14 My 13 '36

DESERT JUSTICE. My 1 '36 58min Atlantic

Players: Jack Perrin, Warren Hymer, Maryan Dowling

Director: Lester Williams

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Amateurish acting. General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good story values, convincing performances, smart direction and a smash climax are among the above-par credits in this outdoor action drama. The clever telling of its robber-sleuth narrative, which takes it out of the typed Western bracket and some corking comic antics by Warren Hymer add considerably to the entertainment values. Family."

+ Box Office p25 My 9 '36

"This latest of the Perrin series is an exceedingly fast-moving tale that will more than satisfy all lovers of outdoor dramas. With the yarn starting in the East and then moving to the West the story contains many thrilling sequences, notably the blowing up of a dam."

+ Film Curb p8 Ap 25 '36

"Good outdoor entertainment combines cop and Western themes for plenty of action and comedy. . . Throughout, Warren Hymer, who has a small part, gets over comedy that would rate high in any picture. Photography is unusually good."

+ Film Daily p5 Ap 21 '36

"Perrin plays his role well and the other half of the romantic interest, Miss Dowling, gives proper feminine opposition. Warren Hymer's humorous contributions help considerably. The direction by Lester Williams keeps things moving."

Motion Pict Daily p11 Ap 21 '36

"Estimate: good Western."

+ N Y Exhibitor p26 My 10 '36

DESERT PHANTOM. Mr 10 '36 60min Supreme

Players: Johnny Mack Brown, Sheila Mannors, Karl Hackett

Director: S. Roy Luby

A western melodrama.

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 6 '36

"A, Y, and C: hardy and swift moving Western."

Par M p42 Je '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It has just about everything to make a high class Western. Johnny Mack Brown does very well in the lead role and the supporting cast do much to make the film the good one it is."

+ Film Curb p11 Mr 28 '36

"This is not only a first rate Western but a swell mystery number. Loaded with suspense, it keeps one guessing from beginning to end. . . . Wherever outdoor pictures are played this should do very well. It is worthy of 'better' dates."

+ Film Daily p4 Mr 21 '36

"Excellent harmonizing mystery with all of the elements of a first class Western puts 'The Desert Phantom' far ahead of its state righter class for cinch entertainment values, not only in the hinterlands where they like their Westerns hardy and fast, but in plenty of additional spots. If there were any lack of production funds in the picture, it fails to show, for it stacks up very favorably with some major B product."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 18 '36

"Combining elements of mystery, suspense and romance, this picture emerges as an interesting action melodrama. . . . The picture should please followers of outdoor stories."

+ Motion Pict Daily p20 My 4 '36

"'The Desert Phantom' provides better than average entertainment for an independent Western. Will satisfy where the saddle opera is standard program fare."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 28 '36

DESIRE. F 21 '36 89min Paramount

Players: Marlene Dietrich, Gary Cooper.

John Halliday, William Frawley

Director: Frank Borzage

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Well cast and acted, with beautiful scenery, this picture will prove interesting to adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: amusing; 14-18: sophisticated; 8-14: mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good." DAR

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Adults & young people." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Mature." Nat Bd of R

"While the picture displays Gary Cooper as a likeable young chap and Marlene Dietrich a little more animated than usual, it also demonstrates the limitations of both; neither infuse any feeling of reality into this artificially contrived plot and treatment. Lavishly mounted, with beautiful locations, excellent photography and careful sound effects, but unfortunately general atmosphere is in questionable taste. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Too mature in material and spirit to appeal to the under-adult age." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Sophisticated. Mature." Mrs T. G. Winter
Fox W Coast Bul Mr 14 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"This is a very entertaining picture; the dialogue and incidents are amusing, and though the pace lags a little, when sentiment succeeds adventure, it is well constructed and directed. All the cast act well, Gary Cooper in particular; Marlene Dietrich is rather inclined to overstress her natural powers of attraction. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

+ Mo Film Bul p64 Ap '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"I sit in dumb entrancement before the fleeting, passing photos of Marlene Dietrich in 'Desire.' Even when her stories are no good at all, she puts on a good album. . . . 'Desire' happens to be perhaps the best of all of Miss Dietrich's stories." Don Herold

+ Life p22 Je '36

"'Desire' [is] a clever film which is not of the first order." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p860 Ap 29 '36

"'Desire' [is a] . . . light and fast comedy, but becomes overcast with moral balancings by the end of the day. . . . On the whole the picture moves smoothly up through its middle part and then falls afoul of its own speed and luster. First it gets involved and then it gets goody-goody; and since everything that followed the climax is anticlimax anyway it ends up being about as dull a picture as 'Wife Versus Secretary.' And this is too bad. If it had been possible to forget the letter of morality . . . the film in some such abbreviated version would have been charming." Otis Ferguson

New Repub p222 Ap 1 '36

"Lubitsch is one of the three great names that have appeared on the screen—second only to Clair, and third to Chaplin. In this deft and entertaining picture his influence, as producer, is felt behind Frank Borzage's direction in every detail—which means that it's worth taking plenty of trouble to see. . . . The best of 'Desire' is its direction, and it is this, the tricky, smooth handling of a trite story, that will make it rank as one of the best ten films of 1936."

+ + New Statesman & Nation p528 Ap 4 '36

"At times the proceedings grow more than a little annoying. . . . Frank Borzage has delivered himself of a smart directorial job. . . . The Lubitsch touches come off in many places. In fact, with some restraint Desire might have been a genuine addition to the movie roster. But it is so hell-bent on sophistication that it actually achieves adolescence."

+ — New Theatre p35 My '36

"That master of cinema urbanity, Ernst Lubitsch, who seems to have a predilection for picturesque jewel thieves, tells another gay, suave and dexterous tale about their romantic activities in [this] delightful new comedy. . . . Mr. Cooper . . . provides one of the most truly skillful comedy portrayals of recent seasons. Miss Dietrich seems a little conscious of her glamour, but she is always striking and effective, offering her best performance in several years, also." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ + N Y Herald Tribune p10 Ap 13 '36

"At last Hollywood has found what to do with Marlene Dietrich. . . . Her latest picture 'Desire' is the gayest bit of comedy drama to arrive in town this season. . . . 'Desire' is a brilliant piece of work, enough to insure a joyous Easter Week for the Paramount audiences. . . . This is one film that's more fun to see twice than most productions once. I wonder how it would be a third time." Eileen Creelman

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

DESIRE—Continued

+ + N Y Sun p16 Ap 13 '36

"Permitted to walk, breathe, smile and shrug as a human being instead of a canvas for the Louvre, Miss Dietrich recaptures, in her new film, some of the freshness and gayety of spirit that were hers in 'The Blue Angel' and other of her early successes. The change is delightful, and so is the picture. . . [It is] one of the most engaging pictures of the season." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p15 Ap 13 '36

"An equally skillful combination of silky writing, satiny acting and the best possible direction by Frank Borzage, 'Desire' is the first gracefully light comedy drama that the talking pictures have known this year. You can see 'Desire' once, or if you feel about it as I do, you can see it several times, and you will find no faulty detail in it, no instance of bad taste, no scene or situation which could have been developed with greater skill. . . Mr. Lubitsch as supervisor and Mr. Borzage as director have brought to it such a deftness of treatment that when you see it—and I hope you will—you will have a gloriously cock-eyed time at it." William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p7 Ap 11 '36

"Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper are together again, after all these years since 'Morocco.' Apparently they belong together. . . Don't be late, for the beginning is a corker. . . Miss Dietrich and Mr. Cooper have not lost their talent for the representation of ardor, I assure you. They make a pretty picture together." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p80 Ap 13 '36

"[Marlene Dietrich] is in a comedy which, though it lacks the finer touches of Mr. Lubitsch's art, is three times as entertaining as any film which she has done in the last three years. . . That she marries the young man at the finish is a pity but, with the new brand of American censorship, I suppose inevitable; when it becomes plain that respectability is to be achieved, the elasticity goes out of the film and it limps home unsatisfactorily." Mark Forrest

Sat R p448 Ap 4 '36

"'Desire'—ridiculous and misleading title—is the best film in which Miss Marlene Dietrich has appeared since she left Germany, and the most amusing new film to be seen in London this week. . . Miss Dietrich is allowed to act in this film, even to sing, and what memories of the cheap alluring cabaret figure, the tilted top-hat, that husky voice recalls." Graham Greene

+ + Spec p616 Ap 3 '36

"The season's first sophisticated comedy, and the finest adult entertainment hereabouts. You will love the subtle, delicate flourishes of Dietrich and Cooper under the steadying hands of Borzage and Lubitsch."

+ + Stage p10 Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The combination of Dietrich and Cooper is one that will open the safe vaults. . . The names on the marquee virtually insure that, and the picture has intrinsic merit for big business. . . The two stars. . . work unusually well as a pair and in the script furnished them carry out assignments that provide a fine fit for their talents."

+ Variety p16 Ap 15 '36

DEVIL'S SQUADRON. My 1 '36 80min Columbia

Players: Richard Dix. Karen Morley. Lloyd Nolan

Director: Erle C. Kenton

"Dix is a pilot with a shadowed record. He has been cashiered from Marine aviation corps on conviction of bailing out instead of dying with fellow pilot. Unjustly accused, he has taken new identity and is ace test pilot for planes being devised to sell to army." Variety (Hollywood)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The photography is especially noteworthy for its spectacular shots of test pilots in action. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"One might reasonably ask the question when viewing this remarkable picture: 'What price aviation?' Entertainment and technical demonstrations give value to a good picture for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 30 '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Family, but not for nervous children."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 20 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide My 9 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The ghastly crashes may be too much for some spectators." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 6 '36

"That unsung hero of the airplane industry, the test pilot, has his somewhat grisly hour or so in 'Devil's Squadron,' a film distinguished by some excellent shots of stunt flying and an accompanying romance which does not run off at the deep end." J. T. M.

N Y Times p16 My 11 '36

"The only novelty in the Dix picture is one of numbers—four ships are crashed. Columbia, who produced it, is an enterprising studio and a proud one; they are not going to let their customers down with one or two or even three measly crackups. But so superb is Hollywood's mechanical technique, so expert its hokum, the story speeds across the screen like a bomber." Douglas Gilbert

+ — N Y World-Telegram p17 My 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Produced and directed adequately from an average story and an excellent screen play, this falls into the class of average programmers. Family."

+ — Box Office p25 My 9 '36

"An exciting and at times thrilling melodrama of test pilots, although a rather gloomy story. There are deaths in burning planes. The suspense is there and the picture probably will do okay in many situations."

+ — Film Curb p6 My 2 '36

"Strong action story on aviation subject packs good punch for the male trade in particular."

+ Film Daily p12 My 12 '36

"It is a smart idea but the picture has weaknesses of production that will keep it out of the real money class. As a programmer, however, it can be counted on for satisfaction in the less critical areas."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p4 Ap 27 '36

"Here is a melodrama of airplane test pilots drawn against a background of stark tragedy. Though climaxed by an heroic episode, the picture is marked throughout by a series of grim crash accidents. In portraying the hazards and dangers that are experienced by air-men, the yarn develops plenty of excitement of the brand that causes people to gather through morbid curiosity at the scene of any catastrophe. . . The production should click with those liking plenty of dangerous action."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 28 '36

"Drawing the women may be the exploitation job; appeal is there for the men, particularly those who appreciate a good fight against what appear to be unsurmountable odds."

Motion Pict Herald p32 My 16 '36

"Estimate: programmer for neighborhood houses, twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p46 My 15 '36

"Individually excellent performances, apt direction and well rounded scripting combine for above-average appeal in this airplane thriller. May stand alone in some spots and should bolster any double-biller. Richard Dix's presence in principal box office draft of film but it probably stands the best chances of getting extra coin by plugging new air thrills."

+ Variety p14 My 13 '36

"Airplane pictures are no longer novelty and standard thrills have been worn pretty threadbare. So, while 'Devil's Squadron' winds up enough dreadful fascination to hold sharp suspense most of the way and to assure satisfactory program rating, sombre character will mitigate against helpful word-of-mouthing, and box office indications are mild."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 27 '36

DON BOSCO. My 26 '36 88min Lux

Players: Gian Paolo Rosmino. Ferdinand Bayer. Maria Vincenza Stiffi

Director: Goffredo Alessandrini

Dialogue film in Italian with English subtitles. "[It] is the biography of a peasant boy who became a celebrated educator, a priest, and the founder of the Salesian Order. Forty-six years after his death in 1886, he was elevated to sainthood by Pope Pius XI." (N Y Sun)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is an] inspiring presentation of the life of a modern saint. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The performance has dignity, and while the film is not very entertaining, it should attract a specialized audience." Marguerite Tazelaar
N Y Herald Tribune p18 My 27 '36

"[It has] a decidedly limited appeal. . . The picture, perhaps because of the deeply religious spirit evinced throughout it, is more interesting than its outline. The simple tale is related with a tender exaltation and a faith that marvels at miraculous visions, but does not doubt them. . . The pace of direction, however, is painfully slow to movie-goers used to Hollywood tempo. Each scene takes a long time to pass a given point, and the entire production needs ruthless cutting down. The solemnity and sincerity of its religious sequences give the film its real dignity." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p33 My 27 '36

"Done in a reverent spirit, but free from any air of sanctimoniousness, this picture is well worth seeing. Its lack of exciting incident is compensated for by its impressive sequences. The acting of the principals is virtually faultless, and the support is excellent." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p27 My 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Exceptionally fine acting and good photography are among the merits of the film, which ranks among the most worthwhile of foreign importations."

+ Film Daily p10 My 28 '36

"Except for the fact of offering an interesting picturization of the life of a great humanitarian and educator, the film has little in it which will recommend it to the average American audience. Patrons of Italian descent, however, should find much in the film to interest them. There are a sufficient number of English subtitles to make for ready understanding."

Motion Pict Daily p6 My 28 '36

DON'T GAMBLE WITH LOVE. F 15 '36 65min Columbia

Players: Ann Sothorn. Bruce Cabot. Irving Pichel. Ian Keith

Director: Dudley Murphy

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A slow moving production, with an artificial plot, lacking expertness in both its acting and direction. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 18 '36

"There is nothing new in the treatment of this story, and the theme is certainly not new. Each move can be foretold by the average film-goer, who will find it difficult to maintain his interest in the characters and their problems. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

— Mo Film Bul p65 Ap '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A smooth film that builds itself up quickly to a smash climax with little let-down throughout its continuity. The story abounds with punch situations. Adults."

+ Box Office p33 Ap 25 '36

"Impressive performances by Ann Sothorn, Bruce Cabot, Irving Pichel and Ian Keith in top bracket dignify this rather familiar story of domestic [separation] on the issue of gambling and give it sufficient emotional tension for good program rating."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 11 '36

DON'T GET PERSONAL. F 17 '36 65min Universal

Players: Sally Eilers. James Dunn. Pinky Tomlin

Director: William Nigh

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: thin; Y: perhaps; C: no."

Christian Century p478 Mr 25 '36

"A rather boring picture. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre-unwholesome. Waste of time. Adult." DAR

"Pleasing entertainment. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

DON'T GET PERSONAL—Continued

"The adventures of the three and an unexpected romance make an amusing farce for the average program. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The action is swift and the whole provides light entertainment. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 28 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 14 '36

"The quaint singing of Pinky Tomlin and the clowning of Sally Eilers and James Dunn are not enough to compensate for so cheap a plot. Family. (DAR and Women's University Club rate this adult.)"

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p65 Ap '36

"The combination of James Dunn and Sally Eilers has charmed many people in the past, but it is powerless to raise this tiresome story to the level of acceptable entertainment. It is a light farce composed of unlikely situations. . . Some bits are ludicrous, but in the main the humor is forced and crude; good photography and settings are wasted on a poor theme. Adolescents, 12-16: waste of time; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This spontaneously-amusing comedy replete with good, honest laughs, is made to order for mass appeal. While the plot is a never-to-be-taken-seriously bit of nonsense, it keeps moving at a fast pace and puts audience in a happy frame of mind. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ap 11 '36

"Entertaining secondary feature lacking in marquee strength for single runs."

Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 6 '36

DOUGHNUTS AND SOCIETY. Mr 27 '36 63min

Mascot

Players: Louise Fazenda, Maude Eburne, Eddie Nugent, Ann Rutherford, Hedda Hopper

Director: Lewis D. Collins

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: slapstick comedy that is slightly remindful of the old Mack Sennet plays; C: if interested."

Par M p42 Je '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Those two dependable comedienues, Louise Fazenda and Maude Eburne, take this slapstick farce and romp away with it, meanwhile extracting every ounce of laugh material and keeping audiences amused by their knockabout methods. Family."

+ Box Office p57 Ap 5 '36

"It's a nice little bit of entertainment that will do well in the smaller situations. . . Amusing, light stuff that neighborhood audiences generally like."

+ Film Curb p13 Mr 21 '36

DRACULA'S DAUGHTER. My 22 '36 74min

Universal

Players: Otto Kruger, Gloria Holden, Marguerite Churchill, Irving Pichel

Director: Lambert Hillyer

"The story deals with a vampire who creates a reign of terror by emerging at night to satisfy a blood-curdling obsession and leaving a trail of dead." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"By the powerful use of every device of lighting, sound effect, and symbolism, Director Hillyer has made this gruesome thriller horribly enthralling, and it doubtless will show to full houses with ambulances-in-waiting. Adults only." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Addicts of the occult-and-horror school of film will appreciate the strikingly imaginative achievements of scenarist, director and cameraman which result in a film outstanding of its unpleasant kind. Adults: matter of taste; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Adults—good." DAR

"Mature." Nat Bd of R

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"This weird and exotic presentation of psychic manifestations will afford interesting and thrilling entertainment for those who delve into psychic research. The picture is the result of excellent casting and study and is throughout thought-provoking and distinctly mature in theme and development. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul My 16 '36

"Too morbidly exciting for the family but will entertain adults who like this form of drama. Adults."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 7 '36

"Audiences for this film should be strictly limited to mature persons whose nerves are steady and capable of quick comeback. Mature."

Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"The ethical or social value is slight, although evil influences are vanquished in the end. Appreciation depends on the value the individual places on the strange and eerie. Many will thoroughly enjoy it, and others consider it a zero mark in entertainment. Adolescents, 12-16: too strong; children, 8-12: terrifying."

Motion Pict R Je '36

"Anything so deeply embedded in the superstitions of the race as vampirism is (and its hold on the imagination is still tremendous) must have in it the stuff for something much more important than paste-board melodrama." J. S. H.

+ Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 6 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"A highly entertaining and interesting horror story, produced in a dignified manner, carefully directed and well acted. Mature."

+ Wkly Guide My 9 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Terror hangs over the whole cast incessantly. It is well done but the very young or very nervous had best beware."

+ Canadian M p61 My '36

"Miss Holden, upon whom lay the complete burden of producing reality from phantasy, achieved a brilliant blending of the human elements with the subtle aura of weirdly malign powers, the chilling sweep of things unspoken. Her work bears the stamp of unguessable abilities. She is definitely a great find. . . The student of cinema will find a wealth of study material in the penetratingly intelligent synthesis of Miss Gloria Holden." Paul Jacobs

Hollywood Spec p12 My 9 '36

"Lambert Hillyer's direction is admirable for its speed and conciseness. While he fails to convert one to the belief in vampires, he gives them a Blue Beard's fascination—and who could ask for more? We could, though, and do, ask Universal to refrain for the present from more, and even better, Draculas." Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p8 My 18 '36

"Quite terrifying it all is, to be sure, and we strongly recommend your stopping off at a near-by florist to buy a few sprays of bat-thorn to hold protectively over your head as the wolves howl on the screen and hooded figures drift through the eddying fog." F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p14 My 18 '36

"Gloria Holden does a lovely piece of work as the countess. . . Otto Kruger, usually a capable actor, seems to muffle his role as the doctor who is a phony all through the film. Perhaps the part is too serious for him. But don't let it bother you, the picture is an effective series of chills." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World-Telegram p19 My 19 '36

"With the aid of Director Lambert Hillyer, Garrett Fort managed ways of frigidairing the spine, eliciting shrieks from impressionable females. My prime quibble with these 'fantastic' screen sagas is the fact that they aren't sufficiently so. Gloria Holden draws a bold-lined figure of the blood-lusting lady." H. S. Script p11 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A successful sequel and a better picture than its predecessor, the original 'Dracula.' Although eerie and true to the vampire tale it is based on, this yarn is plausible and intelligent. Horror is at no time deliberately forced. Adults."

+ Box Office p17 My 16 '36

"There's plenty of the weird, thrill stuff in this one which has been well handled by all concerned. . . They'll squeal at much of the action and get their fill of spooky stuff."

+ Film Curb p13 My 9 '36

"Not only because the name of Dracula is still fresh enough in the movie-public mind—but also because the present sequel is a very good melodrama of its kind on its own merits, this attraction should do itself credit at the box-office. It is essentially an exploitation picture aimed at folks who like the eerie stuff, and this clientele will get full satisfaction from it."

+ Film Daily p10 My 18 '36

"With the stout box-office success of 'Dracula,' 'Frankenstein' and the other chillers on Universal's list a matter of record, it is a safe bet that this latest one will make money. It is, in fact, one of the very best in its class, sustaining its eerie suspense without too much straining of credulity and weaving a spell of conviction by clever use of a pseudo-scientific patter, solemnly used by a just-right cast."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 2 '36

"A creditable successor to the original, 'Dracula's Daughter' makes its debut as an efficient chiller, packing a nightmare twist that is certain to please the horror patrons. Backed with appropriate exploitation, the film should have little trouble, packing them in where mystery chillers go."

+ Motion Pict Daily p22 My 4 '36

"A picture of creeps and chills, this production bases its bid for entertainment and commercial success upon the unusual and potent appeal of terror and thrill situations. A worthy sequel to the shuddery 'Dracula,' memory of which is still vivid, it is built of eerie and weird material, which, quite smartly, is more spine-tingling in character than terror inspiring."

+ Motion Pict Herald p42 My 9 '36

"Horror followers will be plenty satisfied. So will exhibitors who play its exploitation possibilities to the hilt."

Phila Exhibitor p47 My 15 '36

"This is a chiller with plenty of ice; a sure-fire waker-upper in the theatre and a stay-awake influence in the bedroom later on. Rates tops among recent horror pictures and, as such, figures to deliver nice grosses."

+ Variety p12 My 20 '36

"From the standpoint of intelligent production and darkly fascinating story development this is the best of the brood of horror pictures Universal has so successfully whelped for entertainment and big box office rewards. That it will stand up with the best of its macabre predecessors at the pay window seems assured. . . Garrett Fort must be given high credit for concocting a story . . . [which] is well nigh perfect drama."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 2 '36

DRAGNET. Ap 15 '36 64min Burroughs-Tarzan

Players: Rod La Rocque, Marian Nixon, Betty Compson

Director: Vin Moore

Based on the play of same title by Willard Mack. "[It details the] conflicts between the district attorney's office and an exclusive circle of influential crooks." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] a mediocre gangster's tale with [an] ordinary solution. Adults."

— + Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is not big-time stuff but should do nicely in the smaller situations and on the dual bills. There is nothing new in the story which has been done many times since Mack wrote his version."

+ — Film Curb p6 Ap 4 '36

"A cast of good troupers does its best with the familiar material provided in this story, but lack of novelty or anything in the way of a big punch holds it to secondary spot classification, although the production itself is a generally workmanlike job."

+ — Film Daily p11 My 13 '36

"The piece is above the average [independent feature] in cast, direction and production and would go forward profitably in double harness if its plot material were not so hackneyed. As it is, it will do all right as a support number in the smaller houses."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 30 '36

"Forced dramatic and comedy situations portrayed by Rod La Rocque, Marian Nixon and Betty Compson in generally inadequate roles are of no avail in the unwinding of this tale of underworld doings. . . The production bears the marks of taste and expenditure, evident in the sets and other accoutrements. It is definitely for dual bills."

— + Motion Pict Daily p9 Ap 28 '36

"Since the crooks vs. law angle is hardly new, new selling angles will have to be used to lift this out of the usual category. As it stands, the picture is best fitted for the twin bill houses."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p26 My 10 '36

DRAGNET—Continued

"A lot of theatric water has flowed under the box office bridge since Willard Mack wrote the stage play, 'The Drag-Net,' and the one-time thriller as here screened makes but feeble bid as entertainment. . . Picture will find its level in remoter multiple bill regions."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 8 '36

DUBROVSKY. Mr 29 '36 80min Lenfilm

Players: Boris Livanof. E. Samarin-Elsky.
N. Monakhof

Director: A. V. Ivanovsky

A dialogue film in Russian with English sub-titles. Made in Russia to commemorate the centenary of the death of Alexander Pushkin. The film is based on Pushkin's novel of the same title. "It is about a proud landowner who, when he is deprived of his estates by his enemies, gets his revenge by organizing a band of muzhiks and turning into a sort of Russian Robin Hood." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Dubrovsky' . . . is the perfect Byron of Pushkin's imagination. And so powerful was Pushkin's imagination that 'Dubrovsky' has neither more nor less to say about the Marxist war than Byron would have had. I do not happen to know what standing Pushkin has at the moment as a revolutionary, but the question is perhaps immaterial in view of the completeness with which his tone has been taken in this film. The hero is purely, in the romantic sense, an individual; he has no class significance that I can see."

Nation p492 Ap 15 '36

"It would be gratifying to be able to report that in this film we had another prize-winner. . . 'Dubrovsky,' however, gives us no such opportunity. The novel is obviously the stuff that good films are made of but whatever merits it possesses are more than cancelled by a routine, unimaginative transcription and a variety of stagey histrionics that is fortunately rare in most Russian products."

— + New Theatre p35 My '36

"Outside of the fact that it is, so far as I know, the first Bolshevik photoplay to have a landowner, even though a disinherited one, for a hero, and that its love story is merely Hollywood with a Muscovite accent, [it] has little about it to attract or hold attention. It has some lively scenes of the horse opera school, but it decidedly belongs among the minor achievements of the Second-Five-Year Plan." Richard Watts, Jr.

— N Y Herald Tribune p10 Mr 30 '36

"'Dubrovsky' is a well-made and entertaining film giving the spectators an approximate idea of life on the big Russian estates about 150 years ago. . . Photographed in the best Russian style and acted faultlessly by all concerned, this movie is well worth seeing."

H. T. S.
+ N Y Times p17 Mr 30 '36

"It is, of course, mere repetition to state again that when the Soviet films are good they are extraordinarily good and that when they are bad they are woefully mediocre, but the fact remains that such is the case and that 'Dubrovsky' definitely comes under the latter classification. Indeed, small excuse can be found for such a ragged narrative and such slipshod direction and second-rate photography." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p17 Mr 31 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is an] entertaining story."

+ Film Daily p4 Ap 1 '36

"The result is active, if somewhat unimpressive drama, lightened by little or no comedy, and suitable, it would appear, only to those whose sympathies are with the Russia of today. The theme is as usual with the Soviet importations, the protest, armed or otherwise, of the lower orders against the cruel overlordship of the nobility."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p3 Ap 11 '36

E

EARLY TO BED. Je 5 '36 75min Paramount

Players: Mary Boland, Charlie Ruggles.
George Barbier, Gail Patrick

Director: Norman McLeod

"Ruggles [is cast] as a clerk who sees promotion after twenty-six years on the same job in the employ of a ruthless manufacturer. His courtship of Miss Boland finally takes, after twenty years of romantic association. Married, he combines business with his honeymoon by taking Miss Boland to a health resort love nest where he plans to make an office coup by selling big merchant, George Barbier, several million glass eyes." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: amusing; Y: very good; C: good."

Christian Century p887 Je 17 '36

"Enjoyable entertainment for the family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 6 '36

"A rippling comedy that is only possible with these stars. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

"[It is] a highly amusing comedy. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Je 6 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This is a smart little comedy which at times becomes farcical without going all the way and becoming an out-and-out farce comedy. . . You will like 'Early to Bed.' It is not a big picture, but it will make you laugh, and that is something."

+ Hollywood Spec p10 Je 6 '36

"[It is] a frivol of no painstaking plot but eminently satisfying as screen fare. The plot, indeed, is so light it might almost be described in a score of words."

+ Lit Digest p21 Je 6 '36

"Although strictly for neighborhood consumption, this is the kind of trailer for that masterpiece of comedy that may some day be written about the science of psychoanalysis. . . [It is] above the average for double-bill comedy."

+ Time p40 Je 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Unusually original laugh fare that brings out the Ruggles-Boland team in all its sappy glory. Taken from a story that abounds with out-of-the-ordinary situations, this should help perpetuate the comedy combination. Family."

+ Box Office p69 My 30 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The laugh sequences follow one another at a fast clip. . . 'Early to Bed' ought to keep any audience in rare good humor. Will fit in nicely in any situation."

+ Film Curb p12 My 30 '36

"Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles' latest comedy riot brings forth seventy-five minutes of laughter in every form possible with most of [the] time being spent on howls. There is hardly a minute for relaxation with hilarious situations following each other in rapid succession. The picture should click with every type of audience, for the comedy is wholesome as well as funny."

+ Film Daily p9 My 25 '36

"This is surely a tonic for every depressive ailment. As an effective laugh-getter it surpasses all the Mary Boland-Charlie Ruggles farce comedies thus far. The situations and the supporting dialogue are aimed carefully and craftily at the solar plexus and succeed hilariously in hitting the mark. . . The film is top notch for any box office in all spots."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 My 22 '36

"A field day for the Ruggles-Boland combination, this will depend on their draw for its grosses. The picture, otherwise, is a farce that ought to be plentifully pleasing, especially to family audiences."

Phila Exhibitor p23 Je 1 '36

"There is one sure test for good comedy: does it make folks laugh? By that token 'Early to Bed' is one of the best. It is filled with solid guffaws, projected by those expert comedians, Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles. . . Picture has every prospect of doing fat business, both in the solo spots and as duals topper from the most exclusive zones to the general run of subsequents."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 21 '36

EDUCATING FATHER. J1 10 '36 58min 20th century-Fox

Players: Jed Prouty. Shirley Deane. Dixie Dunbar. Spring Byington. Kenneth Howell

Director: James Tinling

"The action starts when Jed Prouty, head of the tribe, insists that his eldest son, Kenneth Howell, follow him in the drug business and abandon his own ideas to become a flier. When the boy disobeys and gets into trouble while flying the matter is made a serious issue. Howell promises to remain on the ground, but breaks his pledge to get Prouty back from a fishing trip in time to save the drug store lease." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family & junior matinee. The picture is replete with humor, suspense and interest and the well chosen cast under sympathetic direction give very human and appealing characterizations."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Je 1 '36

"A sequel to 'Every Saturday Night,' this picture in spite of its juvenile and 'Babbitish' flavor proves pleasant and wholesome entertainment. . . Suitable for the family & junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 3 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This picture comes under the heading of good clean fun, with lots of laughs and comedy, plenty of thrills and a marquee full of good performances."

+ Box Office p83 Je 13 '36

"[It] will have to be content with the twin bills and the neighborhoods."

+ Film Curb p14 My 30 '36

"The Jones family is again presented in an entertaining picture of small town family life. For the family and neighborhood trade, it should please well. . . Except for a flying scene which is overlong and in spots too slap-sticky, the piece holds true to form as an episode in the life of a regular family."

+ Film Daily p7 My 23 '36

"It is good family fare for the small towns and the less discerning neighborhoods, at which it is aimed. . . The development of this made-to-order narrative. . . is safely in character, capturing the small-town flavor with success, and it would have seemed quite real if the direction by James Tinling had not raised its key to a somewhat forced and strident note. Over-emphasis of emotional elements throughout is the chief fault of an amusing and human little opus that is told with spirit and enacted by a cast that seems to have stepped right out of your own home town."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 20 '36

"This second offering in the Jones family series is a pleasing comedy and should sustain interest despite its slight plot. . . [It] is entirely suitable for smaller communities and neighborhoods at which the picture is aimed."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 My 21 '36

"A wholesome combination of domestic comedy drama and thrill action, this, number two in the American family series looms as desirable entertainment for audiences for which its trade name intends it."

+ Motion Pict Herald p37 My 30 '36

"Undeterred by the fact that no cheering greeted the Jones family in the first in this series, 20th Century-Fox has now made the second, which also emerges as neighborhood, twin bill material."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 Je 1 '36

"It should find a welcome program spot wherever home folk seek wholesome entertainment based on the commonplaces of everyday life. . . More of the thin youthful romance, however, would have been acceptable, and a little less of the sky stunting, which is held too long for anticipated comedy."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 20 '36

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN. Mr 20 '36 84min 20th century-Fox

Players: Irvin S. Cobb. Rochelle Hudson. Johnny Downs. Norman Foster

Director: James Flood

"[The] story deals with a manufacturer who loses interest in business upon the death of his life-long competitor. He takes a vacation and returns to find that his nephew has set himself up as a little Napoleon who regards his uncle as a has-been. So the old man takes over the affairs of the heirs of the rival factory, forcing his nephew to say 'Uncle.'"

Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: rather good; Y: amusing; C: little interest."

Christian Century p646 Ap 29 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The story-pattern is not new, but the cast comes to life in pleasant fashion. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Amusing; fine direction. Mature-family." DAR

"The cast is generally capable and the direction intelligent, but the production suffers from lack of plot novelty and story plausibility. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

EVERYBODY'S OLD MAN—Continued

"A thoroughly entertaining picture. Family." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"The direction maintains interest in spite of the fact that the entire plot is predictable in the opening sequences. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The one flaw in the picture is the continuous drinking by the young people. It is introduced to emphasize the moral lesson. It is regrettable that some other means is not used that would have been just as efficient. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 21 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p86 My '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: little interest."

Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 8 '36

"The story-pattern is not new, but the cast comes to life in pleasant fashion. Family." Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"For those who like Irvin S. Cobb as an actor. Family."

Wkly Guide Mr 14 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It gives audiences a laugh a minute." Laura Elston

+

Canadian M p42 Mr '36

"There is nothing new in the story from which 'Everybody's Old Man' was made, and Irvin Cobb comes a long way short of being a good actor, yet the picture is thoroughly enjoyable. From the first the story is obvious.

Pat McNutt and A. E. Thomas, writers of the screen play, are to be congratulated upon the shameless manner in which they refused to think up anything new and the expert manner in which they used everything old in fabricating as amusing a little comedy as one could wish for. . . Put this picture on your list of those to see. You will have a pleasant time."

+

Hollywood Spec p9 Mr 14 '36

"As a mirror of industrial methods, 'Everybody's Old Man' could scarcely be called realistic. But as unpretentious entertainment of the papa-knows-best sort the film is pleasing and full of quiet laughs, even though papa himself, beneath his benign exterior, remains a vicious robber baron." (3 stars) Beverly Hills Liberty p51 Ap 18 '36

"[Irvin Cobb] turns actor in 'Everybody's Old Man' and knocks a three-bagger. . . It goes down surprisingly smoothly, and the idea of his getting himself a job in a rival canning factory and ruining his own business simply to show up his upstart nephew who is managing it, is extremely amusing." Don Herold

+

Life p26 Je '36

"Although 'Everybody's Old Man' has been filmed before, as 'Workingman,' with George Arliss in the leading role, the story probably will be found refreshing still—especially by an older generation that believes its ways are the sound ways of life. . . The story has many touching and sentimental moments for picture fans who like to cry a little. . . Mr. Flood directs the picture with his customary conscientiousness, offering a sedately-paced story, convincing in its detail and warmly human in its appeal." Marguerite Tazelaar

+

N Y Herald Tribune p15 Mr 26 '36

"Mr. Cobb's second feature puts him in the role George Arliss played so gently and typically several years ago. . . The story is still gentle, but Mr. Cobb's personality, if it lacks the acid comedy of Mr. Arliss, has a decidedly robust quality of its own. This second version is the more amusing. . . Although Mr. Cobb keeps his wistfulness well under control, 'Everybody's Old Man' has its full quota of sighs, sentimental allusions, and old portraits. It has also some grand wisecracks laconically uttered by Mr. Cobb, and some amateurish performances by Rochelle Hudson and Johnny Downs." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p28 Mr 26 '36

"After a glance at 'Everybody's Old Man' it becomes difficult to understand why Hollywood has failed to star the noted humorist [Irvin S. Cobb] long before this. . . He has succeeded in imparting a homely and genuinely American flavor to a character depicted somewhat more urbanely by George Arliss when the story was first filmed as 'The Working Man' in 1933." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 26 '36

"Although the film's complications include all the staple elements of homespun comedy, it also has its moments of charm and humor. . . Let's call it a minor lark that is occasionally mildly clever." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p21 Mr 26 '36

"There is actually a good deal of nonsense in 'Everybody's Old Man,' but we are expected to take it in all seriousness. . . Whatever Mr. Cobb thinks of the thesis, he probably had a good time playing with it. However, Mr. Cobb, being, after all, no Garbo, can hardly carry a picture that is pretty poor stuff at bottom, and make it any great go." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p87 Ap 4 '36

"'Everybody's Old Man' is a typical Will Rogers vehicle which Cobb plays in the Rogers tradition, italicizing the laughs and slapping the sentiment on thick. As well-written family fare, it may establish a new screen personality."

Time p34 Mr 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is a first feature vehicle for Irvin S. Cobb and it is good program entertainment. Family."

+ Box Office p27 Mr 21 '36

"Irvin Cobb's debut as a full-fledged actor is not altogether auspicious due to poor story material. The plot has been used many, many times and no new twists are apparent in this telling. . . The star lacks a good deal when it comes to acting and if there was any idea of building him up to do the late Will Rogers stuff, it may be forgotten."

— Film Curb p33 Mr 14 '36

"Irvin S. Cobb clicks as star of excellent comedy with strong cast support."

+ Film Daily p9 Mr 27 '36

"Not a Zanuck special, but a pleasant evening's entertainment, due for consistent grosses wherever it plays. It is extremely well written, nicely directed and played for all that is in it. . . Cobb is a character rather than a character actor and his personality is delightful. He seems to be enjoying himself hugely and his enjoyment is infectious. Momentarily, you expect him to look directly into the camera and say, 'Unaccustomed as I am to public acting. . . Nonetheless, Cobb is a name to be reckoned with on theater marquees.'"

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 7 '36

"Irvin S. Cobb, in his first starring picture, comes through most commendably and his picture as enjoyable entertainment is geared nicely to a popular formula. . . Cobb reveals a definite screen personality and it may be that part of the mantle of the late Will Rogers which Darryl F. Zanuck here strives to throw around him may fit. There is no way of forecasting such an eventuality until the public casts votes in this and succeeding pictures."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Mr 9 '36

"This production is a readaptation of 'The Working Man,' made several years ago with George Arliss in the leading role. The basic plot has been unchanged; only the atmospheric backgrounds have been altered, but it is still engrossing, human interest entertainment. With Irvin S. Cobb, whom it is quite evident, 20th Century-Fox is grooming to take the place of the late Will Rogers, and the supporting cast completely new, there is every reason to anticipate that this picture will receive the same popular reception as the other. As he appears in the picture Cobb is more himself in character than he is an actor."

+ Motion Pict Herald p56 Mr 14 '36

"Pleasant, with Cobb carrying most of the comedy, it will probably prove light for de luxers but will get most attention in neighborhoods or on twin bills."

N Y Exhibitor p31 Mr 25 '36

"20th-Fox has done well by Irvin Cobb on his first feature in which he stands on his own. Picture undoubtedly will establish the erstwhile writer as a screen personality. His value, however, will depend on the story material given him by the studio. . . Cobb gives a natural performance as the trustee. He's no actor but in his naturalness lies his value. He handles dialog well, is at all times convincing."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 7 '36

EX-MRS. BRADFORD. My 15 '36 80min RKO

Players: William Powell, Jean Arthur, James Gleason, Eric Blore, Robert Armstrong

Director: Stephen Roberts

"Powell, surgeon by profession, and a detective by inclination, becomes interested in the case of a jockey killed in an important race. Jean, his ex-wife, stumbles upon some clues and aids Powell, whom she wishes to remarry." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A": very good; Y: excellent; C: probably good."

Christian Century p718 My 13 '36

"The slick speed of direction and the polite slapstick in this farce make an enjoyable film, suitable for the family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good—mature." DAR

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Womens Clubs

"Free of objectionable situations and very well acted and directed. A nicely staged film for family audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"This picture exposes the evil practices of the race-track racket. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Adults & young people. An unusually exciting and well photographed horse race gives added zest to the closing scenes." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 9 '36

"Humor, suspense, excitement and the merry rivalry between husband and wife added to excellent acting and skilful direction, give this picture high entertainment value. Family."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ap 27 '36

"Family-mature."

+ Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"Movie epicures will greatly enjoy this clever detective play. . . Along with other good points this film can claim one of the most exciting horse races we have ever seen pictured. Adolescents, 12-16: mature; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"The story is consistent and cleverly adapted to the screen and because of its lack of gruesome details and very clever dialogue turns out as real entertainment which is sophisticated but never vulgar. Adults."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 1 '36

"A gay, effervescent comedy with a generous dash of mystery. . . General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

"The clever interweaving of an intricate murder mystery with an amusing story of marital disagreement furnishes entertainment of fresh and out-of-the-ordinary variety. . . Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 2 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a mystery story that has been done with a light touch, as much for its humors as for its excitements. Though it may not be a matter of world-shaking importance, the result is a generally entertaining concoction, pleasantly acted by William Powell and Jean Arthur." E. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 25 '36

"Bill Powell and Jean Arthur make the picture worthwhile. Bill gives us in full measure what he has taught us to expect from him, and Jean continues to create the impression that each of her appearances is better than all her previous ones. She lifts this undistinguished and gruesome story into the realm of high comedy, garnering laughs aplenty as she romps through the part. . . I can remember no horse race sequence in a picture more thrilling than this one contains. It, too, is something that almost in itself makes it worth seeing."

+ Hollywood Spec p10 Ap 25 '36

"Much in the giddy mood of 'The Thin Man,' 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford' is just about the liveliest and silliest detective piece of the season. Bouncing through its mad course, the film seldom pauses to make sense. And though conscientious cinema sleuths may find its motivation both hazy and ill-founded, this swiftly flowing tale abounds in gaiety and excitement." (3 stars) Beverly Hills Liberty p45 Je 6 '36

"Some critics, after careful weighing of all the values, may give the new picture a place right alongside 'The Thin Man.' It would not be astonishing to find a few critics describing it as better. One or two already have. . . Anthony Veiller took it and made of it a scenario laden with furiously witty lines, freighted with hilariously contrived scenes."

+ Lit Digest p20 Je 6 '36

"A smooth blend of mystery and comedy is to be found in 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford.' . . It is a gay and exciting entertainment. The sinister killings that punctuate its gags and daffy doings are nicely spaced and give the production a strong undercurrent of suspense. . . 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford' is one of those rare screen works where authors, players and director divide honors for a slick and diverting offering." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p18 My 28 '36

"This time it is as good as 'The Thin Man' . . . and a cracking good yarn it is. . . This is the gayest murder to happen about town for a long time." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p15 My 28 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

EX-MRS. BRADFORD—Continued

"Of all the attempted copies of the justly celebrated William Powell-Myrna Loy comedy, 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford' comes closest to approximating its gayety, impudence and ability to entertain. . . In brief, list 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford' as one of the year's top-flight comedies." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p19 My 28 '36

"It is another edition of the 'Thin Man' and hardly an eleven-star final. Its imitative quality fails to mirror the dexterous presentation of its model. But there is no point in quibbling—this newest comic-thriller is highly diverting and everybody, save captious meanies, will have a good time looking at it." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World-Telegram p25 My 28 '36

"The plot is concerned with the quite ingenious murder of a jockey, and there is a bit of surprise, I think, and anyhow a good deal of activity, before we can snuggle down with the solution of it all. The film is active, if not too clever." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p82 Je 6 '36

"William Powell as the sort of detective his fans liked in 'The Thin Man,' Jean Arthur as his batty blond ex-wife and line-feeder, and Eric Blore as the usual bland butler, in an entertaining mystery comedy."

+ News-Wk p44 My 9 '36

"It's a photoplay of the gay-banter-private-sleuth school, made fairly engaging by Miss Arthur and Mr. Powell. But its situations are strained, and the cast walks through its parts as though on its way to something else."

+ — Stage p10 Je 1 '36

"Competently acted, 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford's' humor derives chiefly from the sight of Jean Arthur smashing a plaster skull and a large vase over William Powell's head."

Time p50 My 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This heralds the apparent return of the clever mystery drama. Placing smart dialogue and situations above the old prime requisite of horror, the producers have chosen wisely. Sharp, brilliant, and inspiring direction does more than its share to aid the picture in taking the mantle previously worn by 'The Thin Man.' Family."

+ Box Office p25 My 9 '36

"From the studios of RKO Radio comes the best comedy-melodrama since 'The Thin Man' and again it is the suave amateur detective, William Powell, who does the sleuthing. . . Jean Arthur, fresh from her success in 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town,' does splendid work as 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford,' Miss Arthur has a freshness and personality that are particularly 'taking' in this sort of role, and it is a genuine pleasure to watch her perform."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 My 30 '36

"This one contains just about everything that makes for top grade entertainment. Plenty of amusing comedy, mystery, detective work of an unusual kind, good suspense, peppery action and altogether a swell story."

+ Film Curb p15 Ap 25 '36

"This is one of the best comedy murder mysteries that has come to the screen in a long time."

+ Film Daily p7 Ap 23 '36

"Another of the numerous descendants of 'The Thin Man,' even having the same leading player, William Powell, this smart comedy [mystery story] is in for a prosperous boxoffice career both up and down, despite its family resemblances. As previewed last night it was considerably over-length, but it will condense into swell entertainment."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 20 '36

"Here is a comedy that is gayly refreshing. It is the tale of a man who tries not to fall in love again with his ex-wife but can't help doing so. Told against a background of sinister, melodramatic mystery, it is at the same time full of merry fun and offers rich entertainment values that sparkle with unusual exploitation possibilities."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 21 '36

"Here's a picture that carries an ample load of diversified entertainment to catch the fancy of any kind of audience. It also carries an equal amount of potential and easily adaptable showmanship to meet the requirements of any kind of showman. . . Previewed in Pantages Theatre, Hollywood Boulevard. The audience was enthusiastic and appreciative."

+ Motion Pict Herald p47 My 2 '36

"The Powell-Arthur combination, aided by a bright script, good direction, will lift 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford' into the higher program category as to critical praise, grosses."

+ N Y Exhibitor p23 My 10 '36

"Another sprightly entry for the school of smart comedy, detective mystery yarns, 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford' appears headed for excellent grosses. . . Comparison with 'The Thin Man' is natural. But the film is much better than a copy. In addition to possessing a sprightliness all its own, it is geared to provide a high volume of varied entertainment."

+ Variety p15 Je 3 '36

"Many pictures have been patterned on and nominated as successors of 'The Thin Man,' but 'The Ex-Mrs. Bradford,' is the legitimate heir of that epoch-making opus. It has the same spirit of flippancy and nonchalance in the bright face of danger, the same sexy tang and comic accent with the constant excitement and suspense."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 20 '36

F

FARMER IN THE DELL. Mr 27 '36 68min
RKO

Players: Fred Stone. Jean Parker. Esther Dale. Moroni Olsen

Director: Ben Holmes

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Though the story lacks originality in treatment, it should prove entertaining family fare. Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature-family." DAR

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family. Scenes within the motion picture studio add to this delightful comedy which is timely, well planned, astonishingly real and not without moments of contrasting poignancy." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 28 '36

"It will appeal to all because of its simple human story, down-to-earth characterizations, intimate views of life behind studio gates and the human appealing work of Fred Stone. Adults. Family & junior matinee."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Mr 14 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Family & junior matinee."
Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"There is a certain straightforwardness about this film which compensates for any lack of subtlety. The story is not novel and runs a straight course, though a little jerkily at times. . . Suitability: adults & adolescents."
Mo Film Bul p65 Ap '36

"The whole picture is a plea for simplicity. The father is unaffected by his success and demands that his family live up to the traditions of his rural up-bringing. 'Keeping up with the Joneses,' four-flushing, and high-hat attitudes suggest that a picture like this can be used as a basis for encouraging genuineness."

Motion Pict & Family p3 Ap 15 '36

"The picture is pleasant, light entertainment built around a few clever ideas. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: probably no interest."

+ Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"The charming simplicity of an excellent portrayal on the part of Fred Stone lifts this amusing comedy from mediocrity. . . The smooth direction of the first half of the picture becomes slow-moving, trite and stilted in the end. Family & junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 18 '36

"Every bit of humor is squeezed out of the story, which possesses no great distinction, except homeliness and kindness."

Scholastic p26 Ap 4 '36

"Family & junior matinee."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] amusing comedy which takes a satirical glance at Hollywood's manners and customs. . . Fred Stone reflects greater ease before the camera than he did in 'Alice Adams,' made on the same lot. He gives a really good performance. A lot of the stage still sticks to him, however. He delivers his lines to force them beyond footlights, and his voice lacks flexibility, lacks the conversational expression which is essential to a completely satisfactory screen performance."

+ Hollywood Spec p11 Mr 28 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With plenty of laughs in homely humor of Will Rogers type, this should go in all but super-sophisticate spots. Estimate: pleasant neighborhood program."

+ N Y Exhibitor p31 Mr 25 '36

"Entertaining feature that will do best in the smaller communities where Hollywood is a novelty. . . Stone wavers between his own personality and an imitation of Will Rogers. Latter is probably the studio's idea. Stone, as able performer, has sufficient screen personality to get by on his own. . . Letdown in several scenes is due to story. Nothing new about the yarn which has been done several times. . . Weak spots are due to the improbability of the original story."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 16 '36

FATAL LADY. My 15 '36 73min Wanger-Paramount

Players: Mary Ellis. Walter Pidgeon. John Halliday. Ruth Donnelly. Norman Foster. Guy Bates Post

Director: Edward Ludwig

"A combination of opera and murder mystery in which an opera star seemingly brings death to the men who love her." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults: very good; 14-18: interesting; 8-14: beyond." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good—adults." DAR

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Worthy of note is the use of symbolism, such as the whirling horoscope wheel, and the use of thunder and lightning when [Mary Ellis's] triumph turns to despair. She has definite screen personality, besides possessing a finely trained voice of operatic quality and the poise and grace of an experienced actress. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Constructive and in good taste throughout, this film will please audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mature mystery drama." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 30 '36

"This [is] an unusually interesting production. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 18 '36

"This is a musical murder mystery film which though slow moving is interesting. It is exceptionally well cast and beautifully photographed. . . Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: too mature."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Well sustained suspense, smooth capable direction of a fine cast, exquisite operatic numbers and an interesting story make of this excellent entertainment. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 20 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 28 '36

"Excellent entertainment. Mature."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 16 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Canadian M p61 My '36

"Fair melodrama for adults, at its best in its musical moments."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 13 '36

"Mary Ellis is a gifted young woman who carries on her shoulders, lightly and effortlessly, the chief burden of 'Fatal Lady' which comes to us as one of the outstanding pictures of this rather outstanding season. I saw it the evening after viewing 'The King Steps Out.' All the merits the Grace Moore picture lacks, the Mary Ellis picture possesses. . . Put 'Fatal Lady' on the list of pictures you must see."

+ + Hollywood Spec p10 My 23 '36

"Hit after hit sails off the Wanger bat with regularity and from a musical standpoint this is a home run. . . This cornucopia of melody gives Mary Ellis's glorious voice every opportunity and establishes a new high for deft presentation of opera in film form. . . The story is less satisfactory—attempts to bind murder and melody in holy wedlock—succeed in being a haphazard liaison at best." H. S.

+ Script p9 Je 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Murder to the accompaniment of exquisite music. Outright clever of direction, continuity, and production give this Walter Wanger production a flavor of something new and bright. Adults."

+ Box Office p69 My 30 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

FATAL LADY—Continued

"This is a swell combination of class music and melodrama. The sort of picture that should have universal appeal and do well in any situation, large or small."

+ Film Curb p7 My 23 '36

"Here is an intriguing murder mystery, in which music is used to advantage. Mary Ellis is given a role worthy of her talents as a singer and actress, and scores heavily."

+ Film Daily p7 My 19 '36

"Absorbingly and logically devised, here is the first completely successful combination of murder mystery and music. Until now, the formula has somehow escaped those who have attempted it. That it is box office there can be no doubt. Whatever 'Fatal Lady' lacks in established drawing power of names in the cast is more than compensated in entertainment values. . . Under the musical direction of Boris Morros, the score is outstanding. With the exception of the overture from 'William Tell,' performed in rehearsal in the train sequence, the score is entirely original—a distinctive departure."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 15 '36

"Music of an operatic flavor, mystery and occasional flashes of melodramatic action are combined in this picture in such fashion as to make it intriguing entertainment. . . An outstanding factor which should not be overlooked is the singing of Mary Ellis, revealing an unusually well trained and accomplished voice."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 My 16 '36

"It's novel, to say the least, this idea of mixing weird, baffling murder mystery and grand opera music in a picture. . . Possessed of an attractive title which in itself and without the support of other commercial features can be made the basis of an intriguing interest-creating campaign, the show at first sight offers several substantial but not any too strong cast names."

Motion Pict Herald p45 My 23 '36

"With some good singing numbers, a melodramatic atmosphere when necessary, this is saleable even if short on the marquee draw."

+ Phila Exhibitor p23 Je 1 '36

"While the film has calculated appeal for the cultivated taste in the musical phase, the picture is not arty in the sense that it overshoots the general level of entertainment for the mass. It should gross substantially from the top levels well down the subsequent line. Picture is pretentious in decking out the murder puzzle type of film with impressive operatic pomp, glitter and singing which alone would set it apart."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 15 '36

FEDERAL AGENT. Ap 10 '36 60min Republic

Players: William Boyd. Charles A. Browne.

Irene Ware

Director: Sam Newfield

"A criminal's effort to obtain possession of a valuable formula is frustrated by a G-Man who captures the band and wins the girl."

Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: mediocre; Y: hardly; C: no."
Christian Century p823 Je 3 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It moves along at a good pace, contains a number of thrilling sequences and should provide adequate entertainment for most any theatre except perhaps the Main Stem spots."

+ — Film Curb p10 Ap 18 '36

"Strong exploitation will have to be substituted for word-of-mouth recommendation for this one. Although the plot is not dead, the various elements that stand up under isolated examination do not manage to get together for as convincing a story as they should."

— + Film Daily p10 Ap 14 '36

"While the production is generally adequate, the histrionic gyrations of the supporting cast as they act out their roles in this tale of G-Man activities hardly ever become convincing. However, there are some moments which, although they lack novelty, should provide what thrills are necessary to satisfy."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p11 Ap 14 '36

"Incredible, and as entertainment just fair. Due to William (Bill) Boyd's presence and work as chief character of the plot, the film hits the grade as a supporting program feature. The settings are drab, for the most part, and uninteresting. Nor is the photography arresting. Dialog is ordinary."

+ — Variety p23 Ap 15 '36

FEUD OF THE WEST. Ap 15 '36 62min Diversion-Futter

Players: Hoot Gibson. Buzz Barton

Director: Harry Fraser

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"For the juvenile shows and wherever this particular brand of picture is liked 'Feud of the West' should fit in nicely."

+ Film Curb p6 My 23 '36

"Good Western, piled with fighting and good rodeo shots, merits better dates of its type."

+ Film Daily p7 My 19 '36

"Theatre cowpunchers will appreciate this one."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 My 19 '36

"[It] is about the best yet in the Gibson series."

+ N Y Exhibitor p22 My 10 '36

"Between frilly plot involutions and the usual 'oats opera' rough-house, this one moves under a full head of steam from start to finish. . . With Gibson for marquee material, it should do a good job on the two-gun circuit."

+ Variety p14 My 27 '36

FIRST BABY. My 22 '36 75min 20th century-
Fox

Players: Johnny Downs. Shirley Deane.

Dixie Dunbar. Jane Darwell

Director: Lewis Seiler

"In a line, the whole show can be described as a mother meddling in the affairs of her daughter and son-in-law, until even the daughter can't stand it. To the delight of everyone concerned, the girl quits her mother for her husband and child."

Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: amateurish; Y: harmless; C: no interest."
Christian Century p783 Je 3 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Adults." DAR

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A good cast in a story which although somewhat overdone, holds a great deal of truth and provides some good laughs. Older family groups. Outside the range of children's interest." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The ensemble is really a clever and splendidly balanced antithesis of types. Adults & young people." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul My 2 '36

"A most entertaining picture with wide audience appeal. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 22 '36

"Adults & young people."

Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"It is a very entertaining picture, sincerely honest in its psychology and presenting with sympathetic understanding a theme that will interest all parents and young people. Adolescents, 12-16; mature; children, 8-12: beyond their understanding."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Very domestic, which ought to characterize it for good or ill, according to one's taste."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 22 '36

"A universal experience delightfully and refreshingly treated. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family. Very, very domestic, which ought to characterize it for good or ill, according to one's taste."

Wkly Guide My 9 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is] an exceedingly loud and talkative domestic drama which could have been much better than it is, but which has enough entertainment value to make it worth while. . . There is too much chattering in it, a fault emphasized by the manner in which the dialogue is directed. Throughout its entire length characters yell at one another without regard for the meaning of scenes, no attempt being made to lend intimacy to conversations which should be intimate."

+ — Hollywood Spec p11 Ap 25 '36

"There is nothing unusual in 'The First Baby.' Yet it is from the recognizable and common qualities that this mild and touching picture derives a gentle charm. . . 'The First Baby' is not a film of individuals. It has what so few pictures have—a sense of balance. . . This lively, fresh, and wholesome slice of everyday life is a small triumph for the Twentieth Century-Fox studio." (2½ stars)

Liberty p45 My 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Another of the recent cycle of clever program pictures that will send your customers out plenty satisfied—if you can get them in. Family."

Box Office p35 Ap 25 '36

"This rather wild yarn . . . is but mildly entertaining. There may be some people who will enjoy the thing but certainly it does not hold universal appeal. The material would have made a good two-reeler but it is not strong enough for a full length feature and a long feature at that."

+ — Film Curb p12 Ap 18 '36

"This one makes good family trade entertainment. Throughout, the piece is full of human touches. There are the laughs, tears, break-ups, outside interference and reconciliations which should be easily recognizable home characteristics to many. The members of the cast play their characters in such a manner as to make them life-like."

+ Film Daily p10 Ap 14 '36

"This is a simple tale of the wild excitement of a young couple undergoing parenthood for the first time, relying for its appeal on the utter naturalness of the reactions of the parents and grandparents of 'the only baby in the world.'"

Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 13 '36

"Here is a comedy-packed yarn, with occasional bits of drama sprinkled in. . . The familiar character of the story is its outstanding entertainment and commercial value. A mere hint of what it's all about undoubtedly will be sufficient to arouse quite a bit of interest among patrons of the houses in which it will play."

+ Motion Pict Herald p36 Ap 18 '36

"A minor entrant because it hasn't name strength to attract, 'The First Baby,' nevertheless, will be pleasant entertainment for neighborhoods, family trade. . . Pleasantly played by a non-star cast, this will be doubled up or used on short nights. The players, however, generally turn in fair performances."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p23 My 10 '36

"As a supporting picture this one should rate program spotting because it is amusing, clean and wholesome. . . Acting is good throughout, so Lewis Seiler's direction must be credited for the results. Such a plot could be easily made maudlin, but wasn't."

+ Variety p14 My 27 '36

"Excellent B picture that can stand by itself if need be. Domestic comedy with more than the average share of laughs, it is expertly written, produced, directed and acted. John Stone has given the picture smart production, has mounted it well."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 11 '36

FLORIDA SPECIAL. My 1 '36 70min Paramount

Players: Jack Oakie. Sally Eilers. Kent Taylor. Frances Drake. J. Farrell MacDonald

Director: Ralph Murphy

Based on a short story, Recreation Car, by Clarence Budington Kelland. "The mystery revolves around the disappearance of a wealthy eccentric. . . While police are searching the train for the old gentleman, two rival gangs are attempting to gain possession of his jewels. There is much skulduggery and a large number of suspects before an unsuspected twist brings about a surprise finish." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: perhaps; C: doubtful interest."
Christian Century p855 Je 10 '36

"Too much gun play for children. Adults."
Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good-mature." DAR

"There are of course the usual number of suspects, the usual amount of stupidity on the part of those trying to solve the mystery and even the usual smart wise-cracking reporter who is in on the finish. However, as long as Jack Oakie is the reporter, one can count on laughs and his engaging personality to keep things moving. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Told with a good deal of humor and in swift tempo, the film is a good program picture for adults & young people." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

FLORIDA SPECIAL—Continued

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 9 '36

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 27 '36

"Clever dialogue, witty gags, and fast-moving direction somewhat relieve a trite story filled with improbabilities. Mature."

Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"Here is a mystery story which makes little attempt at intelligent or logical development, but which is swift and amusing enough to hold one's attention. . . The social standards are more suitable to adult discount than to children's appreciation. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 1 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 14 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Excellent mystery, smart dialogue, interesting and entertaining without being momentous."

+ Canadian M p61 My '36

"Thanks to Mr. Murphy's direction, the piece possesses the necessary speed, color and sophistication, to make it lively and unhackneyed film fare. That it has little relation to reality is unimportant, since a Cinderella tale of this kind should not be expected to deal with actuality. . . The picture is a typical American comedy, with an exciting dash of mystery thrown in. It will not improve your mind to see it, but probably will improve your disposition." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 My 29 '36

"'Florida Special' is a mystery of excellent parentage. . . Bustling through the tale as Bangs Carter, a straying newspaper man, is Jack Oakie, in fine voice and armed with a fair store of fast cracks. . . The assorted other passengers aboard the Special contribute considerably to the mile-a-minute pace of the picture." J. T. M.

+ N Y Times p15 My 29 '36

"It's just another movie, but Ralph Murphy, who directed it, sets so fast a pace it rates a notch or two above routine." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World-Telegram p17 Je 1 '36

"'Florida Special' is negligible. . . Sally Eilers and Jack Oakie won't either disappoint or startle their public, such as it is." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p83 Je 6 '36

"Starting with the pace of a slow freight, it looked for a time as though 'Florida Special' would break down long before it reached its destination. Then suddenly, surprise!—the train huffed and puffed, the plot wheels accelerated, until the film ends as a fairly representative curtailed chapter-play." H. S.

+ Script p11 My 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is all rather familiar stuff and only mildly entertaining in this case."

+ Film Curb p13 Ap 25 '36

"As a program number, this picture should do all right. With Jack Oakie dishing out the wisecracks in entertaining comedy situations, along with the mysterious angles involved, the show keeps one interested throughout."

+ Film Daily p5 Ap 21 '36

"Mild entertainment results from this formula story that seldom rises above the familiarity of its theme. It is a mystery of sorts, held together mainly by gag comedy and another corking performance by Jack Oakie. Not designed as a big picture, it will probably do well enough as a class B release."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 17 '36

"Apart from the amusing wisecracking of Jack Oakie, this comedy-melodrama offers little to enthuse exhibitors or audiences. There are, however, several novel twists given to the familiar all-action-aboard-a-train plot. . . The story . . . is loaded with so much stuff that director Ralph Murphy had difficulty getting it all into the picture, with the result that the production rates as an average attraction appealing to devotees of thrills, action and fun."

+ Motion Pict Daily p8 Ap 20 '36

"The picture's fun is presented along with a lot of drama, melodrama, romance, mystery, thrills and excitement that undoubtedly were counted upon to serve efficiently in rounding out a well balanced piece. There's a lot of fun and so much of the other stuff that it all didn't seem to jell. At least the preview audience didn't think so. It laughed at the fun all right. It also laughed at situations and action that were supposed to hold it in tense suspense. . . An average attraction, the picture's field is with audiences who appreciate comedy thrill-action entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Herald p37 Ap 25 '36

"Though the picture is another 'Grand Hotel' on a train travelling from New York to Florida, 'Florida Special' is too strongly fortified in the feature name division to be condemned for familiarity alone. . . Obviously a programmer, 'Florida Special' ought to be entertaining."

N Y Exhibitor p22 My 10 '36

"Where Jack Oakie is a favorite this is going to be nice money. . . Story is another version of the Grand Hotel gag on a railroad train; by no means the first. This handicaps the action to a considerable extent, but it whips through somehow."

+ Variety p15 Je 3 '36

"This one can't hope for better than double bills due to cast weakness and low grade entertainment. Entire story takes place on a train running between New York and Florida necessitating limitation in action and story. Latter is weakly developed tale, the few bright spots being contributed by Jack Oakie."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 17 '36

FOLLOW THE FLEET. F 21 '36 110min RKO

Players: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers.
Randolph Scott, Harriet Hilliard

Director: Mark Sandrich

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p65 Ap '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Mr '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Follow the Fleet' is glorious entertainment. I could be rather tired of screen sailors by now, but not with Fred Astaire in their midst." Don Herold

+ Life p43 My '36

"The narrative and the padding of the film show up pretty thin, and the intervals between the dances of Astaire and Ginger Rogers are just intervals. Both the lyrics Harriet Hilliard sings are feeble and foolish to the point of distraction. She looks distracted, but that doesn't help. Three of the dances and half a dozen of the wisecracks are up to standard—and though it's a very high standard for the dancing, that leaves 'Follow the Fleet' on a par with 'Roberta,' the least polished of these Rogers-Astaire entertainments."

+ — New Statesman & Nation p601 Ap 18 '36

"The spectacle of Astaire wiggling his uncomfortable way through this rambling, rickety vehicle is a sight to make sore eyes. For the first time, the dance routines fail to click. In short, a decidedly minor and in the main regrettable Astaire offering." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p33 Ap '36

"[Astaire's] new film, I think, is the best since 'Gay Divorcee'." Graham Greene

+ Spec p744 Ap 24 '36

"The inimitable dancing team of Astaire-Rogers lifts a mediocre script and prolonged film footage to ingratiating musical entertainment."

Stage p10 Ap '36

FOR THE SERVICE. Ap 3 '36 65min Universal

Players: Buck Jones, Edward Keane, Beth Marion

Director: Buck Jones

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: perhaps; C: doubtful."

Christian Century p751 My 20 '36

"Family & junior matinee." Nat Bd of R

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

"Family-junior."

Wkly Guide F 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Top notch Western in every way. Packed full of fast-action with plenty of fights, gun-play and hard-riding. It should more than satisfy those who go for this sort of film entertainment."

+ Film Curb p17 Ap 25 '36

"[It is] an unusual outdoor picture. It should interest even non-Western subscribers."

+ Film Daily p7 My 19 '36

"When it comes to giving the patrons what they want in the line of Western adventure, Buck Jones can always be relied upon to do the stuff. This production has all the elements—a good plot, plenty of spectacular action and excitement—to make it a top-notch Western."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 21 '36

"Estimate: unusually good Jones."

+ N Y Exhibitor p45 Ap 25 '36

"This one of the early west has enough action and suspense to satiate the hunger of the six-gun brand fans. . . . Scenes in and out of the stockade are well photographed, this being one of the outstanding virtues of the picture."

+ Variety p54 Je 3 '36

FORGET ME NOT. (Release date not determined) 70min London films-United artists

Players: Beniamino Gigli, Joan Gardner, Ivan Brandt, Hugh Wakefield

Director: Zoltan Korda

Filmed in England. "The story is that of a girl secretary who, after a misunderstanding with a liner officer, marries a famous tenor, whose voice over the loud speaker has been the background to her love passages with the other man. The latter reappears after some years and the girl almost yields to his attempt to carry her off. The tenor, aware of the situation, makes a last appeal to her by medium of the love song associated, without his knowledge, with the other man. When she leaves the concert hall he thinks he has lost her, but she returns to their apartment." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This is above the level of the usual musical romance, and should prove acceptable to those interested in good singing. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p62 Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With little incentive beyond that of affording Signor Gigli full scope for as many musical interludes as possible, this version of the operetta, 'Forget Me Not,' drifts aimlessly operetta, 'Forget Me Not,' drifts aimlessly to qualify as legitimate screen material. Lacking, as it does, star names and personalities, the weakness of the material is all the more apparent, and the production sums up into little more than an artless attempt to intersperse between musical numbers some semblance of a story interest."

— Hollywood Reporter p10 Ap 28 '36

"The famous tenor, Beniamino Gigli, is the box-office value here. His magnificent singing of operatic numbers is an entertainment asset which partly outweighs serious defects of story and continuity. . . . Gigli acts well in a proposal with the aid of a dictionary and admirably in the scene of the impassioned appeal by song, but Miss Gardner does not impress. It is for those who want to hear Gigli and won't worry about other values."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Ap 11 '36

"Beniamino Gigli is natural and charming in the stellar role. . . . [He] has a charm that endears him to onlookers, and his touching devotion to his boy and new wife make him photographically acceptable to this new type of audience. Shots of him in various operatic characters give splendid scope for his voice, which records admirably."

+ Variety p29 Ap 22 '36

FORGOTTEN FACES. My 8 '36 72min Paramount

Players: Herbert Marshall, Gertrude Michael, James Burke, Robert Cummings

Director: E. A. Dupont

Remake of a dialogue film, Interference. "When Marshall finds his wife Gertrude Michael with another man, he kills him. Marshall is able to have his daughter adopted by a wealthy family. Seventeen years pass without the mother knowing her daughter's whereabouts and not caring much about it. Marshall is pardoned from his life sentence in time to prevent Gertrude from interfering with their daughter's happiness." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fine of kind; Y: too strong; C: no."

Christian Century p855 Je 10 '36

"The prison routine is mercifully omitted in this film, making less drab an oft-repeated prison tale. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Mature." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre-adult." DAR

"This somber story may be mildly entertaining to anyone who can accept the premise upon which the entire plot motivation is

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

FORGOTTEN FACES—Continued

founded. . . Herbert Marshall was unhappily cast and while Gertrude Michael struggled to make her part convincing, the story was too much for her. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Strikingly balanced and notably consistent are the scenes of grim pathos and innocent happiness in this social drama of a distinctly mature type." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bu1 My 9 '36

"Adults."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 27 '36

"Adult."

Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"It is a sordid, sensational tale, but the fine acting of Herbert Marshall gives it warmth of human interest. . . The play is well cast, the plot well developed, and a great effort has been made to raise the production above the level set by a melodramatic theme. Adolescents, 12-16: not recommended; children, 8-12: no."

+ — Motion Pict R Je '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Highly melodramatic, this social drama, hackneyed in story, is not worthy of the talents of its cast and will prove only fair entertainment for adults."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women My 1 '36

"Objectionable in part."

— Nat Legion of Decency My 14 '36

"Adult."

Sei Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide My 9 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is an] unsavory melodrama. . . Only a casting agent could explain what Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael, who do comedy parts well, are doing in this penny dreadful." E. C. S.

— Christian Science Monitor p14 My 23 '36

"Here is a class B picture given class A rating by the direction accorded it. . . [E. A. Dupont] raises an inherently conventional story into a dramatic offering of power and dignity, one all those working in pictures should see and study. . . A. M. Botsford, production associate, and William Lackey, supervisor, are to be congratulated upon turning out an excellent job."

+ Hollywood Spec p9 My 9 '36

"'Forgotten Faces' is strong meat that by suggestion and implication slips its theme past the censors. Herbert Marshall is thoroughly convincing in a difficult role, while, as the wife, Gertrude Michael's dramatic intensity compensates for her occasional theatric mannerisms. (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p16 Je 6 '36

"It's a pleasure to announce that E. A. Dupont, the man who made 'Variety,' has come back. His work with a banal theme is impressive; he's minimized dialogue, stresses technique rather than plot, and achieves the smooth flow of narration in screen story-telling that's been almost extinct since the advent of sound."

Herb Sterne

+ Script p10 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Masterfully directed with plentiful injections of power, this film will appeal to those who like real unadulterated melodrama. Adults."

Box Office p31 My 23 '36

"Certainly the classes will appreciate this picture but just what the masses will think of it is anybody's guess. . . It is all superbly done. Acting, direction and production way, way above the average. A truly fine, artistic picture in every way, shape and manner."

+ Film Curb p12 My 2 '36

"What this picture does at the box-office is hard to predict since there are very few pictures produced lately to which it can be compared. Highly dramatic, loaded with suspense, outstanding for characterizations, especially Gertrude Michael's, the production holds one tense. . . From the standpoint of production, it leaves little to be desired. It is a picture that the highbrows can talk about, still the suspense, the superb acting, and the fact that it is different from the regular run-of-the-mill line should make it interesting for the regular patrons."

+ Film Daily p7 Ap 23 '36

"Brilliantly produced, its direction and acting rise to heights far above the dramatic fabric and compel excited admiration and suspense. These excellences lift it artistically well above its program classification and nothing would keep it from becoming a strong box office card for almost the full range of houses, except the sordidness of the story and its tragic and disappointing ending."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 21 '36

"Offering only occasional relief from sombre drama audience appeal, this picture will be limited in its appeal to those seeking grim entertainment when word of the nature of its story passes."

Motion Pict Daily p4 Ap 23 '36

"Serious in tone, inasmuch as a great part of it is devoted to a battle of psychological wits between a husband and wife who have only the bitterest hatred for each other, it is emphatically an adult picture, with considerable interest for them, because of the character of the story, the quality of the acting offered by the stars and the principal supports, and the grim and realistic style in which the story is told. . . Previewed in Fox Wilshire Theatre, Los Angeles. Power of story and convincing performances by Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael held the audience's attention."

+ Motion Pict Herald p47 My 2 '36

"With two good performances from the leads, the show is a fair job throughout but restricted in appeal."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p23 My 10 '36

"Heavily handled drama, this remake of 'Interference,' first important talker, will have to struggle for what it gets. Main trouble is the lack of shading in the direction. E. A. Dupont has held the picture to a sombre pace throughout, has failed to lighten the depressing tale at any time."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 21 '36

FORGOTTEN WOMEN. (Release date not determined) 62min Imperial

Players: Evelyn Brent. Irene Rich. Louise Fazenda. June Clyde

Director: William Beaudine

"Eight members of a volunteer welfare unit are involved in tragedy when one of the supply trucks being driven to an invaded sector is overturned by a bomb. One girl dies from injuries in a trench where she is carried, a loud-mouthed girl is killed by a hand grenade for revealing the two-timing of an aviator who is believed to be devoted to a member of the company, and Evelyn Brent, the interloper, is killed when she succeeds in warning the American unit that her companions are in the direct line of its fire." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one can hardly expect to get much more than the smaller stands as part of a dual bill. It's rather a weak sister. All woman cast. Far too talky to hold interest although a competent array of players do their best to make something of it. . . . Some fairly impressive war shots but the talk, talk, talk spoils it all."

— Film Curb p6 My 23 '36

"Woman's side in international war fails to measure up to its possibilities because action is too greatly subordinated to excessive talking. Despite a number of finely recorded bombardment scenes, the picture is slow-moving."

— Film Daily p11 My 13 '36

FRANKIE AND JOHNNIE. My 1 '36 67min Republic

Players: Helen Morgan, Chester Morris, Lilyan Tashman, Florence Reed

Director: Chester Erskine

Based on the play of the same title by Jack Kirkland. It was filmed about two years ago. It tells the story of the "Frankie and Johnnie were sweethearts" ballad and is set in a music hall in the St. Louis of 1870.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It is] an uninteresting story. . . . Objection—the unsavory characters and questionable episodes. Objectionable in part."

— Nat Legion of Decency My 14 '36

"The production has little to recommend it, being ineffectual and not well directed or acted. Miss Morgan's peculiar type of singing registers very poorly. Adults & young people."

— Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Rash trash properly describes the filmization of the old St. Louis river-front ballad, which, fortunately, is not in the class of motion picture plays that receive wide circulation among the best places. While the subject matter itself would preclude the lifting of any reenactment from above the level of the sawdust on the floor of the barroom which inspired the original ditty, the treatment and performances in this version would undoubtedly bring the sounding crash of the gong even in Major Bowes's amateur shows." J. P. Cunningham

— Commonweal p190 Je 12 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It has its moments of goodness and its moments of badness. Sort of an in-and-outer. Helen Morgan sings in her well known style and those that like her will approve."

Film Curb p8 My 23 '36

"From the long-famous ballad of Frankie and Johnnie . . . has been made a film which, after having passed through successive processes of renovation with an eye on the production code, emerges as ineffectual fare. The film was produced about two years ago at and by the Biograph Studio in New York. . . . For the most part the film somehow lacks the pace it might have been expected to possess, moving at a laggard rate, only gaining a bit of speed as it nears the conclusion, when Frankie, finally convinced against her will of the duplicity of her man, finds a gun and goes in search of Johnnie. Miss Morgan, it would seem, has not been given sufficient opportunity to exercise the talent for a special style of singing which she unquestionably possesses, and in some fashion her voice throughout registers poorly."

— Motion Pict Daily p8 My 19 '36

"The action limps along until after the wedding of the two principals, which comes in one of the later reels, and through it are interspersed two songs by Helen Morgan, rendered in a none too creditable fashion. . . . Adult audience classification."

— + Motion Pict Herald p45 My 23 '36

"Because it has been en route for about two years and has been given a careful dehydrating by the Hays code office, not too much was anticipated of 'Frankie and Johnnie' when it finally was unveiled. But as it stands, the picture is unusually slovenly entertainment. . . . It will be lucky to make dual bookings in most localities."

— — Variety p14 My 27 '36

FRASQUITA. Ja 17 '36 80min DuWorld

Players: Jarmila Novotna, Hans Heinz Bollman, Heinz Ruchmann

Director: Carl Lamac

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: good of kind; C: no interest."
Christian Century p783 Je 3 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"There is a naive charm in the unwinding of the slender love plot, set against backgrounds of exceptional beauty, but many American audiences will find the pace slow and rather talky. It will do best in the art houses and among music lovers and will make an acceptable support number in class neighborhoods."

Hollywood Reporter p7 Ap 2 '36

"It is quietly delightful entertainment abundant with the tuneful music of Franz Lehar, whose stage 'hits' are almost innumerable. . . . For exploitation a specialty is the prelude and epilogue appearance of Lehar himself."

+ Motion Pict Herald p48 F 1 '36

"Lovers of light opera, especially those who understand German, will find much in 'Frasquita' to amuse and entertain them. . . . [It] is particularly geared for the class type of patronage, and will depend on heavy exploitation in any event. It is probably one of the best of the foreign-made productions to reach these shores, and, from a production and artistic standpoint, rates high."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 2 '36

FURY. My 29 '36 90min MGM

Players: Spencer Tracy, Sylvia Sidney, Walter Abel, Frank Albertson, Bruce Cabot

Director: Fritz Lang

"Tracy is peace-loving, hard working. He and Sylvia are engaged. On circumstantial evidence, Tracy is arrested as a kidnaper in a Middle-western village. Led by rowdies, the villagers storm the jail, bent on lynching Tracy. Unable to enter Tracy's cell, the mob dynamites the jail. Tracy is believed killed, but the explosion tears off his cell door and he escapes, although injured." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A thought-[provoking] drama, well produced. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A harrowing tirade against the fury of mob-rule is presented in this ably enacted melodrama. . . . Adults: tense; 14-18: doubtful; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

FURY—Continued

"This timely picture is high in entertainment value; moving swiftly and dramatically to the climax and then holding the interest to the end. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"This social drama is a timely and powerful indictment of the mob spirit and 'snap judgment.' Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"This picture, a powerful indictment against mob rule, is an intensely forceful and gripping drama. . . Thought-provoking entertainment. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 27 '36

"It is out and out propaganda against lynching, cruel and direct in its expression. . . It is a timely subject, for lynching, with a certain percentage of innocent victims, still goes on, but unless one feels that one's moral fiber needs reinforcement, the film is such vivid realism that it should be avoided. Adolescents, 12-16: too brutal; children, 8-12: too brutal." Motion Pict R Je '36

"To those who believe that the finest pictures should have moral or social import and that the motion pictures can have a definite power for good and yet be artistic and gripping, 'Fury' answers every requirement. . . The story, which is engrossing, with its well maintained suspense, presents a sermon within a sermon first with a powerful protest against lynching and second the futility of revenge. This is a profound and significant picture which entertains and still performs a definite service in molding social attitudes. Adults."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women My 27 '36

"A sometimes horrific indictment against the abuse of law and order. In a clear, unbiased manner the social problems of lynching and mob fury are presented. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

"No locality is indicated, and the plot is cleverly contrived not to arouse controversy and to avoid ultimate tragedy, but the case against lawlessness is presented with surprising force. . . Suggested for church use. Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family."

+ + Wkly Guide Je 6 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Rarely does Hollywood show the disposition or the capacity to lay hands on the seamier aspects of American life with a vigor and determination similar to that which has gone into the making of 'Fury.' . . Unfortunately, though it does not detract seriously from the entertainment value of the film, the second half of 'Fury' does not measure up to the quality of its earlier portions. . . To have achieved the highest effect, however, it probably would have been necessary to develop the story as an out-and-out tragedy, and that very likely would have been commercially disastrous. . . The film is sufficiently exciting and so well acted that the document is palatable entertainment." E. F. Melvin

+ Boston Transcript p8 Je 13 '36

"Melodramatic romance for adults who applaud the coming of social meaning to the films, not unduly catering to popular taste in entertainment, and directed with cinematic feeling by Fritz Lang."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 13 '36

"I thought it an exceedingly poor picture, poorly written and badly directed. I know Fritz Lang is a capable director. He proved that by his work abroad. But why he should be put in charge of a purely American picture is something I cannot understand. . . It is a sad commentary on American life that such a fantastic yarn should be presented to the world as an authentic document. As an American, I, for one, resent it. The picture bristles with cinematic anachronisms. . . The close-up of a kiss in front of an audience in the court-room was the final insult to the intelligence of the audience in the film theatre."

— Hollywood Spec p8 Je 6 '36

"It will, in some parts of the country, be recognized as a sobering force. . . That many of its situations are trite is not to be denied. That Director Lang has passed these with skill gives the picture strength where it might have been weak."

+ Lit Digest p28 My 30 '36

"How to disturb an audience is of course a big problem in the cinema. Director Fritz Lang has been highly successful with the problem. . . One might say too successful, for 'Fury' is disturbing for the wrong reason: the problem it poses is entirely unresolved at the close. . . It is regrettable that [Director Lang] did not, or could not, make 'Fury' the first-rate tragedy it might have been." Robert Giroux

+ Nation p821 Je 24 '36

"'Fury' is a powerful and documented piece of fiction about a lynching for half its length, and for the remaining half a desperate attempt to make love, lynching and the Hays office come out even. But I doubt if those who see it will carry the whitewash part of it so long in their minds as the straight action of the introduction and middle. . . This picture has the true creative genius of including little things not germane to the concept but, once you see them, the spit and image of life itself." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub p130 Je 10 '36

"Although the film becomes top-heavy with an individual plot in the final sequence, it remains a compelling and terrifying document. . . So magnificent is it in its unwavering denunciation of mob rule that one regrets that it has had to fall back on courtroom melodramatics and plot manipulation before it ends." Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Je 6 '36

"It's a shocker, this picture, and something a good deal more than that. In addition to an original theme, a definite viewpoint, and enough punches to jar Joe Louis, 'Fury' is fine movie entertainment, weakening only at the very end. Such pictures usually do. . . This is a picture to make you mad, to get you excited and keep you that way until the final, wishy-washy close-up. The rest of the film is grand stuff." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p11 Je 6 '36

"Let it be said at once: 'Fury' is the finest original drama the screen has provided this year. . . It should appeal mightily to those of you who look to Hollywood—forlornly most of the time—for something better than superficial, dream-world romance. . . This has been a completely enthusiastic report, and such was our intention." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p21 Je 6 '36

"Call it something worthy of respect, an earnest, excellently-acted film that spreads molten messages of scorn against the animal spirit to destroy with a power that cannot be denied. Call the first half of it a truly great picture, a completely undisguised, unpretending one. Call the last half mighty good melodrama, but not good enough to warrant the same respect and enthusiasm that the first half so unstintingly compels. . . You cannot afford to miss the film. To do so would be to ignore one of the most startling and courageous things the American cinema has done." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p14a Je 6 '36

"'Fury' happens to include one or two scenes of particular force and skill, and, despite its somewhat overdone plot complexities, it indicates superior handling. This, I should suppose, is due to the talent of its director. . . In the big scene, the actual episode of the lynchers' orgy, Herr Lang doesn't mass mere crowds. He has gone farther than that and contrived to give us some idea of the minds, and one might say souls, of lynchers. . . It is so effective it may bestir the minds of movie audiences to something equivalent to thought upon the problem itself. . . In fact, it's melodrama with a considerable injection of vitality; and you who are about to lynch might go and see how you will look while you're doing it." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p82 Je 13 '36

"'Fury' stabs into its subject, mob violence, with a variety of searchlights, sociological, humanistic, dramatic, while the subject itself turns under the beams until each phase of it has been successively and rather fearfully illuminated. . . Reminiscent in its power of last year's famed 'Informer,' though far more spectacular, a good deal less sincere, 'Fury' is a triumph for Joseph Mankiewicz, young M-G-M producer, and Fritz Lang, monocled Austrian director whose first U. S. effort it is."

+ Time p40 Je 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A powerful and impressive document in indictment of mob violence, this will strike a responsive chord with all classes of audiences which should make it a substantial money-getter. Family."

+ Box Office p69 My 30 '36

"Strong film fare and possibly not much of a picture for the fair sex. Notwithstanding this it is an unusually well made feature that has been well directed and played by a better than average cast. If your patrons appreciate raw drama they ought to like this one."

+ Film Curb p6 My 23 '36

"This is one of the most powerful, gripping pictures that has come to the screen. It is worth selling—and selling hard."

+ Film Daily p8 My 22 '36

"'Fury' is one of the best pictures of the year. Packing a wallop that has rarely been seen in a picture, compelling an interest that is certain to draw a great percentage of those patrons shopping for entertainment, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has pulled a 'sneak' hit on its organization, on Hollywood and the whole industry, [since] little has been heard of 'Fury' and certainly nothing to indicate that it would get better than B rating at the box office."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 My 19 '36

"With mass hysteria as its main theme, this film emerges as a heavy drama too grim for acceptance by most audiences as entertainment. Though presented with unquestioned sincerity and an effort to treat all angles fairly, the story will hardly appeal to shoppers for a pleasant evening. . . Fritz Lang's direction ranges from forceful to indifferent. His screen play is too superficial to serve as effective propaganda."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 My 20 '36

"This picture is different, volatile, eruptive melodrama. In its class, in which several that are characteristically similar have proved box office attractions, such as 'Scarface,' 'The Big House,' 'Fugitive from a Chain Gang' and 'Black Fury,' it is an exceedingly good picture."

+ Motion Pict Herald p37 My 30 '36

"From directing, writing, acting standpoints, 'Fury' is a topnotch job. For audiences, however, it may prove too dramatic for better than fair returns. . . Well done, it is however, a type picture that doesn't always realize its possibilities at the box office. Exploitation may aid it."

+ Phila Exhibitor p22 Je 1 '36

"Coming at the tag end of the 1935-36 cinematic season, this flicker is certain for celluloid honors. Apart from its intrinsic artistic merits, it's also okay box office. . . 'Fury' is certain for considerable critical attention although its grosses may prove spotty. It's a cinch critic's picture, and should do better on the word-of-mouth."

+ Variety p18 Je 10 '36

"Picture generates so much heat because of its nature and handling that it will stir in many audiences the passionate furies it indicates in its drama of vengeance. . . For many, on the other hand, 'Fury' will be too strong a meat for cinematic diversion. Grosses are apt to be spotty, but picture has enough draw names, exploitation ammunition, controversial matter and intrinsic strength to justify its importance with substantial box office."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 19 '36

G

GENTLE JULIA. Ap 17 '36 63min 20th century-Fox

Players: Jane Withers. Tom Brown. Marsha Hunt. Jackie Searl

Director: John Blystone

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family-junior. An inconsequential plot . . . made amusing by a series of Tarkingtonian [juvenile] episodes, some of them very funny."

+ Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"Family—junior."

Wkly Guide Mr 28 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Jane Withers plays Florence, the feminine Penrod of Booth Tarkington's novel, and she makes the perfect Tarkington heroine, aged perhaps twelve. . . The picture lacks much plot. Its direction surely might have been a little crisper. But the atmospheric details, the comedy episodes and the performances, from that of little Miss Withers to the genial chuckles of Hattie McDaniel, are a lot of fun." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p10 Ap 11 '36

"[It] seems destined to run out its career under the general heading of Pictures for Children. . . The setting is a typical Tarkington small town at the turn of the century, with picture hats, parasols and antique automobiles predominating. . . Miss Withers might have been a little better directed, if that is possible with these child stars. She seems inclined to glance toward the camera, as if for approval, during what should be her better sequences." J. T. M.

N Y Times p19 Ap 11 '36

"Booth Tarkington's ambling, unimportant but sometimes very amusing novel, 'Gentle Julia,' has been made into a simple, true and genuinely comic film of American small-town life, and it may now be seen with a great deal of pleasure." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p13 Ap 13 '36

"[It has] Jane Withers and Jackie Searl (Hollywood's prize brats) being bright in a ham film." John Mosher

New Yorker p80 Ap 18 '36

"In the class with, though not of the quality of 'Ah, Wilderness,' 'Gentle Julia' is a pleasing collection of minor small-town episodes, pre-War style, deriving flavor from the acid presence of 10-year-old Miss Withers."

+ Time p36 Ap 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The film has that quality which should make it enjoyable for almost any type of audience, anywhere, containing as it does a considerable amount of entertaining comedy, supplied for the most part by Jane Withers."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

GENTLE JULIA—Continued

+ Motion Pict Daily p14 Ap 2 '36

"This one comes under the head of family entertainment and, as such, will find its place for moderate coin. It's a simple, home-spun [juvenile] yarn with the story pyrotechnics neatly figured for adolescent mentality. . . Continuity is jerky and none too well thought out, but is figured for laughs, and, to some extent, accomplishes this purpose."

+ Variety p16 Ap 15 '36

GIRL FROM MANDALAY. Ap 15 '36 68min Re-public

Players: Conrad Nagel, Kay Linaker, Donald Cook, Esther Ralston

Director: Howard Bretherton

Based on the novel, Tiger Valley, by Reginald Campbell. "Conrad Nagel, an English plantation foreman, has spent four years in the jungle with marriage to the girl back home as his goal. When he is jilted, he goes to Mandalay to forget. [There] he meets Jeanie, a cabaret performer." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul My 2 '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"A story of wrecked emotions. Objection: although there are no definitely bad scenes, it is 'messy' in its implications. Objectionable in part."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide Ap 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Conrad Nagel and Kay Linaker do what they can to serve up this emotional hash appetizingly."

Christian Science Monitor p15 My 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Packed with thrills, and based on an interesting story, this film builds up to a sock climax. Family."

+ Box Office p25 Ap 11 '36

"A familiar story. . . It has been done many times before and it was a hard job to do it even as convincingly as Director Bretherton has in this case. Director and a good cast save this from being very poor stuff. It is suitable for the smaller stands and as part of a dual bill."

+ Film Curb p10 Ap 18 '36

"A tropical story of two men after one girl is told herein with much conversation and very little action. The performances of the principals are uninspired by the story or direction."

+ Film Daily p10 Ap 14 '36

"Routine jungle story with a few highlights makes for only moderate entertainment. Action is rather slow in getting under way and much interest is lost through halting motivation of characters."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Ap 1 '36

"Here is action played against a tropical jungle background which adequately fills the bill as top-rung program fare and should please in all spots. . . The film packs a climactic wallop when a forest fire drives tigers down into the inhabited district."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 Ap 4 '36

"Melodrama helped by good performances from the principals, 'The Girl from Mandalay' is a programmer that can mean more with selling."

N Y Exhibitor p43 Ap 25 '36

"'Girl from Mandalay' is one of those half-and-half affairs. About half is snappy, exciting entertainment, but there is an equal amount of drab and highly artificial material. Lack of name strength is a handicap that this one will find difficult to laugh off. . . Letdown in final scene is not only bad but inexcusable. . . Picture will have difficulty in crashing the dual barrier."

+ Variety p14 My 13 '36

"'Girl From Mandalay' is sprightly entertainment. Given ample production, cast of better than average names, this film should hold its own at top of duals, and occupy single spot in many lesser houses. It's choked full of action, thrills and sympathetic love interest."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p4 Ap 1 '36

GIRL OF THE OZARKS. Je 12 '36 67min Paramount

Players: Virginia Weidler, Henrietta Crossman, Leif Erikson, Elizabeth Russell

Director: William Shea

"The young star plays a poverty stricken problem child who is always in hot water through her romantic and gallant lies designed to save her self-respect and reassure her dying mother. The teacher of the country school, in desperation, threatens to send the child to the county home after one more exploit." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The picture has the rare quality of looking as if it had no director, as if the camera picked up a group of people merely living their lives and being unaware we are looking on. . . If you overlook 'Girl of the Ozarks' because of its being just a little picture, you will deny yourself some satisfactory entertainment."

+ Hollywood Spec p9 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Beautiful homespun drama that should skyrocket little Virginia Weidler right into the niche of top money kid stars, and will inject a noticeable stimulus to the box-office registers. The story is an interesting backwoods yarn."

+ Box Office p33 Je 6 '36

"This backwoods drama, with its 'homey' atmosphere, will be especially appealing to the family trade. . . The story is rather familiar material but it has been handled so skilfully by all concerned that it is attention-holding."

+ Film Curb p8 Je 6 '36

"Built on the same lines as 'Timothy's Quest,' this is a nice program film that should get over with the same type of family audiences."

+ Film Daily p8 Je 1 '36

"The story is standard hokum of the best grade and its development supplies laughter and tears for a pleasing neighborhood attraction, with emphasis on family trade. Little Virginia gives definite promise of developing box office value from the beginning."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 27 '36

"Little Virginia Weidler does remarkably appealing work in her first star part and is sure to draw pleasing comment from family audiences for carrying the entire weight of this routine hill-billy tale."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 My 28 '36

"The kind of show for family type audiences and especially attractive to children, it's a hokum-tinged yarn of Missouri mountain folk. The picture consistently centers attention on its little girl lead."

+ Motion Pict Herald p50 Je 6 '36

"Estimate: for neighborhoods, twin bills."
Phila Exhibitor p24 Je 15 '36

"'Girl of the Ozarks' is in [the] nature of an experiment to see if Virginia Weidler has the capacity for child stardom. . . Her playing generally is above the material. Picture is homespun hill-billy hokum laid on with sentimental lade which will find best response in the family and neighborhood program spots. . . Despite forced and somewhat synthetic characters and obvious development of the sentimental folk drama, the picture has considerable spell-binding quality."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 27 '36

GIVE US THIS NIGHT. Mr 6 '36 70min Paramount

Players: Jan Kiepura, Gladys Swarthout, Philip Merivale, Alan Mowbray

Director: Alexander Hall

Music and lyrics: Erich Wolfgang Korngold, Oscar Hammerstein, II

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: fairly good; C: doubtful interest."
Christian Century p550 Ap 8 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A highlight is the singing of a Roman Catholic mass, in a sequence remarkable not only for the expert musical rendition of the two principals, but by beauty of photography combined with clever choice of types. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature." DAR

"Although the production suffers from lack of novelty, it has some beautiful musical numbers. . . The singing of the principals with their finely trained voices is at times most enjoyable but at others, the powerful tones of Kiepura are unfortunately allowed to overshadow those of Miss Swarthout. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Gen Fed. of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Compared to the calm, graceful beauty of Gladys Swarthout, the exuberant nervous energy of Jan Kiepura stands out to a disadvantage. The production is lavish and some of the music melodious. The story is lacking in suspense and originality. Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Gladys Swarthout's voice records better in this than in her first picture, but Jan Kiepura gives an unbalanced performance and one is conscious of voice straining on his part. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"General atmosphere is wholesome, although the drinking scene of Maestro and pupil is uncalled for. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 21 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p66 Ap '36

"The plot, refurbished but still familiar, lacks conviction because Jan Kiepura, and to a lesser degree Miss Swarthout, are permitted to behave as they would on the operatic stage with complete disregard of dramatic values. Both have been better in previous productions. Adolescents, 12-16: yes, if interested in music; children, 8-12: wholesome but probably dull."

+ — Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Both voices are great and though the story content is trite, the production on the whole is excellent. Family."

Nat Bd of R M Mr '36

"A, Y and C: entertaining romance for those who appreciate direct relation of music to the story."

Par M p52 My '36

"Here we have the first opera written expressly for the screen. . . The story is carried forward almost entirely through the singing of Jan Kiepura and Gladys Swarthout, neither of whom displays much dramatic ability. The comedy relief is weak, most of it being supplied by Alan Mowbray as a drunken and decadent tenor. For all its musical excellence, the picture is disappointing."

— Scholastic p26 Ap 4 '36

"The production is lavish and some of the music melodious. The story is lacking in suspense or originality. Family."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It has two limitations, depending on how you look at it. The singing intrudes a bit on the play, and the play intrudes a bit on the singing."

Canadian M p61 My '36

"Gladys Swarthout and Jan Kiepura sing high and sing low, always classically, sometimes too much, in a continental atmosphere that bespeaks lack of originality in theme. . . 'Rose of the Rancho's' sad introduction of Gladys Swarthout to motion pictures, last January, is not materially benefited by her second screen performance. Mr. Kiepura, whose motion picture standing is better because of his 'Be Mine Tonight,' is frequently allowed to over-sing Miss Swarthout, with unfortunate effect on the presence of the songstress." J. P. Cunningham

+ — Commonweal p609 Mr 27 '36

"Splendid singing by Kiepura and Miss Swarthout of delightful Korngold-Hammerstein compositions, a superb acting performance by Alan Mowbray and fine photography by Victor Milner do not compensate for the writing and direction which principally are at fault. . . The apparently-expensive, elaborately-prepared 'Give Us This Night' is utterly without conviction, deplorably rich in artificiality. Frequently permitting conventional liberties to take part, entirely devoid of freshness in narrative-development and excessive in dialogue, most of which is dull, the picture will bring very little satisfaction to its producers and to those filmgoers who see it." Allan Hersholt

+ — Hollywood Spec p12 Mr 28 '36

"In 'Give Us This Night,' the lovely Gladys Swarthout still lacks material to match her abundant talents. . . 'Give Us This Night' is intent on making Kiepura a star in this country as he already is in Europe. The full-throated foreigner sings agreeably; but if he is an actor, then we are Emelie, the cutest of the Dionne quintuplets." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p45 Ap 11 '36

"[Kiepura's] vigor is almost embarrassing in 'Give Us This Night.' He gives every song every vitamin, like a college yell leader, and I prophesy he won't be with us long unless he learns to control his blood pressure. This is all a little mean, I must admit, because Mr. Kiepura can indeed sing thrillingly." Don Herold

GIVE US THIS NIGHT—Continued

+ — Life p23 Je 1 '36

"A sad undertaking from any consideration, utilizing the bellowing voice and home-fried histrionics of Jan Kiepura. Mr. Kiepura, whose guiding principle is to shout out the entire cast combined, assiduously disdains anything less than triple forte. It's all very painful. Condolences are due Gladys Swarthout for her unavailing struggle with an ungrateful role and a noisy partner."

— New Theatre p35 My '36

"'Give Us This Night' is a dull and laborious musical play that is far too generous to the highly specialized talents of Mr. Kiepura and employs the handsome Miss Swarthout in the unflattering capacity of stooge. Since Miss Swarthout happens to be considerably more gratifying to the eye than her co-worker, and sings at least as well, it seems to me that the idea of using her merely to gaze about in breathless admiration at the great man's heaven-sent voice was a mistake." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p14 Ap 7 '36

"It is a very evident attempt to compromise between popular and operatic music, a difficult feat and one not altogether successful here. . . In spite of its cast, in spite of the first-rate singing and in spite of the flashes of comedy, 'Give Us This Night' is only fair entertainment." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p24 Ap 6 '36

"Miss Swarthout does sing now and then, of course, but 'Give Us This Night'—and there's a handsome reward for any one who can explain the title to our satisfaction—is predominantly a solo by Mr. Kiepura. The Polish tenor has a splendid voice, if a trifle on the bravura side, but it is our ungrateful opinion that he took too many encores. . . On the whole, however, the film does not solve the problem of opera on the screen; neither is it a particularly noteworthy contribution to the operatic cycle. But that is not Miss Swarthout's fault. Like the girl in the popular ballad, she never had a chance." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '36

"[It is] another slight impediment to cheerfulness in the cinema. . . The players who appear have well-deserved reputations. But they should guard them more carefully against such maladroitness written things as 'Give Us This Night.'" William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p15 Ap 6 '36

"[It] is flat stuff, aside from the music. And the music, if not flat, isn't of any great charm. The singers do nicely, with what tunes they're given." John Mosher

New Yorker p86 Ap 11 '36

"The quality of the score is completely outdistanced by its quantity. . . Mr. Kiepura attempts to mug his way into the hearts of music lovers, with not much help from the sound-dubbing department."

— Stage p10 My '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"With none too good a story, evidently manufactured to fit the requirements of the stars, this production is notable for the singing of Jan Kiepura and Gladys Swarthout which is of such excellence that it will please all lovers of classical music."

Film Daily p7 Ap 7 '36

"Inasmuch as 'Rose of the Rancho' was no record breaker, since Jan Kiepura is generally unknown to domestic audiences, 'Give Us This Night' will have to fight for good returns. Strong on the singing side, the picture's grosses will be best in sections where music lovers abound."

N Y Exhibitor p30 Mr 25 '36

"It is stilted and slow entertainment, built largely to give Jan Kiepura and the Metropolitan Opera diva every opportunity to sing, little chance to act. In order to get fair grosses, picture will have to pull hard."

— + Variety p16 Ap 8 '36

GOLDEN ARROW. My 23 '36 67min Warner

Players: Bette Davis. George Brent. Eugene Pallette. Dick Foran

Director: Alfred E. Green

Based on the play Dream Princess by Michael Arlen. "It is all about a young and beautiful heiress who persuades a handsome reporter to marry her to save her from a lot of foreign fortune-hunters. The reporter agrees to do so in order to get the time and means to finish a novel. After the marriage ceremony the audience, if not the reporter, is let in on the secret that the girl isn't really an heiress at all, but a former waitress who has been turned into the wealthiest girl in the world by a high-pressure publicity man to exploit a beauty cream." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: perhaps; Y: doubtful; C: no."

Christian Century p823 Je 3 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Possible for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good—mature." DAR

"The picture is entertaining, but certainly does not have the dramatic possibilities worthy of such a capable actress as Bette Davis. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Highly improbable farce, lightly done and diverting. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul My 9 '36

"Though the picture is well cast and has interesting settings it lacks sparkle and conviction. Adults & young people."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 5 '36

"Family-mature."

Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"Although Bette Davis reveals a flair for light comedy and gives a semblance of reality to a rather superficial part, those who expect an outstanding performance whenever they see her will find this an exception to the rule. Adolescents, 12-16; possible; children, 8-12; sophisticated."

Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"A slight plot, not worthy of the talents of Bette Davis, and uneven direction somewhat mar the continuity. Fair for family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 1 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 14 '36

"Family-mature."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide. My 9 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Miss Davis' assortment of tricks do not pall: it is only unfortunate that they could not have been put to more stimulating use." E. L.

Boston Transcript p4 My 9 '36

"Bette Davis moves jauntily through the story as the girl and is assisted in dispensing glamour by George Brent. The film comes to a tasty finish with a general distribution of black eyes among the less pleasant persons in the story."

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 9 '36

"'The Golden Arrow' is a trivial vehicle for this year's holder of the acting championship, and all it manages to be is something for Bette to recover from. . . The story is right enough for a class B offering with a minor star, but contains nothing the distinguished Miss Davis can get her teeth into."

+ — Hollywood Spec p11 My 9 '36

"Michael Arlen's treatment of an American heiress and her fortune-hunting suitors makes 'The Golden Arrow' a more refreshing story than the usual run-of-the-mill romance. With the aid of excellent performances and direction that is both speedy and colorful, an hour at the Strand should prove diverting, if not exhausting mentally. . . The picture is really a swell bit of spoofing at the expense of what seems to be old American customs." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 My 4 '36

"'The Golden Arrow' is one of those typical Warner farces which goes in neither for subtlety nor for realism. Its only intent is to give the audience a good time; in a mild way it succeeds. Miss Davis, in the simplest part she has essayed for some time, a role [which could be] as well filled by any newcomer on the lot, looks gay and striking. . . After 'Of Human Bondage,' 'Dangerous' and 'The Petrified Forest,' [she] rates harder assignments than this." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p18 My 4 '36

"'The Golden Arrow' drifts rather pleasantly across the screen. It derives most of its slight strength as entertainment from the saucy performance of Miss Davis and the harried, but good-natured, expression of Mr. Brent." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p16 My 4 '36

"This reviewer found it no triumph either of acting, story telling or direction. Indeed, if the truth must be told, it is unmistakably lacking in all three of these items as well as entertainment value." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p17 My 4 '36

"No chance is given Bette Davis to act, as she has shown she can act, in 'The Golden Arrow.'" John Mosher

New Yorker p87 My 9 '36

"[It] gains nothing from the miscasting of the studio's best actress, Bette Davis, in a part that fits her like a diver's suit. George Brent's acting is only moderately bad. The dialogue is unequalled for poor taste and lack of humor."

— News-Wk p44 My 9 '36

"Miss Bette Davis . . . was whisked into a routine comedy for obvious reasons of time-liness. There is not a true note in the entire production. It is safe to say that Miss Davis will not win the Academy's 1936 honors with this performance."

— Stage p10 Je 1 '36

"'The Golden Arrow' is a minor comedy. . . Although Miss Davis still can make her eyes pop and her lips droop, 'The Golden Arrow' proves nothing more than that she is adept at nonchalance."

+ — Time p58 My 11 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Cinderella dressed up beautifully and smartly. The age-old story told again, but this time with sprightly new variations, and tastefully embellished by standout performances of the entire cast. Family."

+ Box Office p31 My 23 '36

"An hour of quite satisfactory entertainment. . . Perhaps not as strong as many of Miss Davis' former roles but she gets everything possible out of it."

+ Film Curb p13 My 9 '36

"Pleasing entertainment with good cast delivering both romance and comedy."

+ Film Daily p7 My 4 '36

"This lightweight vehicle for Bette Davis belongs in the pretend-you're-rich group of modern fairy tales and as such it is acceptable mass entertainment, though unworthy of the dramatic gifts of that talented young actress. It will be especially popular with matinee-goers. . . Chalk it up for comfortable profits wherever Miss Davis and George Brent are box-office. . . There are a surprising number of novelty twists and turns and of bright lines to this story, with a small army of characters involved, so that once committed to it, few moments will seem dull."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 1 '36

"Interest and amusement are heightened considerably midway in the film by an ingenious story development. Altogether it is an engaging picture, well handled in the performances of its players and the deft direction of Alfred Green. The feminine trade especially should enjoy it."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 Ap 30 '36

"Miss Davis' recently won laurels suggest various exploitation possibilities, naturally, and the fact that this is a different kind of picture for her provides special point. . . Reviewed at the Warner Strand Theatre, New York, where a Sunday afternoon audience laughed responsively at several points in the course of the picture."

+ Motion Pict Herald p42 My 9 '36

"The photography is unkind to Miss Davis. In addition, the story is not enough for her talents. It is strictly a programmer, but likely to pull strong in the feminine matinee trade. Estimate: fair."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p46 My 15 '36

"It pokes fun at heiresses, tells some exaggerated truths about foreign title-holders in the market for rich American girls, and all in all is sufficiently frothy fare to hold nice promise as a warm weather entry in the film ranks. Perhaps not a top-money getter, but should do fairly good business wherever it's backed by smart exploitation."

+ — Variety p18 My 6 '36

"It is [a] highly diverting and thoroughly amusing picture that should have little difficulty registering with most any type of audience."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 1 '36

GREAT ZIEGFELD. (Release date not determined) 184min MGM

Players: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer, Fanny Brice, Virginia Bruce, Frank Morgan, Nat Pendleton

Directors: Robert Z. Leonard, Arthur Lang

Music: Walter Donaldson, Harold Adams

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A great picture! . . If the picture has a fault it is that the earlier part of the story is given in a wealth of detail likely to be intensely interesting only to those who remember the World Fair and other events of the same period."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

GREAT ZIEGFELD—Continued

+ + Bks & Films My '36

"A: notable; Y: doubtful; C: no."

Christian Century p614 Ap 22 '36

"Ziegfeld's name is a synonym for the spectacular in the American stage, and the great showman himself would have grown envious if he could have seen the gorgeousness of this portrayal of his career. . . . Steering clear of vulgarity, 'The Great Ziegfeld' is probably the outstanding production of the season in beauty." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Ap 18 '36

"A performance for the whole family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Here is eye-filling entertainment, with a sigh for the memories of yesterday to a generation who first learned to know and love Will Rogers, Fannie Brice, and Eddie Cantor on the stage of the New Amsterdam Theater; for a younger group to whom the 'Follies' are but hear-say, there is still superlative enjoyment. . . . Excellent entertainment for all audiences. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent—mature." DAR

"An out-of-the-ordinary film. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"A film which is lavishly spectacular and at the same time humanly appealing. Family, exclusive of young children for whom the picture is far too long." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A lavish production which, with a majestic sweep of dazzling splendor, outdoes the great Ziegfeld in gloriously portraying the American Girl. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Ap 25 '36

"A tremendous spectacle magnificently produced and indescribably beautiful. . . . Family."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Ap 15 '36

"Outstanding. Family."

+ + Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

Motion Pict & Family p6 My 15 '36

"The production will bring back fond memories of stars and music of a past generation. Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: tiring because of three hour running time."

Motion Pict R My '36

"Nobody expected 'The Great Ziegfeld' to be a serious essay in biography, but there were a few hopes that such a fine chance to follow the Follies from their humblish beginnings on the old New York Roof to their final magnificence would result in a Broadway panorama of some color and fidelity. . . . Those hopes are not fulfilled." J. S. H.

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"This glamorous, elaborate production justifies every superlative with which to express its beauty and lavishness. . . . Excellent for the family & junior matinees."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 15 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 6 '36

"A and Y: without reservations, a great musical extravaganza made the setting for the biography of one of the theatre's greatest showmen; C: entertaining spectacle with an adult theme."

Par M p42 Je '36

"[It is] played with great charm by William Powell. . . . It is the spectacles woven into the story that give the essential value of the film. These are an exhibit of showmanship rivalling Mr. Ziegfeld's own performances." S. M. Mullen

+ Scholastic p22 My 16 '36

"Outstanding. Here is superbly beautiful picture, produced with flawless artistry, yet its greatest triumph is that the life story of a fascinating personality remains sharply etched throughout the film, never becoming submerged by the lilting music and the resplendent beauty of background and settings. Family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'The Great Ziegfeld' . . . is the musical show par excellence; it is perhaps the most beautiful and most pretentious picture ever made; it is definitely the last word in spectacle and lavish yet conserved expenditure."

+ + Canadian M p40 Je '36

"There is real value in the interesting authentic biographical relation to the theatre's history of the past quarter-century. But aside from that the producers have built a logical, glorious musical comedy pageant that is brilliant with gay, captivating music and songs, specialties and dance, all staged, and excellently performed, in the lavishness with which Ziegfeld surrounded his very life and lifework." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p698 Ap 17 '36

"Again Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer adds an important chapter to the history of motion pictures, this time with an offering which, to my knowledge, marks the highest spot the cinema has reached in entertainment, an offering which gives the screen new dignity as an art and which is of much value to Hollywood as a subject for study. . . . The picture runs over three hours, during which time it never fails to have the high admiration and undivided attention of its spectators. It provided me with my finest experience in a theatre. Never, I am certain, shall I forget it." Allan Hersholt

+ + Hollywood Spec p13 Ap 25 '36

"Running a little over three hours in its road-show form, the picture, for all its opulence, hits inevitable doldrums. . . . Taken for what it is, however, rather than the eulogy it tries to be, 'The Great Ziegfeld' remains a capital show. . . . 'The Great Ziegfeld' gives you, as they say, your money's worth." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p28 My 30 '36

"I almost made the mistake of going home to bed before 'The Great Ziegfeld' got to his Follies. There was a long, tedious, boring, biographical build-up, to bring Mr. Ziegfeld from his World's Fair Sandow days to his big Broadway show days, and then this movie became what it started out to be—a huge, expensive spectacle. . . . There have been few musical pictures as lavish, few as breathtakingly beautiful as this. . . . Stick through to the middle of this and you won't be sorry." Don Herold

+ Life p23 Je '36

"It is an excellent motion-picture, dealing knowingly and excitingly with one of the most astute showmen the American theater ever had. There will be picaresque complaint that the story is not altogether factual, and that certain incidents have been twisted around to preserve continuity of plot."

+ + Lit Digest p22 Ap 4 '36

"Few films have been more lavish than this one, which lasts three hours and must have cost millions of dollars, but since it can be doubted that Ziegfeld was either the Shakespeare or the Leonardo he is represented to have been it can also be doubted that the money was well spent. Luise Rainer as Anna Held has done a first-rate piece of acting—the best, I think, by any woman this year." Mark Van Doren

Nation p860 Ap 29 '36

"'The Great Ziegfeld' is full of many matters, too many for recounting and certainly too many for its own good. Even if it didn't run on forever, there is no excuse for the lag in the first part, the long-drawn-out death, the stage-spectacle material in the last half, etc. And since it does run on, everything should have been tightened—not in the tremendous job of cutting those miles of negative, but in boiling down the script, saving a line here, combining two scenes into one there.”

Otis Ferguson

New Repub p18 My 13 '36

“For one who never considered the ‘Follies’ an indispensable experience it’s hard to know what the shooting’s about. We’d like to be told. Ziegfeld’s screen biography is so obviously at variance with the higgling realities of the show-business that it is difficult to grant it any credibility.” Robert Stebbins

New Theatre p18 My '36

“It is beautiful, expansive, costly, tuneful, romantic, a bit lacking in humor and somewhat overpowering as to quantity. In a word, it is just the sort of show that its hero would have loved and, since the Ziegfeld tradition is one of the greatest in American theatrical history, the girl-and-music saga of an epoch in the annals of the seven lively arts deserves attention and admiration. . . It achieves the most beautiful and imaginative effect in the field [of elaborate production numbers] that has yet been presented. . . After it, the other production effects seem anti-climactic and flat and I think that most of them could have been omitted without pain and to great advantage. It should have been fairly simple to cut ‘The Great Ziegfeld’ down to a more comfortable size.” Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p19 Ap 9 '36

“Mr. Ziegfeld is not the only one who would enjoy this glorified version of his career. It would right now be hard to think of any one, except possibly rival producers, who would not rejoice at this fantastically extravagant production, and even the rival producers would have to admit that a film as excellent as this is a godsend to the entire industry. . . ‘The Great Ziegfeld’ is as impossible to describe in detail as a three-ring circus. Perhaps it’s best just to say it’s a show Ziegfeld would have been proud to own, that it’s filled with the most beautiful girls I’ve seen on a screen, and that, after three crowded hours, the audience was eager for more.” Eileen Creelman

+ + N Y Sun p33 Ap 9 '36

“It would be easy to pretend it had been produced by the Great Glorifier himself rather than by Hunt Stromberg. For the picture has the opulence, the lavishness, the expansiveness and the color of the old Follies; it has the general indifference to humor which was one of Ziegfeld’s characteristics; and it has the reverential approach with which, we suspect, Mr. Ziegfeld might have handled his own life story. . . At least one of these spectacular numbers, filmed to the music of Irving Berlin’s ‘A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody,’ with overtones of ‘Rhapsody in Blue,’ never has been equaled on the musical comedy stage or screen.” F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p21 Ap 9 '36

“‘The Great Ziegfeld’ may slacken its pace once or twice during its unusually long un-reeling, but it never relaxes in its ability to entertain or its ability to recapture and project the mood of the showman himself or the spirit of a golden era in showmanship, with fine and hearty skill. Seldom has the cinema put on a more lavish spectacle or offered such a fervored blend of homage, humor and heart-beat—or such a happy time. . . The cast . . . deserve, along with the director, Robert Z. Leonard, more than just passing salaams for giving us a film that should command your immediate attention.” William Boehnel

+ + N Y World-Telegram p21 Ap 9 '36

“[It] is the most lavish display that the screen has had to offer. Its chorus numbers are gigantic and effective. . . As a document of Broadway history, the film is at its liveliest. . . The Anna Held rôle is the life of the picture, aside from certain bits, and when at last she calls up ‘Flo’ and wishes him good luck on his marriage to Billie Burke, the real excitement of the movie ends, and from then on it’s all an overprolonged finale. The bits, though, are superb. . . Certainly far too hack and old-style is the Ziegfeld death, with that property gardenia falling at last from the sick man’s hand.” John Mosher

+ New Yorker p79 Ap 18 '36

“Powell plays Ziegfeld so suavely it is an entertaining if not too temperamentally accurate portrayal. Luise Rainer is a lovely, vivacious Anna Held. She sings as charmingly as she acts, and is a believable toast of Broadway. Miss Loy struggles admirably under the burden of playing a well-known, living actress; anyone would be miscast in the part. But the real glory of the film rests in its bounty of Follies song hits and stars—in person or impersonation.”

News-Wk p29 Ap 18 '36

“It is a glittering tribute to the ‘Follies’ creator, although you will find it more a reglorification of American womanhood than an anecdotal biography of Mr. Ziegfeld. Somewhere in the stupendous outlay of cinema talent, his personality becomes entangled in a thousand miles of tulle and a mountain of tiaras; but there are many fine moments of nostalgic thrill. . . Miss Rainer gives an irresistibly engaging performance of that astonishing creature, Anna Held.”

+ Stage p10 My '36

“For twenty minutes, a huge revolving staircase exhibits showgirls, dancers and tableaux while a tenor sings ‘A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody.’ For fabulous extravagance, this sequence makes the real ‘Ziegfeld Follies’ look like a burlesque show. . . ‘The Great Ziegfeld’ was in production two years. It lasts three hours, cost $2,000,000 and includes the most ornate sets of its kind ever built. . . At once biography and able extravaganza, ‘The Great Ziegfeld’ approximates, more closely than any show he ever produced himself, the Ziegfeldian ideal. Pretentious, packed with hokum and as richly sentimental as an Irving Berlin lyric, it is, as such, top-notch entertainment.”

+ + Time p47 Ap 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

“Description of its eye-filling beauty is difficult and any evaluation of its heart-tugging story must be predicated upon the record of other box office smashes that packed not half the wallop of this one. . . [It is a] perfect example of a showmanship picture. Family.”

+ Box Office p25 Ap 11 '36

“There is so much of the beautiful in ‘The Great Ziegfeld,’ that it is impossible to criticize such an offering. One is, therefore, restricted by the immensity of such a production, to the selection of certain numbers which remain, perhaps as a comet might remain in our memory, moving across a sky alight with uncountable stars.” Ray Lewis

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p3 Ap 18 '36

“M-G-M, a maker of great pictures, has produced one of the greatest of all times—a production which reaches new heights in musicals. . . Although the picture runs for three hours, there is never a lagging moment.”

+ + Film Daily p10 Ap 9 '36

“[It] marks a milestone in screen production. A preview audience at Santa Barbara—from balcony to orchestra, a cross-section of audiences that will be found the world over—sat for a solid three hours under its spell, never wavered a moment, greeting it time after time with spontaneously loud applause. ‘The Great Ziegfeld’ is definitely ‘road show’ caliber. And in saying this we give most weight to an audience’s reaction, merely tossing in this humble reviewer’s opinion. It is a triumph for MGM and Louis B. Mayer.”

+ + Hollywood Reporter p1 Mr 23 '36

GREAT ZIEGFELD—Continued

"Audience appreciation of the picture's heart-gripping human interest . . . would seem to indicate that the men and women who saw the picture considered it one of the greatest in years. . . . With the story overflowing with glamour and excitement, the original screen play by William Anthony McGuire, writer of several 'Follies,' and Ziegfeld's lifelong friend, the picture is an all-audience attraction and a showman's show that is headed for big box-offices everywhere."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Mr 20 '36

"It takes a lot of stuff to make a picture run three hours and four minutes. A lot of entertainment material is required to make each one of those minutes a sensational experience for any kind of audience. But 'The Great Ziegfeld' has all the necessary ingredients to make that long time seem altogether too short. . . . Columns would be needed adequately to describe 'Ziegfeld' in its entirety. In comparison, no previous music dance spectacle, no matter how elaborately produced, approaches it from a standpoint of sheer brilliance and beauty. Impressive as these qualities are, however, they actually are of secondary importance to the appeal of the motivating story."

+ + Motion Pict Herald p34 Ap 4 '36

"From the first reel this is a big time show. It screams money—money poured into the making, money for the exhibitor who exploits this as it should be exploited. It's positively the last word in screen-stage spectacles. It outdoes any musical ever produced, in scope, sweep, sparkle, splendor, magnificence, talent."

+ N Y Exhibitor p42 Ap 25 '36

"'The Great Ziegfeld' is the last gasp in filmmusical entertainment, and undeniable box office. . . . After two years, and a reported $1,500,000 production investment, Metro has emerged with a picture whose sole shortcoming is its footage. . . . Even for roadshowing, there is the question of how much better an entertainment it would be with an hour out. . . . The production high mark of the numbers is 'Pretty Girl' as the first half finale. This nifty Berlin tune becomes the fulcrum for one of Frank Skinner's best arrangements as Arthur Lange batons the crescendos into a mad, glittering pot-pourri of Saint-Saens and Gershwin, Strauss and Verdi, beautifully blended against the Berlineseque background. It's a scenic flash which makes the auditor wonder 'What can they do to follow that?'. . . 'Great Ziegfeld' is an outstanding picture."

+ + Variety p16 Ap 15 '36

GREEN PASTURES. Je 25 '36 90min Warner

Players: Rex Ingram. Oscar Polk. Eddie Anderson. Frank Wilson

Directors: Marc Connelly. William Keighley

Choral music: Hall Johnson Choir

Based on the play of the same title by Marc Connelly which in turn was suggested by a volume of short stories, 'Ol' Man Adam an' His Chillun', by Roark Bradford. "Literally, the fable the picture narrates is that of God's trials and tribulations, His joys and sorrows when He created the world and made mankind. Actually it is the primitive, modern Louisiana negro's concept of God, heaven and man's experiences on earth and with God as described in the Old Testament." (Motion Pict Daily)

A Guide to the study of the screen version of The Green Pastures, prepared by Mabel A. Bessey, is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc., 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents per copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A splendid picture, with a huge cast, ably headed by Rex Ingram, faithfully following the stage play throughout. Marc Connelly has brought us a film which will appeal to all who know negroes, and will awaken deep thought in many who may attend few movies. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: excellent; 14-18: excellent; 8-14: excellent. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature-family." DAR

"Discriminating audiences will find Marc Connelly's 'Green Pastures' a joy. . . . Family—should be explained to young children." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A fine unprecedented picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"Highest commendation is due Warner Brothers for their courage and originality in producing 'The Green Pastures,' an unusual and rarely beautiful picture. . . . [It] has deep spiritual value and is so artistically produced that offence could not be taken regardless of religious views held."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 27 '36

"This poignantly moving work really deserves the much abused adjective 'notable.' . . . The film follows the play version, but because of the mechanics of the different medium it is more impressive in many scenes. . . . Although it depicts the beliefs of a simple people, the film calls for a certain amount of sophistication in order to appreciate it. Those who take their own religion too literally may be offended but for those who understand, it cannot fail to give a real feeling of religion and a deeper understanding of a simple, childlike race. Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: good with explanatory assistance."

+ + Motion Pict R Je '36

"The direction is slowly paced and masterly and the herculean task of adapting the stage play without offending any religious sect is ably accomplished. The picture offers a rare treat to all who enjoy the fine and beautiful things of life. Family."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women My 27 '36

"The wide scope of the camera has made possible a more interesting interpretation than the original version which was confined to the limits of the stage. Excellent Negro spirituals by Hall Johnson's choir. General patronage."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

"Family. Outstanding."

+ + Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The production is a masterful rarity, not alone from the viewpoint of its unusual subject, but in its superlative treatment, splendid construction and impressionable casting. Not in all of the screen's forty years has there been anything like it. . . . Those who might take the subject and its treatment too seriously as representing a religious preaching, bordering on satire, should understand that, rather than intending irreverence, the playwright set out to depict the rare, sincere, at times childish intimacy with which the illiterate, primitive Negro imagines his relationship with heaven and its constituents." J. P. Cunningham

+ + Commonweal p160 Je 5 '36

"It comes to the screen as a notable motion picture you cannot afford to miss. . . . 'The Green Pastures' does not have the emotional appeal I thought it would have. Its producers overlooked an opportunity to make it vastly more powerful. They had at their command a choir of notable singers to provide a continuous vocal score which would have been a startling and highly artistic innovation in screen accompaniment. . . . There are no box-office names in the cast, but the theme of the story, the sweep of its physical presentation, and the fame of the play from which it was made,

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

will make the picture one of the season's outstanding box-office successes."

+ Hollywood Spec p8 My 23 '36

"With all its charm, simplicity, humor and drama preserved intact, 'The Green Pastures,' miracle of the theatre, has now become the miracle of the screen. . . The contrast of the lofty theme and its matter-of-fact treatment—slang in the mouths of de Lawd and his saints—is no small part of the film's constant appeal as it was of the stage play's."

+ News-Wk p26 My 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Far more spectacular than its stage version, this is an artistic triumph. Performances by members of the all-colored cast are sincere and authentic."

+ Box Office p33 Je 6 '36

"Played by a fine troupe of colored actors and actresses it is Grade A entertainment. Every member of the cast turns in a fine job. The co-direction of Keighley & Connelly could not be improved upon. They did a hard job in grand style. It should do exceedingly well in the larger cities but just what will happen in the smaller spots remains to be seen."

+ Film Curb p11 My 23 '36

"Unusual box-office candidate in faithfully adapted and directed stage hit. Negro choir stands out."

+ Film Daily p7 My 19 '36

"It is difficult to reduce such a magnificent achievement to the terms of box office. It is more than a motion picture. It is a memorable experience in the theater. It is without limits in its appeal and in its entertainment values. A thoroughly reasonable prediction is that 'Green Pastures' will play return engagement after return engagement throughout the entire civilized world. . . The only criticisms that can be leveled at the production are the unrelieved dramatics of the final reels and the gross miscasting of 'Eve.' The contrast is too great between the high humor of 'De Lawd's' earlier adventures and the tragedy of the latter scenes. This makes for a disturbing element that is unnecessary."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 My 16 '36

"'The Green Pastures' is something new under the motion picture sun. It has had no predecessor; nothing heretofore produced is even vaguely similar. . . Played with a dignity that bespeaks sincerity, the picture is crammed with incidents and events in action, dialogue and characterization that provoke hearty laughter. . . Since there is no precedent for this type of attraction, its box-office future, as mere entertainment, is not determinable."

Motion Pict Daily p10 My 18 '36

"Frankly the producers, despite the records established by the story as a stage play, were a little worried as to how the class and mass public might accept it as a motion picture, but not after watching the preview audience, listening to the laughter occasioned by the film's simple, honest comedy, noting the manner in which its simple drama held the crowd to hushed silence and hearing the salvo of applause at the end. . . Never a preachment or a sermon, 'The Green Pastures' is amusing entertainment. By no stretch of the imagination can anyone, no matter how strict and rigid his religious scruples, consider it in any way profane or sacrilegious."

+ Motion Pict Herald p36 My 30 '36

"This leaves a sense of reverence that may make it palatable to many religious groups. . . Estimate: excellent, will need selling."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 Je 1 '36

"It will amply feed the tills of exhibitors in city and hamlet the world around, wherever folks can be moved by simple, majestic drama and beauty. . . Marc Connelly rates top credit as author and adaptor and co-director. He weighed and inspirationally guided every step of the production from showmanship as well as artistic angle. . . The deeply-moving and essentially reverent nature of the fable holds it above offense and there are no racial angles to limit its geographical entertainment scope."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 16 '36

H

HALF ANGEL. My 15 '36 65min 20th century-Fox

Players: Frances Dee, Brian Donlevy, Charles Butterworth, Helen Westley

Director: Sidney Lanfield

Based on the novel, Lightning Strikes Twice, by F. Tennyson Jesse. "Frances Dee is acquitted of charge of poisoning her father. To shield her from reporters and curious mobs, girl is given shelter in home of elderly couple of charitable repute. Donlevy pursues girl to get her to authorize confession story of her experiences, which she side-steps. Relentless, the reporter trails her and runs into circumstances which eventually clear her." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: hardly; Y: not the best; C: no."

Christian Century p887 Je 17 '36

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Mature audience, including 14-18 years." DAR

"A well chosen cast, together with many comic situations and witty dialogue, make this an extraordinarily entertaining production in spite of a loosely constructed plot. Adults." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family, but mature for children." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Entertaining for mature audiences." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 30 '36

"A loosely woven, rather incoherent murder mystery in which circumstantial evidence plays an important part. . . Amusing situations, witty dialogue and the work of an excellent cast give this picture entertainment value. Adults & young people."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 18 '36

Settings are very attractive and the cast is pleasing, but several situations are far-fetched, and on the whole the film is only moderately entertaining. Adolescents, 12-16: passable; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

"While it may be considered poor taste to exploit the insane, nevertheless Etienne Girardot is hilariously funny. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 20 '36

"Another murder mystery so tangled up with sub-plots that it becomes involved. General patronage."

— Nat Legion of Decency My 28 '36

"Amusing situations, witty dialogue and the work of an excellent cast give this picture entertainment value. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

HALF ANGEL—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] offers uneasy and haphazard entertainment. . . The basic faults lie in the film-story itself: the producer should have noticed and deleted these weaknesses; coincidence carries several important scenes; its use invariably lessens plausibility. . . A more serious error is the use of dialogue to explain a subtly involved climax. . . Yet, despite its mistakes, which are primarily errors of omission, 'Half Angel' will prove itself pleasing to the casual film-goer. It is merely too bad that full advantage of its possibilities was not taken." Paul Jacobs

Hollywood Spec p12 My 9 '36

"The hardened geographer will notice many familiar landmarks of scene, incident and type in 'Half Angel.' . . The most familiar incident is the one about the reporter proving the murderess innocent and winning her love and the most familiar scenes take place in court rooms." B. R. C.

N Y Times p7 My 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Whirlwind direction from a speedy script, coupled with inspired performances, bring this into the category of honest-to-gosh swell melodrama. Family."

+ Box Office p25 My 9 '36

"Just an ordinary, program grade, murder mystery melodrama. Fair material for dual bills and the neighborhoods but not big spot stuff by any means."

— + Film Curb p12 My 9 '36

"This is a mad, merry offering. Although the heroine is accused of two murders and there is much mystery, the comedy predominates."

+ Film Daily p7 My 4 '36

"It has an excellent character cast, but its lack of draw names and story weight will hold it generally in the B class for dual exhibition, where it will have considerable box-office strength. . . The girl is played by Frances Dee with appeal and spirit. It is no simple matter to stand up under two or three murder charges and battle with a caveman lover at the same time, but she does it and makes it delightful."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 29 '36

"A boisterously amusing comedy, this production offers the extra appeal of a fast-moving murder mystery that holds the interest right up to the giddy, serio-comic finale. . . Plug the comic aspects of this particular murder mystery and the relentless pursuit of the girl by a reporter."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Ap 30 '36

"The film proved to be an enjoyable average attraction."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p39 My 9 '36

"Mystery drama with some attention to comedy angles, this is lightweight for de luxers, best suited for twin bills, neighborhood audiences."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p49 My 15 '36

"This murder mystery promises mild box office returns at best as part of dual programs, though it should provide a satisfactory hour's entertainment once the customers are past the wicket. . . Surprising feature of the film is the rather lustreless screenplay turned out by Gene Fowler and Bess Meredyth from the F. Tennyson Jesse story. More sparkle in the dialog is naturally expected from such a writing team."

+ — Variety p54 Je 3 '36

"'Half Angel' makes no pretense beyond an hour's audience diversion in the murder mystery class and on that basis offers good entertainment for satisfactory box office returns in program combinations. . . Yarn manages to hold suspense and puzzlement, together with character clash based upon hatreds and suspicious, well into final quick, punchy resolution of deadly facts and motivations."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 29 '36

HARD LUCK DAME. Ag 8 '36 Warner

Players: Bette Davis, Warren William, Alison Skipworth, Arthur Treacher

Director: William Dieterle

"A high-spirited detective, member of a small detective agency, becomes involved with a gang of international jewel thieves. One member of the gang pays him for protection, the others pay him to locate a legendary horn containing priceless jewels." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The picture finally ends with an air of mystery about the jewels, their whereabouts, and their origin, leaving the audience wondering what it is all about. The many dramatic situations are neither fresh nor stimulating. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Despite a brilliant cast and a director whose past achievements rank high, there is small reason for this far-fetched story." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre-unwholesome. An exaggerated murder mystery that leaves a bad taste in the mouth. Unconvincing and too much drinking. Adults." DAR

"A confusing mediocre mystery which cannot be redeemed even with a notable cast, good direction and a story by a well known author. Fair for adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Altho the picture moves at a brisk pace and has an excellent cast, it fails to satisfy; the story lacks originality in treatment and the humorous sequences are forced. Adults." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The plot is bewildering and hard to follow and is stagey in its presentation. Too much gun play. Mediocre. Adults." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

— + Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

"A farcically treated mystery drama replete with suspense and at times very broad humor and too much drinking."

— + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) Mr 21 '36

"Unfortunately cast is Bette Davis, winner of the latest Academy Award. Disjointed continuity and impossible dialogue mark an undistinguished photography. Waste of time for adults."

— Jt Estimates Ap 1 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no. Comedy is overdone to the point of silliness. Although typical of its kind, this one seems to be poorer than usual."

— Motion Pict R My '36

"A: mystery murder drama in which broad humor and much drinking accent a complicated plot; Y: unethical; C: no." Par M p50 Je '36

"Waste of time for adults."

— Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

HARVESTER. My 1 '36 65min Republic

Players: Alice Brady, Russell Hardie, Ann Rutherford, Frank Craven, Cora Sue Collins

Director: Joseph Santley

Based on the novel of the same title by Gene Stratton Porter. "The story concerns the efforts of Joyce Compton, backed by her shrewish mother, Alice Brady, to win Russell

Hardie, a most eligible bachelor. Opposed to the match is Emma Dunn, Hardie's neighbor who seeks Hardie for her granddaughter, Ann Rutherford. Trapped into a betrothal, Hardie escapes only after Miss Dunn has died and Cora Sue Collins, Miss Rutherford's younger sister, has been placed in an orphanage." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Old-fashioned scenes and costumes, good acting and excellent direction are combined in an entertaining romance. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 23 '36

"The young leads are attractive, and the acting is unaffected and sincere. However, the whole seems to lack inspiration. It is not distinguished in any way. Adolescents, 12-16* probably enjoyable; children, 8-12: little interest."

— + Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

"A: sentimental drama; Y and C: clean romance with naive comedy."

Par M p42 Je '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A nice 'down home' romance religiously adapted from the Gene Stratton Porter novel—a perfect family vehicle. Family."

+ Box Office p35 Ap 25 '36

"In various surroundings this plot has been used, many, many times. The story of the match-making mother is nothing new. Republic selected an excellent cast for this one and given better material they could have done something."

— + Film Curb p15 Ap 25 '36

"This story . . . is handled in a very matter of fact manner. The piece is quite talkative, there are no real tense moments, or high spots, and the characterizations are not as strong as they might have been. . . In the smaller towns and cities, the show should do some business, and on some of the double bills it should prove satisfactory."

— + Film Daily p4 Ap 18 '36

"This rather free version of one of Gene Stratton Porter's best known folk romances of the nineties lacks only name strength to make it a boxoffice best-seller in the smaller cities and on down. It is almost perfect family fare, folksy, wholesome and filled with unforced chuckles. There must be added also the value of the book's many millions of loyal readers, who are not likely to be disturbed by the story's liberal amplifications."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 15 '36

"This best seller makes good family entertainment as presented here. Victor Zobel's production and Joseph Santley's direction result in a well-knit pastoral, refreshing for its homey qualities. . . The production will be acceptable in most situations, rating higher in the smaller communities."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ap 20 '36

"Mingling drama with comedy and at the same time narrating a sympathy-stimulating, romantic story, the picture seems to be one of potent appeal for neighborhood and family audiences. In addition to name values, the show carries many suggestions that readily can be adapted to business stimulating exploitations."

Motion Pict Herald p40 Ap 25 '36

"Despite the fact that some may find it slow-moving, talkative, 'The Harvester' should be a good entrant for neighborhoods where Gene Stratton Porter's name is strong for any box office. . . With some good bits, the show ought to interest, even though its possibilities have not all been realized."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p23 My 10 '36

"Gene Stratton Porter's best seller of two decades back, makes mild entertainment today. There's nothing particularly fresh about the mother who match-makes for her daughter. Republic's picture has little to recommend it either as entertainment or in production. . . Made for around $65,000, picture should be on a par with major class B pictures. It's far from that."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 15 '36

HEARTS DIVIDED. Je 20 '36 87min Warner

Players: Marion Davies. Dick Powell. Charlie Ruggles. Claude Rains. Edward Everett Horton. Arthur Treacher.

Director: Frank Borzage

Music and lyrics: Harry Warren. Al Dubin

Based on the play, Glorious Betsy, by Rida Johnson Young. Placed against the historic background of the Louisiana Purchase, this is a story of Napoleon's brother, Jerome Bonaparte's love affair with Betsy Patterson, Baltimore belle. Napoleon breaks up the marriage when the young couple arrive in France and Betsy, broken-hearted, returns to America. There she is reunited with Jerome.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Diverting and glamorous entertainment.

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 6 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Je 13 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There are episodes you may not wish to miss, such as the spectacle of Charles Ruggles and Edward Everett Horton, Senator swains of the fragile Betsy, falling out of an apple tree, or of Claude Rains in his Napoleon role. . . Frank Borzage has directed the picture with an experienced and deft hand, aided by an excellent cast; nor has he been niggardly with his handsome sets. If it seems a trifle pompous despite its light comedy, and not conclusively 100 per cent entertainment to this reviewer, that is no sign it will not entrance you." Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p10 Je 13 '36

"The story is about what you'd expect from the title. The picture, not bad light entertainment, is a curious mixture of good and bad. The principal roles are played by Dick Powell and Marion Davies, neither of them noted for their histrionic talent. . . The picture dies on its feet when the principals go into an emotional scene. . . When the stars are not on the screen, 'Hearts Divided' is rather pleasant diversion." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p19 Je 15 '36

"Despite the presence in its cast of one of the grandest collections of supporting players ever gathered together for one production, 'Hearts Divided,' which rode into the Strand yesterday on a virtual tidal wave of advance ballyhoo, is the year's most disappointing picture. Its chief faults are that Miss Davies is miscast and that the apocryphal script demands that Dick Powell cavort about Baltimore much in need of a haircut and warbling vacuous ditties." J. T. M.

— — N Y Times p13 Je 13 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

HEARTS DIVIDED—Continued

"Marion Davies and Dick Powell are charming in their new entertainment. . . Both of them, as you know, are gifted and persuasive players and capable, when the opportunity offers, of reasonably good acting. That opportunity, however, is absent from 'Hearts Divided,' and they must be content, as its principal players, to give attractive performances in an entertainment that is not worthy of their talents. The film is not dull, nor is it without a good romantic idea. But it seems condemned to be only moderately amusing and diverting." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p13 Je 15 '36

"The piece is hardly a historical triumph. It's more a matter of apple blossoms, as a background for Miss Davies; a tear or two; a brave scene of renunciation, an emotion adapted to the Davies talent; and a song here and there." John Mosher

New Yorker p68 Je 20 '36

"Treachle, treacle, little star! This viscous costume-piece was obviously designed for those with predilections toward sugared violets, Harrison Fisher art, Beatrice Fairfax's heart-throb column. . . The romantic leads are lymphatically played, but a host of able actors in supporting roles more than atone for the inexpertness of [the stars] who linger in the endless procession of gauze-swathed close-ups. Dick Powell is woefully miscast. Costumes, camera-angles, undistinguished songs, all piled high against him. . . Maid-Marion Davies is the most consistent actress on the screen; she hasn't changed her routine by so much as a single curl since 'Runaway Romany' and it's palpably too late to start now." Herb Sterne

+ — Script p8 Je 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is a costume comedy-drama that most any audience ought to relish. . . Davies fans will like it and it should have no trouble in clicking most anywhere."

+ Film Curb p6 Je 13 '36

"Well-directed, splendidly acted love story with historical background."

+ Film Daily p10 Je 9 '36

"[It] carries the aroma of an old-fashioned operetta without music. Its story elements are old-fashioned hokum, but are served with considerable witchery and a very pleasant sauce of decorous comedy. They give Miss Davies no such sprightly comedy opportunities as she had in 'Page Miss Glory,' but instead give her a romantic role for which she is not well suited. Despite the evident efforts to bolster up the story with production values, the result is not happy and will score only moderately at the box-office. It will need vigorous exploitation in all markets."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Je 4 '36

"Napoleon, Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton and other celebrities of the time pass on the screen, attracting greater interest than the central characters, though they are all incidental to the plot, with the exception of Napoleon—superbly played by Claude Rains."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 Je 5 '36

"Analysis of this picture reveals plenty of easily adaptable angles that should make for interest-creating exploitation. . . Well acted, directed and produced, the picture has an entertaining quality that should appeal to average audiences."

+ Motion Pict Herald p68 Je 13 '36

"It will take selling to get this one over for returns that count, but the potentialities are there. Chances are it will hit and miss, doing well where theatres get seriously to work on it, and shying off otherwise. . . Difficult to place the blame on the film's failing to come through to definite click proportions. Picture in toto impresses as being cold and lacking heart. . . With the single exception of Claude Rains as Napoleon, not one of the actors seems to believe his or her role."

+ — Variety p23 Je 17 '36

"While it will not be rated a great picture, 'Hearts Divided' has the names and will get the exploitation, plus its own material merits that label it [as] a money-maker, best suited for class houses but broad enough in appeal to prosper well down the line. . . Top acting honors go to Claude Rains in the Napoleon role. He creates an outstanding characterization of the man in his less imperialistic moments, deft, witty, shrewd and persuasive in his dealing with his brother and the girl the latter would marry."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Je 4 '36

HEARTS IN BONDAGE. My 20 '36 69min Republic

Players: James Dunn, Mae Clarke, David Manners, Charlotte Henry, Henry B. Walthall, Fritz Leiber

Director: Lew Ayres

"The drama of the historic battle between the Monitor and Merrimac is the theme. James Dunn, discharged from the U. S. Navy before the Civil War for refusing to sink the Merrimac when left in charge, returns on the Monitor, built by his uncle, Fritz Leiber, as Ericsson, and destroys the ship after the Confederates have transformed it into an ironclad." Motion Pict Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"The first of this company's costume extravaganzas, this should mark Republic's ascendancy into the bracket of 'A' producing companies."

+ Box Office p33 Je 6 '36

"It will undoubtedly be well liked in most situations. . . Not only is this film interesting from the historical angle but it also offers an appealing love story."

+ Film Curb p13 My 30 '36

"Republic has in this production a picture of which it can be proud. It is the company's best effort to date, and any major studio would be happy to include it on its program. . . It has the ingredients that make for mass appeal and should do well at the box-office."

+ Film Daily p6 My 26 '36

"The result is an important and frequently stirring picture that every American should see and that most theaters will have no trouble in exploiting for good profits. It belongs specifically at the top of any high-class double bill. . . History has been followed with devoted care so that the picture has documentary value and promise of a long and useful life."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 My 23 '36

"The picture unreels an interesting document and events are kept moving by the direction of Lew Ayres. . . Exploitation should stress the love interest as well as the historical nature of the picture."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 My 25 '36

"Beside its tale of personal drama and romance, it presents a story of historical political drama which is both entertaining and educational. Intelligently produced, directed vigorously and convincingly acted, the picture is of a caliber for any kind of audience."

+ Motion Pict Herald p50 Je 6 '36

"As the first on Republic's new season program, this sets a standard hard to equal. The picture can definitely be rated as the best from Republic since the company started, from all angles."

+ Phila Exhibitor p23 Je 1 '36

"Republic has something here to sell. . . Lew Ayres, director, deserves palm for his reality in doing something for world at large as his first directorial assignment. It's a masterful job. . . 'Hearts in Bondage' is not a very adept title for picture, but if sold consistently it will nail money as dual topper and along subsequents."

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 23 '36

HELL SHIP MORGAN. F 8 '36 63min Columbia

Players: George Bancroft, Ann Sothorn, Victor Jory

Director: D. Ross Lederman

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: no value; Y and C: no."

Christian Century p478 Mr 25 '36

"The story is a vigorous one, the acting is expert and some of the camera effects are remarkable. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 28 '36

"Suitability: adult."

Mo Film Bul p66 Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is a] hack melodrama of violent action. . . It should not be possible for children to see such distorted representations of average human relations. Their elders can take it simply as exciting hokey, complete with a storm at sea staged in the studio tank."

— Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A good cast struggles vainly with this routine love triangle plot, set against a background of the sea. . . It is unconvincing and won't excite the old Bancroft fans. There is a thrilling episode, excellently staged in a small fishing smack during the height of a storm, but it's not enough to compensate for the slow pace and bare scenario. Family."

+ — Box Office p27 Mr 28 '36

"All the familiar action that pleases fans who like their heroes tough and their action hard and fast has been incorporated into this latest version of 'Hell Ship Morgan.' . . The film is packed with fast moving sequences all the way through, and even though it is no pretentious production by any means, showmen can sell it as an action drama."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p44 Mr 21 '36

L'HOMME DES FOLIES BERGÈRE. Ap 17 '36 82min United artists

Players: Maurice Chevalier, Natalie Paley, Sim Viva

Director: Roy del Ruth

This is the French version of Folies Bergère which was filmed in Hollywood last year. "Baron Cassini, a reckless speculator, disappears on the eve of a large ball at which his attendance is essential, leaving a note to his banking partners that he will not return until he can meet his monetary obligations. Panic-stricken, his financial associates engage a prominent cabaret performer whose impersonation of the banker is so remarkable that at times even Cassini is perplexed at the resemblance." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"[It has] several more or less amusing episodes. Adult."

+ — Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Admirers of Maurice Chevalier, who are familiar with his native language, are likely to enjoy the French version of 'The Man of the Folies Bergère.' . . The dialogue is sparkling and keeps the audience in good humor." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 18 '36

"As effervescent as ever, especially when he has the opportunity to sing a lively song in the presence of a group of stunning chorus girls, Chevalier prances in and out of the archaic walls of the plot with all the gayety and abandon that characterized his early pictures. . . Scenically the film is just as lavish and tasteful as the English version, and as tuneful, too, since the sets and songs are the same. And, to continue the comparison, the film is just as routine as its predecessor, since it happens that the plot, which is pretty old stuff, requires an excessive amount of time to tangle and untangle." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p25 Ap 22 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"English version, substantially the same, much better for American audiences."

Film Curb p5 Ap 21 '36

"[The film] is a creditable job. . . [It] is being routed around in a few of the specialized French-language houses where it won't do too well because presumably Chevalier fans have already seen it and others won't care. Colleges, usual best bookings for French-language films in the United States obviously won't care much for the subject matter."

+ Variety p29 Ap 22 '36

HOT MONEY. Jl 25 '36 70min Warner

Players: Ross Alexander, Beverly Roberts, Joseph Cawthorn, Paul Graetz

Director: William McCann

The story concerns a get-rich-quick scheme which a crooked promoter initiates. Just before the Better Business Bureau steps in, the fake product turns out to be a super fuel for automobiles.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Pleasing entertainment. Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 6 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"With the exception of the to-be-expected weakness of over-emphasized dialogue, this impudently absurd comedy is tops. . . 'Hot Money' is an evening's fun. Protest as he may, tear Junior away from his evening's arithmetic and take him. It is a family picture." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p13 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"'Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford' type of film with a modern setting, a competent cast, written and directed to 300-laugh-an-hour speed, this will more than carry its end on any program. Family."

+ Box Office p69 My 30 '36

"This yarn of a get-rich-quick promoter offers amusing, and at times exciting, entertainment. . . 'Hot Money' ought to be able to hold its own in most any situation."

HOT MONEY—Continued

+ Film Curb p15 My 30 '36

"Farce comedy-drama keyed to a speedy tempo with the entire cast contributing engaging performances, this is pleasant amusement, geared to appeal to general audiences. The picture is not pretentious. It concentrates on substantial entertainment and has elements in story content, dialogue, action and situations that should satisfy audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 My 22 '36

"Packed with comedy characterizations, this won't have any trouble pleasing even if it won't get into the better than average gross class. Heroine Beverly Roberts may mean more now that she has appeared in several pictures; the comedy angles are strong; the picture moves rapidly throughout."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 Je 1 '36

"Warners has taken the old theme of the get-rich-quick schemer, added new, youthful faces, situations and exceedingly hilarious dialog to make 'Hot Money' a solid hour of funfuf entertainment for the supplemental programs for which it is geared."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 21 '36

HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES. F 29 '36 70min Republic

Players: Irving Pichel, Phillips Holmes, Rosita Moreno, Mae Clark

Director: Arthur Lubin

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: weak; Y: hardly; C: no."

Christian Century p855 Je 10 '36

"Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 11 '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 15 '36

"Adults & young people."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Mr 14 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"A lively spy ring melodrama that is exciting enough to disguise its improbability."

+ Canadian M p61 My '36

New Theatre p35 My '36

"Perhaps the director of 'The House of a Thousand Candles' was attempting to show us something in the way of stylized acting. Certainly all the personages of the drama perform in such symbolic fashion that you could tell those who represent the spirit of evil from those who impersonate the spirit of righteousness even if their subsequent activities did not make their motives clear." Richard Watts, Jr.

N Y Herald Tribune Ap 2 '36

"This picture is a harried and hysterical spy melodrama, contributing nothing new to the cinematic study of espionage systems. . . 'The House of a Thousand Candles' is probably not intended as a burlesque of spy melodramas. There isn't a Marx Brother anywhere in sight. But a few turns of dialogue could have made it a very funny picture." Eileen Creelman

— N Y Sun p41 Ap 1 '36

"[It] is a lively spy-ring melodrama, briskly directed by Arthur Lubin. . . It adds up to a reasonably exciting entertainment and is quite the best spy picture to have come our way since 'The Thirty-Nine Steps.'" F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p29 Ap 2 '36

"Unfortunately, the piece is directed with so little understanding of how humor and melodrama should be mixed that it turns out to be a pretentious little imitation of 'The Thin Man' and something of a mess. Some of the roles fall into good hands, but at times the acting is so inefficient that one cannot help suspecting that the few bits that are good are good by blind accident." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p27 Ap 2 '36

"Irving Pichel is the mastermind of the spies, and he conceals his headquarters in the becardled resort, which is a far more showy place of pleasure than the Casino at Monte Carlo actually is. The peace of Europe is of course assured at the end, but the audience by this time is thoroughly restive." John Mosher

— + New Yorker p86 Ap 11 '36

"As a milestone in cinema history, 'The House of a Thousand Candles' only claim to attention is Mr. Pichel's sinister smile, which remains upon his face as if carved there, from the first reel to the last, giving to an otherwise somewhat episodic narrative a comforting if not entirely reasonable continuity."

Time p32 Ap 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This story of international intrigue packs a wallop because it is timely. With daily new accounts of European espionage, most audiences should watch this one with special interest."

+ Film Daily p6 Ap 3 '36

"Estimate: nice program entertainment."

N Y Exhibitor p31 Mr 25 '36

"A picture of many merits, 'The House of a Thousand Candles' can count a mile for every candle in measuring the distance it is ahead of the average independent product. Its presence at the Radio City Center is not without some endorsement value in that connection. It looks good and it moves fast enough to cover up the rather time-exhausted international spy plot that has been done so often, both silent and in dialog."

+ Variety p16 Ap 8 '36

(s)HOW TO BEHAVE. Ap 25 '36 10min MGM

Players: Robert Benchley

"Robert Benchley undertakes to demonstrate a few situations, the etiquette of which is questioned by two telephone men working among the wires in a manhole." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Bob Benchley opens with good aim if he's shooting for another Academy award. Again entertaining us, he is now showing how funny we look when we put etiquette above being natural."

+ Film Daily p8 Ap 20 '36

"With all the humor that can be attached to the problems of a man arising from the table when a lady approaches, story telling under constant interruption and week-end guest behavior, the familiar and hilarious Benchley antics build up each situation for the most laughs."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 20 '36

"The gags are not so funny and even Benchley can't save this. Fair."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p40 Ap 25 '36

"A pip talking short written by and starring the journalistic comedian. Benchley is so good as a mugger and reads lines with the timing and comedy finesse of an expert that the only reason he doesn't make more pictures must be because he doesn't want to. . . It's a cinch for the best theatres."

+ Variety p15 Ap 29 '36

HUMAN CARGO. Jl 17 '36 66min 20th century-Fox

Players: Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy, Alan Dinehart, Ralph Morgan

Director: Allan Dwan

Based on the novel, I Will Be Faithful, by Kathleen Shepard. "Claire Trevor plays the society girl who wants to break into the newspaper game with the romantic idea of seeing her name on by-lines. Brian Donlevy, ace reporter, gives her a real taste of how tough chasing exclusives may be when he uses her as a stooge to get a line on a gang which is smuggling aliens and then shaking them down." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A fine bit of French mimicry on the part of Claire Trevor enlivens this heavy, exciting mystery. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Possible for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre—mature." DAR

"The picture has its share of rough action, but this element is never emphasized at the expense of dialogue and ideas. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul My 2 '36

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 22 '36

"Tense, and fairly interesting for adult audiences."

+ — Jt Estimates My 1 '36

"The plot is not especially original. . . When the characters stop to discuss personal relations in the midst of acute danger one feels tempted to yell, like the small boy in the gallery at another melodrama, 'Look out, lady, the villain is right behind you!' Adolescents, 12-16: very exciting; children, 8-12: not suitable."

+ — Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 22 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This one will pull you to the edge of your seat and keep you there. . . Spangled with scintillating performances, there is not an unconvincing moment." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p15 Ap 25 '36

"Should any one miss 'Human Cargo' . . . his loss would be negligible. For it is one of those film fantasies dealing with smuggling rings, the underworld and newspaper romance which have no particular reason for being produced except to employ actors." Howard Barnes

— N Y Herald Tribune p8 My 16 '36

"Even its particularly able cast seems unable to keep the film from being anything more than an assembly job of trite situations. . . Material for an interesting topical film does come to the surface occasionally, only to be submerged again by a wave of melodramatic highjinks." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p11 My 16 '36

"[It is] pretty terrible. . . Trivia for the grinds." Douglas Gilbert

— N Y World-Telegram p19 My 19 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Crammed with action, excitement, thrills and laughs, this picture will satisfy any type of audience. Authenticity of background and fast-moving dialogue give it a high rating among newspaper-gangster exposé yarns. Family."

+ Box Office p35 Ap 25 '36

"It is melodrama with some touches of comedy. The two leads do well. Dwan's direction is satisfactory."

+ Film Curb p16 Ap 25 '36

"Fast newspaper melodrama with never a dull moment—sure-fire, with first rate comedy."

+ Film Daily p5 Ap 21 '36

"Familiar story material that is so skillfully woven into screen entertainment as to lift it out of the rut into a rating of first class B product that should be good boxoffice on the duals despite its lack of draw names."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 18 '36

"The alien shakedown racket provides a colorful background for this action melodrama which slows down only for comedy, tellingly spaced. . . The excitement of the chase after a story of the inside of the racket which smuggles, terrorizes and kills many thousands of aliens seeking illegal entry into the country is the best angle to plug."

Motion Pict Daily p10 Ap 20 '36

"Thrill action is the tune to which this spins. . . It is so directed that there always is movement, suspense and punch to maintain unflagging interest. Performances on the part of the principals are uniformly good. While none of the cast names rank importantly in box office ratings, the quality of their work is high as is the interest inherent in the story and its action."

+ Motion Pict Herald p36 Ap 25 '36

"Melodrama for neighborhood houses, twin bills, 'Human Cargo' makes up in general entertainment what it lacks in star lustre."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p23 My 10 '36

"'Human Cargo,' a newspaper story, reads like Monday morning's paper. It tries to make Page One stuff out of news that belongs inside and 'way back. Script takes a crusading stand on a subject that isn't worthy, and the cast is equally guilty of misplaced faith. Since it's only medium as entertainment and because the names aren't in the drawing class, picture isn't likely to get beyond the doubles."

+ — Variety p15 My 27 '36

"'Human Cargo' is [an] exciting and amusing melodrama of rival newspaper reporters pitted against deadly immigrant smugglers. . . Boasting no compelling draw names and made in the B bracket, picture, nevertheless, boosts itself by smart handling and production to calibre capable of hitting A spots for good program support, and will amply take care of itself down the line."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 18 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

I

I MARRIED A DOCTOR. Ap 25 '36 85min
Warner

Players: Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson, Ross Alexander, Guy Kibbee, Louise Fazenda

Director: Archie Mayo

Based on the novel, Main Street, by Sinclair Lewis. "The story centers on the marital adventure of a high-minded city girl . . . who goes to a middle-western town as the bride of a favorite son, expecting to find friendliness and breadth of outlook. Instead she becomes the victim of the pettiness and vindictive antagonism that Lewis depicted with such biting skill." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: interesting; Y: good; C: little interest."
Christian Century p719 My 13 '36

"Episodes of tragedy, drama, and disappointments in an average small town family make a homey entertaining film for adults and family."
Am Legion Auxiliary

"Good. Mature." DAR

"[It] is unconvincing and lacks dramatic power; it becomes a preaching against married people permitting anything to upset their domestic tranquility." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Nicely done by a sympathetic cast under expert direction who miss none of the finer nuances of the situation. Family, although above the heads of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An excellent cast, well directed. Mature."
S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Ap 11 '36

"Adults & young people. The picture will prove most interesting."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 30 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Ap 1 '36

Motion Pict & Family Je 15 '36

"It is well cast and acted, and the small town setting is quite well done. As a whole the picture is entertaining, presenting an old truth in modern form. Adolescents, 12-16: hardly suitable and not recommended; children, 8-12: no."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 1 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

"A: social drama of a cross section of American life in which human interest appeal is the dominating factor; Y: interesting from character analysis standpoint; C: little interest."
Par M p50 Je '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Mature."

Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] makes absorbing entertainment."

+ Canadian M p61 My '36

"Little is left of Sinclair Lewis's 'Main Street' in this conventionalized adaptation beyond a crude presentation of the narrow-minded intolerance of some small-town women. . . To bring seriousness into the action there is a surgical operation that will cause many persons to inspect the theater ceiling in preference to looking at the screen, and a hackneyed motor accident scene."

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 My 2 '36

"The new version, therefore, is meaningless as the sociological preaching which the author intended it to be, having lost that special significance in the broadening process down through the years. But, taken as a quietly effective dramatic portrayal, this basically identical adaptation is easily accepted on entertainment merits." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p20 My 1 '36

"Archie Mayo has given us in this one a picture that can take its place beside his 'Petrified Forest' to which he gave such distinguished direction. . . Its down-to-earthness gives it universal appeal, sets it apart from the flow of sophisticated story material which producers try so hard to make entertaining."

+ Hollywood Spec p19 Ap 11 '36

"A curiously unbalanced film with awkwardly amateurish scenes placed next to bits of bright satire, 'I Married a Doctor' is a forceful but longwinded exposé of small-town intolerance." (2 stars)

Liberty p39 My 9 '36

"Despite the fact that this movie version of Sinclair Lewis's 'Main Street' keeps pulling its punches and cancelling its points, there is enough left over in the good performances of Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson and the sterling direction of Archie Mayo to make a tolerable hour and a half in the dark." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p36 Je '36

"From a savage and highly documented commentary on small-town life, the work has been transformed into a drama of marital problems. It has several fine performances and has been shrewdly directed by Archie L. Mayo, but its debt to Mr. Lewis is trivial. . . 'I Married a Doctor' is not essentially a drama about a small town, but about a married couple. In his staging Mr. Mayo has succeeded in giving it moments of moving intensity, but neither he nor his players have achieved a dramatic unity."

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Ap 20 '36

"This is Sinclair Lewis's novel in 1936 style, and a picture to be recommended. . . The Warners may have changed the title, but this is still 'Main Street,' and a good picture, too." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p17 Ap 20 '36

"The Warners have not permitted Miss Hutchinson's Carol Kennicott to be frustrated. . . [They] have caused Main Street to admit its errors and welcome the fugitive back home. That may be a happy ending and it may be good box-office, but it is bad drama. It is the difference between 'Main Street' and 'I Married a Doctor.' And it is a regrettable difference, for, with all its deviations from the Lewis text, the film, until that point, had been compactly written, excellently performed and much more than one had any right to expect from its title." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 20 '36

"Sinclair Lewis' angry satire, berating jerk-water smugness, 'Main Street,' has been shorn of some of its venom and under the title of 'I Married a Doctor' emerges as a reasonably entertaining, well-acted study of marital ups-and-downs in a typical American hamlet. . . You will like Josephine Hutchinson as the beautiful but frustrated Carol Kennicott who undergoes the aches common to a sensitive soul in the midst of a lot of coarse yokels and you will also like Pat O'Brien for his quiet, straightforward work as Dr. Will." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p15 Ap 20 '36

"Carol's efforts to renovate the Midwestern town along French Provincial lines are already antiquated aesthetics, I believe, and the whole

Robertson Hare. Next day he bluffs his way into the bank where Hare is employed and in his efforts to make his personality felt, involves a number of big business men in the formation of a company for the promotion of a scheme of his own invention." (Mo Film Bul)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The first half of the film, up to the exposure of the bogus scheme, is good, in the true Hulbert tradition; but the rest is patchy and rather disappointing. . . Jack Hulbert acts, dances and sings as usual in a part which gives him less opportunities than usual. Robertson Hare is delightful when drunk and bellicose, and Gina Malo is a competent leading lady. . . Suitability: family; especially suitable for children under 16."

Mo Film Bul p24 Ja 27 '36

"A: fair farce with music, tap-dancing and British mannerisms; Y and C: undoubtedly diverting."

Par M p50 Je '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"So long as plot remains subordinate to action it is an excellent farce. . . The action drags rather towards the end." J. F. B.

Manchester Guardian p11 Ap 14 '36

"Mr. Hulbert is another actor for whom I feel a perhaps unfair repugnance. The beginning of 'Jack of All Trades,' however, shows him at his best. . . Afterwards the film degenerates into nothing but the jutting jaw and the permanent grin, the same memory that one takes away from all Mr. Hulbert's films, a nightmare memory, for what could be more horrifying than a jaw and a grin moving through restaurants and along streets, in and out of offices, down subways, an awful eternal disembodied Cheeriness?" Graham Greene

+ — Spec p396 Mr 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Highly diverting farce with music, is Jack Hulbert's latest starring vehicle, in which he has the support of an excellent cast, including the very attractive and talented Gina Malo. She is the ideal partner for Hulbert, one of Britain's leading comedians. Although somewhat uneven in construction, 'Jack of All Trades' moves rapidly—too rapidly in some spots—and gives Hulbert a chance to do all his popular tricks, which include tap-dancing of a high order and a breezy, spontaneous mannerism."

+ Variety p31 Mr 4 '36

JAILBREAK. Ag 1 '36 60min Warner
60min Warner

Players: Craig Reynolds. June Travis.
Barton MacLane. Richard Purcell

Director: Nick Grinde

Based on a novel, Murder in the Big House, by Jonathan Finn. When a gang of fur thieves kill a confederate who is in prison, a clever young reporter solves the murder.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family—mature." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A well acted melodrama, with interest sustained by several new screen faces. Adults: good; 14-18: fair; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre—mature." DAR

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A well acted, gripping crime drama which will appeal only to adults who like stories of life in the raw." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Too tense for young children. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul My 23 '36

"Lighting, sound effects, dialogue and tense dramatic action, all contribute to the realism of the picture. Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 9 '36

"It is merely a most unwholesome pot-boiler depicting the violent encounters between two underworld characters who happen to have been incarcerated in the same prison. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: impossible, terrifying."

— Motion Pict R Je '36

"The picture is essentially adult in theme and treatment but some very frightening photography makes it particularly frightening for children. Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 13 '36

"[It is] an improbable story. . . A disguised gangster film. Adults."

— Nat Legion of Decency My 28 '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Harking back to the cycle of prison pictures, this offering is a rehash of all the action and dramatic tension that made them popular. 'Jailbreak' never attempts to be heroic, and never preaches. But it tells its story with a fast-moving rhythm, and keeps the dialogue as nearly as it can in the background. . . Although 'Jailbreak' was definitely slated for the second film on a double bill, you won't be bored." Paul Jacobs

+ — Hollywood Spec p13 My 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Powerfully-enacted mystery written expertly and directed in bullet-speed tempo. Originally slated to appear on the Warner Class B list, this far surpasses the average programmer, both in production class and entertainment values. The plot is concise, novel, and tricky. Family."

+ — Box Office p17 My 16 '36

"It has no big names but the cast does a commendable job and it seems certain that wherever pictures of this type are liked that 'Jailbreak' will satisfy."

+ Film Curb p13 My 9 '36

"For the fans who like working out the answers, and for those who like their entertainment with a punch, this holds much. It makes a very satisfactory program picture, there is nothing soft about it, and it's best returns should be from the action houses."

+ Film Daily p7 My 8 '36

"Made with the easy adeptness that Warners has achieved in these B grade crook plays, it will get by in double harness as just another hour of crime and criminals, with nothing to recommend it but guess-who suspense and the rapid-fire performance of a dozen dependable Warner stock players."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 My 5 '36

"The picture makes good average entertainment."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p14 My 6 '36

"Authentically portraying dangerous criminal characters and the dynamite-packed atmosphere of desperate men in prison, the picture has plenty of quality to suit the average thrill action devotees."

Motion Pict Herald p36 My 16 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

JAILBREAK—Continued

"Programmer that lacks name strength, but which makes up for it in action, fast movement, 'Jailbreak' will land in the lesser houses, on twin bills."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p47 My 15 '36

"With aid of a well-written screen play . . . Nick Grinde's fine direction has lifted this class 'B' picture to the 'A' level. The only thing that can keep it from that classification is lack of box office names. If exploited properly, this film will give any audience its money's worth. Entire cast delivers splendid performance in keeping with a story that delineates the ultimate in authentic prison life, atmosphere and problems."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 5 '36

JESTER KING. See Il re burlesco(s)JUST SPEEDING. Ja 23 '36 18min Columbia

Players: Monte Collins. Tom Kennedy

"Borrowing a doctor's automobile and telling officers about to arrest him for speeding that he is rushing his companion to a hospital for an operation, a journeyman butcher forthwith is escorted to the scene of the alleged appendectomy." Motion Pict Herald

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It contains] plenty of the stuff that makes for lively comedy. . . Good, popular entertainment."

+ Box Office p31 Mr 7 '36

"The comedy is of the standard grade and should entertain."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p10 F 28 '36

"Speedy action offsets familiarity of material and the burden of comedy is distributed among a number of relatively obscure players instead of being restricted to a starred comedian. It contains at least two genuine laughs, a number of chuckles and enough plain diversion."

+ Motion Pict Herald p53 Mr 7 '36

"This has some laughs, and is outfitted with all the door slamming, tray upsetting, ether dosing accoutrements of hospital slapstick. Pleasant."

+ N Y Exhibitor p56 Mr 10 '36

K*KELLY THE SECOND. (Release date not determined) 82min MGM

Players: Patsy Kelly. Guinn (Big Boy) Williams. Charley Chase. Pert Kelton. Edward Brophy

Director: Gus Meins

"'Big Boy' Williams has a reputation as a street fighter. When he meets Patsy, it is decided that his prowess be used for financial returns and she becomes his trainer." Film Daily

Trade Paper Reviews

"A good slapstick feature comedy that should draw the same type of audience that goes for the Laurel and Hardy features. . . There is a final battle that has plenty of good laughs. There are numerous well-written gags in the picture that are utilized to good advantage. This should definitely show Patsy Kelly's popularity. The entire production is typically Kelly. Family."

+ Box Office p33 Ap 25 '36

"This isn't any world beater but is a good, satisfactory comedy of its type. It will amuse the children."

+ — Film Curb p12 Ap 25 '36

"Tailored for Patsy Kelly and 'Big Boy' Williams' talents, this slapstick feature is a fast moving enjoyable affair. It should do well wherever robust comedy can be played, on double bills, and especially in the Irish communities. The picture is geared for laughs which it gets all the way, and a little clipping will remove the few slow spots. . . If this is a sample of what Hal Roach is doing to replace the two reel comedy, he has hit upon a good idea."

+ Film Daily p5 Ap 21 '36

"With ten or fifteen minutes snipped out, it will be a fast, funny picture of no pretensions but a good balance on a double bill. . . With Roach intending to make more six-reelers because of the double-bill situation and the difficulty of selling shorts, 'Kelly the Second' demonstrates that he can make them just as hilarious regardless of length."

+ Hollywood Reporter p6 Ap 18 '36

"Loaded with gags old and new, this comedy, when reduced to program length will fit on dual bills with a more serious feature subject. . . The sound is slightly high-pitched for a feature length film and seems to be the same as that used in regular Roach shorts. The picture should please juveniles and seems suitable for showing at performances for children."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ap 20 '36

"Not for the de luxers, but okay for the family, this ought to satisfy the laugh contingent easily."

+ N Y Exhibitor p22 My 10 '36

"Good twin-biller which should please the comedy fans after about twenty minutes have been clipped from the running time. Picture is a mixture of slapstick comedy and a legitimate story. . . Miss Kelly does an excellent job in this, her first Roach feature, as the feminine prize fight manager. She handles the comedy in her expert fashion, and doesn't miss a trick."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 18 '36

KING OF THE DAMNED. Ja 20 '36 75min Gaumont British

Players: Helen Vinson. Noah Beery. Conrad Veidt

Director: Walter Forde

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y and C: decidedly not."

Christian Century p687 My 6 '36

"Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: interesting; 14-18: fair; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Adults only." DAR

"Adults." E Coast Preview Committee

"Adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"This picture is unpleasant as to subject matter, brutal as to treatment and ends on a false note. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"As a plea for reform of penal colonies, this film is interesting and realistically staged and acted, although hardly to be classed as entertainment. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 14 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"The portrayal is uncomfortably real and pulsating to the end. Realistic scenic effects and a distinct foreign flavor. Too harrowing for children. Mature."

Jt Estimates Mr 1 '36

"Swift action in the fighting scenes and a slight thread of romance lend distraction from the pervading gloom, but for the sensitive it remains a film to be endured, not enjoyed. Adolescents, 12-16: harrowing; children, 8-12: by no means."

Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Mature."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Romanticism is said to lie in exaggeration. We can say, anyway, of these two actors (Veidt and Beery) that they balance each other remarkably well. Veidt represents the intensity of spiritual and intellectual revolt against the prison, Beery, with that luscious, double-bass, orchestral voice and massive trunk, the physical energy and fleshly conceit of revolt, the untameable energy of the animal." D. F. B.

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A grim and, at times, exciting melodrama overlaid with brutality and horror. Strong fare best suited to male audiences. Adults."

+ Box Office p27 Mr 21 '36

KING OF THE PECOS. Mr 16 '36 54min Republic

Players: John Wayne. Muriel Evans. Cy Kendall

Director: Joseph Kane

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family-junior. Not one of the wild and woolly pictures—not a bar-room in it—but a pretty fair glimpse of a stirring period in our past."

+ — Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 15 '36

"Family-junior."

+ — Wkly Guide Mr 14 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A first-rate Western with plenty of emphasis on the elements in demand where audiences go for outdoor films. Packing plenty of excitement, with more than the average amount of credibility, and a nice blend of romance and comedy, it gives John Wayne opportunity for a red-blooded role and shows the entire cast to good advantage."

+ Box Office p31 My 23 '36

"There is plenty of hard riding, gun fighting and all the other stuff that makes for a good Western. John Wayne does exceedingly well in the leading role and is supported by a good cast."

+ Film Curb p12 Ap 11 '36

"[It] is a routine but active Western. This should please the youngsters and the adults who still get a kick out of lively, horse-and-gun excitement on the screen."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 7 '36

"Much plain and fancy riding, trick and ordinary shooting, claim jumping, cattle driving and primitive justice, the struggle between Colt and Blackstone law, make up the substance of this Western. There are many shots of rugged open country and mountain ranges. Dialogue is at a minimum and action, which is swift and continuous, carries most of the narrative."

+ Motion Pict Herald p57 Ap 11 '36

KING STEPS OUT. My 15 '36 75min Columbia

Players: Grace Moore, Franchot Tone.

Walter Connolly, Elizabeth Risdon, Frieda Inescort

Director: Josef von Sternberg

Based on an operetta Cissy by Herbert and Ernst Marischka with music by Fritz Kreisler. This in turn was based on a comedy called Cissy by Ernst Decsey and Gustav Hohn. "The story takes place in an Austrian village, where the young Emperor Francis is betrothed to a princess. The princess' sister, disguised in plebian costume, meets the young emperor and they fall in love. Through a ruse in identity brought out by the girls' father, true love is permitted to find its way." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Here is Viennese light opera in all its scintillating melody and fascination. . . . The film is composed of equal parts of music, fun, frivolity and diversion as wholesome as it is laughable."

+ Bks & Films Je '36

"A: pleasant; Y: good; C: if it interests."

Christian Century p855 Je 10 '36

"Excellent. Mature-family." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

+ Fox W Coast Bul Je 6 '36

"Family-outstanding."

+ + Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"This is a charming musical comedy, in which a mischievous Bavarian princess masquerades as a dressmaker and wins the heart of the Austrian Emperor. Grace Moore was never more delightful than in this jolly role, singing the lovely music of Fritz Kreisler and pursued by Franchot Tone as a gay young king who steps out to really enjoy his birthday. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 3 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Though the plot is slight and unoriginal, the action is lively and gay, with frequent comic bits that are very laughable. Family."

Wkly Guide My 23 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There is nothing particularly original about 'The King Steps Out.' But it is a polished piece of work, handsomely put together to provide light cheerful entertainment." E. F. Melvin

+ — Boston Transcript p3 My 29 '36

"The whole mood of 'The King Steps Out' is one of frustration, of what's-the-use? The preview audience cheered Grace Moore in 'One Night of Love.' Except for one brief moment, it sat in stony silence as her latest picture was unreel. . . . If 'The King Steps Out' had been her first picture, it would have been her last. Miss Moore is not convincing in a role which demanded the sparkle of a Jeanette MacDonald or an Irene Dunne. . . . Franchot Tone seems to be unhappy in his part."

— Hollywood Spec p10 My 23 '36

"[It] is a handsome but rather dull musical romance. . . . Those who remember 'One Night of Love' and 'Tonight Is Ours' with pleasure are apt to find the production disappointing. It has none of the fluent interplay of plot

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

KING STEPS OUT—Continued

and musical accompaniment that distinguished those offerings [and] in the early sequences it finds Miss Moore definitely ill at ease as an actress." Howard Barnes

— + N Y Herald Tribune p12 My 29 '36

"These ingredients result in regulation operetta, stereotyped but still entertaining. . . The picture's chief charm, of course, is Miss Moore's singing of Mr. Kreisler's songs. . . Her voice, if not her picture, is still radiantly fresh. She doesn't do as much with the acting as usual, thumping out the dialogue a little heavily at times. . . In spite of its theatrical artificiality 'The King Steps Out' is a graceful, tuneful operetta, charmingly sung. It hasn't the buoyancy of the first two Moore musicals made by Columbia; few pictures are lucky enough to capture that." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p11 My 29 '36

"The lovely and golden-voiced Miss Grace Moore has stepped lightly from the pedestal of grand opera to the frothy stage of Viennese operetta in her new picture. . . Its humor is pleasant and its score includes a charming group of Fritz Kreisler's more melodious compositions which have been sung—as you scarcely need be told—in a full-throated soprano that more than compensates for the picture's lesser attributes." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p15 My 29 '36

"It is charming, tasteful and urbane and a delightful harkback to Graustark days. . . As Cissy, the princess, Miss Moore has one of her best roles. . . Miss Moore triumphs again in what not only is a swell film but ought to be marvellous box-office. . . You may be thankful also that Herman Bing, Hollywood's leading dialectician spouts and sputters his incredible English for some of the swellest comedy scenes screened in months." Douglas Gilbert

+ + N Y World-Telegram p4b My 29 '36

"[It is] disappointing. . . [The] story . . . has quite overwhelmed Miss Moore." John Mosher

— New Yorker p83 Je 6 '36

"'The King Steps Out' is all a film operetta should be. It has a gay Graustarkian background, abounds in good humor and good acting, and profits by Josef von Sternberg's excellent direction."

+ News-Wk p27 My 30 '36

"The big news about this ace musical deserves a telegraphic flash: Miss Grace Moore Becomes Screen Actress. I didn't think it possible, but the Moore pipes are subordinated to an exuberantly comic role, and Grace emerges as a charming comédienne. I liked her tremendously. . . [The producer] has succeeded admirably in confecting a screen musical which is irresistible." R. S. Ames

+ + Script p11 Je 6 '36

"Miss Moore's public will [not] find 'The King Steps Out' very remarkable."

— + Time p24 Je 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It is] an even flowing, semi-classical musical lacking the class of the previous Grace Moore vehicles. Family."

+ — Box Office p25 My 9 '36

"Grace Moore has never appeared to better advantage than in this picture. She adds capable acting to her grand singing. Just about tops in the high class musical line. A class A production. No doubt but what it is sure-fire box office."

+ Film Curb p4 My 23 '36

"In a gay light-hearted operetta that is full of good fun and good music by Fritz Kreisler, Grace Moore sings and clowns in such a manner as to make this picture highly entertaining."

+ Film Daily p10 My 18 '36

"A Grace Moore picture that will disappoint the Grace Moore fans because it is not up to the quality of her past pictures, and that is hitting the market in competition with musicals of superlative quality from other lots. The presence of Josef von Sternberg in the director's chair and behind the camera is not evidenced by any originality of the handling of the good old standard operetta fodder—nor of striking effects pictorially. . . The songs are those of Kreisler's operetta, 'Cissy,' with new lyrics by Dorothy Fields. Not one shows symptoms of catching the popular ear."

— + Hollywood Reporter p4 Ap 27 '36

"Josef von Sternberg has turned out a picture in a delicate mood, making for entertainment of wide mass, as well as class, appeal. . . The musical numbers are well spotted and enter the plot pleasingly although the tunes by Fritz Kreisler do not seem destined for smash popularity."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 My 15 '36

"Grace Moore's singing is, naturally, the prime box office factor, and exploitation based upon it may be unrestrained because she sings six new songs and each is given exclusive screen prominence as it is sung."

+ Motion Pict Herald p44 My 23 '36

"Family comedy. Estimate: program."

Phila Exhibitor p46 My 15 '36

"Deft production keeps a Graustarkian absurdity from capsizing. Film represents a triumph of slickness over common sense. On sheer bounce and tempo the picture disarms the critical faculties and spins a mood of acquiescence to the story's premises. It seems probable the general public will be enchanted by the handsomely mounted and artfully paced fairy-tale."

+ Variety p15 Je 3 '36

"Grace Moore has advanced a long way since her maiden screen effort, and in 'The King Steps Out' she stands forth as a full-fledged stellar personality, not only in fulfilling exacting romantic requirements but as a comedienne of high order to supplement her operatic gifts. . . It should pull lusty grosses, especially in the first runs."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 14 '36

L

LADY JANE GREY. (Release date not determined) 78min Gainsborough-Gaumont British Players: Cedric Hardwicke, John Mills, Sybil Thorndike, Nova Pilbeam

Director: Robert Stevenson

Filmed in England and known there as Tudor Rose. "Opening at the death-bed of Henry VIII, and his dying declaration that his successors are to be, in order, his son Edward, his daughters Mary and Elizabeth and Lady Jane Grey, the picture shows the progress of the struggle for power between the Earl of Warwick and Edward Seymour, in which the innocent young Lady Jane is an unwilling tool. Finally, betrothed to Warwick's son, she is crowned Queen on the death of Edward VI. The nation rises and puts Mary Tudor on the throne and the 'nine days' Queen' is beheaded." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The reconstruction of a chapter in English history is careful and accurate. The direction is sensitive, sympathetic, and intelligent, and the subject is treated with dignity and restraint. The acting is excellent. . . This is a noteworthy addition to worth-while historical films. Suitability: family. (Children over 12.)"

+ + Mo Film Bul p84 My '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It] brings a certain freshness of treatment even to this hackneyed section of history, and it is enlivened by several vigorous performances. . . It is its failure to present any aspect of the religious controversies of the time, except such as may be gleaned from two sermons by John Knox, impressively delivered by Mr. John Laurie with a tremendous Scots accent, that deprives the film of any real claim to historical value. But, inadequate as its incompleteness necessarily renders it, ['Lady Jane Grey'] is a very respectable and not unentertaining effort."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p10 My 19 '36

"'Lady Jane Grey' is the best attempt that has yet been made [at a historical film.] . . [Stevenson] has avoided the pit into which the American directors fall headlong with the regularity of the White Knight from his horse. That is the trap of over-embellishment. This is a simple, straightforward piece of work, and all the better for it." Mark Forrest

+ Sat R p608 My 9 '36

"[It] is one of the more distressing products of the British screen: the fault is not in the director, who has made a smooth, competent, if rather banal picture, but in the vulgarity of the scenario. The story of Lady Jane Grey is surely dramatic enough to be converted truthfully into film material, but this sentimental pageant in fancy dress could have displayed no more ignorance of the period if it had been made in Hollywood. There is not a character, not an incident in which history has not been altered for the cheapest of reasons." Graham Greene

— Spec p335 My 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"History has in the main been followed, or rather simplified. Events and characteristics have been portmanteaued for dramatic effect, and the effect is good without being wildly inaccurate. . . The picture is a credit to the studio, but whether the masses will give it proper appreciation is doubtful."

Hollywood Reporter p10 My 12 '36

"American audiences and American box-offices should welcome and reward this British production as a remarkable illustration of the fact that history need not be ultra-romanticized to provide pageant, color and glamour understandable by the fan but equally acceptable by the critical. . . England has not recently sent over a better picture. . . Without 'heart interest' in the conventional sense, save that Jane is shown as falling in love with the youth whom she is being forced to marry, there is a sense of reality and of tragedy which it is difficult to overpraise. . . There are the potentialities of another 'Henry VIII' here, though humor is, necessarily, lacking."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 My 11 '36

"It is, artistically, one of the best yet sent over from London; it definitely succeeds in creating the atmosphere of Tudor London and in presenting a tragedy in which the leading actors are historical figures; it makes them flesh and blood women without caricaturing history. . . Press-shown at the Tivoli, London; it had high praise for its atmosphere, settings, and characterization and for the exceptional level of all the acting. 'A good one for America' was a common expression from those who should know."

+ Motion Pict Herald p36 My 16 '36

"What impresses one instantly is the marvellous adherence to detail in the matter of costuming, production and selection of types. Not only the principals, but dozens of minor roles are handled by West End actors of stellar repute. . . Artists of similar quality were engaged right down the line for every speaking part of the slightest consequence. It is a swift and courageous tale with arresting por-traitures, economical of words but sweeping of action. It possesses smoothness of script and marks the entry of Robert Stevenson as a director on his own. . . From every angle, it is one of the most interesting pictures ever produced on either side of the ocean."

+ Variety p15 My 13 '36

LAST JOURNEY. (Release date not determined) 58min Atlantic

Players: Godfrey Tearle, Hugh Williams, Judy Gunn, Mickey Brantford, Julien Mitchell

Director: Bernard Vorhaus

This film was made in England. "The train that is carrying an oddly-assorted cargo of humans is on its last trip. At the throttle is a temporarily insane engineer who suspects his fireman of an affair with his wife. A battle ensues while the train races on to apparent destruction and is halted in an ingenious fashion." (Box Office)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: poor; Y and C: no."

Christian Century p783 Je 3 '36

Mo Film Bul p147 D '35

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"The little side dramas are well handled and the whole is a breathless, exciting affair. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 2 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'The Last Journey' is a British film saved from disaster by the work of the camera-man. The sequences showing an express train at full speed make one accept the situation of a train 'running away' upon which the plot is based." J. F. B.

+ — Manchester Guardian p13 My 5 '36

"'The Last Journey' is not really a bad piece of entertainment. . . The characters are interesting and well-worked out and the director, Bernard Vorhaus, has infused his situations with enough suspense and enough imaginative touches to give the film a vitality and an interest not often found in these 'Grand Hotel' imitations. . . Although the materials are familiar, the treatment and the acting are sufficiently fresh to make 'The Last Journey' fair-to-middling summer entertainment." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p19 Je 9 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It stacks up as first-rate entertainment. It moves fast, picks up a handful of smartly-projected character delineations on the way, tosses them about for a suspenseful fate and races on to an exciting climax. Work of the performers is convincing and is refreshingly free of British burrs. Family."

+ Box Office p63 My 2 '36

"The film is packed with thrills. It has been splendidly enacted and Julien Mitchell in the role of the engineer does exceedingly well. There isn't a dull moment. Moves along at lightning speed. Wherever good, strong melodrama is liked this one will more than satisfy."

+ Film Curb p6 My 2 '36

"Julius Hagen's boys at Twickenham' got out a superior melodrama in the fused stories of several people on a moving train."

Film Daily p8 Ap 27 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LAST JOURNEY—Continued

"A British production which has copied a great deal from the Hollywood studios in direction and cutting, resulting in a much better than average melodramatic thriller combining the theme of a 'Grand Hotel' on wheels and a psychological study of a railroad engineer with a cracked brain. There is plenty of suspense and action in this drama which will result in the fans sitting on the edge of their seats for most of the film."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 8 '36

"A Twickenham production, made in England, this picture has plenty of thrill action and suspense. Set almost in its entirety on a speeding train, a fast pace is maintained throughout. . . . The picture should be found lively entertainment for those especially who like their suspense and action on the screen."

+ Motion Pict Daily p9 Ap 24 '36

"Subject to the usual parochial [limitations] imperative to English productions, this is material for the small house. It has pace, action, suspense."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p27 My 10 '36

LAST OUTLAW. Je 19 '36 72min RKO

Players: Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson, Tom Tyler, Henry B. Walthall, Margaret Callahan

Director: Christy Cabanne

A western melodrama involving the rehabilitation of a bank robber after a twenty-five year sentence.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Westerns should have human appeal and good ones ring the bell for movie audiences. This one does. . . . Adolescents, 12-16; good; children, 8-12; passable to those who are habitual movie fans."

+ Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Although the story is implausible, the direction is fast moving and capable. Family & junior matinees."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women Je 3 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 11 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 30 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The Last Outlaw,' despite its numerous mistakes and utilizing only a fraction of its dramatic possibilities, offers fascinating entertainment. . . . Starkly primitive, the Western satisfies us through escape from ourselves into its savage glamour. . . . In 'Last Outlaw,' escape is made easy and plausible for us, by injecting, with clever contrast, the old West into an ultra-modern atmosphere."

Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p13 My 23 '36

"[It is] positively the first new idea in Western picture-making in twenty years. . . . It is so immediately winning an idea that, no doubt, 'The Last Outlaw' will be screened in the largest theaters in the largest cities and be entertaining. It is a Western with a new twist, a 'horse opera' of feature film stature."

+ Lit Digest p26 My 30 '36

"The Last Outlaw' is a pleasantly satirical screen drama of the wide open spaces. Written by the distinguished director, John Ford, in collaboration with E. Murray Campbell and acted to the hilt by a company of veteran cowboy and bad men impersonators, it is an engaging Western. Although the work indulges in a good deal of sly burlesque, it does not violate the conventions of one of the screen's favorite forms. . . . While there are frequent comic thrusts at contemporary cowboys and inescapable overtones of satire at the expense of Westerns, the show follows a narrative outline resolutely and builds to an exciting crescendo. In the hands of Robert Sisk, the piece has received a handsome and knowing production."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Je 15 '36

"[It is] a thoroughly enjoyable Western melodrama, deftly streamlined and softly satiric concerning a few current disaffections like crooning cowboys and bureaucracy."

+ N Y Times p24 Je 15 '36

"John Ford, who wrote the original story, and Christy Cabanne, who directed the film, have collaborated to produce a Western that is so genuinely exciting and diverting that it is a decided ascent from the average horse opera."

William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p14a Je 13 '36

"The piece won't start any vogue for the quaint old-fashioned cowboy thriller, I imagine."

John Mosher

New Yorker p83 Je 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Particularly interesting because it takes a whole group of western stars, and gives them a chance to act. They all prove vendors of histrionic surprises. The directorial pace in executing the smooth continuity is rapid-fire in every sequence."

Box Office p33 Je 6 '36

"A very high class Western in every respect. . . . Probably will win a lot of new fans for the outdoor pictures. Above the average cast puts this one over in grand style under Cabanne's competent direction."

+ Film Curb p9 My 23 '36

"This one starts off rather leisurely, but when it gets going it is a bear for thrills and action. The children will eat it up. . . . [It is] a Western that gets far away from the usual routine stuff."

+ Film Daily p15 Je 3 '36

"Radio can unfurl the adjectives to the limit for 'The Last Outlaw.' It's a cinch money picture with a human yarn that should appeal to virtually any audience. It carries the feel that everybody associated with the production had a lot of fun turning out a swell job of entertainment."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 16 '36

"It has all the requirements of an outdoor picture plus action, dialogue, comedy and it builds steadily with situations topping each other until the finish. . . . Properly sold from its many selling angles this should please."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 My 18 '36

"Here's a show with surprises for audiences and exhibitors. . . . A long step forward in the making of modern Westerns, this picture should be properly introduced with a campaign sufficiently strong and intelligent to convince any kind of patron, those who are not ordinarily interested in Westerns as well as the thrill action fans, that it is worthy of their time and attention. The materials in personalities, acting performances, story content and production values are at hand."

+ Motion Pict Herald p41 My 30 '36

"Swell Western in the sense that not only has the cast more than one name to sell but an original Western story, 'The Last Outlaw' will please Western, action followers."

+ Phila Exhibitor p23 Je 1 '36

"Chance here for a good story, but uninspired script job, lack of love interest and delayed suspense prove pretty much of a flop. . . . The result is that a competent cast is thrown away on a forlorn hope."

— Variety p23 Je 17 '36

"Despite what the title implies this is not a Western but a bang-up human-interest drama that will hold the interest of the family trade looking for homespun flavor in screen entertainment."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 16 '36

LAUGHING IRISH EYES. Mr 10 '36 70min
Republic

Players: Phil Regan. Walter Kelly. Evalyn Knapp

Director: Joseph Santley

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Bd of R
Fox W Coast Bul Mr 28 '36

"This is an unusually good picture. An excellent, but somewhat prolonged prizefight has amusing and exciting moments. Adults & young people."

+ Sel Motion Pict p11 Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Laughing Irish Eyes' belongs to the kindergarten school of entertainment, presenting all the phony sentimentality about Erin and threadbare wheezes about the Blarney Stone which are tediously familiar." Marguerite Tazelaar

N Y Herald Tribune p10 Ap 4 '36

"In spite of its title the producers did not turn out a maudlin sentimental drama. The picture indeed is a gay and lively comedy, with some well sung tunes, as many light laughs as it needs, and a prize fight finish which had the Roxy audience yesterday acting as though they were in Madison Square Garden." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p8 Ap 4 '36

"Celtophobes will not have to be warned against a picture as frankly titled as 'Laughing Irish Eyes' while their politically much stronger opposites, the Celtophiles, may pay their money at the box-office with the comforting assurance that they will not be backing a dark horse. . . In the Irish scenes we gather that Erin is now a picturesque, musical-comedy province of America, full of aspiring tenors and jig dancers." B. R. C.

N Y Times p11 Ap 4 '36

"And still the disappointing news continues. Something called 'Laughing Irish Eyes' is at the Roxy this week and, frankly, this department can find small excuse for it. A generally feeble and fumbling little film, it ambles along without much rhyme or reason and when it has run its course some seventy minutes of valuable time have slipped by, never to be recaptured." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p7 Ap 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Merry little comedy in which action, romance and song are neatly intermingled, resulting in pleasingly wholesome entertainment with a particularly strong appeal for family audiences. The cast is headed by Phil Regan, a handsome lad with melody and a brogue in his voice whose attractive performance here will take him a long way toward screen fame. Family."

+ Box Office p27 Mr 21 '36

"Fast, well edited, strong on humor, with some ace singing by Regan, 'Laughing Irish Eyes' will be enjoyed in anybody's theatre."

+ N Y Exhibitor p31 Mr 25 '36

"Never more than mildly entertaining, picture is heading for many more double than single dates. . . Joseph Santley's direction is routine and the film editing job a bit careless. Among other things, a bad boat miniature could have been dropped on the cutting room floor, especially since in other scenes a real liner is used."

— + Variety p16 Ap 8 '36

LAW IN HER HANDS. My 23 '36 62min
Warner

Players: Margaret Lindsay. Glenda Farrell. Warren Hull. Lyle Talbot

Director: William Clemens

"Margaret Lindsay and Glenda Farrell are novice attorneys starting out together in their profession and encountering all the difficulties which are common to fledgling barristers. Miss Lindsay, falling in love with district attorney Warren Hull, learns that success in the profession depends upon the understanding of the tricks and technicalities of the craft. Becoming the mouthpiece for racketeer Lyle Talbot, she outwits Hull in a series of sensational cases. A rift between the lovers is caused by this association with Talbot. Hull declares that he will get Talbot, and adds that in doing so he will show up Miss Lindsay as a shyster lawyer." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: unpleasant; Y: not good; C: no."

Christian Century p751 My 20 '36

"An illogical story, performed without distinction by a stock cast, furnishes mediocre entertainment. Adults and 14-18; fair; 8-14: uninteresting." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mediocre. Too much gangster type of intimidation. Adults." DAR

"Altho the picture does not create any greater respect for law in general, there is educational and social values in court room scenes revealing legal strategy and trickery employed by prosecution and defense. Neither of the two young women attorneys are convincing—the best work in the picture being done by Lyle Talbot. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A fanciful story, fairly well acted. The film's appeal is for adults and depends upon characterizations and comedy rather than its story. Interesting expose of the abuse of law." Nat Soc of New England Woman

"The whole is rather nerve wracking on account of the manner in which the change of scenes are thrust towards the audience. Mediocre. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 18 '36

"Adults & young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 6 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"The acting is satisfactory but not outstanding. The plot is complicated and not entirely plausible but the picture holds some interest as an expose of legal ruses and the 'protection' racket. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R My '36

"Mature."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 6 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 28 '36

"The story rather shows up the law courts but is entertaining nevertheless. Mature."

Wkly Guide My 16 '36

LAW IN HER HANDS—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Studio belief that anything is good enough for a dual bill is costing producers a lot of money. Here we have a story with basic qualities to make it interesting to the most intelligent audience, but it is made to carry a load of 'comedy relief' which limits its appeal to those with an elemental sense of humor and lacking a sense of drama. . . . If the comedy by Eddie Acuff had been left out and the audience been permitted to keep in the mood created by the premise of the story, the picture would give general satisfaction."

+ — Hollywood Spec p12 Ap 25 '36

"Those who know nothing about legal procedure and are attracted by the personalities of Margaret Lindsay and Lyle Talbot may find a certain amount of mild diversion in 'The Law in Her Hands.' . . . Not sound enough to be realistic, nor exciting enough for adventure, the picture is a good example of why movie fans demand double bills." (1½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p47 My 23 '36

"Related none too engagingly, its central idea, nevertheless, is one which, worked out more intelligently, might have resulted in a picture of genuine current interest. . . . What results, however, is a highly jazzed melodrama involving racketeers, flashy court scenes and generally fictitious situations." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 Je 8 '36

"Miss Margaret Lindsay is a beautiful young lady from Dubuque, Iowa, and, out of pure chivalry, we would have her protected from such amiable mediocrities as 'The Law in Her Hands.' Neither she nor the many other members of the Warner-First National stock company employed in the film can give substance to a narrative which, despite any amount of ingenious fabrication, could hardly aspire to be more than a congenial triviality." T. M. P.

+ — N Y Times p21 Je 6 '36

"Margaret Lindsay, one of the most talented and attractive young actresses on the Warner lot, and her able companions . . . strive valiantly to squeeze some entertainment out of the stock phrases and stereotyped situations of 'The Law in Her Hands,' but their efforts are of no avail. The film is just another one of those unimportant little weaklings that have a habit of cluttering up the Broadway screen during the summer dog days." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p20 Je 8 '36

"Margaret Lindsay is a level-headed performer and Warren Hull a very engaging guy, but the antics assigned to them by writers George Bricker and Luci Ward are disgraceful. Any Bar Association might well object to the professional ethics of Comédienne Glenda Farrell." Molly Lewin

Script p11 My 16 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"An out-of-the-ordinary plot combined with speedy direction and believable acting make this an excellent program picture."

+ — Box Office p35 Ap 25 '36

"It's decidedly interesting, holds the attention from start to finish and has been expertly directed and played. Most assuredly can hold its own in any situation."

+ — Film Curb p8 Ap 11 '36

"[It is a] fairly satisfying drama . . . that ought to do all right in the program grinds."

+ — Film Daily p5 Je 5 '36

"A tongue-in-cheek comedy of the criminal courts and criminal rackets which has a touch of Gilbertian satire but not enough to spoil it for popular consumption. Many sorts of audiences will be lightly entertained by it and it will be a fairly profitable dualer."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 7 '36

"Entertainment is here offered in a novel and effective fashion. While not a 'big' picture in the generally accepted sense, the story has a strong, interest-holding quality resulting from a nice blending of romance, comedy and drama held together by well-grounded suspense. The show should be popular among audiences that prefer their entertainment without frills."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p12 Ap 9 '36

"For an average picture this production possesses much entertainment and showmanship quality. The basic plot is refreshing and just different enough to establish it as quite a bit out of formula."

Motion Pict Herald p38 Ap 18 '36

"Programmer that lacks name strength, which is filled with the usual familiar Warner stock faces, 'The Law in Her Hands' is best suited for neighborhood audiences. In the de luxers it will be handicapped because it hasn't what the marquee demands."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p22 My 10 '36

"Offering fresh angles on the Law-versus-Racketeer plot, with a woman attorney as its central figure, and developing its originality in good writing, sound direction and thoroughly credible playing, 'The Law in Her Hands' will satisfy almost anywhere as program entertainment."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 7 '36

LEATHERNECKS HAVE LANDED. F 22 '36
65min Republic

Players: Lew Ayres, Isabel Jewell, Jimmy Ellison, James Burke

Director: Howard Bretherton

A hot-tempered marine in constant scrapes with his fellow soldiers is dishonorably discharged when he is involved unwittingly in a murder. He joins a gun smuggling gang in Shanghai and later has a chance to help the marines in a battle with raiders whom he had supplied with guns.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: thrilling; C: no."
Christian Century p614 Ap 22 '36

"It is a 'tough' drama, full of fights and with the masculine element predominant. Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p86 My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Mr '36

"Very good. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency F '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide F 29 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is not a big picture, but it is one of the neatest jobs of picture making I have seen for some time. . . . As a result of the intelligent direction Bretherton gives the well-constructed story, we have a picture which will give satisfaction to any audience." Allan Hersholt

Hollywood Spec p11 F 29 '36

"In this pulp-magazine adventure tale the United States Marines and Mr. Lew Ayres once more demonstrate the comforting theory that one good, upstanding American can lick any fifty foreigners, particularly if they are low shifty Chinese revolutionists. . . . Somehow it seemed to me that this pretty romantic picture of the imperialist process in action was not without its dubious aspects, but then this is probably just my narrow-minded point of view on the subject. . . The film itself is moderately lively in its routine, second division way." Richard Watts, Jr.

— + N Y Herald Tribune p12 Mr 24 '36

"[It is] a film story with a background of authentic-looking shots of marine formations moving to and fro, into which had been interpolated enough fictional material to show the scrapes that a pugnacious fellow like Lew Ayres can get himself into when he is a marine in a place like Shanghai, for example." J. T. M.

N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '36

"A sound, standardized idea, moderately well worked out, makes a tolerable hour or so in the cinema out of the film called 'The Leathernecks Have Landed.' . . It has some good exciting moments, a sufficiently interesting little romance between an ex-marine and one of those Shanghai water-front lilies with a heart of gold and some traditional comedy. But in spite of the fact that it has all these old dependables of orthodox melodrama, 'The Leathernecks Have Landed' is at times a leaky and preposterous entertainment." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p13 Mr 23 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Appropriately titled 'The Leathernecks Have Landed,' this offering lands directly on the box-office front with barrage of sure-fire entertainment that should capture one hundred percent family patronage."

+ Box Office p25 F 29 '36

"An entertaining picture with the Marines as a background. It is fast moving, amusing and has several thrilling sequences."

+ Film Curb p8 F 29 '36

"Good popular entertainment with an action story and nice work by a capable cast."

+ Film Daily p18 F 17 '36

"It packs a lusty dramatic wallop and a vein of genuine sentiment and it is so well made that it ranks with the best independent productions of the year. Only the lack of strong box office names will keep it from soaring and as it is, it will head double bills to a swell profit."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 F 13 '36

"Although the story has some elements of weakness, there is enough fighting to satisfy those who enjoy two-fisted action."

+ Motion Pict Daily p3 F 15 '36

Motion Pict Herald p44 F 25 '36

"Estimate: good programmer, saleable anywhere."

+ N Y Exhibitor p55 Mr 10 '36

"Nicely done independent thriller has sufficient action and enough of a sales angle in the 'marines are coming' gag to make it count importantly on a dual program. Besides the uniforms, film has something in Lew Ayres to sell."

+ Variety p63 Mr 25 '36

"Picture should hold up its end on general-ity of programs, and here and there may ride solo. . . Howard Bretherton's direction soundly builds up the melodrama with punch and suspense, without sacrificing valid character, an excellent job in every respect."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 F 13 '36

LET'S SING AGAIN. Je 12 '36 75min Principal Players: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta, George Houston, Vivienne Osborne, Grant Withers

Director: Kurt Neumann

"Bobby runs away from an orphanage and joins a wagon show. He is befriended by Armetta, a roustabout and singing clown. Armetta had been an operatic singer and a teacher before he lost his voice. Grant Withers, trapeze performer, schemes to adopt Bobby and use him as a professional singer." Film Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The new child-star has an engaging personality, a nice voice—expertly manipulated—and will undoubtedly find a place in the affections of the average movie-goer. Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Far & Teachers

"Good. Family." DAR

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"A somewhat improbable story very attractively told by a charming boy star and an excellent cast. A good family picture." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 23 '36

"Family & junior matinees. A picture the family will enjoy, in which little Bobby Breen . . . sings his way into the hearts of the audience. Though slow in tempo the picture is well cast and sympathetically directed."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) My 9 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: good; children, 8-12: good."

Motion Pict R My '36

"The personality and voice of Bobby Breen are perfectly suited to the simple, charming story which, while fantastic, is well told with some moments of real pathos and many a good laugh. Family & junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women My 13 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"Family & junior matinee."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Ready-made for a boy soprano who is inexperienced as an actor, but people will like his voice. Family."

Wkly Guide My 16 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Henry Armetta as the boy's coach gives a performance to be remembered."

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 7 '36

"There are several features of this picture which make it a noted addition to the cinema program. It is the most cleverly constructed musical picture ever to appear on the screen. It introduces to us a most amazing boy, a nine-year-old singer whose voice will thrill the world. It is a warmly human story, told so well that every interpolated song is part of it."

Hollywood Spec p10 Ap 25 '36

"Basically, the picture is just the thickest sort of hokum, but so nicely is it controlled by Director Kurt Neumann and so persuasive is the screen play by Dan Jarrett and Don Swift that this warming little piece provides a surprisingly enjoyable evening. . . Though 'Let's Sing Again' offers no variation on its age-old theme, and though the plot terminates exactly as one would expect, the film makes up in charm all that it lacks in novelty." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p28 My 30 '36

"In spite of the build-up given to Eddie Cantor's discovery, Bobby Breen, who sings with him over the radio, young Mr. Breen's debut in pictures scarcely results in a world-shaking event. In fact, first honors in 'Let's Sing Again' go to Henry Armetta for a fine character portrayal, and, while the diminutive tenor deserves credit for a hard-working performance, it is clear that he still has lots to learn. . . The story is scrappy and juvenile. The popular songs written for it are mediocre, with the possible exception of the lullaby which figures somewhat dramatically in the plot, and the direction, while experienced, has little distinction." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

LET'S SING AGAIN—Continued

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p10 My 11 '36

"Bobby's voice, startling in so young a child, is of course his chief asset. He is not yet much of an actor, although he poses well enough and has learned lines and gestures without too much apparent effort. . . 'Let's Sing Again' is a mild little tale, as all pictures with juvenile leads must be. . . It is Henry Armetta, the Italian comedian, whose acting has to carry the dramatic part of the picture." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p16 My 11 '36

"The screen debut of perhaps the most curious voice in a generation of vocal curiosities—that of the [nine]-year-old Bobby Breen—may be dispassionately studied in 'Let's Sing Again.' Freakish enough to be at least clinically interesting for nearly every one, Bobby's dwarf tenor also appears to excite rapturous feminine murmurs in his audiences. This, we are very much afraid, is ominous. . . Henry Armetta gives another of his ingratiating and marvelously overdone performances as a stock Italian." B. R. C.

N Y Times p11 My 9 '36

"It is a boy has pappy, boy loses pappy, boy finds pappy plot, but the able direction by Kurt Neumann removes some of the creaks from its rusty situations, and it will serve you an idle hour's pleasantry." Douglas Gilbert

+ — N Y World-Telegram p15 My 11 '36

"[Bobby] has charm, a singing voice that many will term 'golden,' and an ingenuousness rare among screen performers. Bobby's songs were greeted by spontaneous applause at the preview, his disarming tricks by assorted ohsandahs. . . Henry Armetta actually pockets the picture as the lovable ex-star who has seen better days. . . This comedian amuses me no end and I'd walk miles and pay two-bits at the box office any time to see his hilarious slouch." H. S.

Script p10 Je 13 '36

"This 8-year-old lacks the suavity of Freddie Bartholomew, the lipcurling meanness of Jackie Searl, but he may find his own public as a miniature Al Jolson. . . Bobby Breen is by no means as bad as the accolade of his radio following would indicate. In an even voice which sounds rather like a hoarse canary, he stays on pitch, can negotiate coloratura passages with ease."

Time p63 My 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Human and wholesome entertainment in this first picture featuring little Bobby Breen, 'Eddie Cantor's adopted son.' With its pre-made exploitation possibilities, it should prove a satisfactory revenue producer. Family."

+ Box Office p35 Ap 25 '36

"They'll go for nine-year old Bobby Breen who has a grand voice. He puts his stuff over like nobody's business. This picture should do nicely in most any spot. It has plenty of comedy and this is neatly mixed with the tear-jerking stuff."

+ Film Curb p18 Ap 25 '36

"This is good audience entertainment. It has many laughs and tears, with Henry Armetta and nine-year old Bobby Breen, screen newcomer sharing the honors. Little Bobby is a golden-voiced singer, who knows how to put over his stuff. Kurt Neumann is especially effective in his direction of emotional scenes."

+ Film Daily p4 Ap 18 '36

"Overburdened with a highly coincidental plot, 'Let's Sing Again' has a difficult time in gaining conviction. It is brazen hokum and its chances of boxoffice success rest almost entirely upon the radio following of its boy singing star, Bobby Breen. Metropolitan audiences will find the story quite unbelievable."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 15 '36

"As produced, this picture achieves Sol Lesser's purpose of presenting his youthful singing protege, Bobby Breen, under auspicious circumstances. The boy, possessing a remarkable singing voice, is given much opportunity to display his talent. The enthusiastic manner in which the preview audience received him gives indication that his work alone should center much of the public interest on the picture."

+ Motion Pict Daily p7 Ap 17 '36

"Though the tone of this story is essentially dramatic, with quite a hokum comedy contrast woven in, its principal entertainment and commercial feature is the presentation of youthful Bobby Breen. Heard recently on the Eddie Cantor radio hours, the boy possesses a remarkable voice, and as he demonstrated how well he knows how to use it, the preview audience reacted to his singing with impressive enthusiasm."

+ Motion Pict Herald p36 Ap 25 '36

"Strong on the emotional elements, with some songs to sing, the picture will need campaigning because the cast, outside of Breen, lacks cast lustre. The air plugging is absolutely essential to draw in patrons."

N Y Exhibitor p27 My 10 '36

"May have a time making grade as a single in the big spots, but it should be accepted by the family trade and is a fine topper for a dual. Made by an independent outfit, but the story and production are both of major strength and the photography is much above average."

+ Variety p14 My 13 '36

"For the family circle it is a natural, but the singing gift of young Bobby Breen will carry the picture beyond any particular audience limitation and make the hokum palatable as substantial program complement all the way up and down the line. 'Let's Sing Again' is of the laugh-and-tear brand that should register very solidly at the pay window."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 15 '36

LIGHTNIN' BILL CARSON. Ap 15 '36 75min
Puritan

Players: Tim McCoy. Lois January

Director: Sam Newfield

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Objection: desire to avenge his brother's death leads to the killing of eight men. Objectionable in part."

— Nat Legion of Decency Ap 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The regulation Western stuff. Same old type of story. Throughout its unfolding about everything that has ever been used in this type of picture is brought into play."

+ — Film Curb p8 Je 13 '36

"Pretty nearly the whole works of familiar Western material is reshaped in this one. . . All in all, it makes fairly acceptable Western fare for the popular priced stands."

+ — Film Daily p10 Je 9 '36

"Most of these McCoys stick to a good standard. This is no exception. It should satisfy Western fans in neighborhood spots, as well as being suitable for twin billing."

Phila Exhibitor p25 Je 15 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY. F 28 '36 98min
United Artists-Selznick International

Players: Freddie Bartholomew. Dolores Costello Barrymore. C. Aubrey Smith. Guy Kibbee

Director: John Cromwell

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

A Guide to the study of the screen version of Little Lord Fauntleroy, prepared by Marguerite Orndorff, is obtainable from Educational and Recreational Guides, Inc, 125 Lincoln Avenue, Newark, New Jersey at fifteen cents per copy.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This is another of those all-too-rare films that you feel better for having seen. The picture has beauty, it has charm and its comedy effects, attained through excellent characterization, are eminently satisfying."
++ Bks & Films Ap '36

"A: charming; Y: excellent; C: perfect."
Christian Century p614 Ap 22 '36

"Notably outstanding. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The finest facilities of the studios have gone into the making of this film which recreates with rare good taste Frances Hodgson Burnett's story-favorite of another day. Family & junior matinee." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Family." DAR

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family & junior matinee." Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)

"Outstanding for the family and junior matinee." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Avoiding sentimentalities, stripped of everything bordering on the mawkish and with the enduring values of the story retained, the picture will delight the most critical. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family & junior matinee." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The picture is wholesome throughout, hopeful and optimistic in spirit, without being too Pollyanna-ish. It can be recommended to all ages without reservations of any kind as it leaves one with a sense of having lived in a beautiful world. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

"Family." Mrs T. G. Winter

++ Fox W Coast Bul Mr 21 '36

"Family & junior matinee."
Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"Suitability: family; especially for children under 16."
Mo Film Bul p87 My '36

"The parts have been perfectly cast and the acting is excellent. We recommend this as an ideal family treat. Excellent. Family."
++ Motion Pict Guide Ap '36

"Family-junior. Outstanding. Suggested for schools and libraries."

++ Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Little Lord Fauntleroy, as portrayed by Freddie Bartholomew, is a sort of male Little Eva, and I deeply question the advisability of taking children to see him in this picture: I am afraid the natural reaction of a normal child to this film would be an impulse to rush out and commit mayhem or murder. . . As a parent, I'd think twice before I took a child of mine to see a boy of such glib righteousness, precisely flawless instincts and perfect diction. . . This is probably a perfect production of the book as it was written and as it has been read by millions of youngsters. Taking a nursery slant on the whole business, it seems a grand story." Don Herold

+ Life p22 Je '36

"By not insisting too much on our tears the producers have prevented what might have been irreverent laughter. There is no lack of opportunity for quiet weeping, and it is true that the resignation of 'Dearest' and the behaviour of the Earl of Dorincourt seem, in the light of reality, incredible. But there is a distinction between the credible and the plausible, and one should ask no more of such a romance than that it be plausible." R. H.

Manchester Guardian p13 Ap 29 '36

"When movie children are convincing, as they seldom are, I confess that I find them irresistible. Freddie Bartholomew is both things in the sublimely sentimental 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.'" Mark Van Doren

+ Nation p860 Ap 29 '36

"Produced by the David O. Selznick who gave a helpless and apparently grateful world 'Little Women,' 'Fauntleroy' constitutes a pretty shameless parade of maudlinities. It is unfortunate that the talents of John Cromwell and a good cast had to be wasted on thrice-regurgitated stuff."

— New Theatre p35 My '36

"Those of us who had been influenced by the age-long whispering campaign against Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's hero were considerably amazed yesterday to discover that the photoplay celebrating his adventures was a charming and curiously heart-warming sentimental spree, probably the best thing of its kind since 'Little Women.' . . Despite the skill and shrewdness of the writing and production, it is not pleasant to think what 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' might have been with any child actor save Freddie Bartholomew in the title role. The young Bartholomew really is a remarkable performer, who combines a genuine delicacy and sensitivity of feeling with enough natural boyishness to keep his playing from becoming precious." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p16 Ap 3 '36

"Freddie Bartholomew's performance, in a part which exactly suits his own personality, is, of course, the core of the production. Not all Hugh Walpole's work on the adaptation could make this anything but an artificial drama, with a minimum of suspense. It is Freddie, with the able assistance of Mr. Smith, who gives it whatever life it can boast." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p38 Ap 3 '36

"'Little Lord Fauntleroy' . . . may not be a classic in the literary sense, but it approaches that stature in this warm, sentimental and gently humorous film edition. . . There is a benign aura about the photoplay, a mellow haze of things long past which should lull even the most adamant anti-Fauntlerite into a state of restful receptivity. . . The picture has a way with it and, unless we are very much in error, you will be pleased." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p27 Ap 3 '36

"It is, of course, a pretty sentimental and sweet story. But I assure you that neither of these qualities is ever drawn out to the point of pain. Indeed, the whole production—writing, acting and direction—has been handled so intelligently that the film provides uncommonly fine entertainment." William Boehnel

++ N Y World-Telegram p33 Ap 3 '36

"I was bored to extinction by 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.' . . Too great a burden has been put, I think, on the Bartholomew shoulders. His precise quaintness, so really good in 'David

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY—Continued

Copperfield' is a bit overworked here." John Mosher

— New Yorker p85 Ap 11 '36

"The all-time high in sugar and spice and everything nice brought to the screen with an endearing performance by Bartholomew and a forceful one by C. Aubrey Smith. Just right for a nostalgic, sympathetic mood, but don't dare see it in any other."

Stage p10 Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"As his first for Selznick International since leaving Metro, David O. Selznick has turned in a fine, sensitive, box office picture in 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' which may well rank with his 'David Copperfield' and 'A Tale of Two Cities' . . . It's an ideal Easter season picture and a cinch for turn-away matinee trade. Judging by its Radio City Music Hall night premiere attendance, the possible box office hurdles of 'Fauntleroy' for the maturer fans seem non-existent."

+ Variety p16 Ap 8 '36

LITTLE MISS NOBODY. Je 12 '36 72min 20th century-Fox

Players: Jane Withers. Jane Darwell. Ralph Morgan. Sara Haden

Director: John Blystone

Based on a short story, The Matron's Report, by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan. "The story opens in an orphanage, with a feud led, of course, by Jane, against a crusty market-man. This gets her into children's court and out with flying colors. It is the dream of all the children to be adopted, and when Jane's chance comes she sacrifices it nobly for a little friend. Headed for a reform school she is befriended by the owner of a pet shop who is haunted by a criminal past and this in turn involves her in a major crime that finally lands her in the arms of her real father." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"This rather fantastic story of a mischievous little inmate of an orphan's home is all but ruined as entertainment for children because of [the] introduction of gangster element in last half of the picture. Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family & junior matinee." Nat Soc of New England Women

"An excellent picture for the family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Mr 21 '36

"Family & junior matinee."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 9 '36

"Family."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"One wonders at the paucity of imagination which is responsible for a gangster element in a story of two appealing children. Otherwise it is a delightful film. Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R Ap '36

"One deplores the introduction of gangsters and their methods. Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 11 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 29 '36

"A: divertingly sympathetic picture of childhood; Y and C: nicely balanced if slightly implausible comedy drama with a home-losing climax that may prove too exciting for very sensitive children."

Par M p50 Je '36

"Numerous pranks bring Jane into difficulties far graver than the cause would warrant. . . There is no doubt of the ability of little Miss Withers as an actress, but one regrets that the story is so overdeveloped." S. M. Mullen

Scholastic p28 My 2 '36

"Family. (Perhaps overly exciting for sensitive children.)"

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"About a year ago the Hays office said the gangsters were out, but what would a feeble plot do without gangsters for excitement? So here they are again."

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 18 '36

"This is a story of children made into a picture for children. It asks adults to take too much for granted. . . Young children still in the fairy-story age will accept such goings-on, and for them 'Miss Nobody' might prove entertaining. . . The weakness of the story is that it makes little Jane too old for her years. She does little that a child of her age would do of her own volition. . . All the members of the cast work hard to put the picture over, but it does not succeed in being satisfactory entertainment."

— + Hollywood Spec p10 Mr 28 '36

"Aiming at rough-and-tumble laughter more than heart throbs, 'Little Miss Nobody' sprints along at a pace to please the children for whom it is designed. . . [The cast] all perform so agreeably that this unpretentious item easily becomes satisfactory film fare. It's a safe show for little Junior, and you may be surprised at the many good moments in it for yourself." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p43 My 2 '36

"A wistful and, in its way, tragic picture has come into the Roxy, demonstrating once more what a genuinely gifted little actress Jane Withers is. . . She steals the show from the other children in the cast, as well as from the adults, yet without consciously doing so, and she can wring one's heart, as frequent sniffing in the house yesterday proved." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Je 6 '36

"In spite of . . . the complete absence of that amusing viciousness which marked Jane's entrance into pictures, 'Little Miss Nobody' is diverting. Even the Saturday night audiences of the Roxy applauded it, and juvenile moviegoers should certainly find it to their taste. The director, as well as the adaptors, deserve credit for this." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p18 Je 8 '36

"The script was apparently muddled by too many collaborators. . . The picture has little to recommend it aside from the Withers personality." B. R. C.

— + N Y Times p21 Je 6 '36

"They've made a softy out of little Jane Withers. . . She suffers so silently that a number of us are afraid she may grow up into a brunette Ann Harding. And more's the pity, too. For this natural and talented little actress . . . is entirely wasted in a mawkish, stereotyped and altogether uninteresting variation of the Cinderella theme." William Boehnel

— + N Y World-Telegram p20 Je 8 '36

"Miss Jane Withers is given a veritable gamut to run and the tape finds her rather breathless with the exertion. The finale is problematical; it found me out in the lounge with a cigarette. . . Jackie Morrow is properly hateful as a rich brat while Harry Carey seems slightly bored with the entire proceedings. His mind seems focused on the far away

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

prairie, on the outcasts, card-sharpers and bar-belles of his earlier screen career and I don't blame him a bit for his nostalgia." H. S.
— + Script p10 My 30 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Jane Withers again proves her comedy powers in a made-to-order vehicle. A routine story is enlivened by amusing gags and the little star is at all times delightful."
+ Box Office p57 Ap 4 '36

"This tale isn't strong enough for the big spots and will have to be satisfied with the neighborhood stands. Can also be used to advantage as half of a dual bill."
+ — Film Curb p10 Mr 28 '36

"Jane Withers' latest film is an enjoyable piece of entertainment which should appeal to the family trade. The women and [children] especially should like it. It has a lot of sentiment and Jane, as an underdog who never really has a chance, elicits a lot of sympathy."
+ Film Daily p8 Mr 24 '36

"It is an ideal neighborhood picture and will easily maintain the Withers standard of earnings in its field. An almost perfect vehicle for Jane's gift for leadership in [child] mischief, it keeps her in the center of events continuously and evokes active sympathy by making her the suffering champion for others."
+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 21 '36

"Offering Jane Withers in her most interesting characterization to date, Sol Wurtzel has produced a picture which nicely balances humor, pathos and heart throbs. . . The picture should please all general audiences."
+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Mr 23 '36

"In comparison with previous Jane Withers pictures it seems to retain all the factors necessary to capture juvenile enthusiasm; at the same time it provides much to engage the attention and interest of adults. . . Not a big picture, but yet an interesting and entertaining one, the production makes possible a line of unusually appealing exploitation."
+ Motion Pict Herald p40 Mr 28 '36

"Jane Withers, No. 2 child player on the 20th-Fox lot, didn't get much of a break in this one. [She] is cute and clever, but she can't carry such a big load of productional grief. Little Miss Withers will be liked in spite of everything else, yet that can mean some matinee business at best, with the picture lightweight for the night shows and in general. . . It's not a case of a little child leading them this time. It's a case of a child being so far ahead of everybody and everything else concerned with the picture, that all, except her personal efforts, amounts to a lot of distracting sound effect for a little girl's monolog."
— + Variety p18 Je 10 '36

"'Little Miss Nobody,' a historical report on a captivating but almost incorrigible orphanage heroine, lacks something in spontaneity and doesn't take deep emotional hold but has sufficient entertainment and youthful hullabaloo to satisfy the family and neighborhood demands. On the key programs it will be variable, with indications generally of fair returns."
+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 21 '36

LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE. Mr 2 '36 60min
Chesterfield

Players: Frank Coghlan, Jr. Dickie Moore.
Ann Doran, Lloyd Hughes

Director: Charles Lamont

"An adolescent boy, piqued by a schoolmaster's rebuke, runs away and is implicated in a murder. His life in a reform school and his subsequent vindication form the plot." Nat Legion of Decency

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Legion of Decency
Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

"A: moderately entertaining drama concerning the perils that beset unguarded adolescence; Y: wholesome drama; C: possible."
Par M p50 Je '36

"The production is marred at times by lack of realism. Family."
Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Highlighted by the performance of Frank Coghlan, Jr., an unknown; effective direction; and an interesting plot; this film will do well for family trade."
+ Box Office p23 Ap 18 '36

"A story of school [children] that should do well in the neighborhoods. . . A picture that furnishes an hour of fair entertainment to be forgotten after one leaves the theatre."
+ — Film Curb p4 Mr 14 '36

"Fairly satisfactory. . . With a story that follows pretty closely the implications of its title, this modest little yarn should find its best appreciation among the hinterland families and on juvenile bills."
+ — Film Daily p6 My 15 '36

"A slender but movingly real story of adolescent boyhood that will hold its own well as a dualer in neighborhood houses with family trade. With something of the Tarkington flavor, it points a youthful moral without preaching and by reason of sympathetic direction of an aptly fitting cast it becomes a poignant little document that is oddly lifelike and stirring."
+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 3 '36

"An unpretentious, but entertaining little film, this should prove satisfactory especially in the smaller situations, adaptable chiefly for double bill programs."
+ — Motion Pict Daily p15 Je 10 '36

"Estimate: pleasant program [picture] for twin bills, neighborhoods."
N Y Exhibitor p30 Mr 25 '36

"Having only the name of Dickie Moore to brighten the marquee, this curious admixture of school days, cheap melodramatics and forced heart-throbs is only for a minor secondary feature spot. Even there, it is apt to baffle the average audience."
— + Variety p14 My 27 '36

"Made for family circle and juvenile trade. While mild in entertainment, has enough substance to satisfy the adolescent with melodramatic phases and to inspire in elders mellowed recollections of the tribulations in numerous little red schoolhouses. Best bet is for the Saturday matinee multiple bills."
— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 3 '36

(s) LITTLE STRANGER. Mr 13 '36 7min Paramount

An animated color cartoon. "The story of a mother duck hatching a chick with her brood and the consequent bewilderment when the chick attempts to swim and quack." Motion Pict Daily

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Amusing. Family-junior."

+ Nat Bd of R M Ap '36

"Excellent."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LITTLE STRANGER—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"For comedy, one would recommend the finale, when the appreciative ducks learn chicken talk to show their forgiveness."

Film Daily p36 Ap 28 '36

"A good and entertaining effort."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 13 '36

"The subject is in color and the animation especially smooth, although the squawking of the hawk in pursuit of the chick is a bit of an ear trial. The subject is as well suited to juvenile interest requirements as to adult and requires no special program setting."

Motion Pict Herald p38 Ap 18 '36

LIVING DANGEROUSLY. (Release date not determined) 80min Associated British Players: Otto Kruger. Leonora Corbett. Francis Lister. Aileen Marson

Director: Herbert Brenon

Filmed in England. Based on a play of the same title by Reginald Simpson and Frank Gregory. "The main action is a fade back narrative, told to the District Attorney in a New York apartment as justification for a killing. The story told is of two doctors in partnership in London, one of whom is a dope-peddler and the other an idealist, innocently in love with his friend's wife." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"There are some ethical points involved which may occasion some disagreement but from the production aspect the film is above the average. Suitability: adult."

+ Mo Film Bul p42 F 24 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is admirably acted, and the fault that has been sometimes noted in British pictures—their rather slow tempo—is certainly not noticeable here."

Canadian M p61 My '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Good story values, suspense, live acting and a surprise finale with a real kick in it are the assets of this Elstree effort. . . Of special interest is an authentic reproduction of the proceedings when the ruling body of British medicine deals with erring doctors. There's exploitation value there, and more in the two problem angles of professional codes and human instincts in conflict and of 'justifiable' murder."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Mr 19 '36

"This Elstree production has American values which are accentuated by the fact that the opening and closing scenes are set in New York, the story proper being presented as a narration. . . The climax, effectively presented, at the same time possibly raises a problem of censorship. . . As entertainment it is fast-moving stuff, with plenty of suspense even if it should be found necessary to modify the final scene. The acting is excellent, with Otto Kruger and Francis Lister sharing the honors."

+ Motion Pict Herald p41 Mr 21 '36

LORENZINO DE MEDICI. Ap 13 '36 88min
Nuovo Mondo

Players: Alessandro Moissi. Camillo Bilotto. Germana Paolieri. Maria Denis

Director: Guido Brignoni

A dialogue film in Italian, made in Italy with English sub-titles. "Set in the Florence of the days of the Medicis, the film tells the story of the assassination of the Duke Alexander, who ruled the city with a ruthless and bloodthirsty hand, by Lorenzino, one of the famous Medici family, who governed the city of Florence for many years." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Suggested for schools and libraries. Family." Nat Bd of R

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 25 '36

"The background of medieval Florence with its gayety and brilliant festivals is magnificently portrayed. Adults."

+ Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

[It] has a certain historical value in addition to its dramatic interest. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ap 18 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"The photoplay has a certain obituary interest through the fact that its title role was played by the late Alexander Moissi, an actor of international fame who was the hero of Max Reinhardt and Alexander Woolcott. . . The picture offers no suggestion of a Mussolini parable; it reveals the Italian film-makers as possessing a pictorial sense, and it shows a pleasant concern with Renaissance intrigue. . . Among other things, it must be said on the picture's behalf that it confines itself, amid impressive backgrounds, with the plots and the amours of its devious, colorful and exciting era, and that there isn't a blackshirt or a Fascist salute in a reel of it."

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ap 15 '36

"Presumably most of the story is fanciful, but as Duke Alessandro really met a violent end, the scenarist has built a highly entertaining and colorful tale upon a foundation of fact. Magnificently mounted and acted by a cast apparently inspired by the work of their leader, 'Lorenzino de' Medici' is a credit to the rejuvenated Italian film industry." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 14 '36

"Historians should be warned that in all probability the film is full of discrepancies. . . But, accurate or not, 'Lorenzino de' Medici' is a thoroughly engrossing and entertaining study of Renaissance intrigue. . . The film is handicapped somewhat by its wordiness, which tends to slow up its action, but in spite of this fault it emerges as an historical offering of considerable merit and interest." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p17 Ap 23 '36

"The late Moissi of Vienna is to be seen in 'Lorenzino de' Medici,' a costume piece only for Italians who are trying to forget Mussolini." John Mosher

New Yorker p77 My 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Excellent Italian picture of historic de Medici rule rates high in performances, settings and direction. Worth titling for American audience consumption."

+ Film Daily p14 Ap 15 '36

"The film has been produced lavishly, and with a ring of authenticity in costuming, settings and atmosphere. The cast is extremely capable, and the film, studded with sub-title translations of dialogue, is easy to follow even without a knowledge of the language, and presents an episode of history which should be of interest to those unfamiliar with Italian."

+ Motion Pict Daily p11 Ap 14 '36

"Strong in every department until it got to the cutting room. . . Otherwise this historical film has merits way over par for the Italian-language route, and could draw some general trade if correctly plugged."

+ Variety p23 Ap 15 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LOVE BEFORE BREAKFAST. Mr 2 '36 72min
Universal

Players: Carole Lombard, Preston Foster, Janet Beecher, Cesar Romero, Betty Lawford

Director: Walter Lang

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: depends on taste; Y: doubtful; C: no."
Christian Century p583 Ap 15 '36

"Fresh comedy. Unnecessary drinking. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Preston Foster is natural; Carole Lombard unappealing. Mature." DAR

"The comedy, though at times hardly credible, is greatly aided by deft direction and clever acting. Adults and young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The entire production is utterly flippant in tone, much of the action is unseemly to an unpleasant degree and drinking and drunkenness pervade throughout. Matter of taste for adults." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The stubbornness of the girl becomes monotonous and the character is very much overdrawn. It is presumably a comedy but falls short of its goal. Too much drinking. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 28 '36

"Adults and young people."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 14 '36

"Unnecessary drinking. Adults."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"The story is complete foolishness but many of the lines and situations are amusing. The direction is fast if a little incoherent, and the casting and acting are excellent. Adolescents, 12-16: too sophisticated; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R Ap '36

"[It is] an amusing story."

Nat Bd of R M Mr '36

"Adults."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Mr 18 '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Though all the characters are so recherche and their backgrounds and costumes so tony, the trite quality of the story seeps through the yachts and champagne bottles." M. E. P.

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 21 '36

"I suppose James Cagney is the father of this cinematic insolence towards women, although Clark Gable must be given credit for giving it a powerful push in 'It Happened One Night' and other gems. . . 'Love Before Breakfast' falls definitely into this sass-back group, but is saved somewhat by several good lines and the presence of one of my dotes, Carole Lombard." Don Herold

+ — Life p24 My '36

"Undoubtedly 'Love Before Breakfast' was deliberately written around Miss Lombard's talents. I for one find La Lombard's efforts very far removed from the humorous. As a foil, the labored Preston Foster is hardly scintillating. . . In any event . . . stay away from this one." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p33 Ap '36

"'Love Before Breakfast' is a gay, lively, bantering little cinema prank espousing the course of modern courtship, which in short, consists of the hero and heroine tearing at each other's throats right up to the altar. . . It has plenty of good wisecracks which are funny—sometimes too deliberately funny for its own good—some nicely foolish people who do some nicely foolish things and some really first-rate light comedy acting by Carole Lombard and Preston Foster." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p9 Mr 21 '36

"Were it not for the adaptable and dependable Miss Lombard, 'Love Before Breakfast' would do nothing more than prove the efficacy of trial and error. With her, it manages to produce a spontaneous laugh or two."

+ — Stage p10 Ap '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] rises to great heights of hilarity on numerous occasions, and surprisingly enough, manages to keep up the fast pace throughout the whole production."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p6 My 2 '36

"[It] rates as fairly good entertainment. As a grosser it likewise should be fair. . . Incidentally, exploitation for the picture could include a prize contest for the best answer as to what the title has to do with the subject. And the best answer would be nothing."

+ — Variety p17 Mr 18 '36

LOVE BEGINS AT TWENTY. Ap 22 '36 60min
Warner-First national

Players: Warren Hull, Patricia Ellis, Hugh Herbert, Hobart Cavanaugh, Dorothy Vaughan

Director: Frank McDonald

Based on the play, Broken Dishes, by Martin Flavin. "Hugh Herbert is a henpecked husband. . . We follow his adventures that one breathless day when things actually happen to him. He faces bandits in a bank, is fired from his job, gets drunk, goes to the lodge, indulges in a fight with his boss, helps his daughter to marry the boy of whom her mother disapproves, is jailed and finally returns home the master of his household." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Amusing clean comedy, but why that title? Family, but mature for children." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Adults: amusing; 14-18: amusing; 8-14: mature. Possible for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family, exclusive of young children." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Mediocre-mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul My 30 '36

"Given farcical treatment [it] is not particularly interesting though well acted. Family."

+ — Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 18 '36

"Hugh Herbert, with his befuddled gestures and apparent mental distress is always amusing but the story is hardly worth his efforts. It is the sort of simple, foolish tale which fills an idle hour, however, and provides relaxation and laughs for many. Adolescents, 12-16: depends on taste; children, 8-12: not elevating."

+ — Motion Pict R Je '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

LOVE BEGINS AT TWENTY—Continued

"Fair for family."

+ — Nat Council of Jewish Women My 20 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

"Depending upon the antics of the inimitable Hugh Herbert, this slight program picture fails to satisfy. . . An extremely modern idea is the urging of liquor on the father by the young people—'man bites dog' idea and not particularly commendable. Mature."

— Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It is an] exceptionally amusing and appealingly-named screen comedy. . . Manufactured as an offering of B-classification, 'Love' provides more diversion than the average A-picture succeeds in doing. . . By all means see this picture." Allan Hersholt,

+ Hollywood Spec p11 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Mild comedy with several bright situations that save it from falling into the category of mediocre films."

+ — Box Office p33 Je 13 '36

"This yarn of a small town family is a swell bet for the neighborhoods and not-too-large cities. Chuckles and good laughs come thick and fast and the whole thing is a most amusing affair."

+ Film Curb p16 My 30 '36

"This is rich in laughs, with Hugh Herbert having a field day as the hen-pecked husband and father, who finally asserts himself."

+ Film Daily p7 My 23 '36

"Formula comedy, genus domestic Americana, this provides enough moderate entertainment to get by as a lower class B release. It will doubtless do better in smaller communities than in key cities. . . It is a walk-away for Herbert and he scores with every opportunity in the manner he has established as his own."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 20 '36

"A succession of domestic comedy situations which furnish good family type of entertainment. The story is principally Hugh Herbert's, giving him the opportunity to indulge in a quick-paced series of his familiar character antics. . . The show should click well in smaller houses."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 My 21 '36

"Though not what should be considered ordinarily as strong in cast names and possessed of a title that doesn't even hint as to the picture's character, the show is salable entertainment, to be presented to audiences with the assurance that it should prove enjoyable."

Motion Pict Herald p37 My 30 '36

"It all works out very well but the result is light on what the marquee needs. Family audiences won't mind so much."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p26 Je 1 '36

"It should prosper in any house as topper of duals, and, with proper plugging, should draw them into the lesser acers."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 20 '36

LUCK OF THE IRISH. 80min Guaranteed pictures

Players: Richard Hayward. Kay Walsh. Niall McGinnis

Director: Donovan Pedetty

Dialogue film produced in England. "The theme is a variation on the lord of the manor staking his castle and belongings on the Grand National sweeps run in England, and losing. His son and the rich daughter of another landed lord furnish the sentimental interest." (Film Daily)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"'Luck of the Irish' is something real. There is a feeling of sincerity in its simple story, and of real and kindly human emotions. It is a romantic story that has nothing very novel about it, but for all that it will stand out of the ruck of every-day presentations as a picture that will stick in the memory."

+ Canadian M p12 Je '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This is an out-and-out Irish story that seems only suitable for typical Irish audiences. . . It is slow-moving and certainly will not be of any particular interest to run-of-the-mill film fans in this country. At times the brogue cannot be understood, the photography is nothing to brag about and the recording none too good."

— Film Curb p7 Je 6 '36

"The American family trade wouldn't go for its old-fashioned treatment, slow tempo and general lack of modernism as they have become accustomed to Hollywood product. So it rates only as a film for strictly Irish audiences who can appreciate its sentiment and also understand some of the Irish brogue that is too 'thick' for other nationalities to grasp readily."

+ Film Daily p29 Je 2 '36

"A pleasant tale, rambling and almost always in a vein of light comedy, this film will be found a delightful change. It is said to be the first Irish importation and the brogues and dialects, not incoherent, lend a novel note. . . The film has the good qualities of Irish customs, portrayals and folk songs which are authentically delivered for good entertainment. Much subtle Gaelic wit is in evidence."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Je 9 '36

LUCKY TERROR. F 20 '36 60min First division

Players: Hoot Gibson. Lona Andre. Art Mix. Frank Yaconelli

Director: Alan James

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family. Junior."

Nat Bd of R M Mr '36

"Not an unusual plot, but the action is brisk and interesting."

Wkly Guide F 29 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"All the ingredients of the typical Western are employed and it will get by with those fans who like this sort of stuff."

Film Curb p11 Mr 28 '36

"An average Western, this has all the requisite action and romance which will please children and fans. It is definitely for dual bills."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p7 Mr 24 '36

"Thanks to good photography, plenty [of] action, this latest Hoot Gibson is able to offset any lack of originality which may be found in the plot. . . With Gibson's personal popularity, with a concentration on action, this should please as well as the others."

+ N Y Exhibitor p30 Mr 25 '36

"One of the dullest, most absurd outdoor melodramas in many weeks. Even Hoot Gibson's presence fails to cover up roving direction, slovenly acting, sluggish pace and specious story or development of it."

— — Variety p17 Ap 8 '36

M

MESSAGE TO GARCIA. Ap 10 '36 88min 20th century-Fox

Players: Wallace Beery, Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Alan Hale

Director: George Marshall

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"The film has plenty of action and but one regrettable feature—the torture scenes. When will producers learn that women and many men resent torture in films? You do not go to the theatre to have your soul harrowed with suffering."

Bks & Films My '36

"A: depends on taste; Y: no; C: no."
Christian Century p646 Ap 29 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The jungle scenes are beautifully photographed; there is interesting symbolical use of light and shadow, and Wallace Beery, as the unkempt Sergeant Dory, does a powerful piece of characterization which adds weight to his reputation as an accomplished actor. Adults; good; 14-18: good; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. This absorbing story . . . teaches a fine lesson. . . Too harrowing for children. Mature." DAR

"Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"At times, the motivation is obscure and the torture scenes are realistic to a very trying degree. Nevertheless, this film will interest those who enjoy stories of adventure, filled with action and narrow escapes. Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A highly entertaining and constructive picture. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 14 '36

"This story has a distinct appeal because of its familiarity to most Americans as an exploit of value and valor. It is based on history, but for picture purposes the imagination has greatly enriched the drama."

+ Motion Pict & Family Je 15 '36

"Good-adult & young adult."

+ Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"Probably its historic interest is its best drawing card. Most of the acting is only ordinary though Wallace Beery does an excellent characterization of a soldier of fortune. Some of the scenes of torture are uncomfortably prolonged and the whole thing is rather confused. Adolescents, 12-16: passable; children, 8-12: too exciting."

+ Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Slow in parts but has a thrilling climax. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 29 '36

"Settings with authentic detail and the use of Spanish, carefully interpreted, give veracity to the historical legend. With the exception of the heroine's continuous state of perfection in grooming despite all her misadventures, the story is made thrillingly believable."

Scholastic p27 Ap 4 '36

"In the period of the Spanish American War, it has plenty of adventurous action and a good deal of carelessness in writing and direction. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ap 4 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"When it comes to adventures, the movies are never niggardly. In the present instance they have laid down a barrage of dangers that do credit to their imagination. . . Mr. Beery adds the most to the film. Disreputable, good-natured rascals are the sort of things that he always does best." N. N.

Boston Transcript p5 My 9 '36

"[It is] passable melodrama."

+ Canadian M p61 My '36

"Not for persons who do not enjoy torture scenes."

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 9 '36

"Philosopher Elbert Hubbard's brief essay on getting a job done whatever the difficulties has served variously since his death on the Titanic as the inspiration for many an American business man. In scenario, however, it evidently inspired nothing more than a melodramatic story of unimpressive adventure in the period of the Spanish-American War of 1898, with a good deal of careless writing and direction."

J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p698 Ap 17 '36

"The story of Lieutenant Rowan's hazardous journey . . . is a story packed with thrills and military romance. And, left alone, this story could have made a thrilling and romantic picture. The screen play, however, is so aflame with sure-fire touches that nothing is left of the original background but a well burnt crisp. . . Full of spurious excitement, 'A Message to Garcia' is a case where the studios were not content to let a good story tell itself." (2 stars) Beverly Hills Liberty p51 Ap 18 '36

"'A Message to Garcia' is reasonably good entertainment in its own right and, thanks to Mr. Beery's engaging impersonation, it is frequently a bit more than that. 'A Message to Garcia' is pleasant melodrama despite its scenes of torture, and it wisely keeps its jingo touches at a happy minimum." Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p12 Ap 10 '36

"As undocumented a piece of historical claptrap as the film city has produced, the new photoplay is almost silly enough to pass for burlesque, instead, being neither badly stated fact nor well-handled fiction, it stands forth nakedly as an absurd and trivial melodrama which is made all the more annoying because Twentieth Century-Fox would have you believe it was partly true." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p27 Ap 10 '36

"A shambling, feeble, shiftless affair, its movement is ponderous, its dialogue is pedestrian and its story is stereotyped. Save for a rousing finale in which the Cuban rebels come to the rescue of Lieutenant Rowan, and the pleasant people whom Mr. Zanuck has engaged to play the principals, I can't be more than just mildly happy about it." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p25 Ap 10 '36

"What 'A Message to Garcia' lacks in entertainment it makes up for in patriotism."

News-Wk p42 Ap 11 '36

"It is one hundred per cent hokum made highly digestible with straightforward treatment."

Stage p10 My '36

"In real life, Lieutenant Rowan is now a 79-year-old retired colonel who lives quietly in California with nothing much more than a medal he received in 1922 to remind him of his feat. . . Cinemaddicts less intimately acquainted with his exploit will accept [this film] as legitimate embellishment of romanticized history."

Time p48 Ap 20 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p5 Je 6 '36

"Splendidly acted and directed drama of Spanish War days is a sure box office draw."

+ Film Daily p10 Ap 9 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

MESSAGE TO GARCIA—Continued

"Taking a dramatic episode from American history, melodrama-maker Darryl Zanuck has fashioned a picture that ought to please the men. What it will do in attracting the women will determine what it does at the box office."

N Y Exhibitor p31 Mr 25 '36

"A great majority of the picture's prospective auditors probably never read the Hubbard essay or the Rowan book, so they'll accept Zanuck's 'Garcia' at face value. To them it will be a robust, though not distinguished melodrama, and for theatres it should stand up well enough as a grosser. As for their story, Fowler and Lipscomb have fabricated something that's little or no better than the average Western; but the story in this instance has the advantage of some corking dialog and first rate production."

+ Variety p16 Ap 15 '36

MILIZIA TERRITORIALE. Ap 5 '36 77min
Caesar

Players: Gina Bolognesi. Enrico Viariso.
Monte D'Ancora

Director: Mario Bonnard

A dialogue film in Italian without English sub-titles. Based on the novel of the same title by A. De Beneditti. "The story has to do with a brow-beaten middle-aged bookkeeper, who is constantly being subjected to petty persecution in civilian life, but who finds himself in a dominating position when war is declared, since he happens to be a major in the militia." (N Y World-Telegram)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide Ap 25 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"There are lots of laughs in this smoothly directed, well-acted, and fast-moving picture." H. T. S.

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 6 '36

"[It is] a spirited little Italian farce, touched with some scathing satire on films glorifying war. Well-played and smoothly directed, the film is among the best of the Italian offerings that recently have flooded the town." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 Ap 8 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] makes good theater in presenting revolt of a timid bookkeeper who can't escape the swivel stool even during heavy fire."

+ Film Daily p71 Ap 7 '36

"A slow-moving, crudely produced comedy based on an unbelievable story, this film cannot conceivably compete with other foreign films currently being shown in New York. Overabundance of dialogue makes it hard to follow and no titles are provided to simplify the situation. Appeal is limited even for native audiences. Its only redeeming feature is the fine performance of the hero."

— Hollywood Reporter p4 Ap 10 '36

"The war depicted is the World War, the action beginning prior to Italy's entry, spanning the period of conflict and continuing afterward. The treatment is light throughout and actual fighting is shown only in brief flashes. . . . Reviewed at the World Theatre, New York . . . where a Saturday night audience manifested its reaction in frequent laughter."

Motion Pict Herald p40 Ap 25 '36

"Until the last reel [the film] unravels with pleasantness and a good deal of gusto. Then the story evaporates into an anti-climax. . . . Except for this hurdle, it's a fairly smooth job, abetted by names and well-studded with laughs."

+ — Variety p23 Ap 15 '36

MILKY WAY. F 7 '36 83min Paramount

Players: Harold Lloyd. Adolphe Menjou.
Verree Teasdale. Helen Mack. William Gargan

Director: Leo McCarey

Based on the play of the same title by Lynn Root and Harry Clork. "[Harold Lloyd] is a timid, inoffensive and slightly daffy deliverer of bottled milk who, by an ingenious string of fortuitous circumstances, gains a national reputation as a fighting man; is jockeyed into a series of fistic encounters, and finally into a battle for the middle-weight championship of the world, which he wins because his opponent is given sleeping medicine by mistake." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: good of kind; Y: amusing; C: good." Christian Century p446 Mr 18 '36

"Family and junior matinees." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent. Mature. Continual laughter marked the preview appreciation of Harold Lloyd's gag-and-situation comedy." DAR

"Family. Juniors." Nat Bd of R

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"An exceptionally amusing farce with hilarious situations, good dialogue and able direction. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul F 15 '36

"Family and junior matinee."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast) F 8 '36

"This is, as near as possible, a comedy which everybody should enjoy, and no student of acting technique should miss Menjou's virtuoso display. Suitability: family."

+ Mo Film Bul p47 F 24 '36

"Students of motion picture dramaturgy will do well to challenge the use of dialogue in many of the scenes as to whether or not less speech might not improve the technique. . . . Students will profit by noting the 'build-up' and the delivery of laugh-provoking lines and situations."

Motion Pict & Family p8 F 15 '36

"Adolescents, 12-16: excellent; children, 8-12: excellent."

Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Wholesome entertainment for the family and junior matinees."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women F 5 '36

"Unobjectionable for general patronage." Nat Legion of Decency Mr 12 '36

"A, Y and C: super farce comedy." Par M p64 Ap '36

"Family and junior matinee."

+ Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

"Plenty of amusing situations. Family. Junior."

+ Wkly Guide F 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Harold Lloyd may be the 'starred' attraction in 'The Milky Way' but he should be prepared to share the glory of its inevitable popularity with every principal member of his supporting cast and with the scenarists and director who helped so substantially in its creation. For this picture is a gilt-edged cinematic bond with a guaranteed income." R. S.

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 1 '36

"Promises a little more than the usual amount of plot in a typical Lloyd comedy."

Canadian M p43 Mr '36

"'Milky Way' writes a new leaf as the contributor of a thousand laughs, inspired by a concoction of true Lloyd nonsense that is so cleverly set down in action, dialog and gag situations that it leaves one limp." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p44 F 7 '36

"Even though the noise it makes will leave you somewhat wilted by the time the fade-out comes, you will find 'The Milky Way' good fun. It is a comedy of situations, some of which are mirth-provoking, and at least one of which would make a wooden Indian laugh. When you see the picture, you will spot the situation I mean—the one in which Harold Lloyd shares a taxicab with a colt. . . It is physical comedy which asks your intellect to go off shift and allow the rest of you to have a whale of a time."

+ Hollywood Spec p14 F 1 '36

"Harold Lloyd has turned out more than his share of good comedies, but none, that we can remember, any funnier than 'The Milky Way.' [It] is rather familiar stuff. . . But it has been crammed with so many grand gags by the scenarists and so swiftly directed by Leo McCarey that you'll be laughing too much to notice the plot. . . 'Milky Way' is sturdy enough to stand up under the adjective hilarious." (3½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p28 Mr 7 '36

"Though Harold is only a fair comedian himself, 'The Milky Way' is, about the funniest picture of the year. . . [The cast] lend able help in this festival of wholesome abdominal laughs." Don Herold

+ + Life p26 Je '36

Manchester Guardian p13 My 5 '36

"As to Harold Lloyd, whose comedy 'The Milky Way' was announced as a side-splitter, I have nothing to report beyond the conviction that he is heavier than ever. I have never found him funny; he works too hard. Charlie Chaplin and the Marx Brothers are said to be hard workers too, but an audience would not suspect it; whereas this lugubrious fellow with the glasses bends himself double with an amount of visible effort which in its very self is a guaranty that we shall not do so." Mark Van Doren

— Nation p492 Ap 15 '36

"Unlike Chaplin's one-man show, the new Harold Lloyd comedy is up-to-the-minute in construction, the work of many hands, all laid on expertly. . . By and large it is very near the top for screen comedy." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub p75 F 26 '36

"No one can ever seriously have considered Harold Lloyd a talented comedian. Yet his films make one laugh. . . In 'The Milky Way,' as in his previous films (all so easily forgettable), Lloyd has some excellent gags; the taxi-drive with a foal, for instance, is a blissful extravagance. And the rest of the cast has magnanimously been allowed a share in his success; only one of the eight chief parts was uninterestingly played. . . Yes, a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment."

+ New Statesman & Nation p385 Mr 14 '36

"Good entertainment. Fast moving and well stocked with valid gags. . . Harold Lloyd has had the courage to remain a slightly unpleasant and mild egomaniac to the very end." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p34 Ap '36

"Aided by a number of excellent actors and some surprisingly sharp and witty writing, 'The Milky Way' proves to be an exceptionally diverting cinema farce. I do not recall all of Mr. Lloyd's silent films well enough to make any comparisons, but I can assure you that the new photoplay represents by far the best work the Lloyd workshop has accomplished since the screen began to babble. . . If you wanted to quibble you could say that the film tends to run down a bit as it goes along, so that the final climactic scenes are definitely inferior to those of the opening." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p15 Mr 26 '36

"'The Milky Way' . . . hasn't any rivals this winter. Harold Lloyd after long eclipse, returns in the funniest picture of the season, the funniest picture since 'Ruggles of Red Gap.' . . It's a cast worthy of the picture, and the picture is worthy of a long and merry run. They seldom come along as funny as this one, and Charlie Chaplin was singularly lucky that his picture opened first." Eileen Creelman

+ + N Y Sun p33 Mr 25 '36

"It's good to have an old-time Harold Lloyd comedy back in town, and for that reason alone we were prepared to welcome 'The Milky Way,' which restores the comedian to New York after an absence of eighteen months. The new film is rather more than that; it happens, also, to be a well-balanced picture, drawing as much merriment from its dialogue as from its slapstick and dividing attention equally between Mr. Lloyd and the other members of its excellent cast. We expected a one-man show; 'The Milky Way' is nearer a three-ring circus. . . The picture is as frolicsome a comedy as Mr. Lloyd has made since the talkies came along." F. S. Nugent

+ + N Y Times p27 Mr 26 '36

"Although Harold Lloyd is the nominal star of 'The Milky Way,' the chief blessings of this preposterous and at times hilariously amusing piece of slapstick fooling are really Adolphe Menjou and Verree Teasdale. The film in which they appear is a reasonably goofy screen adaptation of the stage play of the same name, and if it sometimes lacks the snap and dash of the original there is still fun enough in it to keep one chuckling from beginning to end and sometimes laughing right out loud." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p21 Mr 26 '36

"[It is a] good, bracing tonic. . . Without any of those mechanical stunts that you find in a Cantor picture or the Marx Brothers' operettas, this Lloyd film manages to sustain a pleasantly soothing humor throughout." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p87 Ap 4 '36

"One reason for [Lloyd's] continued appeal may be that he is content to allow some of the other characters a fair share of the camera so that his films have a balance about them. In 'The Milky Way' both Adolphe Menjou and Verree Teasdale have plenty of material. . . As farces go, it travels well enough." Mark Forrest

+ Sat R p352 Mr 14 '36

"The gag-makers have been very well employed on the latest Harold Lloyd film. The great Lloyd factory has never constructed a better picture. . . Mr. Adolphe Menjou acts with the toughness and energy he showed in 'The Front Page.' Mr. Menjou in this kind of part is unbeatable. . . [He] runs away with the film: he doesn't need gags; he doesn't need to smuggle a foal into a taxi and disguise its neighs with his own; he doesn't need to boomerang bowler hats. These gags are for the star, and so with the gag-makers at the top of their form and Mr. Menjou at the top of his, we have the best 'Harold Lloyd' to date." Graham Greene

+ Spec p512 Mr 20 '36

"Harold Lloyd might have waited much longer than two years for an acceptable script if Broadway had not provided that brisk, caustic, facile bit of horseplay, 'The Milky Way.' As it is, he has the perfect vehicle for his gifts

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MILKY WAY—Continued

as a farceur. . . His talents for reducing the sublime to the ridiculous have never been more efficacious."

+ Stage p9 Mr '36

"It is an entirely unsophisticated and uproariously funny farce. However, unlike Chaplin's 'Modern Times' which would have been nonexistent without Chaplin, 'The Milky Way' might have been a shade funnier if Producer Lloyd had cast someone other than himself in the leading role."

+ Time p58 F 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"There's no top milk in 'The Milky Way.' It is pure cream of the comedy crop, traveling at a fast pace through a series of hilarious situations. Family."

+ Box Office p23 F 1 '36

"Packed to overflowing with legitimate laugh sequences this is decidedly one of the best Lloyd has ever made. . . There isn't a dull moment in the entire feature."

+ Film Curb p11 F 1 '36

"The laughs are so fast and furious in this Harold Lloyd fun riot that one is really thankful for the few calm moments in which to recuperate. At the box-office, it should hit big money everywhere. In a role tailor-made to his talents, Harold Lloyd should panic his army of old fans, and should add a host of new ones who know him as a name but haven't seen him."

+ Film Daily p8 Ja 28 '36

"It registers a laugh-count of about two a minute for its entire length and that is something of a record, even for Lloyd. So there should be nothing but smiles at the box office wherever it goes. . . The star is, of course very much his amiable, agile and unabashed self, always likeable and always effortlessly funny. Sharing his laugh-making is the impeccable Adolphe Menjou, now a gum-chewing and vociferous fight promoter, full of wild activity and surprising bits of facial comicality."

+ Hollywood Reporter p2 Ja 25 '36

"With uproarious comedy and to the tune of a thousand laughs, Harold Lloyd returns to the front rank of screen funmakers. Farce and hokum, moving with speed and holding a [thrill] in every sequence, the film is a credit to everyone connected with it and should prove one of the season's ace attractions. An indication of what to expect is the reaction of the preview audience, which giggled, guffawed and roared at the nonsensical action and clever dialogue. . . The entire cast does a fine comedy job, their performances leaving the audience limp."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Ja 27 '36

"Here is gold-plated amusement which at the preview provoked more laughs than it's possible for anyone to clock. It's nonsensical farce hokum foolishness, cleverly and cleanly set down in action, dialogue and situations. . . The fun starts at the beginning, gets funnier as the picture progresses, and winds up with a burst of ridiculous foolishness, relevant and irrelevant to the theme, that just chopping it off is an act of kindness and charity. . . Previewed in Los Angeles Paramount Theatre. It so hit the preview audience that its continued roaring laughter resulted in their inability to hear half of the picture."

+ Motion Pict Herald p46 F 1 '36

"This starts off slowly, builds up rapidly till there are moments positively screaming fun and satire. The lower brand Lloyd comedy is sure to get 'em. . . Estimate: will do well anywhere, with selling."

+ N Y Exhibitor p34 F 25 '36

"The picture emerges on the screen as one of the funniest comedies since the advent of talkies. It should prove a money picture everywhere. . . Lloyd gives an excellent characterization of the meek guy throughout the picture, never gets out of character. He has lost a lot of his former schoolboyish habits which aid him greatly. . . Picture can live up to most anything zealous press agents will say."

+ + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ja 25 '36

MILLIONAIRE KID. (Release date not determined) 50min Reliable

Players: Betty Compson, Bryant Washburn, Charles Delaney, Bradley Metcalfe

Director: Barnard B. Ray

"Bradley's life is haunted by tutors and his parents are separated and battling in court for possession of him. Rather than take sides he runs away and his adventures are many and varied. As a newsboy he is picked up by a benevolent master-crook who doesn't believe in kidnapping but is under indictment for other crimes." Hollywood Reporter

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Poor acting turns tragedy into comedy. General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one cannot hope for better playing time than the duals or smaller neighborhoods. . . Story is trite and dialogue none too good. Players do as well as, could be expected with the material at hand."

+ + Film Curb p17 Ap 4 '36

"For the grind houses and some of the double bills this picture should do all right. In its classification it answers its purpose. It carries many of the former big names and although the plot is quite obvious, it is handled in such a manner as to hold interest throughout."

+ — Film Daily p4 Ap 1 '36

"This social comedy-drama is manufactured of stock materials for the hamlet trade, where it will doubtless find a welcome from the uncritical and prove useful as a support number on double bills."

+ + Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 28 '36

"This is a mild entrant that will serve for double features, neighborhood houses."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p45 Ap 25 '36

"'Millionaire Kid,' will not do in spots except those that have to grab something for the Main Street stemmers. Picture starts with good premise, but is so wishy-washy that ending is fogged out."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 28 '36

MINE WITH THE IRON DOOR. My 8 '36
60min Columbia-Principal

Players: Richard Arlen, Cecilia Parker, Henry B. Walthall

Director: David Howard

Based on the novel of the same title by Harold Bell Wright. It was previously made as a silent picture. "It is the saga of the search for a fabulously wealthy lost mine. . . The story concerns the adventures and misadventures, dramatic and romantic, which befall a smart young salesman and dumb city detective when they set out to find the mine." (Motion Pict Herald)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency My 28 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"Family."

Wkly Guide My 23 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"In total, without the title to mislead the average Western fan, this picture is mildly pleasing, giving intelligent attention to detail, and offering as much as any secondary production is, apparently, supposed to give." Paul Jacobs

+ — Hollywood Spec p14 Ap 25 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This yarn of treasure hunting in Arizona is fair entertainment. Probably will be best liked by the boys. Possibly it lacks exciting action for an outdoor feature but as average stuff [it] will do."

+ — Film Curb p9 Ap 25 '36

"An old-style hokum comedy-melodrama about a hunt for hidden treasure, and a half-crazed miser, with both the comedy and the drama spread pretty thin. None but children will give it credence and it is of doubtful entertainment value for all ages. Grade it as a support number on neighborhood double bills."

— Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 17 '36

"This production moves rather slowly. It is essentially an adventure yarn and there is sufficient conflict to appeal to the lovers of action drama, yet no guns bark, no horses gallop and only in the final sequences is there any real suspense developed. . . . The production as a whole is quite suitable as average entertainment."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Ap 20 '36

"Wide liberties have been taken in this adaptation of Harold Bell Wright's story. While much of the original dramatic romantic substance has been retained, a vein of comedy has been so inserted that not until the climaxing sequences is the full dramatic power evident. . . . Previewed at the Figueroa Theatre, Los Angeles. The audience seemed to [enjoy] the comedy contrast, but found that the way in which the drama had been worked in was a little too far-fetched for its imagination."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p36 Ap 25 '36

"The show is headed for double feature, neighborhood trade with little appeal for any other classes."

— + N Y Exhibitor p22 My 10 '36

"Thin in incident, slow in tempo and failing to deliver anticipated final punch for general audience satisfaction, 'The Mine With the Iron Door' assays lean entertainment. Will find its level as program supplement in secondary spots. . . . Music score might have helped considerably to hold up long silent scenes toward end of picture where audience attention relaxes just as it should reach peak in swifter pace and closer cutting."

— Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 17 '36

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN. Mr 31 '36
115min Columbia

Players: Gary Cooper. George Bancroft.
Jean Arthur. Lionel Stander. Douglass
Dumbrille

Director: Frank Capra

Based on the novel, Opera Hat, by Clarence Budington Kelland. "Gary Cooper is a small town post-card poet, well content with himself. For relaxation he plays the tuba. . . . Inheritance of millions takes him to the city where a smart newspaper woman, Jean Arthur, and her editor, George Bancroft, crucify him with mockery to make selling headlines. . . . He turns the laugh upon his tormentors." (Variety [Hollywood])

Audience Suitability Ratings

"I thought, when I saw 'The Ghost Goes West' that it was about the best film of its kind that I had seen. . . . Now that I have seen 'Mr. Deeds Goes To Town' the two pictures stand side by side in my estimation as the two finest comedy films. . . . Unless I am mistaken, Columbia has another 'Lady For A Day' in 'Mr. Deeds Goes To Town.'"

+ + Bks & Films My '36

"A and Y: excellent; C: very good."

Christian Century p687 My 6 '36

"Excellent-mature. Highly entertaining comedy." DAR

"Because of its entertainment value and the additional serious implications of labor conditions, the production has outstanding qualities. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

+ + Fox W Coast Bul Ap 25 '36

"Smooth direction, natural acting, and an outstanding film for the family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"[It] will certainly be a joy to jaded movie audiences who are accustomed to conventional plots developed in the usual manner. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 2 '36

"A notably fine production holding appeal for all audiences. Family."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 22 '36

Motion Pict & Family p5 My 15 '36

"Excellent-family."

+ + Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"It is not often that we have the good fortune to see a picture which is such a completely satisfying combination of wit, pathos, high comedy and serious thought as 'Mr. Deeds Goes To Town.' . . . When you have seen it you will hurry to find a kindred spirit so that you may spend another evening enjoying it in retrospect. Adolescents, 12-16: delightful; children, 8-12: probably beyond them."

+ + Motion Pict R My '36

"It sounds rather crazy, and it is crazier than it sounds. In its craziness lies much of its virtue—out of the fantastic it creates something touching and moving as well as amusing." J. S. H.

+ Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Excellent for the entire family."

+ + Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 22 '36

"Some decidedly rare and hilarious situations. . . . Two lines of dialogue exclude this otherwise excellent film from our general patronage list. Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

"A and Y: excellently conceived comedy drama centering around a 'nouveau riche' young idealist; C: little interest."

Par M p50 Je '36

"The film has a moral strength. There is a regrettable abundance of conversation, but the excellent photography and the rich settings more than make up for this fault." S. M. Mullen

+ Scholastic p23 My 16 '36

"Outstanding. A highly diverting farce, with amusing dialogue, clever characterizations, a romance, real and appealing above the average, and a lightly satirical note stressing the difference between the Golden Rule and its application. Worthwhile for any audience."

+ + Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Recommended to the Committee on Exceptional Photoplays. Family."

+ + Wkly Guide Ap 11 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN—Continued

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"For a combination of sentimental imagination with hearty humors Frank Capra is hard to equal. In both respects he has exercised his talents to excellent advantage in 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town.' . . . The [courtroom] hearing, which brings the picture to a close, is probably the most irregular courtroom procedure that even the movies have accomplished. It is so entertaining, however, and so lively in its treatment, that the license taken is more than forgivable. . . . Under Mr. Capra's guidance, Gary Cooper gives one of the best performances of his career." E. F. Melvin

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 11 '36

"Frank Capra directed this and his people behave like human beings, not film automatons. Contains the funniest court-room scene in years and Gary Cooper's best performance as the home town boy who makes good in the big city."

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 25 '36

"Clarence Budington Kelland's American Magazine serialization can lay no claim to distinction as outstanding screen material, but it does serve well as a medium for refreshing amusement through the combination of logical hilarity, satire and light romance." J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p724 Ap 24 '36

"'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town' is definitely a talkie, but it is a brilliant one and capital entertainment. By all means see it. It is entitled to a place on your list of those you must not miss."

+ Hollywood Spec p19 Ap 11 '36

"[It is] one of the most hilarious and completely satisfying movies of the season. . . . The film opens with a bang and never once shows signs of fatigue. . . . This giddy concoction may set you to wondering about your own mental stability. And it is sure to give all one could hope for in full-blown entertainment. [Outstanding.]" (3½ stars)

Liberty p37 My 9 '36

"The trust of future patronage is based on the hope that the first audiences will come out of the theaters so ecstatic that they will tell all their friends. They probably will. . . . Throughout this amazingly simple story-structure Capra has strewn incidental details so winning and warm that, overnight, Gary Cooper achieves new stature as a star. It will be a long time before another courtroom scene of its like is filmed."

+ Lit Digest p19 Ap 11 '36

"Nothing we had read in advance prepared us for the amazing qualities of 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town.' . . . 'Mr. Deeds' astounds with its unexpected warmth and indubitable sincerity of purpose. . . . For the first time in the movies we have been given a sympathetic, credible portrait of a worker, speaking the language of workers, saying the things workers all over the country say. . . . For Hollywood, 'Mr. Deeds' is a tremendous advance." Robert Stebbins

+ New Theatre p17 My '36

"Performance, direction and story result in one of the screen delights of the season. . . . It is Mr. Capra who made the classic photoplay 'It Happened One Night,' and any succeeding work must be compared with his historic comedy. Well, I think that 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town' is excessive in length and has its occasional moments of lethargy, but on the whole I think it is even more engaging than 'It Happened One Night.'" Richard Watts, Jr.

+ N Y Herald Tribune p14 Ap 17 '36

"The Music Hall goes to town this week, to the huge delight of its large audiences. In current possession of its screen, and of this department's enthusiasm, is a merry story of a rustic millionaire who made good in the big city. . . . This is the second Gary Cooper comedy to open within the week, and the second to prove itself on the sure-fire entertainment list." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p21 Ap 17 '36

"Frank Capra and Robert Riskin, who are a complete production staff in themselves, have turned out another shrewd and lively comedy. . . . The picture moves easily into the pleasant realm reserved for the season's most entertaining films." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p17 Ap 17 '36

"They'll give you a grand and glorious time at the Radio City Music Hall this week. The 'they' being Frank Capra, Robert Riskin, Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, Lionel Stander and a lot of others who appear in the hilariously cockeyed entertainment called 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town,' which is among the comedy treats of the year. Mr. Capra has produced many distinguished motion pictures, but none more amusing and entertaining than this funny, cheerfully fast and footloose film." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p29 Ap 17 '36

"There is a general tone of simple amiability about 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town' which should make the film popular. The story rather ambles along, to be sure, and some may find it funnier than I [did]. . . . The real surprise in the film is the Gary Cooper performance. . . . He is another case, it would appear, of one who has turned to the values of humor after a sound and doubtless exhausting education in the romantic passions. One suspects that he comes to this new field with relief, and surely with respect." John Mosher

New Yorker p63 Ap 25 '36

"'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town' should be another success, despite its cumbersome title. . . . The plot is no world-beater, but Capra's light-hearted additions are."

+ News-Wk p29 Ap 18 '36

"It is sophisticated fantasy of undeniable grace and wit. . . . Evidently the Kelland-Riskin-Capra-Cooper combination is unbeatable for creating what is known, even in unenthusiastic circles, as a cinematic spree."

+ Stage p10 My '36

"The [courtroom] scene is the funniest as well as one of the most spiritually nourishing cinema climaxes of the current season. That, with wise direction, he can achieve something beyond the manly muteness on which his reputation as an actor has hitherto reposed, Gary Cooper recently proved in the Frank Borzage-Ernst Lubitsch 'Desire.' Herein he gives further evidence of a sense of humor, thereby helps its authors and an expert cast make 'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town' altogether worthwhile entertainment."

+ Time p36 Ap 27 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"[It] will send grosses soaring. Hilarious humor to lighten a highly original story packed with human-interest values, relieved by a quite believable romance."

+ Box Office p57 Ap 4 '36

"'Mr. Deeds Goes to Town' [is] one of the most delightful pictures of the current year."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p5 My 16 '36

"It's a wow! Better than 'It Happened One Night' and you know what that means. This combination of romance, satire and comedy has everything that a genuine box office hit needs. It should be a clean-up everywhere. . . . Book this one as soon as you can and watch the dough roll in."

+ Film Curb p5 Mr 28 '36

"This will do plenty of business at the box-office. It's another Capra hit. . . . The picture is full of delightful, refreshing touches and will please all types of audiences. Capra has done a grand directorial job and Robert Riskin deserves bouquets for his screenplay."

+ Film Daily p9 Mr 27 '36

"It is a satire, a farce, a love story, a sentimental comedy, all deftly intermingled to the thoroughgoing delight of its audiences. You have scores of excellent sales angles, but none will prove more powerful than the enthusiastic word-of-mouth the picture is sure to arouse. Gary Cooper plays Mr. Deeds with all the spontaneity of his own enthusiasm for the role. His performance is unquestionably the finest of his screen career, neatly shaded and tremendously vital."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 25 '36

"Mr. Deeds goes to town and so will any exhibitor who books this hilarious combination of comedy, satire and romance, in which Frank Capra tops his 'It Happened One Night.' Gary Cooper gives by far the best performance of his career as the sensitive, sensible small town citizen."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Mr 26 '36

"Exploitation angles were plentiful when the picture came from the cameras. Author, star, director and adaptor had, among them, a wealth of carry-over box office value. Normal expectancies to be tapped by advertising copy were varied and widespread. But the material that has accumulated since the preview screenings is abundant beyond the limits of this space to chronicle."

+ Motion Pict Herald p37 Ap 25 '36

"With a sometimes too thin structure the players and Frank Capra have contrived to convert 'Deeds' into fairly sturdy substance. It should pan out all right at the box office. The farce is good-humored and the tramping and production workmanlike, but there are some lapses in midriff that cause considerable uncertainty. . . There are times when Cooper's impression is just a bit too scatter-brained for sympathetic comfort. . . General technic is highgrade and 'Deeds' should prove pleasant screen divertissement if not as significant as some of Capra's previous efforts."

+ Variety p14 Ap 22 '36

"Escorted by those master craftsmen, Frank Capra and Robert Riskin, 'Mister Deeds' goes to town for one of the outstanding pieces of screen foolery of the season to pile a lot of dough into exhibitor tills and to bring smiles of satisfaction to the Columbia cohorts. Having names and merit and everything it takes, the picture spells box office with a smash. . . Behind the obvious antic, the discerning will see pungent commentary on the manners and the conventions of the times, sometimes caustic, sometimes sympathetic, always deeply comprehending."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 25 '36

MOONLIGHT MURDER. Mr 27 '36 65min MGM

Players: Chester Morris, Leo Carrillo, Madge Evans, Frank McHugh, Benita Hume

Director: Edwin L. Marin

"It unravels the murder of a grand opera singer in [the] Hollywood Bowl." Film Curb

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A: fair of kind; Y: not the best; C: no."
Christian Century p687 My 6 '36

"Most entertaining with suspense maintained to the finale; fine direction. Adults." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Possible for family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Good. Mature." DAR

"Family." Nat Bd of R

"Family." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

"Family-mature."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 21 '36

"Mature."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"Good-adult & young adult."

+ Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"Mercy killing is a social problem which deserves more consideration than to be tossed off lightly at the end of a fast-moving mystery plot. Adolescents, 12-16: no; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R My '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Mr 22 '36

"A: murder mystery which turns from formula to the unique; Y: mature; C: no."
Par M p50 Je '36

"A better than average mystery. Mature."

+ Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

Canadian M p61 My '36

"It succeeds only in being rather indifferent entertainment."

+ Hollywood Spec p10 Mr 28 '36

"They are killing another tenor at the Rialto Theater this week. . . In the end the slayer is revealed as one of those mercy killers, which may give you a rough idea of what the four authors of the photoplay think of tenors. The singer is, it turns out, poisoned by a microphone, which is certainly the finest recent case of the man biting the dog. It is my unhappy duty to report that the rest of the picture is not up to the standard set by its aforementioned high points."

+ N Y Herald Tribune p8 Mr 28 '36

"'Moonlight Murder' is a precise little film with cultural aspirations. When it is not decimating its cast by poison gas, it is indulging in 'Il Trovatore,' and with an effect equally deadly. . . Quite frankly, we never for a moment suspected the guilty man, but that may be because we always have refused, on principle, to solve these mystery pictures by eliminating every one with a motive and singling out the only possible player who couldn't have done it." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times p11 Mr 28 '36

"[It is a] leaky and generally preposterous mystery melodrama. . . A machine-made and slow motion exercise in lethal highjinks, its limping movement and nickel-weekly clichés about sudden and violent death will never cause you to whistle to keep your teeth from chattering with terror or cause your heart to jump into your throat with excitement. Sometimes its snugly conceived and calmly written shocks and violences may cause you to laugh, but I assure you that it will not be laughter of the nervous variety." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p9 Mr 28 '36

"The thriller of this week turns out to be a smudgy affair which we can dismiss at once. It's called 'Moonlight Murder,' and features Chester Morris, the Hollywood Bowl, a good portion of 'Il Trovatore,' a swami, a lunatic, a tenor, an unpronounceable poison, laboratory scenes, too much funny stuff, and a solution that lets you down flat on the floor." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p87 Ap 4 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

MOONLIGHT MURDER—Continued

Trade Paper Reviews

"Many clues, many theories, and a decided surprise in the end, for it's different. A fine picture for the younger generation." L. S. Niemeyer

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 Mr 28 '36

"This is a novel murder-mystery melodrama that will keep any audience guessing until the very end. . . It is all very well worked out and provides an hour of genuine entertainment. . . It is one of the best stories of its kind to reach the screen in some time."

+ Film Curb p8 Mr 21 '36

"As a program offering, this murder mystery should get by. With a strong cast . . . it should do best with the fans who like to work out the solutions. However, there is the opera at the Hollywood Bowl and the breezy romance between Madge Evans and Chester Morris that helps to make the entertainment more interesting."

+ Film Daily p6 Mr 19 '36

"This is a case of a murder mystery film so good in its class that its merit becomes its chief audience handicap. It is so ingeniously and unsparingly complicated for guessing purposes that fans are likely to stop guessing and to feel let down at the end because they were so completely fooled. . . In spite of fresh twists and exciting treatment the result is somewhat overwhelming."

Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 16 '36

"This is something new in the line of multiple-suspect murder-mystery drama. The principal departure from the formula is an idea accentuating the show's entertainment and commercial value, the unique motive for and the novel method of killing. . . As the location is the Hollywood Bowl and a grand opera performance the occasion, the picture has a musical background, the highlight of which is an elaborate presentation of a choral scene from 'Il Trovatore.'"

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Mr 17 '36

"The basic showmanship of the picture is that it is one so told and produced that it defies solution until the last few minutes. At the same time, musical content and the unusual production effects it makes possible should not be ignored. It is more than possible that by paying some little extra attention to this, patrons not ordinarily interested in straight mystery thrillers may have their attention drawn to the attraction."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 Mr 28 '36

"Murder mystery can be made too confounding for popular screen taste. This one may suffer somewhat by virtue of its very novelty. . . Majority of audiences however, are certain to welcome fresh departure from the hackneyed general run of film bafflers, and picture should do its share of program box office duty wherever the tantalizers are standard fare."

Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 16 '36

MOON'S OUR HOME. Ap 10 '36 76min Wanger-Paramount

Players: Margaret Sullivan. Henry Fonda. Charles Butterworth. Beulah Bondi. Henrietta Crossman. Margaret Hamilton

Director: William A. Seiter

Based on the novel of the same title by Faith Baldwin. "Margaret Sullivan, a temperamental movie star, rushes away from her socialite grandmother's home to escape the attentions of Butterworth, who wants to marry her. She goes to a New England village for winter sports, preceded by Fonda, an author-explorer, who is avoiding crowds. They fall in love; are married, but their wedding night is ruined when Margaret's perfume upsets Fonda." (Film Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"I was pleasantly disappointed in 'The Moon's Our Home'; the film has far more depth and sanity than is found in the novel from which it is made. The contrast between the hectic life of a movie star and [the] peace and quiet of a rural community helps to render the picture enjoyable."

+ Bks & Films My '36

"A: good; Y: amusing; C: little interest." Christian Century p687 My 6 '36

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Snappy dialogue and rowdiness result in hilarious entertainment for all audiences Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"Excellent-mature. Young people will love this light, amusing romance." DAR

"Humorous situations are many, exceedingly clever dialogue abounds, and the winter country scenes are exceptionally well pictured. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

"Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"A frothy, amusing comedy, not very probable and filled with bickering but otherwise harmless. For older members of the family. Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Light entertainment with no particular purpose or moral objective. Mediocre. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women
Fox W Coast Bul Ap 25 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 15 '36

"The characters and situations are quite far-fetched most of the time, but the acting, the players and the direction are so thoroughly in tune with the mood of the story that the result can only be good entertainment. Family."

+ Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"Hollywood pulling its own leg is an edifying spectacle. . . The outdoor scenes in the snowy mountains, with the exception of a regrettably artificial studio-set, are a pleasure that one would like to have prolonged, even though they serve to make one remember the film less as a satire than as a romantic fantasy. Suitability: family."

Mo Film Bul p88 My '36

"Fair-family."

+ — Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"The leads manage to be charming in roles which are pretty noisy and ranting at times while the play pokes some good-natured fun at both celebrities and American idolaters. Adolescents, 12-16: probably enjoyable; children, 8-12: harmless if it interests."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"Directed with a rare sense of comedy value, sharp wit and subtle satire. Family."

+ Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 15 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 13 '36

"A: light comedy with riotously humorous high spots; Y: certainly entertaining; C: harmless."

Par M p50 Je '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Light and entertaining. Family."

+ Wkly Guide Ap 11 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"If Margaret Sullavan were not cast in the lead, and playing in the very peak of her form; if Dorothy Parker, together with her husband, Alan Campbell, had not supplied some crisply Parkeresque dialogue, 'The Moon's Our Home' might have been just a routine little romance—another smooth filming of one of the inexhaustible Faith Baldwin's stories. With those assets [it] is absurdly delicious entertainment." B. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 18 '36

"Entertaining nonsense, in the manner of swift comedy romance. . . Insane, but distinctly human." J. P. Cunningham

+ Commonweal p724 Ap 24 '36

"'The Moon's Our Home' is as entertaining as one could wish it to be—one of the brightest comedies we have had in a long time. It has been given an exceedingly smart and complete production, the sets and locations themselves having more than usual story value. . . To give individual credit to all who deserve it would be merely to repeat the names of the members of the cast. There is not a weak spot in it. If you overlook 'The Moon's Our Home,' you will deny yourself a treat."

+ Hollywood Spec p27 Ap 11 '36

"'The Moon's Our Home' will supply a full evening of bouncing entertainment. And that's all it set out to do. Charlie Butterworth, Beulah Bondi, and Margaret Hamilton take full care of the supporting roles. We think, however, that you'll be more interested and charmed by the seven-reel scrap of Kid Margaret Sullavan vs. Battling Henry Fonda." (3 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p37 My 16 '36

"It is leavened by some excellent incidental merriment and it benefits by one of those brightly burnished productions for which Hollywood is so justly noted. The unfolding of the narrative, however, is laborious and far-fetched, where it should have been foolishly gay. . . William A. Seiter, who has had notable experience in staging screen comedies, has followed the outline of the story too faithfully, where he might have thrown it overboard and pointed up its comical overtones. Neither he nor the players could be expected to have done much more with the material at hand."

Howard Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune p18 My 13 '36

"It is a mad, fast-paced fantasy, none of it much more serious or logical than a Marx Brothers comedy, but managing to supply a surprising number of real laughs. . . The supporting cast, with Margaret Hamilton playing a taciturn New Hampshire boarding-house keeper and Charles Butterworth as the movie star's mousey little suitor, is of considerable help in making 'The Moon's Our Home' a bright and lively piece of insanity." Eileen Creelman

+ N Y Sun p23 My 14 '36

"The tale was not numbered among [Faith Baldwin's] best, while the picture, certainly, is about the most likable of the many screen entertainments inspired by Faith, produced in hope and not always received with charity. . . In the contemplation of enjoyable bits of [acting by the cast] one can forgive many things—even the boy meets girl, loses girl formula." F. S. Nugent

+ N Y Times My 13 '36

"The snow scenes in it are admirable and as believably chilling as the dialogue supplied by Dorothy Parker. It will entertain you, perhaps, on a rainy afternoon. The story is a flimsy set-up. . . Miss Sullavan and Mr. Fonda do what they can for their sap roles." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World-Telegram p23 My 14 '36

"Good mid-May entertainment for honest idlers and their hosts is 'The Moon's Our Home,' which is routine romance between an author and a sort of Hepburnish movie star." John Mosher

+ New Yorker p79 My 16 '36

"It's a mad, mad story that can't be told in print, but it films like Payne's Fireworks. . . It's a new Margaret Sullavan and you'll love her!—all the more." Rob Wagner

+ Script p10 My 30 '36

"[The first half of] 'The Moon's Our Home' is an agreeable effervescence, which then sags to a repetitious, over-complicated ending. . . Following the fashion, critics will doubtless credit Dorothy Parker and Allan Campbell with the many knowing lines and pleasant minor touches, hold the lesser scribblers who worked on the picture responsible for such hackneyed characterizations as Henrietta Crosman as a termagant grandmother whose heart is secretly abrim with kindness and Charles Butterworth in his infinitely tiresome reproduction of an infinitely tired young man."

+ Time p47 Ap 2 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A brilliant and sprightly example of what Hollywood can really turn out at its best. Family."

+ Box Office p23 Ap 18 '36

"With a plot like that, the picture can't help but be a riot of fun, and it certainly doesn't disappoint. Some people may complain that there is a little too much slapstick, but this reviewer found it all very amusing. The only criticism that I can advance is that I feel that Henry Fonda was miscast."

+ Canadian Moving Pict Digest p9 My 23 '36

"This satirical comedy should be well liked by most any audience. It is amusing, well acted and moves along at a fast clip. The laughs come often and are real laughs."

+ Film Curb p10 Ap 11 '36

"Wide box-office appeal in comedy romance with spicy dialogue and ace performances."

+ Film Daily p13 Ap 6 '36

"As delightful a slice of madness as has reached the screen in many a day, 'The Moon's Our Home' is a farce-comedy that can be conservatively described as a riot, a panic or a wow. Sell this Wanger production heavily for opening day business. From then on, word of mouth will take care of it. . . It is filled with such brilliant dialogue and clever situations that even the highlights can be only partially listed. . . Much of the dialogue deserves quoting."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 2 '36

"The story may be Faith Baldwin's original, but it's Dorothy Parker's added dialogue, together with the situations contrived in the Isabel Dawn-Boyce Degraw screen play, that give it zip, sparkle and zest. It is a cinch to be popular on the strength of word-of-mouth advertising alone. The picture is all audience entertainment and a showman's show."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Ap 3 '36

"The first surprise in the picture is that it takes its stars, Margaret Sullavan and Henry Fonda, completely out of the dramatic characters that previously have been theirs and makes them funny comedians. The second surprise is that, despite its insane madness, the picture is distinctly human. . . [It] makes uproarious entertainment."

+ Motion Pict Herald p56 Ap 11 '36

"Exhibitors can well be advised that this is a saleable bit of merchandise, that their patrons will help swell the grosses once they see it."

+ N Y Exhibitor p43 Ap 25 '36

"Some solid comedy moments have been injected into Faith Baldwin's original and the results look okay for the box-office. While the proceedings travel along a fantastic track, the director and cast have capitalized wisely on the spirit of the piece and produced a species of romantic entertainment which should go well with the family trade."

+ Variety p12 My 20 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

MOON'S OUR HOME—Continued

"With the combined talents of Margaret Sullavan and Henry Fonda to project the sexy, temperamental romance, and top-notch support for every department, picture holds up Walter Wanger's high entertainment score and indicates fat grosses everywhere. . . Picture as whole comes close to being perfect diversion for all kinds of audiences."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 2 '36

(*) MOSCOW MOODS. Ja 17 '36 11min Paramount

Players: Yasha Bunchuk and his Cossacks
"Yasha Bunchuk and his Cossacks, instrumental and choral, perform a number of familiar Russian numbers including 'The Volga Boatman' and 'Dark Eyes,' in a rich setting, a banquet hall of Empire days." Motion Pict Herald

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Very superior entertainment. Family."

+ + Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ja 27 '36

"Very good. Family."

+ + Jt Estimates Ja 1 '36

"Good. Adults."

+ Motion Pict R Mr '36

"Very good. Family."

+ + Sel Motion Pict F 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"The numbers include 'The Volga Boatman,' 'Dark Eyes,' a drinking song and a stirring soldier melody and the tremendous power behind the native voices is something impressive to listen to. Properly costumed and presented in just the right mood, the subject will click with ease."

+ Box Office p31 Mr 7 '36

"There are several dozen performers, and they have grand voices."

+ Film Daily p7 F 26 '36

"A couple of familiar Russian tunes such as 'Dark Eyes' and 'The Volga Boatman' and a few others form the musical background for this effort which consists almost entirely of music. . . A pleasing film with that Continental atmosphere."

+ Motion Pict Daily p18 Mr 11 '36

"The singing is superb, as is the orchestra support, and the conductor plays an original composition on the cello. Strictly Russian and almost entirely classical, the subject calls for a certain degree of care in programming lest its distinctly ornamental value be wasted. In a balanced program it should give good account of itself."

+ Motion Pict Herald p48 F 29 '36

MOSCOW NIGHTS. See I stand condemned

MURDER AT GLEN ATHOL. See Criminal within

MURDER BY AN ARISTOCRAT. Je 12 '36
63min Warner

Players: Lyle Talbot. Marguerite Churchill. Claire Dodd. Virginia Brissac. William Davidson

Director: Frank McDonald

Based on the novel of the same title by Mignon G. Eberhart. When Marguerite Churchill, a nurse with a passion for clues is confronted with a mystery involving three deaths, she with the aid of the district attorney, finds the solution.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Well sustained suspense. Adults & young people." Am Legion Auxiliary

"A surprise climax follows a well-maintained period of suspense. Adults: fair; 14-18: fair; 8-14: no." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A fairly interesting murder mystery which lacks suspense and has an obvious solution. Fair for adults." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Cleverly written, acted and directed to bring out both social and ethical problems. Mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Mature." Nat Soc of New England Women

"The utmost attention is required to follow the plot. Will interest men. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Mr 28 '36

"A gripping murder mystery. Adults."

+ Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 14 '36

"Adults."

Jt Estimates Mr 15 '36

"Suitability: adults & adolescents."

Mo Film Bul p88 My '36

"If one is inclined to be critical, Miss Keating has too great a knowledge of detective methods and too little regard for professional ethics for a nurse, but in a mystery play the solution of the crime is the all-important point. While not outstanding, this is a fairly good example of its type. Adolescents, 12-16: passable; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R Ap '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 7 '36

"A: murder mystery that reveals good blood and motifs and bad manners in conflict; Y: possible; C: no."

Par M p50 Je '36

"Adults."

Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It moves so fast all your faculties are employed in merely keeping up with it and you have no time to ask yourself if you are enjoying it. . . It really is splendid entertainment if your nerves are unshatterable. And if you like to dream, see the picture before going to bed and you will dream about it all night."

+ Hollywood Spec p7 Mr 28 '36

"'Murder by an Aristocrat' is a pedestrian mystery-murder whose mystery does not prove too great a strain on the audience's nerves, however, as it is accompanied by all the familiar clichés of the spine-chilling school of skull-duggery." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p14 Je 16 '36

"Armchair hawkshaws no doubt will be disappointed with the new mystery film. . . 'Murder by an Aristocrat' is perhaps the least intriguing case of wholesale homicide to emanate from the First National studios. . . This appears to be due primarily to the banal manner in which the story is worked out." T. M. P.

+ N Y Times p13 Je 13 '36

"Among the least interesting of the current hot weather screen entertainments is a murder mystery called 'Murder by an Aristocrat.' . . While it is nothing to growl about, a few snarls may be permitted, since it is just another one of those inefficient weaklings that clutter up the Broadway screens at this time of the year. Some competent players . . . save it from being altogether a pretentious bore." William Boehnel

+ N Y World-Telegram p21 Je 16 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + - Fair; - + Mediocre; - Poor; - - Exceptionally Poor

Trade Paper Reviews

"A formula murder mystery with enough suspense and tricky situations to satisfy the average chiller fan. Family."

+ — Box Office p25 Ap 11 '36

"Where murder-mystery melodramas are liked it will please but it isn't for the big spots to [play] alone. . . It isn't particularly new but it has been well played and directed."

+ — Film Curb p11 Mr 28 '36

"Unlike many features of its type, the virtues of this picture are a sound story, good acting, skillful direction and sane motives for the commission of the murder."

+ — Film Daily p4 Je 13 '36

"Marguerite Churchill as a sweet girl Philo Vance in a nurse's uniform is the redeeming feature of this dull [mystery]. . . There is a mass of evidence that would keep an average jury busy for a week. Somehow it all seems rather futile and there is little wonder that the preview audience frequently snickered in the wrong places. . . Director Frank McDonald and a conscientious cast of practiced players try but fail to save the situation for the aristocrats. . . With its various handicaps this one will have to take its place generally on the tail end of dual bills."

— + Hollywood Reporter p3 Mr 23 '36

"Here is a melodramatic murder mystery that is not always true to the formula it is supposed to follow. When the explanation of the murder is finally reached, the unraveling is handled too conveniently and, therefore, too implausibly."

— + Motion Pict Daily p11 Ap 21 '36

"Audiences are quite apt to accept this picture as something other than what the producers intended. Instead of being a mystery-shrouded murder melodrama, it's a picture that gave its first auditors more amusement looking at it than interest in following its story and action."

Motion Pict Herald p34 Ap 4 '36

"Program mystery drama filled with feature names, none strong enough to draw at the box office, 'Murder By An Aristocrat' is a routine accomplishment probably intended for little more. . . Short on what the marquee demands, this will be relegated to the weakest nights, twin bills."

— + N Y Exhibitor p42 Ap 25 '36

"A routine mediocrity obviously destined for duals and fill-ins. Skippy name values and the story has been told with clumsy technique bespeaking hurried direction. The acting is pretty consistently below the passing grade."

— Variety p23 Je 17 '36

"Mechanical, obviously developed mystery melodrama, with its full share of corpses and near deaths growing out of skeletons in family closet of so-called aristocrats. Gory it is, but never very horrific because killings become rather monotonously frequent, in effort to create unsolvable complications. 'Murder By An Aristocrat' will supply an hour's mild diversion where this type entertainment is standard for the duals. . . Screen play . . . has interesting plot foundation but shares growing tendency of screen mystifiers to overwrite in striving for complex bafflement."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 23 '36

MURDER ON A BRIDLE PATH. Ap 17 '36
66min RKO

Players: James Gleason. Helen Broderick.
Christian Rub. Leslie Fenton

Directors: Edward Killy. William Hamilton

Based on the novel of the same title by Stuart Palmer. "The death of a young woman who had many enemies causes suspicion to fall upon several innocent people. However, the mystery is cleverly solved by a series of unusual deductions, arrived at through the efforts of a school teacher, friend of a police inspector." (Sel Motion Pict)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A and Y: fairly amusing; C: if it interests."
Christian Century p719 My 13 '36

"A keen sense of humor is displayed in the bantering dialogue by the leading members of the cast. Adults & young people." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 11 '36

"Adults: entertaining, 14-18: entertaining; 8-14: doubtful." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"'Murder On A Bridle Path' is a bright program picture, which never becomes too involved for relaxation. Family-mature." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"A mediocre and badly told murder mystery, too much confusion causing lack of interest. The expression 'Hell to God' repeated several times is repellant and in bad taste. Waste of time. Mature." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 18 '36

"Adults & young people."
Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Ap 6 '36

"Family."
Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"The direction is efficient, the dialogue slick, the thrills well-timed, and the comedy relief successfully handled. Suitability: adults and adolescents."

+ — Mo Film Bul p67 Ap '36

"Fair-adult & young adult."
+ — Motion Pict Guide Je '36

"The plot is rather involved and some of the minor incidents are never cleared up. However, the picture has amusing dialogue as well as clever direction and good acting—a combination which makes it a pleasant evening's entertainment." Adolescents, 12-16: yes; children, 8-12: no."

Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."
Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 6 '36

"General patronage."
Nat Legion of Decency Mr 8 '36

"A and Y: moderately entertaining mystery melodrama; C: many murders and a grim climax."

Par M p50 Je '36

"Adults & young people."
Sel Motion Pict Ap '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[It has] a bit of comedy, a bit of romance, adventurous intrigue and gobs of mystery will keep you awake even if it isn't a hundred percent."

+ — Canadian M p61 My '36

"Another of the Inspector Piper-Hildegard Withers detective stories, with a new Hildegard, Helen Broderick, whose acidulous style is not for all tastes. . . Too much dull talk in this one."

— + Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 18 '36

"'Murder on the Bridle Path' is another in the series of mysteries that James Gleason, as Inspector Piper, has been solving with the aid of a spinster partner, formerly played by Edna May Oliver, who is here, however, substituted for by Helen Broderick. . . The interest of the piece lies in the adroit performance of both

MURDER ON A BRIDLE PATH—Continued

Mr. Gleason and Miss Broderick and the humor which underlies it. One follows breathlessly each cleft the bombastic inspector unravels, while reveling in the sly cracks the dry-humored Hildegard takes at his expense." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p10 Ap 13 '36

"[It is] just a terribly boring dialogue between James Gleason and Helen Broderick." B. R. C.

— N Y Times p19 Ap 11 '36

"Admirers of the Hildegard Withers-Inpector Piper stories will find 'Murder on a Bridle Path' pretty disappointing in plot, action and sleuthing, all of which are definitely second-rate. James Gleason plays Piper again and plays him extremely well, but I rather fancy Edna May Oliver in the role of Hildegard instead of Helen Broderick, who now plays the part." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p13 Ap 13 '36

"[There is a] well-handled solution of the mystery in 'Murder on the Bridle Path.'" John Mosher

+ New Yorker p80 Ap 18 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"This one falls short of its predecessors in the department of wisecracking dialogue, but finished troupers like Gleason and Helen Broderick (who succeeds Edna May Oliver as the ubiquitous but always-right Hildegard Withers) could make even the Congressional Record funny and they get the utmost out of their opportunities."

+ Box Office p35 Ap 25 '36

"This mystery melodrama is high grade entertainment. It is one of a series by the same author which [has] met with considerable success both in book form and on the screen."

+ Film Curb p12 Ap 18 '36

"Good melodrama that should find favor with mystery fans. Excellently acted and well directed."

+ Film Daily p8 Ap 11 '36

"Although the major theme of this picture is a murder mystery and its solution, there is a large portion of enjoyable comedy, contributed by James Gleason, as Inspector Piper, and Helen Broderick, who succeeds Edna May Oliver in what is a continuation of the series which included 'The Penguin Pool Murder' and 'Murder on the Blackboard.'"

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Mr 6 '36

"James Gleason's performance as chief of the homicide squad and Helen Broderick's portrayal of his competent if critical associate are the outstanding player accomplishments. Plot construction successfully sustains suspense until the crime solution, which is not indicated in advance. . . Reviewed at the Rialto Theatre, Times Square, attended principally by a transient clientele, where it appeared to hold interest steadily."

+ Motion Pict Herald p38 Ap 18 '36

"On the surface it looks like too many cooks spoiled the picture. Four writers were concerned with the screenplay, and two directors with the actual staging, with the final result a strictly-for-the-dualers film that will do moderately at best. It's a murder mystery that pulls its punches, showing how the fine comedy abilities of Helen Broderick and James Gleason can be thoroughly submerged by a poor script."

— Variety p23 Ap 15 '36

MYSTERIOUS AVENGER. Ja 17 '36 56min Columbia

Players: Charles Starrett. Joan Perry

Director: David Selman

See issue of March 30, 1936 for other reviews of this film

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Though the story is specially written for the screen by Peter B. Kyne, it has nothing new or arresting to recommend it. Family." E Coast Preview Committee

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"While this is nothing new the yarn has been so well handled by players and director that it provides a satisfactory outdoor action-drama."

+ Film Curb p8 Ap 11 '36

"It is good Western drama played against an outdoor setting. . . The picture is for dual bills and the outdoor adventure clientele."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 Ap 7 '36

"Regulation 10-gallon hat drama that has sufficient action and plot to get by with the fans of the outdoor dramas. . . Plot well worked out and the dialog suitable but not so much action until the final reel."

+ Variety p17 Ap 8 '36

MYSTIC MOUNTAIN. Mr 30 '36 76min Lenauer

Players: Dita Parlo. Dyk Rudens. J. Kaspar Ilg

Director: Dmitri Kirsanoff

Dialogue film in French and German, filmed in the Swiss Alps. It has English sub-titles. "It is a film of the men and women who live in the French and Swiss Alps. It describes the killing of Firmin's dog by Gottfried, another mountain farmer, and how, grieved by his loss, Firmin plots vengeance on Gottfried and all that is his. To this end, he kidnaps Elsi, Gottfried's fiancée and carries her back to his village on the other side of the mountain." (N Y World-Telegram)

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"While 'The Mystic Mountain' is 'different,' it is still a mediocre production and not at all in the tradition of 'The Blue Light.' . . The first was a lovely poetic and hauntingly beautiful photoplay; 'The Mystic Mountain' is a confused, undistinctive story, whose only merit lies in the magnificent natural settings. . . It is possible the picture might have been an entertaining and interesting one with other treatment, a more comprehensive script and a more satisfying performance. The cutting and editing are very bad." Marguerite Tazelaar

— N Y Herald Tribune Ap 2 '36

"Although it has been photographed with proper respect for the magnificent vistas of the Swiss Alps and is played by a group of interesting foreign stars, the film as a whole is incoherent, inchoate and inconclusive. It is an occasion for regret that so much more went into the picture than emerges on the screen." F. S. Nugent

— N Y Times p17 Mr 31 '36

"The virtues of 'The Mystic Mountain' are several. It is beautifully photographed. . . It is well acted. . . Unfortunately, it is freighted with such an arty treatment and such a pell-mell narrative that in spite of the lift and dramatic fervor of some of its parts—parts, incidentally, which sometimes excite you, sometimes make you morose—the whole thing leaves you thoroughly unappeased." William Boehnel

— N Y World-Telegram p31 Ap 1 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"It is extremely unfortunate that a picture on which such apparent care and fine acting has been lavished should be such a disappointment. The story, which revolves around the primitive passions of mountaineers, is one which will not appeal to American audiences. . . Only small art theaters devoted to foreign films will attract any business with this film. The cast deserved a better production."

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; +- Fair; -+ Mediocre; - Poor; -- Exceptionally Poor

— Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 9 '36

"Produced with much of the background and atmosphere which made 'The Blue Light' a notable picture, this lacks something of the pictorial strength and dramatic intensity of that film, but is still a worthwhile and interesting importation, chiefly, however, for class audiences."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p5 Ap 3 '36

"Estimate: for foreign, art houses."

N Y Exhibitor p45 p3 25 '36

N

NAVY BORN. Je 15 '36 68min Republic

Players: William Gargan. Claire Dodd.
Douglas Fowley

Director: Nate Watt

The plot centers around three bachelor navy officers who try to rear a baby left by another officer when he dies. They are opposed in their plan by the wealthy and conniving relatives of the infant and much kidnapping back and forth ensues.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A bit silly at times but nicely acted and entertaining throughout. Family."

+ — Wkly Guide Je 13 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"This one is tragic proof of the evil effect double-billing thrusts on the picture industry. No producer would have dared to release so impossible a bauble except as a filler. . . 'Navy Born' is a concentrate of errors—cinematic and social; a story told tiresomely by dialogue and overdramatized by poorly directed players, who never become sufficiently real to capture audience-interest." Paul Jacobs

— — Hollywood Spec p13 Je 6 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Comedy situations aplenty make this picture adequate to fill an average family bill at any theatre."

+ — Box Office p33 Je 13 '36

"It has considerable human interest, is well played by a good cast and has been nicely directed by Nate Watt. . . The small town trade will very likely be pleased with this one."

+ Film Curb p9 Je 6 '36

"This comedy drama makes pleasing entertainment that should serve well as a program number. . . [It] is a well developed affair with appropriate dialogue and situations that build for suspense, many of which are very hilarious."

+ Film Daily p29 Je 2 '36

"[It is] mild, low-budget entertainment for family consumption in the neighborhoods. . . The basic idea has hilarious possibilities and these are partly realized in a smartly written script, the baby-raising chronicled in dialogue made colorful with the slang of the service. Its filming, however, calls for a player adroitness that was out of the reach of this production."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 My 28 '36

"This is an excellent dual bill film packing an audience wallop from the first chuckle to the windup chase. The picture stands out as a fine example of low-budget product and should thoroughly satisfy the neighborhood patrons for whom it is aimed."

+ Motion Pict Daily p10 Je 2 '36

"Estimate: fair program."

+ — Phila Exhibitor p24 Je 15 '36

"With judicious use of the scissors this picture could be improved to make fair entertainment for dual programs. . . Claire Dodd's part is much too big an order for her. There are times when she registers well, but when put to the test she fails to get over the necessary menace."

+ — Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 28 '36

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE. (Release date not determined) 58min MGM-Roach

Players: Charley Chase. Rosina Lawrence.
Darla Hood. Margaret Irving

Directors: Alan Hale. Harold Law

"Established as a family who bolt their dinner to arrive early at a neighborhood theatre for the drawings, Chase, Miss Lawrence and Baby Darla encounter difficulties when the child draws Chase's number, then her own, and the situation is further complicated when Miss Lawrence's number is picked. With cries of frameup from the audience, Chase is kidnapped by mobsters who have their own plan for capturing the prize." Motion Pict Daily

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Though not even producers hope that fans will go out of their way to see it, the amiable little satire neatly attains its ambition—to supply casual fun on a double bill." (2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p50 Je 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Very amusing slapstick comedy, good for much hearty laughter in any theatre. . . [It] cannot fail to keep any audience in rare good humor throughout its screening."

+ Film Curb p7 My 9 '36

"As a slapstick comedy feature based on 'Bank Night,' this Charley Chase number should make satisfactory fare as family trade entertainment."

+ — Film Daily p7 My 19 '36

"This first feature-length Charley Chase comedy is saleable product for the light end of double bills in any neighborhood house and gives promise of building into a dependable box-office bet. . . It is so gayly gagged and at the same time so close to everyday experience and human nature that it will keep the average, easy-to-tickle audience laughing most of the time."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Ap 30 '36

"With satire and slapstick as the main selling angles this film should be acceptable as a secondary feature on many programs. . . Alan Hale and Harold Law co-directed, pacing the action suitably and making several time-worn gags seem somewhat fresh."

+ Motion Pict Daily p12 My 1 '36

"From a comedy gag and situation viewpoint, this picture satirizes the fun and foolishness of bank night. . . In neighborhood houses wherein the picture's field lies, the attraction, which doesn't mean much one way or another other than to be amusing entertainment, makes possible a brand of topical exploitation that probably can incite a good bit of interest."

+ Motion Pict Herald p43 My 9 '36

"Final result will probably see the picture booked when Bank Night is a theatre's attraction or else on double bills."

Phila Exhibitor p46 My 15 '36

++ Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE—Continued

"Best thing to be done with this Charley Chase feature is to cut it to a short. Then it should be top-notch entertainment. As is, it offers little as a feature, fails to give feature entertainment. Story is strictly two-reel as are the gags."

— + Variety (Hollywood) p3 Ap 30 '36

NOBODY'S FOOL. My 29 '36 64min Universal

Players: Edward Everett Horton. Glenda Farrell. Cesar Romero

Director: Arthur Greville Collins

"An ex-waiter comes to New York to enter big real-estate business and though seemingly very dumb he manages to outwit some unscrupulous realtor operators." Wkly Guide

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family." Am Legion Auxiliary

"The eternal story of an innocent abroad, despite the skilled treatment of scenario experts, must prove hackneyed even to admirers of Edward Everett Horton. Family." Calif Cong of Par & Teachers

"A very entertaining comedy with well adapted dialogue. Family." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Thoroughly entertaining, with Horton in usual good characterization. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

+ Fox W Coast Bul My 23 '36

"Family."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
My 9 '36

"Cut and tailored to the measurements of Edward Everett Horton, this picture would be impossible with anyone else in the title role. Those who enjoy Horton, and the list is long, will find it full of naive absurdities, and delicately balanced situations. . . Adolescents, 12-16: amusing; children, 8-12: little interest."

Motion Pict R Je '36

"Family."

Nat Bd of R M Je '36

"This innoxious comedy fits the talents of Edward E. Horton as if it were tailor-made for him. Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women My 13 '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Je 4 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict Je 1 '36

"A highly amusing comedy with excellent dialogue. Family."

+ Wkly Guide My 23 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"It is a fast-moving comedy written expressly for the particular talents of its star. . . As usual, a veteran cast supplies the ineffable strength that comes of time-earned ability. Producer Irving Starr doubtless is to be credited with this thoughtful selection and its subsequently excellent result. You will have to watch for 'Nobody's Fool'; it is a class B, but you'd never know it." Paul Jacobs

+ Hollywood Spec p12 Je 6 '36

"[It] is a brisk comedy in which Edward Everett Horton and Glenda Farrell manage to be genuinely amusing in a story whose originality and satire result in entertainment above the average for the type of audience the piece was apparently aimed at, and the money spent on it." Marguerite Tazelaar

+ N Y Herald Tribune p14 Je 16 '36

"'Nobody's Fool' makes its chief bid for fame as a harbinger of summer doldrums in the cinema. A feeble mélange of soporific comedy and far-fetched melodrama, the new film works an unfair hardship on such talented comedians as Edward Everett Horton, Glenda Farrell and Warren Hymer—not to mention its audience." T. M. P.

— N Y Times p27 Je 4 '36

"'Nobody's Fool' . . . helps to keep responsive audiences in a fairly high state of glee. Not that any of the quips or situations in the film will tickle the discriminating by their subtlety. But the lines and complications, thanks to the first-rate performances by Edward Everett Horton and Glenda Farrell, seem sufficiently fresh to keep an audience reasonably amused." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p22 Je 17 '36

"Arthur Greville Collins directs with lively tempo and fine light and shade but it seemed to me he sacrificed motion picture movement to the over-gabbiness of stage technique. Or maybe I only thought it too talkie because of the ear-blasting at Pantages Theater. . . Even this discordancy, however, was forgotten in Cesar Romero's tag line and expression which is the best thing in this very amusing picture." R. W.

+ Script p10 Je 13 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Fun fans will love this film which presents Edward Everett Horton at his funniest best in a snappy hour of hokum—with unusually clever dialogue and situations throughout."

+ Box Office p33 Je 13 '36

"With Horton getting mixed up with a bunch of real estate fakers the comedy sequences are decidedly funny. The sort of role that the comedian just eats up."

+ Film Curb p15 My 30 '36

"The burden of batting out the entertainment in this rather flimsy story rests chiefly on the shoulders of Edward Everett Horton, and it is to his credit that he makes a very good job of it. The script is along the familiar lines of previous Horton roles."

+ Film Daily p5 Je 5 '36

"'Nobody's Fool' is warranted program; in localities where Edward Everett Horton draws it can't miss, for it is all Horton. Every opportunity possible for typical Horton action has been given him, both in dialogue and directorial spotting. . . Fortunately, nobody will care that the story . . . lacks plausibility. It is a sufficient rack upon which to hang Horton's characterization."

+ Hollywood Reporter p3 My 23 '36

"It is certain to garner an extra share of audience laughs in all spots. Exhibitors can bank upon it as reliable comedy."

+ Motion Pict Daily p6 My 25 '36

"'Nobody's Fool' is a nice show for neighborhoods. Others may find it lacks a star draw. From the entertainment angle, it is A-1."

+ Phila Exhibitor p26 Je 1 '36

"'Nobody's Fool' is fairly humorous light comedy material tailored for Edward Everett Horton. It's one of the best fits he has ever had and while the laugh results are not quite good enough to insure first run dates, on the secondary single bookings and in the dualers picture will probably prove satisfactory."

+ — Variety p18 Je 10 '36

"It is all Edward Everett Horton's party and should be sure-fire bait for any theatre in any man's town."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 My 23 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

O

O'MALLEY OF THE MOUNTED. Mr 27 '36
59min 20th century-Fox

Players: George O'Brien, Irene Ware, Stanley Fields

Director: David Howard

A western melodrama.

Audience Suitability Ratings

"Family & junior matinee." Am Legion Auxiliary

"Particularly interesting to young boys and suitable for family entertainment and junior matinees." Nat Council of Jewish Women

"Adherence to the task laid out for him gives a certain dignity to the plot which it might otherwise lack, and enhances the fineness of the Mountie's part. Family." Nat Fed of Business & Professional Women's Clubs

"The rough atmosphere of an outlaw camp is realistically pictured with a good deal of fighting and robust humor. Audiences over 14." Nat Soc of New England Women

"Good clean western story with a minimum of shooting. Family." S Calif Council of Fed Church Women

Fox W Coast Bul Ap 4 '36

"Family & junior matinee."

Gen Fed of Women's Clubs (W Coast)
Mr 21 '36

"Particularly interesting to young boys and suitable for family entertainment & junior matinees."

Jt Estimates Ap 1 '36

"Good. Family."

Motion Pict Guide My '36

"It is a vigorous tale of danger and heroism with the usual love interest and a firm moral; in Canada retribution is swift and sure for those who live by crime. The cast is well chosen. Adolescents, 12-16; good; children, 8-12; exciting."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Family-junior."

Nat Bd of R M My '36

"General patronage."

Nat Legion of Decency Ap 30 '36

"A, Y and C: good outdoor action picture."

Par M p50 Je '36

"Particularly interesting to young boys and suitable for family entertainment & junior matinees."

+ Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

"Family-junior. A pretty good Mountie story—not highly original."

+ — Wkly Guide Ap 11 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"[The] story had enough meat in it to give Sol Lesser a chance to turn out a lively outdoor drama that will prove satisfactory to the formidable army of George O'Brien fans, one of whom I happen to be myself. . . . The story is told expertly."

+ Hollywood Spec Mr 28 '36

"'O'Malley of the Mounted' is rootin'-tootin' horse opera of the chase-and-fight genre that has been consistently popular since the birth of pictures. . . . Set in handsome outdoor backgrounds, 'O'Malley of the Mounted' has just about all that any Western should have."

(2 stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p44 My 2 '36

"As a glorification of the Canadian police officers who always 'get their man,' 'O'Malley of the Mounted' is a complete success. As entertainment, it is another story." T. M. P.

— + N Y Times p18: Ap 6 '36

"When it comes to Westerns I, for one, like them free from the stigma of satire or burlesque, like 'O'Malley of the Mounted.' Although it is no great shakes as entertainment, it is a decided ascent over the average 'horse opera' and offers a pleasant hour or so of fast riding, quick shooting, out-of-doors romance and heroics." William Boehnel

+ — N Y World-Telegram p27 Ap 7 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Decidedly in the upper brackets, the film boasts intelligent production, better than average performances right down the line, some rich comedy and gorgeous outdoor backgrounds."

+ Box Office p33 Ap 25 '36

"The whole thing is wholesome picture fare."

L. S. Niemeyer

Canadian Moving Pict Digest p7 Mr 28 '36

"The familiar yarn of the Royal Northwest mountie who always gets his man. In this case it has been done no better than many times before. As it stands it is a fair outdoor action-drama that will please the [children] and those fans who go for this sort of stuff."

+ — Film Curb p10 Mr 28 '36

"George O'Brien's latest film is a first rate outdoor number. It is a combination of Canadian Mountie and Western atmosphere and should do nicely wherever such pictures play."

+ Film Daily p7 Mr 25 '36

"The old William S. Hart story has been revamped for George O'Brien to make one of the slicker and smarter Westerns and it will travel in the best of double-bill company to substantial returns. . . . The cast is near-perfect, the characters well-drawn and the rather deliberate pace exactly right to give full value to the pungent, hand-wrought dialogue."

+ Hollywood Reporter p4 Mr 20 '36

"Once more the mountie gets his man and gets his girl, and once more George O'Brien gets his audience. . . . Best exploitation angle is that featuring the battle of wits by one man in the stronghold of outlaws."

+ Motion Pict Daily p4 Mr 21 '36

"This production is full of the qualities that make thrill pictures perennially popular. . . . A different kind of action adventure, the picture seems to have plenty of the thrill and excitement quality that holds audience interest."

+ Motion Pict Herald p40 Mr 28 '36

"Typical George O'Brien adventure thriller that will be aces with Western houses and subsequents, and hold up second half of most dual spots. Original directorial touches and plot progression aid considerably in sustaining interest, with actual slam-bang action kept to a minimum. Some cowboy fans might voice objections to the limited amount of bronc galloping, but this should be a help in larger houses."

+ Variety p17 Ap 8 '36

"Fast moving western-action expertly directed by David Howard who has taken a familiar story and . . . elevated it to a spot where it can hold its own in most of the subsequents, can take its place on any double bill. Sol Lesser has given the picture top-notch production. Locations and backgrounds are away above the framing given most pictures of this type."

+ Variety (Hollywood) p3 Mr 20 '36

ONCE IN A MILLION. (Release date not determined) 75min Associated British

Players: Buddy Rogers, Mary Brian, W. H. Berry, John Harwood

Director: Arthur Woods

Filmed in England. "Rogers is a bank clerk sent on Saturday to pay a million in notes into the bank. His taxi collides with another, carrying a pretty girl, and that delays matters

ONCE IN A MILLION—Continued

so that the bank doors shut in his face. Taking refuge in a hotel, his deposit of the notes earns him a status, and royal suite, appropriate to a millionaire. The girl, also, is sailing under false colors as a Countess, to push the dress goods of her employer. Comic detectives, a gold digger and mother and a Continental adventurer play their part in a hectic weekend, concluding with the discovery that the bank has gone smash. Buddy gets a directorship for saving the money [and also gets] the girl." (Motion Pict Daily)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"A fantasy that owes something to René Clair's 'Le Million.' . . It is a pity that Buddy Rogers has to appear so conceited and that Mary Brian is not given more opportunity. W. H. Berry loses some of his effectiveness through being persistently photographed at a distance. Altogether a good-humoured production, with some noteworthy sound-recording."

+ Mo Film Bul F 24 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"A bright and amusing effort. . . There are plenty of laughs in it for general audiences."

+ Motion Pict Daily p2 Mr 28 '36

"Buddy Rogers is the star here and the film offers an opportunity of boosting his return to straight work. . . What is offered is a capital piece of burlesque ingenious in plot idea and amusing in incident even when it is irrelevant incident. . . It is all done on very broad farcical lines, developing into near-lapstick."

+ Motion Pict Herald p37 Ap 4 '36

ONE RAINY AFTERNOON. My 8 '36 80min
Pickford-Lasky-United artists

Players: Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino, Hugh Herbert, Roland Young, Erik Rhodes

Director: Rowland V. Lee

Based on a French play, Monsieur Sans Gene, by Pressburger and Rene Pujal. "A young actor, keeping a rendezvous with a married woman, goes with her to a Paris cinema. In the darkness, he is given the wrong seat and kisses the wrong girl. The girl slaps his face. The resultant confusion leads to charges by busybody clubwomen and his arrest. His trial is totally mad. Over night he becomes the rage of Paris." (Hollywood Reporter)

Audience Suitability Ratings

"It is a picture to enjoy rather than to criticise although it stands criticism well."

+ Bks & Films Je '36

"A and Y: fairly good; C: little interest."

Christian Century p783 Je 3 '36

"Excellent-mature." DAR

"While one counts this picture among the outstanding of the month, it has achieved its position as a soap bubble floats up. . . Adults & young people." Mrs T. G. Winter

+ + Fox W Coast Bul My 9 '36

"A gay, amusing comedy enhanced with a fine cast and skillful direction. Family. Outstanding."

+ + Jt Estimates Ap 15 '36

"Interest never slackens as the episodes follow each other in clever French design."

+ Motion Pict & Family p6 My 15 '36

"With a story so slight as to be almost none at all, this musical farce is nevertheless lightly entertaining. . . Even though after the curtain falls one may have difficulty in remembering what it is all about, still it leaves a remembrance of pleasant nonsense and relaxing gaiety. Adolescents, 12-16: probably appealing for girls; children, 8-12: little interest."

+ Motion Pict R My '36

"Family."

Nat Council of Jewish Women Ap 22 '36

"Adults."

Nat Legion of Decency My 21 '36

"This delightful musical farce bubbles with nonsense. Each sequence is built up with clever design so that interest never slackens. . . The gentle satire upon the gullibility of the public and the value of the press in building up publicity for an actor is well aimed." S. M. Mullen

Scholastic p23 My 16 '36

"Family."

Sel Motion Pict My 1 '36

Newspaper and Magazine Reviews

"Very slight material but engagingly handled."

+ — Canadian M p61 My '36

"[It] keeps the spectators in frequent chuckles." E. C. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 19 '36

"The plot is thin, but fast and sparkling, benefiting by a continual flow of unique substantiating detail that is guided by able direction." J. P. Cunningham

Commonweal p76 My 15 '36

"Sparkling with gaiety, beautifully mounted, brilliantly directed, admirably acted, this first offering of Hollywood's newest producer and one of its ablest veterans, comes as a bright spot in a season of notable screen productions. . . The showing of the picture everywhere will have an almost continuous accompaniment of audience laughter."

+ Hollywood Spec p7 My 9 '36

"The picture is of that frothy type known as French farce, and though it is so light that it almost floats away into thin air, the affair bubbles enough to be mildly amusing." (2½ stars) Beverly Hills

Liberty p47 Je 6 '36

"Hugh Herbert and Roland Young furnish enough first-rate comedy to make up for a great deal of pretty silliness by Francis Lederer and Ida Lupino." Mark Van Doren

+ — Nation p754 Je 10 '36

"It's rather pathetic watching Pickfair trying so hard to be continental, parisian and all that. Miss Pickford's first independent production falls woefully short of its European models." Robert Stebbins

— New Theatre p36 Je '36

"Performed enthusiastically by a crack company and shrewdly directed by Rowland V. Lee to minimize its dramatic frailties, it is a pleasant if inconsequential entertainment. . . The work is definitely not in the same league with M. Clair's delightful classics, but it achieves interludes of considerable merriment and has the great virtue of not pretending to be anything more than a frou-frou concoction." Howard Barnes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune p18 My 14 '36

"'One Rainy Afternoon' is too slight to cause much excitement. The Rivoli audience seemed to enjoy it yesterday, laughing loudly at even the frailest jokes. Rowland V. Lee, the director, has managed to keep the mood always buoyant, even when the plot grows desperately thin. On the whole, thanks to its light-hearted romance, this piece of nonsense proved rather cheerful on both a hot and rainy afternoon." Eileen Creelman

+ — N Y Sun p23 My 14 '36

+ + Exceptionally Good; + Good; + — Fair; — + Mediocre; — Poor; — — Exceptionally Poor

"'One Rainy Afternoon' is fair and mild—a bit too mild for the purposes of rollicking French farce and merely fair enough to provide an hour or so of moderate entertainment." F. S. Nugent

+ — N Y Times p29 My 14 '36

"Mr. Lederer's art tends to over-ripeness; unbridled, he is coy to being luscious. Seemingly knowing this, his present employers try to overcome the tendency by making him what he is not—a comic. It only makes 'One Rainy Afternoon' all wet as entertainment when it might well have been a smart sophisticated pastime." Douglas Gilbert

+ — N Y World-Telegram p23 My 14 '36

"The film happens to be really quite funny, smartly turned, and fanciful, with a general lightness of treatment that's rare. In fact, it is astonishing, when you stop to think about it, how seldom movies actually achieve anything like a bit of foaminess. . . It's remarkable that it remains farce to the end, and throughout every scene, and that it does not, in the grand Hollywood manner, suddenly turn to pure love, ultimate passion, and the verbose agonies of crushed souls." John Mosher

+ — New Yorker p78 My 16 '36

"The masses should be delighted and if high-brows don't chuckle over it they have dyspeptic senses of humor."

+ — News-Wk p42 My 16 '36

"The absurd story ripples on without belly-laughter but with perpetual purring and delicious giggles. . . Francis Lederer was never more happy or charming in a part and he sets the key for everybody. . . Mary Pickford and Jesse Lasky were entitled to their post-preview smiles." Robert Wagner

+ — Script p10 My 23 '36

"[It] has possibilities for fresh screen humor. Mr. Lee, however, has pummeled his actors into overdoing every gesture, with the result that subtlety, necessary as a base, crumples into burlesque. There are several painful instances of the actors trying to be funny, but humor is at best intermittent."

+ — Stage p10 Je 1 '36

"'One Rainy Afternoon' is probably the most completely casual picture ever offered as the first production of a new company. . . It is a musical comedy without words and without plot. Its virtue is its nonchalance, which inexplicably becomes a striking feat of dramaturgy."

+ — Time p26 My 4 '36

Trade Paper Reviews

"Rollicking comedy that will delight all audiences, the initial Pickford-Lasky production is exceptionally meritorious. Family."

+ — Box Office p63 My 2 '36

"The plot itself is insignificant, but it is the comedy that permeates the whole picture that makes it such a hit."

+ — Canadian Moving Pict Digest p5 Je 6 '36

"Take our word for it, this is a swell picture. It ought to hit the box office bulls-eye in any situation. A rare combination of comedy, romance, smart direction and acting. Francis Lederer certainly has never been better in any picture and his supporting cast all register strongly."

+ — Film Curb p15 My 2 '36

"As a delightful, highly enjoyable romantic comedy, this picture rates tops. Francis Lederer has one of those light-hearted easy-going roles that seem to be patterned just for him. It's a pleasure to watch him breezing along. Judging from returns on Lederer's previous pictures built on these lines, this show should play to nice grosses. . . The better houses, especially, should do well with it."

+ — Film Daily p8 Ap 27 '36

"It is distinctively continental in manner and in theme. In fact, had it come from a foreign studio, it would have been widely acclaimed by the artistic critics as something quite revolutionary in the art of story-telling. It is revolutionary. And it is thoroughly delightful. . . The picture will definitely re-establish Francis Lederer, its star, as one of the reigning film romantics. He delivers a performance that will stand unchallenged for a long time."

+ — Hollywood Reporter p3 Ap 23 '36

"It bubbles over with mirth and merriment. It seems to have everything the audience or exhibitor will want—bright, subtle dialogue, novel and amusingly contrived situations, and fast, well-paced action. . . The show has speed and coherence. The high quality of action, dialogue and acting frequently brought spontaneous applause from the preview audience here."

+ — Motion Pict Daily p8 Ap 24 '36

"Mary Pickford and Jesse Lasky, who certainly know what theatregoers need for entertainment and what exhibitors require for exploitation purposes, have whipped together in this, their first picture, an attraction potentially pleasing to both. . . [It has] a verve and sparkle that keyed the preview audience to a high pitch of appreciative enthusiasm."

+ — Motion Pict Herald p47 My 2 '36

"Class houses will probably like it most because its satire, comedy, etc., are such that the upper strata will better appreciate it."

+ — N Y Exhibitor p26 My 10 '36

"For the American production there was obviously too much regard for the original. . . Francis Lederer is a handsome juvenile with considerable charm, but on his own has not any box office pull, and needs strong story support. He doesn't get it here. . . Ida Lupino is lovely as the vis-a-vis, but not flip enough for the assignment. Roland Young is fine as a theatrical producer, but doesn't get enough to do."

+ — Variety p12 My 20 '36

